Alumnae Association Officers, 1946-1948

Here's a pictorial introduction to the three new officers of the Alumnae Association, elected in May. A glance at their biographical sketches reveals their wide interests.

Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, '36, is the new president. Since last February, she and her husband, Frederic W. Scott, and their three small sons, have made their home at Bundoran Farm, North Garden, Virginia. In a lovely valley near Charlottesville, they are fast learning all about farming, and Elizabeth is interested in chickens and canning as well as in her children.

During the years when the Scotts lived in Richmond, she was active in various community enterprises, including the Community Fund, the board of the Symphony Society, the board of the Virginia League for Planned Parenthood, the Junior League. She was subchairman of the Red Cross Blood Donor Service.

Elizabeth served on the Alumnae Council for two years before her election to the presidency of the Alumnae Association. Those who attended the Alumnae Banquet in 1941 will remember her as the gracious toastmistress of that occasion. In college, she was president of her freshman class, a member of the executive committee of Student Government for three years, assistant editor of the Sweet Brian News, a member of Tau Phi and of the May Court.

Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, is the new vice-president and she is also the director of alumnae clubs. She has had considerable experience as an officer of the Cincinnati Sweet Briar Club, having served as president for two years, secretary for six years and treasurer for four years. Girl Scouting has been another of her interests, and she has been vice-commissioner in Cincinnati for two years, chairman of the camp committee for four years, and this year is chairman of the Kenova Region camp committee.

After serving on the board of the Cincinnati College Club for some time, she was elected president of the club in 1944-45. She has also been on the board of the Cincinnati Woman's Club and on that of the Cincinnati Council of Women's Clubs. Add: Red Cross canteen service during the war, class secretary for the ALUMNAE NEWS, chief organizer of the very successful twenty-fifth reunion of the class of '21 last June, and you have some idea of Edith's interests and capabilities. She has been a member of the Alumnae Council for the past two years.

In private life she is Mrs. Edward C. Marshall. Her daughter, Ann, is a senior at Sweet Briar this year and her son, Edward, is a student at Sewanee.

Adeline Jones Voorhees, '46, was chosen by her classmates last May as the second vice-president of the Alumnae Association. Adie, who was married early in September and is now busy getting settled in her new home in Bedminster, New Jersey, was outstanding in college affairs throughout her four years at Sweet Briar. She was president of her class freshman year, served as a house president the next two years, and was head of riding and president of Tau Phi her senior year, as well as being a member of the May Court and the Social Committee.

Alumnae of Sweet Brian:

WANT my first "published statement" as President of your college to be to you. Because, to my way of thinking, you are what this college is all about! It seems to me that a college is very much more than its buildings and grounds, incomparably beautiful as I think ours are. And it is more than its students, its staff, and its faculty. This college is in a very real sense the mind and spirit which our Alumnae take with them from this place. This college is what you think and do in the world, in consequence of the years you spend here.

There is a capacity enrollment this year of 449 students, including 146 Freshmen, and nine other new students. In a few short years all of these and more will have done the spade work here and joined your growing ranks as Sweet Briar Alumnae. The time is short here, but these four years are only a preparation for the real business of doing something about the world as Sweet Briar women. There may be some of you who are a little cynical about the idea of your paying society a cultural dividend in return for its investment in your education. But it looks now, in the new Atomic Age, as if we haven't time for the luxury of that kind of cynicism. History has been described as a race between education and catastrophe. Just at present the race looks all too grim for our side. But whatever hope there is for humanity's survival lies most certainly with the forces of liberally educated human beings and their dedication to create a free society of morally responsible individuals.

In behalf of all of us here at Sweet Briar, I not only welcome but urge you to a full share in the life of your college. Keep in close touch with us and with your fellow alumnae. Come back to visit and think and plan with us, when you can find someone to stay with the children! Let us have the benefit of your judgment and perspective in re-thinking Sweet Briar's course of study and in re-evaluating our entire college program. Help us to serve you in such a way that you may live the fullest possible life and make your best possible contribution to society. Tell us what you think of our idea of making Sweet Briar a vital laboratory of Democracy, with full and free participation of all groups in the policy-shaping of the college. Tell us what you think of our plan to cultivate Sweet Briar's world consciousness by working toward a program of inter-changing students and teachers with other countries.

Only if the whole of our college, you Alumnae and we "students," determines to realize our fullest possible capacity as a liberal arts college can Sweet Briar help provide the training ground for liberal leadership which the world so desperately needs. Rally 'round!

I am looking forward with very real pleasure to meeting every one of you . here and there, within the next few years.

Wake Up, Alumnae!

By Mary K. Benedict, M.D., President of Sweet Briar College, 1906-1916

T SEEMS to me, fellow alumnae, that we have failed to realize our responsibilities to our democracy in the task of evolving a way of education which will make our children more effective citizens than we ourselves have been equipped to be.

How well have we been equipped for citizenship? In particular, what did the college each one of us went to do for each one of us to make her the sort of citizen she is? In further particular, what sort of citizens are we—individually and collectively?

I am not answering these questions. I am asking you to answer them. I wonder if an honest self appraisal by each individual of us will not make that person doubtful whether she is the successful member of the world that she ought to be.

Be that as it may, you will agree, I am sure, that the college years could and should make the transition from immaturity to maturity such that it leads a girl to an adulthood which fits in happily and helpfully to her society—and is not a struggle for a better adjustment with misfits, frustrations, dissatisfactions, which college women sometimes fall heir to.

I use the term citizen, of course, to include all social relationships. More specifically, then, the question is a very complex one. It includes such questions as—Does our college course fit us for our responsibilities in our home? Does it fit us for our everyday relationships with other people—our neighbors, our friends, our business and professional associates? Does it fit us for our business of earning a living? Does it fit us for careers? Does it fit us for citizenship in a free country?

I know and you know that every college alumna has some thoughts along these lines. But we alumnae have not really become vocal about our thoughts. We sit and say things here and there, usually casually—to each other— We are hesitant about it. We feel we should not be critical. We think (and usually we are told by our fund agents) that we are derelict in our duty to make our class contribution one hundred per cent, and so we feel we have no right to make any criticism. We feel that we are not educators anyhow, that we should leave the problems of education to the trained and experienced educators, who have given these problems a lot of thought and know much more about them than we do. We feel that we are poaching on the preserves of the College President and the Faculty. We wonder if they want to hear what we have to say. We think our proper attitude is to sit back and let them ask us if they want to know what we think. We are willing to answer questionnaires, but that is about as far as we feel we should go.

The answering of questionnaires does not make us vocal as a group. The only way we can make our voices loud and effective is by speaking, and speaking as a group—after careful thought and discussion. And we should take some initiative about it.

This means, of course, that we should organize our alumnae so that we can function as a unit in this field and try to make our contribution to the problem of working out a way of using college years to get girls ready to give the services they are going to be called upon to give their undertakings when the world's responsibilities fall more heavily on them.

Except for the questionnaires, our alumnae leaders do not concern themselves with these problems. In fact, for the most part, the questionnaires do not come from our group, but from others who want to hear from us.

Our alumnae leaders concern themselves primarily and almost exclusively with money getting. We are well organized—we work efficiently and successfully in giving financial help to our colleges. No one of us wants to change this. It should be carried on.

But-are we to be helpful only or primarily through our pocket books? Should we not put as much time and planning on the ways in which we can, in an organized way, make contributions to the soul and spirit of our college-i.e., the sort of work it does? I like to look at a beautiful building on my college campus and think that my dollars helped to build it. I like even more to contemplate a scholarship fund or an endowment fund and think that I helped establish it. I like this because I am taking a part in the work of the college, and there is more to it than writing a check. Why shouldn't alumnae be called on to express their opinions and views about the things for which they are giving their money? And doesn't it follow that there will be a fuller response if girls are asked for ideas as well as money? As one of our alumnae put it-wouldn't the getting of ideas bring the response of gifts which will be used to carry out those ideas? Let me repeat—this is not meant to suggest that individual opinions, wishes, ideas should be made the order of the day, but the individual's ideas should be welded into the group's contribution.

Buildings, scholarships, endowment funds—we alumnae contemplate with much satisfaction. But do we not like most of all to believe that the girls whom we welcome into our alumnae fellowship are equipped to meet the problems of the world and to help its progress to freedom? The only way we can feel sure about this is to think about the education the college is giving and evaluate it in the light of what our thought and experience since we left college have convinced us about educational needs. Can't we think these things over together, discuss them, consider all sides, and reach, after such discussion and consideration, some representative conclusions and then pass them on to the college? Who can and should evaluate college training? We, who are the ones who received it, can do it better than anyone else. The purpose of the college has been to give us something. We have what it had to give when we were there. We know what it is worth. Who has more rightwho has more obligation—to talk about the value of the sort of education we got—and discuss it from the standpoint of life as we see it—not only for ourselves, but also for our children and their children—as best we can see it. Yes, it is true that college courses have been changing with a changing world, and they are not as they were when we were there, but in these changes that have been going on and that are going on, what forces and what leadership have been operative and how right are they? We can see that any discussion would have to include a careful study of the policies and plans of the colleges as they are now—not as they were then. Of course we are not trained in the field of education as a philosophy, a science, a technique. We look at ends to be achieved, not the methods of getting them. We can trust our leaders for that as well as for seeing ahead and establishing the far seeing plans and purposes of college education. But we certainly have a place in this planning that no one but ourselves can fill. The leadership is at the college, and the main task is with these leaders. But—we are a democracy and we expect our leaders to know what we think. In regard to political and social questions we do not sit and wait to be asked to tell our political and social leaders what we think and want done. We tell them, and tell them in an organized way-through civic clubs and various groups. Even our groups of college alumnae take up political and social questions in many important matters. Why not do the same thing in the field of education, and do it through our alumnae associa-

And don't think our leaders don't want to hear from us. They do. How I wished we had alumnae at Sweet

What Do You Think?

Miss Benedict's challenging questions need responses, and we hope that alumnae will give them thought and then send their reactions to the Alumnae News. Do you want to adopt Miss Benedict's proposal for adult study groups? Do you have any suggestions for organizing such groups?

Miss Benedict's thought-provoking article was written as the result of discussions with a good many alumnae. Ladies, the gauntlet is at your feet!

Miss Benedict

Briar—1906-10! And how good it seemed when we got some!

I can prove that alumnae opinion is wanted. In the October, 1944, number of the Vassar Alumnae Magazine (my own alma mater) I read the following, written by President McCracken:

"A new Vassar confronts a new world to-day and, as always, Vassar turns upon itself in trying to think out its problems, to develop its policy and to make its decisions. We are, of course, not alone in this situation. Other colleges have similar problems . . . But it is of the nature of these problems that we have much to learn from one another and must solve them ourselves. It seems short sighted not to invite our graduates to help us in seeing these problems and in solving them . . . In an unsettled world, the college course is not fully charted. The constant loyalty of the alumnae justifies their being considered as sharers in the college plan, and their thought on our problems is invited." I wish I had space to present more of President McCracken's discussion of the need to solve these problems. But the fact that he calls for alumnae help is most significant.

Well—what response did the Vassar alumnae make to that invitation? I don't know. I don't think there was any organized way of doing anything about it. Please indulge me in letting me tell you of my personal reaction to this. I thought: How nice that President McCracken would be interested in our point of view. What can I do about it? Shall I sit down and write to President McCracken? No, I thought, he doesn't know me. He wouldn't care to hear from just me. Besides, I don't know enough about the college work and plans now to discuss them as intelligently as I should want to. I need to know more about them—to have an actual work sheet as a starter. It is not a task where I can sit down by myself and formulate something I should like to say. I should like to talk the whole matter over in a group-to express my point of view and hear those of others, and get at something true and fundamental. Then I thought of the Vassar group to which I had belonged. Had there been at any time any place in the organization where any discussion of educational plans was considered? There had not been. I thought of my experience as an alumna for lo these many years. Except for the pocketbook side what had gone on in the group I had been in contact with? There had been a few luncheons with very interesting talks by President McCracken, and by our Alumnae Secretaries. These had been followed by nothing as an organized response or re-action. We mostly had teas. I went to one-I went alone. A hostess greeted me and introduced me to two alumnae who knew each other but didn't know me. They chatted about Helen and Jane, and then said "Oh, there is Bertha, excuse us, please, Dr. Benedict." After several repetitions of this experience, I hastily swallowed a cup of tea, and went home-no more alumnae teas for me. Must we have these teas, or could we substitute a discussion group once in a while?

So Dr. McCracken's invitation stayed in my mental archives until this date—when, with Miss Garnsey's help, I got it again from the Alumnae Association archives.

So-wouldn't it be a good idea to organize an Alumnae Committee on Educational Policy? The Chairman of this committee should be some alumna who has been out of college at least ten years. She should not be a teacher or engaged in educational work as a profession. She should be a mother—a home maker, and interested in, if not actually engaged in, some part of the world's work outside of the home.

This Committee should appoint leaders who would reach all alumnae. It should outline the subjects to be taken up for discussion-make out bibliographies-make material available. It should bring together and unify the results of discussions in the groups. What can be done in organizing the association for purposes of reaching every single alumna in order to raise money can be done in order to produce thoughts.

Of course this would mean a lot of work on the part of members of such a committee, and such members would have to be just the right people, or nothing would come of the attempt.

It was a splendid thing to establish the position of Alumnae Secretary and to give this officer a place on the college campus. There are many ways in which the Alumnae Association can work best on the campus. Closer contact with the college can be maintained there than anywhere else. The Alumnae Secretary can learn much about the college. Through her the alumnae can be kept in touch with the college, and the college with the alumnae. The contact is direct, and communication much facilitated. But if the alumnae are to speak from the vantage point of the society in which they live, they should not, as an organization, be centered on the college campus. The Alumnae Secretary has become the executive secretary of the entire organization. She is not in a position to look at the members from the standpoint of their relationships where they are. Her views of college-alumnae relationship are naturally colored by the campus point of view—the academic side of college—and the undergraduate side. She is usually a young woman who has herself had little experience in doing things in the larger community. She is not a person connected with home making or bringing up and educating children. Besides that—she is busy overloaded with work.

The association should be so organized that it functions in the place where it exists—i. e., in the society of which its members are a part. The campus secretary should not be the mainspring of the working of the association. The association should be an entity which functions so as to include the work of the Alumnae Secretary and a great deal more.

The association has another and very important link with the College. We elect alumnae Trustees, and through them, we have a direct contact with the governing board. It would surely be helpful to our alumnae trustees if they could have more fully expressed carefully considered policies representative of their constituency on the vital questions of education.

There is no dearth of material to put before alumnae on the subject of trends in education in a changing world. A Committee on Educational Policy would have its hands and thoughts full to overflowing with books, magazine articles, addresses, plans of new courses, fundamental curricular changes, which it should list and get before discussion groups.

Those interested in a philosophical approach, can go directly to the work of that great leader—philosopher John Dewey, who, in his eighties, has just brought out a new volume. Fifty years ago the philosophers—William James, in particular—talked about pragmatism—the teaching that the value of a theory has to be determined by the success it achieves when it is put to work. This philosophical concept has been a force working out a way of education which Dewey started in a school in Chicago years ago. That makes an interesting approach!

But—there is much of interest to those who do not want to work along the lines of educational theory. The practice side is now in operation in schools—even in our public schools—and so called progressive education is a powerful thing which is here to stay and goes on growing and gaining momentum, whether we believe in it or not. No study of education, including higher education, can ignore it.

Most of us want to come down to something very realistic and practical, and there is plenty to think about from that standpoint. When I graduated from college, a visitor talked to my class on the subject of some of us going into some field of work other than teaching. She suggested chicken farming. I wasn't prepared for chicken farming, so I chose teaching, only to find that I wasn't very well prepared for that either.

Since that time much has been said and done about education as related to the business of living, and more and more is being said and done. There are everywhere trends under fine leadership toward making the college years, years of practice as well as theory-years of doingyears of apprenticeship to life. Some colleges, notably Antioch and Bennington, have unequivocally taken a stand for making college years include much practice. They feel that young people are not prepared to live in the world if they have not lived out in the world during the college years. Other colleges have not been ready to give up any of the "hours" of college work to doing things as opposed to thinking about things. The oldest and largest of our colleges have been taking a middle ground. They are still predominently Liberal Arts colleges. They are doing more in the field of thinking about the practice side than they are in actually introducing it into their work. They are not really convinced that the practice or laboratory side takes brains. They feel that the college degree should stand for so many hours of successful thinking, and that successful doing can take care of itself. If any of this is to count in the college curriculum it must be valued on a different basis—two or three units of doing being worth one unit of thinking. On this basis laboratory tables have been admitted to the academic college tor a long time. Pianos have come in in similar fashion, and so have easels, paint brushes, palettes. Typewriters and sewing machines and cook stoves have gotten into some corners with not a great deal of attention paid to them.

But—when it came to putting the workbench into the classroom—the line has been drawn on that in any college that belongs to the Liberal Arts group. These colleges definitely take their stand on the position that you can teach the same thing in the classroom that you teach at the workbench—so far as understanding and ability to perform are concerned, and the use of the workbench can be added to a person's life whenever he wants to sit down to it if he has had a college course. Solet us keep the classroom and the workbench separate, the classroom teaching in the Liberal Arts college, and the workbench teaching in the trade or technical schools. But since you teach the person—the whole person, and not the subject, you need to look around and see where the person is. Is all of him or her in the classroom, and is none of him or her in the workshop?

Much thinking is going on along these lines and changes are coming. If the workbench is still plebeian for the academic building, at least laboratory work, field work, practice in nursery schools, and other forms of doing things are being given attention in college work as educational thought recognizes the need to work out theories and ideals in practice.

A folder which we Vassar alumnae have received recently puts this point of view so well that I cannot do better than to quote from it. This quotation is a part of Vassar's report on plans for work given in the Summer Institute for Family and Community Living. "Many an intellectual has lost out because her knowledge was not well grounded in experience. This helps explain why some college graduates report feeling frustrated in later life. Vassar has long been concerned with the importance of balancing theory and practice. It offers wide and increasing opportunity for the kind of experience needed to back up intellectual development." And again "How will it (field work) help the harrassed alumna ten years from now as she gets her children off to school, her husband to work, hurries to make a committee meeting or her own schedule at the office? This is how. Growing up, the aim, after all, of all education, is an emotional and social as well as an intellectual process. Only when there is a dynamic relationship between the concepts of the classroom and the fabric of everyday life can academic education become truly relevant and usable."

There is a lot to be done in determining what is included in the "fabric of everyday life," and in finding out how to establish this "dynamic relationship." Too often 'field work' becomes pleasant strolling in lovely pastures and going home to some one else's establishment instead of getting down to beginnings and making things out of what grows in a field.

I have discussed these matters with some of the Sweet Briar alumnae. One of them puts the thought into the following sentences which she says I may quote. "Life can't go on as it did before, or even during, the war. A Faculty can't go on with its planning in a purely academic and idealistic way without taking into account the fact that they are preparing women for an entirely new world. We must prepare as many people as possible (and especially the leaders who are college students . . . those who will train their own children or lead other people's children) for a much more mature and realistic way of thinking and acting. And the alumnae of any college ought, in my opinion, to help in bringing about an approach to life which is practical because, in the largest sense, it is idealistic." She means by this last paradoxical statement, of course, that nothing fulfills itself if it is not shaped by its ideal. In college teaching we have too long looked just at the ideals. We have looked at realities as imperfect realizations of these ideals and have tended to withdraw into idealism. Let us deal with ideals only where they are working forces.

Democracy has gone forth to war. It has won the first round only—with material ammunition. The challengers stand before us to see what we can do with our ideals—our ideals of freedom against their ideas of control. The only force that can win the world for democracy is a democracy that works. The four college years count vitally toward making real the ideals that, we must admit, are still imperfectly functioning on our globe.

PRESIDENT LUCAS INAUGURATED

FORTUNE smiled on Sweet Briar with her brightest smile on Friday, November 1. Everyone agreed that it was a bright day in our history, as the college began its forty-first year, its first under the fourth president, Miss Martha Lucas. For on that day Miss Lucas was officially charged with the privileges and responsibilities of the presidency of Sweet Briar College. Her acceptance left no doubts in the minds of her hearers that Sweet Briar was in capable hands and that wider horizons were being made visible.

To begin with, Fortune provided a beautiful day, warm and sunny and serene. By nine o'clock, visitors began streaming across the campus, and they came in everincreasing numbers. Delegates carrying academic costume made their way to the registration tables in the gymnasium and thence to the robing rooms. By 11 o'clock all was in readiness, the gymnasium was filled, the music signaled the start of the academic procession.

Representing Sweet Briar's five thousand alumnae came the members of the Alumnae Council; next, the faculty, followed by the delegates from secondary schools, junior colleges, and those who represented colleges and universities from all parts of the country. Representatives of learned societies there were, too, and finally, members of the Board of Overseers, speakers, and President Lucas.

An invocation by the Rev. Carey Montague of Richmond opened the program and then Brand Blanshard, professor of philosophy at Yale, delivered his thought-provoking address, "The Liberal College In An Expanding World."

"What are we to do," Mr. Blanshard asked, "in face of the enormous expansion of knowledge that has occurred in recent decades? Knowledge is expanding like the ripples in a pond; every year sees a greater disparity between the total of man's knowledge and what any of us can hope to know. The problem of the day is how to select the essential from this unwieldy mass of knowledge."

Various suggestions are being offered us, of which one is the elective system, which throws the burden of choice on the student himself, Mr. Blanshard said. He pointed out that America has been weighing this system for fifty years and has at last declared it wanting. There is now a general rush to abandon it. Why? Because it has placed upon the student more responsibility than he knew how to carry. How is he to know which among hundreds of possible subjects will mean most to him thirty years hence? To allow him to browse at will, on the theory that one subject is in the end about as good as another, is the "fallacy of misplaced democracy." It is a transplanting of the idea of equality into regions where equality has no place.

Another ground for choice has received the support of the weightiest name in American education, John Dewey. Dewey thinks of school and college as laboratories for the world, places where the student should learn the arts and techniques that will be most useful later on. His views have captured and very largely transformed the lower schools of this country. Mr. Blanshard was of the opinion that this was where they belonged and should remain. They do not apply at the college level; a "student-centered" college in which youth could roam at will among cultural, technical, and vocational subjects would conspicuously fail to give the student the sort of understanding he needs. Mr. Blanshard then went on to consider the views of Mr. Dewey's leading opponent, President Hutchins of Chicago. Hutchins has abandoned the elective system wholly; he divides cultural subjects sharply from vocational subjects; and he insists that the central business of the college is intellectual mastery, the understanding of the principles of nature, human nature, and society. So far Mr. Blanshard went with him. He thought, however, that Mr. Hutchins' means were less convincing than his ends. The suggestions, for example, that the student could safely ignore the world from 1900 on, that he should learn his science from Newton, and that he should draw his philosophy from Aristotle, were costing Mr. Hutchins much valuable support that he might otherwise have gained '

Mr. Blanshard ended by proposing a double test for the selection of college studies. As regards content, those subjects should be chosen whose mastery carried with it the widest understanding of other fields, such subjects as mathematics and physics among the natural sciences, ethics and political theory among the social sciences, literature in the sphere of values. As regards discipline, the great aim was to enable the student to think clearly, connectedly, and accurately; and every subject could and should be so taught as to provide that discipline.

Mr. Blanshard congratulated Sweet Briar on the selection of a philosopher-president. To him the problem under discussion, which was the great problem of the day for the liberal college, was really a philosophical problem. Sweet Briar is fortunate, he said, in having a president who could bring to bear upon it a rare experience, an amply proved ability, and sweep of educational vision.

Henschel's "Morning Hymn," sung by the Glee Club, followed Professor Blanshard's talk, and then Bishop Tucker commanded the attention of the audience. In his brief speech of induction he said.

"Sweet Briar College opened its first session in September, 1906, forty years ago. During the first four decades of its life, it has had the leadership of three distinguished Presidents: Doctor Mary K. Benedict, Doctor Emilie Watts McVea, and Doctor Meta Glass. When Miss Glass announced to the Board of Directors and Board of Overseers of the College her resignation, to become effective on June 30, 1946, the Board confronted a difficult task, with many apprehensions as to the outcome. A committee of the Board of Overseers, under the chairmanship of Doctor Dabney S. Lancaster, was appointed. Also the Board requested the faculty and the alumnae to appoint committees to make recommendations to the Board, We were agreed that the new President should have at least three qualifications: she must be a scholar; she should be one who possessed an understanding of and sympathy with Southern traditions, and yet at the same time could maintain and develop Sweet Briar as national and international, if you will, in its outlook and in the composition of its faculty and student body; she should be one who would continue in the academic and social life of Sweet Briar what can best be described as the overtone of a spiritual note.

"By one of those happy coincidences the name of Martha Lucas appeared on the lists of the Board, of the faculty, and of the alumnae. Moreover, in her academic record and in her person, she seemed to combine and blend the three qualifications which had been theoretically specified.

"Therefore, by the authority and on behalf of the Board of Directors and Overseers of Sweet Briar College, it is my honour and privilege, as President of said Board, to induct you, Martha Lucas, into the office of President of Sweet Briar College, and to entrust into your keeping all of the privileges and responsibilities of that office."

At its close the audience rose to its feet in applause as Miss Lucas and Bishop Tucker shook hands, and then Miss Lucas stepped to the lectern and began the address which follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen, distinguished all: At this moment I'm feeling rather like the young surgeon whose patient just before "going under" admitted being terribly nervous because it was her first operation. The young surgeon reassured her pleasantly: "I know just how you feel; it's my first, too." This is your first inauguration at Sweet Briar in twenty-one years, and you are probably a little nervous about it. I know how you feel. But that young surgeon had a great advantage over me: I can't give you an anaesthetic,

One comes with humility and a sense of dedication, to join in a great undertaking. For ours is the task of carrying on together what the Founders of this college planned with vision and wisdom—and our Overseers, administrative officers, faculty, staff and alumnae have brought to maturity through their devoted and distinguished service of forty years.

This is a solemn and stirring time to be engaged in the work of education, of "leading out" the human mind. Surely at no time in human history has so much depended upon the leading of so many by so few: leading a confused and frightened race of Man out of its impasse of imminent self-destruction. For it is to the forces of education that the world is now looking for the "way out." This planetary enfant terrible, this homo ironically called sapiens, has proved a precocious child indeed, making straight for the surest means of destruction, seemingly determined to pull the deadly fire down upon his unwise head. Mankind has discovered his physical reach, and if it's not to be the early death of him, he must, with discipline and dispatch, be sent to school to learn how to control his new power. His heart and mind must be educated; he must be "led out" into maturity in human relations. He must, if he is to survive, learn the principles and applications of the social sciences, to match his acumen in the physical sciences. These are great days to be at work in education, particularly in a liberal arts college.

But what should be the rôle of the liberal arts college in this unprecedented crisis in world history? What should we at this college be planning, thinking, teaching and doing if we are to take our part in the rescue work of humanity? We are perhaps amused by President Lowell's opinion that a college, whatever else it is, should be a repository of great learning-since the Freshmen bring so much and the Seniors take so little away! But the trend in our day is to think of great learning as a museum piece, if it cannot be communicated in such a way as to affect the lives of people and the nature of society. There has been a lot of talking and writing in these last few years about higher education. Our book shelves are packed tight with critical studies of the place of college education in society. One of the wisest and most readable was written by our distinguished guest, Professor Blanshard, in his contribution to the study of Philosophy in American Education. And there have been many others; books of every mental weight and hue of opinion, books from every point of view, investigations by committees of learned observers and monographs by learned individuals. In Cambridge we even asked the students what they thought about it. The principle was sound, being based upon a legend of Bob Benchley's under-graduate days at Harvard. Benchley, it seems, was taking an hour's examination in a course in Government, in which one of the questions was "Discuss the Northern Fisheries case from the point of view of the important question of international law." Benchley, who happened not to be prepared for that particular part of the test, started off his answer by saying: "I should like to discuss this case from a new angle, namely from the point of view of the fish." And so it came to pass that in connection with the now famous Harvard report General Education in a Free Society," even the students were asked what they thought about the education they were receiving!

These recent critiques run the gamut of questions and answers which so deeply concern us these days. What kind of education will enable the next generation to be wiser human beings and builders of a better world? How about courses of study? Should college students be encouraged to elect whatever courses they desire in college, or should the college require a definite core of studies to guarantee that each graduate will be at least literate in the basic areas of human inquiry? Where shall the line be drawn between liberal and vocational education? To what extent does society's growing demand that college be a "preparation for life" justify our adding courses to our curriculum which, under the stricter classical pattern of former days, would have been branded as wholly vocational? And where, alas, are we to find the answer to the persistent problem of how to fit the pieces of knowledge together into an integrated whole. By what catalytic course, or by what method of correlation are we to evoke the Philosophic Mind, whereby a student may tie together the tag ends of his astronomy, sociology, biology and art into a synthetic and consistent view of the nature of man and his world? It is this question which has come most often and most forcefully to me, both as a teacher and as a dean, and it is, I believe, at the heart of our present dilemma. The preponderance of college trained people whose religion is either an aching void or an entrenched childhood superstition and whose knowledge of history is a confusion of mythology and 1066—is a tragic indictment of the methods by which the colleges have attempted to communicate Man's intellectual and social inheritance. Of course the real hope of integrated education is in teachers who are themselves integrated human beings. Until more teachers are truly philosophers, seeing their special field under the aspect of the whole, striving constantly to relate their particular courses to the rest of the curriculum-until that great day, perhaps we can only fill in the gap with courses which by their philosophic disciplines give order and perspective to the immense confusion of modern knowledge. The gap must be filled in if we are to provide the mature leadership required

And there are other gaps which must be filled, if we are to train adequate leaders for our democracy-or, as we have been recently putting it, somewhat euphemistically, for our "Free Society." If our colleges are serious about this business of moulding leaders for a self-governing society, they must certainly provide more than a curriculum of liberal arts studies, no matter how well coordinated that curriculum may be. We must, I believe, provide in our colleges a true laboratory of democracy with every group (students, staff, faculty, alumnae and trustees) working together democratically for the whole. All too often the term "Student Government" is a convenient cloak for administrative or faculty tyranny, with policies and regulations despotically laid down, for students to uphold with unquestioning obedience, or else. From the faculty viewpoint, the value of democratic procedure both to the college and to society was loudly proclaimed in February of this year when a group of distinguished university professors signed what they called "An affirmation of purpose for American universities." These men, including in a long list such eminent thinkers and teachers as W. P. Montague of Columbia, Arthur Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins, and Arthur Schlesinger of Harvard, defined the true university as a company of scholars dedicated to free inquiry and the training of minds to seek and discern the truth. "Professors," they said, "are not men hired to execute policies determined by others. Whatever the legal powers of President or trustees may be in a particular institution with respect to educational aims or academic affairs, the exercise of these powers must be informed and guided through consultation with the faculties, in conformity with the best university tradition and with American democratic procedures. "Frequently," these gentlemen point out, "the administration is regarded as the master instead of the servant of scholarship," and exercises its great powers "in ignorance or disregard of the proper functions of the true university." Awkwardly enough, I find myself entirely in agreement with the professors in their indictment of these villainous creatures, the college presidents!—Heaven help me and my forthcoming split personality!

I feel strongly that college administration which makes policy behind closed doors, takes action along unilateral lines, and imposes the will of a few upon the many, is not only failing its students by denying them the chance to learn about freedom and responsibility by real participation in a functioning democracy. But more importantly such administration is failing the world by withholding the leadership upon which the future must depend.

I say "the world" because a truly free society now, I believe, means a "world society." The fact was suddenly blown in upon our slumbering consciousness on August 6th of last year, the Day of Doom of Hiroshima (and ultimately, perhaps, of us all). It became evident to us then that there could be no isolated free societies in an atomic world, that it was either one world for all of us or no world for any of us. More recently, we have had the cheering news of bigger and better atomic bombs and of fantastic developments in bacteriological warfare, which would by comparison make death by atomic bomb a mercykilling devoutly to be wished! If we are to achieve, by some miracle of moral and legal development, a form of social organization which can save humanity in this crisis of history, it cannot, I think, but be a planetary version of the Free Society, protecting the basic rights of all men under law.

The task immediately ahead of us is so tremendous that any suitable plan of action cannot but seem visionary and impractical. It is, of course, essentially an educational task, the making of an international state of mind. Unfortunately it is easier to mobilize men into armies than to educate them. And yet, no world government can succeed unless it has the consent of the governed. The people of the world cannot give that consent until they have mutual understanding and knowledge in common to see their security and their freedom as indivisible. We of the United Nations are, as you know, attempting to effect this world transformation by setting up a specialized agency, UNESCO, to promote world understanding, through a vast program of cultural interchange between the nations. After a year of preliminary planning and organizing, this United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is to have its official birth in Paris in just two and a half weeks, on November 19th. UNESCO may prove to be in a quite literal sense "the last best hope of earth."— This great effort to bring the people of the world together in mutual understanding.

We at Sweet Briar College will initiate our program to cultivate world awareness by celebrating in pomp and prayer UNESCO Day on November 19th. We like other colleges shall be re-studying, re-evaluating, and supplementing our course offerings in the light of this world emphasis. This year, courses in the Russian language are being offered by 110 colleges and universities in this country, as compared with 19 offerings at the time of Pearl Harbor. Our colleges should probably expect a similar increase in demand for Oriental languages and literature in the next few years. Of even more immediate importance, I believe, to the hope of world peace is a vast interchange of students and teachers between the nations of the world —so large a program that even the smallest of our colleges might have a noticeable percentage of foreign students and professors on campus, replacing those of our own number who will have gone abroad to study and teach.

My own experience taught me a lot. For some years before the second World War began, I was a student in Europe, spending the greater part of my time in England and France. I was on my own—in search of understanding. I was no part of a program for an international exchange of students; and there were very few of us. Yet those years spent among other people, with other interests and other viewpoints than those to which I was accustomed, gave me 10 Alumnae News a deeper insight and a further reach of understanding than I personally could have gotten in other ways. Studying philosophy with me in England were Hindus and Sikhs from India, who gave me and my English friends a quite new view of "The Indian Problem"-which began to look more like the "English Empire problem." There were the young Germans and Italians who argued the values of Fascism with greater detachment than we argued for Democracy, and saw with perhaps more clarity than we the Nazi tendencies in some of our own American social attitudes toward minority groups. There was the Negro graduate student from Africa whose fine mind and crisp Oxford accent probably gave him a feeling of real superiority when he listened in class to my philosophic platitudes and slovenly southern drawl. As all of us studied and thought together of the varied and far-flung nations from which we came, I think no one of us failed to find common ground and a community of interests which would have rendered forever impossible our voluntarily resorting to force against each other.

50,000 foreign students are now waiting to come to America to study. It is, I think, a tragic set-back to our hope for world peace that we have not the educational facilities to receive all and more this year. But there may yet be time! The future calls for high adventure. As the philosopher, A. N. Whitehead has warned us, in his Adventures of Ideas, "the great achievements of the past were the great adventures of the past. Without adventure-beyond the safeties of the past—civilization is in full decay." And we should probably add in this year II of the Atomic Age that only high adventure can save the race of man. The unadventurous among us have gone pessimistic: they insist "you can't change human nature; mankind is doomed." But "changing human nature" is just what liberal education is all about. It is a tremendous task, of course, to free the minds of men from their bondage to the past. But this college and all that we teach here is a monument to the fact that it can be done. Socrates was condemned to die for daring to teach the young men of Athens to question the old gods and their established values. Giordono Bruno was burned at the stake for defying the Church's doctrine that the earth is the stationary center of the universe. The list is long: Vesalius adventuring in the study of human anatomy, Michael Servitus in the fields of geography and theology. Nor can we forget that as recently as the sixteenth century in a small section of western Europe, during some 75 years, a quarter of a million persons, mostly women, were burned as witches. Churchmen, both Protestant and Catholic, thought that that was the way to put an end to bad weather, poor crops, and the visitation of disease. The adventurous thinkers of the world had not then discovered the scientific facts which we now teach in our courses in bacteriology, meteorology, psychology and chemistry. And the end is not yet! Much unfinished business remains for the adventurers of the mind. How shall we be saved from our narrow nationalisms, our religious bigotry, our blind intolerance, our disproved theories of racial superiority?

Quite recently you and I and others put a man to death for propagating this theory of race superiority. His name was Alfred Rosenberg, the official Philosopher of the Nazi party. We hanged him in a gymnasium in Nuremburg just sixteen days ago. Rosenberg's fundamental crime against society was propagating this myth of race superiority. It was he, you remember, who insisted that the Nordic race was the superior race of man, that all other races were inferior and should, therefore, be subjugated or eradicated by the Nordic race, that only in that direction lay world peace and security. Of course our American culture is committed to two quite different theses, the Christian doctrine of the brotherhood of man and the words of the constitution that "All men are created equal," And yet, the thinking of Alfred Rosenberg is not without followers in this land of ours. True, they raised no voice to stay the execution of Nuremburg. Perhaps some even failed to note the likeness, insensitive as they are to the paradox of democracy in America. It was Rosenberg, you recall, who climbed the thirteen steps to the gallows and died-in silence, not availing himself of the privileged last word. Did he, in his silence, have perhaps the ironical thought that even we, his prosecutors, would in our ignorance and selfishness perpetuate the racial myth?

The problem is yours and mine: can education succeed in making us citizens of one world and members of one humanity? Can the X-rays of education penetrate the iron curtain around each of our minds—the iron curtain of selfishness, ignorance, and prejudice? This is not a time for comedy. It is truly a time for greatness. Without greatness the time may well be very short indeed.

Music, this time a special arrangement of the Sweet Briar Song, followed Miss Lucas' address and preceded the benediction which was read by the Rev. Vincent Franks of Richmond. Then began the recessional, which proceeded out of the gymnasium and eventually was broken up into small conversational groups.

Luncheon was served in the Refectory, which was decked with yellow chrysanthemums and masses of smilax. Dean Lyman, with warm graciousness, presided over the brief program at the close of the luncheon, introducing the speakers and adding her own tribute to Miss Lucas on behalf of the faculty and of the entire Sweet Briar community.

Once again the alumnae came into the picture, this time through the words of their president, Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, '36, who spoke as follows:

Sweet Briar has had, in its forty years of existence, three extraordinary presidents, each one of whom has made her special contribution to the growth and development of the college. Although their services were of course consecutive in time, it is as though they worked in unison, each one picking up the work of the others, adding her own, and never losing ground. They were not bound by rigidity, but they remained inflexible in their common purpose to build and maintain a liberal arts college of the highest excellence. This has been done through sometimes stormy times, in a period when the horizons of women's opportunities and responsibilities have widened far beyond the conception of the average observor of 1906.

It is probable that in every age people feel that the crisis they face is the most difficult and dangerons of all time. We in 1946 have the special impetus to feel this urgency which was given us by the scientists and technicians who worked during the war under the Manhattan Engineer District. We are beset with problems everywhere, and over all hangs the threatening shadow of the BOMB.

We are also beset by the constantly recurring hope that out of all this confusion and misery we may be able to build a world in which peoples over the earth will live together in peace, conscious of their unity and fulfilling their responsibilities each to the other.

It is a complex and confusing time in which tu live, and all of us must muster our best efforts toward building the better world of which we dream. While statesmen and their fellows meet and work together, each one of us knows that in the end the results will be determined by the individuals of our world, by their ability and determination to make and keep a peace that will survive.

To realize our dream, individuals everywhere must be able to think in the largest terms, and willing to do their part in the smallest detail. People must be fired by the great concept, but must be willing and able to maintain their loyalty to it through the dreariest self-denial or service. It is not a matter only of needing great leaders. All the followers too must understand and be steadfast to the common cause.

This will mean much self-discipline, understanding, tolerance and love on the part of all those individuals. To train such persons offers the greatest challenge to institutions of learning that could be devised. Here is the opportunity and necessity for teaching and learning and developing the wisdom and understanding which will enable us to use the tools of our civilization in the best possible way.

And here we are at Sweet Briar today, having inaugurated as its fourth president, Dr. Martha Lucas. She comes to a tremendous opportunity of which she is fully aware, and she is properly equipped to undertake it. She is quite strong and talented enough to accomplish wonders all alone, but she is not alone. She has to support her, not only the friends and helpers who are here today, and who will work with her through the years, but also the alumnae of this college for whom I speak. Those of us who have lived and studied at Sweet Briar look with love and pride upon our college. We value it for its large part in the development of our own lives, and we look to it to be a source of strength and wisdom for generations of students to come. And we extend to Dr. Lucas our warmest welcome, our strong support, and our confident hope of her high achievement.

The second speaker was Dabney S. Lancaster, member of the Board of Directors, former Executive Secretary to the Board of Overseers, president of Farmville State Teachers College and former Superintendent of Public Instruction in Virginia. Mr. Lancaster, whose connections with Sweet Briar began when he was a student at the University of Virginia, ended his informal talk with the following message:

My assignment today is the pleasant one of bringing greetings to Sweet Briar's new president from all Virginians. There are many subjects on which I would not dare speak on behalf of all Virginians, but on the subject of Miss Lucas I am sure that there is unanimity of opinion among all those whose privilege it has been to know her, and therefore I can speak with assurance for those who have not been so privileged, for they too will join in the general chorus of praise when the opportunity arrives.

President Lucas' career has marked her as a student of distinction, as an individual who thinks for herself and thinks soundly, as a person whose charm and interest in others captivate all with whom she comes n contact

Miss Lucas believes in liberal arts training as the foundation of good citizenship. She believes in translating theory into practice, and she will continue to develop at Sweet Briar young women who will think clearly and who will act independently and fearlessly for the common good. She has demonstrated great interest in public education and public welfare and she knows that our democracy can live only if founded upon an educated citizenship.

Virginia needs Sweet Briar—an institution that is in a position to select its students on the basis of ability and character—Sweet Briar needs Virginia—a state whose history and tradition and present-day activities can provide a great laboratory which, if properly utilized, can vitalize a liberal arts program.

From this Virginia then I bring greetings to Sweet Briar's fourth president and best wishes for her success in the great work that she has undertaken.

After the luncheon, Miss Lucas hurried home in order to greet and be greeted by the visitors who soon crowded into Sweet Briar House. Thus ended the official events of the day and Sweet Briar College was launched into a new era of its history. It was, everyone agreed, a very special day, a day of warmth and dignity, of deep pleasure and new hopes.

Inauguration Sidelights

Among the extra-special guests for the occasion, who were greeted with great pleasure by the alumnae, were Miss Glass, Miss Dutton, Dr. Harley, Miss Sparrow, Miss McLaws, Mr. Rollins, Miss Reynolds, Mr. Worthington, Mrs. Dew. The inimitable Dr. Harley, who is spending the winter in Charlottesville, came by train to Amherst and from there to Sweet Briar by bus, stopping in Amherst long enough to buy a gallon of cider.

Seven alumnae marched in the academic procession as delegates: Annie Powell Hodges, '10, principal of Stuart Hall; Martha Dabney Jones, '29, head of the English Department of St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh; Adelaide Boze Glascock, '40, head of the French department of Collegiate School, Richmond; Anne Fletcher Noyes, '43, newly graduated from the law school of the University of Kentucky, which she represented; Margaret Thomas Kruesi, ex-'12, delegate of the University of Chattanooga; Elizabeth Herndon Hudson, '41, representing Illinois College.

It was indeed a great and happy day for Miss Lucas' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Lucas of Washington, who were among the guests.

Tau Phi members ushered the visitors into the gymnasium and then performed similar services in seating 302 guests at the luncheon. Students also assisted at the registration tables, they ran errands and answered questions. The handsome place cards at the luncheon were lettered by students.

A transcription of Bishop Tucker's induction speech and Miss Lucas' address of acceptance was made by WLVA and broadcast from that station in Lynchburg at 1:15 p. m. on Friday.

Ernest Zechiel, associate professor of music, composed the Processional which was played by the Lynchburg String Orchestra, and the special introductory arrangement of the Sweet Briar Song. The latter was sung by the Glee Club, directed by G. Noble Gilpin.

Miss Long, in charge of housing, found enough beds available on campus in the various faculty homes and apartments to accommodate all the delegates who wished to stay overnight.

Founders' Day, 1946

POUNDERS' DAY this year took a departure from its accustomed place on the calendar. Instead of the last Friday in October, it was observed on Sunday, October 27. The exercises were held in the gymnasium at 10:30 that morning, with Dr. Wallace E. Rollins, himself one of the founders of the college since he belonged to the faculty from 1908 to 1911, delivering the address of the day. Seniors and sophomores, as usual, took part in the brief service held later on Monument Hill, and placed flowers on the graves of the Williams family.

Paint and Patches' first production of the year, which used to be designated as the Founders' Day play, was given on the evenings of October 25 and 26. Berkeley Square, by John Balderston, was the choice for the opener, directed by Miss Mary Elizabeth Wilson.

In recognition of high spiritual qualities practically applied in daily living, Sweet Briar presents the Algernon Sydney Sulhvan Award, to a non-student on Founders' Day. This year, by unanimous vote of the faculty, the Sullivan Award went to Miss Rachel Carter of Amherst, the first Negro Home Demonstration Agent in Virginia.

Her many friends from all parts of the county who had been invited to attend the exercises heard Bertha Pfister Wailes, '17, who has worked with Miss Carter for many years in a great many welfare projects, say in presenting the candidate:

". . . Through her work on various county welfare committees she has come to be one of the chief agents of understanding between the groups of our community, and is held in the highest esteem by her fellow-citizens.

"Her life has been an example of dignity, gentleness, thoughtfulness and strength for all who have known her, but above all, she manifests a serenity of spirit, and peace of mind which betoken a deeply religious nature. Her religion is not a thing apart, but is reflected in her daily living and in her influence on others."

Miss Lucas then read the following citation: "Rachel Carter: because of the spiritual strength revealed in your daily life and in your twenty-five years of unselfish service to our fellow-man, I confer upon you the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award, that all may be inspired to work courageously together for a better world."

Lights and Shadows in The Early History of Sweet Briar

WALLACE E. ROLLINS

PEXT Friday our new President will be inaugurated and a new stage begun in the onward march of Sweet Briar. It is well at this time to take a glance backwards at the founding and early history of the college. Why was it founded? What were the ideals of its founders? What were its early difficulties? Its successes? Who are the "famous men" and women we praise today as founders and pioneers? It is a heroic story.

Perhaps I may say that circumstances have given me many opportunities for first-hand information. It was my privilege to know all the members of the first Board of Directors save one, and to know four of them quite intimately. The first President of the Board, Bishop Alfred Magill Randolph, for whom Randolph Hall is named, was not only my Bishop, but in deep reality my Father-in-God, and with him I often talked about his ideals for Sweet Briar. The second President of the Board, Dr. Carl Grammer, was a friend with whom I had contacts for more than forty years. Furthermore, though I did not come until the third year of the life of the college, I was the first Professor of Religion at Sweet Briar and served for four-anda-half years also as the first resident Chaplain.

All this has given me an unusual opportunity to know the inside story of Sweet Briar. If, therefore, I fail to communicate this to you, the fault is entirely mine.

It is not customary to take a text on Founders' Day—but this is Sunday, and it happens that a text is just at hand. It is from I Corinthians 16:9. St. Paul is explaining to the Corinthians why he is making a prolonged stay at Ephesus. He writes: "I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost; for a great door and effectual is opened unto me and there are many adversaries." There were at Ephesus unusual opportunities and also unusual obstacles. He eagerly welcomed the opportunities; he was not deterred by the obstacles. He was even challenged by them, for he knew, as all pioneers know, that opportunities and difficulties go together, and that you cannot have the one without bravely facing the other.

It was so in the founding of Sweet Briar. There were unrivalled opportunities at the beginning, but there were also almost immovable obstacles.

Let us consider first the difficulties:

Try to imagine a college functioning without any alumn.r—with no Alumnæ Association back of it to counsel and to help in a thousand vital ways. It is almost unthinkable, and yet that is just how every new college must function at first. Try to imagine a college without traditions to guide and sustain it—without organizations of any kind—even without student government yet running. All these had to be created de novo.

Imagine a college with the faculty all new, a group that has never worked together. Try to imagine a college with the faculty all young—with not a gray hair or a bald head among them! Try to imagine a college without any library, with the necessary books in process of selection all at once. Imagine a college with a mere bandful of students, without the inspiration of numbers and of great variety. Finally, imagine a college with few buildings, all disturbingly new, constantly reminding everyone of the newness of the venture.

These were the general difficulties that face every new college. But there were particular difficulties in the founding of Sweet Briar.

First, there was little demand for college education for women forty years ago. This was especially true of the South, and it was to the South that Sweet Briar had chiefly to appeal at the first. The colleges for women had no long waiting lists then, and many of them could hardly get enough students to keep running. The demand then, especially in the South, was for private secondary schools, or for junior colleges, or for so-called "finishing" schools. These "finishing schools" were very popular, and supplied all that most people wanted for their daughters.

It was so difficult to get college students in the early years that I was asked by the President and the Board of Directors to make an extended trip South in the interest of college education and of Sweet Briar in particular. I spent a month in a tour of a number of Southern states, visiting a great many schools and hundreds of individuals. I came back a sadder but wiser man! I went prepared to talk with enthusiasm of the ideals and standards of our new college-of its faculty, and their training at the great universities. Great was my disappointment to find that most parents were not interested in such things. Their questions were about other things—the water supply, sewage, the dairy, the buildings, the food, etc. Only two or three times did I find any interest in our faculty or their training. One conservative father asked particularly about riding, and whether the girls were required to ride astride. "My daughter shall never ride astride!" he said. Another fond parent wanted to know whether we had any snakes at Sweet Briar!

The interests of most of the girls seemed to be in the nearness of Sweet Briar to Washington and Lee, and V.M.I., and the University of Virginia—and to the city of Washington—and in how many dances a year the college had.

Another handicap in the early years was the difficulty of getting students adequately prepared for college work. Most public schools and many other preparatory schools, especially in the South, gave inadequate preparation. Due to this, and also to the necessity of having income from students' fees, Sweet Briar in the early years accepted girls in the sub-freshman department, later called the Academy. It should be remembered that the college department was kept entirely separate and that its standards were in no way lowered. Indeed, having a preparatory department made it easier to maintain the standards of the college, for the girls could easily be demoted, without sending them away. Thus, one early class entered 14 in the freshman year and graduated only 4.

But the fact remains that having other than college students at Sweet Briar in the early years gave a wrong impression to the public, and this wrong impression persisted long after the Academy was dropped. Even at the present time, one often meets persons who do not realize that Sweet Briar College has always been a straight four-year liberal arts college with the highest academic standards.

It should be added, however, that many of the most loyal and helpful friends that Sweet Briar has had, have been women who were here as students in the Academy.

Another difficulty of the early days was that the endowment was inadequate.

Mrs. Williams died in October, 1900. Her will left her entire estate, with the exception of some personal bequests, for the founding of a school for girls, in memory of her only daughter, Daisy, who had died some years earlier.

The personal property was valued at $616,000, besides 8,000 acres of land. The total estate was valued at about $750,000, which in purchasing power today would be equal to about $1,500,000. This was considered a princely sum at that time, and amply sufficient. But how that money melted away!

Some $55,000 had to be paid out in legal adjustments with other claimants, nearly $74,000 in taxes, more than $50,000 in personal bequests, some $50,000 in lawyers' fees, and nearly $14,000 more in the settling of the estate. A large sum was spent on the dam for the Lake, and another large sum on remodelling St. Angelo for a president's house, though it was never later used for that. The building of roads and the upkeep of the farm took other large amounts, and the power plant and laundry had to be built. Two dormitories were needed at once. Grav Hall was built in 1905-06 and named in honor of Reverend Arthur Gray, Mrs. William's minister and first Secretary of the Board. Mr. Gray's daughter came to Sweet Briar, and eventually two granddaughters. Carson Hall, built in the same year, was named for Dr. James Carson of Lynchburg, a member of the first Board of Directors. His granddaughter is the wife of Bishop Beverley Tucker, the present President of the Board. Bishop and Mrs. Tucker have had three daughters at Sweet Briar. Besides dormitories, the Refectory and the Academic Building were built before the college opened, and also the brick faculty houses down the hill. Two years later, Randolph Hall was built, and named in honor of Bishop Randolph, the first President of the Board of Directors.

By the fall of 1908, only about $50,000 remained from the original bequest, and the income from this endowment was of course small. Small, likewise, was the income from students' fees, since the college had only 36 students the first year, 90 the second, and 111 the third. You may well imagine what the financial struggles were in the early years.

Still another obstacle for the college at first was its name. There is great authority for the query: "What's in a name?", and the sentiment that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet"—but Shakespeare had never founded a college! In Mrs. Williams' will, she had directed that the name of the school to be founded should be "Sweet Briar Institute"—but it was clear that a college should be called a college. "Williams College" was suggested, but that name was already taken. The name "Sweet Briar College," finally adopted, was taken, of course, from this Sweet Briar plantation of the Williams family.

Our first President attended a meeting of college presidents in the early years. When she was introduced to another college president as the President of the new Sweet Briar College, the other rudely exclaimed: "What a name! I would as soon have a diploma from the 'Lily-of-the-Valley College'." Compensation came when President Benedict was introduced to President Thomas of Bryn Mawr, and Miss Thomas exclaimed: "Sweet Briar! What a beautiful name!" So there were differences of opinion! Now, after all these years, Faculty and Students and Alumnae have put rich content into the name "Sweet Briar," so that the name has become an asset.

So much for the difficulties of the early days. Let us now turn to the brighter side of the picture—to ideals, to enthusiasm, to victories. There were, of course, hard problems all along the way, but I shall confine myself now to the Lights rather than the Shadows.

The first thing that had to be done after legal questions were settled was to make a decision as to what kind of institution should be founded at Sweet Briar. Mrs. Williams had directed in her will that "It shall be the general scope and object of the school to impart to its students such education in sound learning, and such physical, moral, and religious training as shall in the judgment of the Directors best fit them to be useful members of society." The way was thus left open to the Directors to establish any kind of school which in their opinion would best fit girls to be useful members of society.

The one who, more than any other, had influence in determining the kind of institution to be founded was Bishop Alfred Magill Randolph, the first President of the Board. He was a Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Virginia, which then included this Southwestern Virginia. He was, therefore, Mrs. Williams' Bishop.

He was a scholar—especially in the fields of Philosophy and Theology. He was a great preacher—combining depth of thought with a gift of literary expression and richness of illustration, while his voice had something of the range and music of the organ. Phillips Brooks, his close friend, considered him the greatest preacher in the American Episcopal Church, and, with the exception of Phillips Brooks himself, he was. Bishop Randolph had great charm of personality. He had a deep human interest in all sorts of people, including the humblest. He had a keen sense of humor. He was a good talker and, like all people who are really charming, was a good listener. He was fond of the best in music and in art. He was one of the most delightful guests I have ever known.

This is the man who was the first President of the Board of Directors and under whose influence the decision was made to make Sweet Briar a college of the highest academic rank. This, he thought, was the kind of school most needed, and the kind which would best fit girls for the duties of life.

A second decision was also made chiefly under his influence—that this college of high rank should be undenominational. With his prestige and power, he could certainly have kept the college under the control of his own diocese and of himself. Every member of the first Board of Directors save one was a clergyman or layman under him. But Bishop Randolph had a fear of denominational partisanship. He felt that the pursuit of truth should be untrammeled. Hence he surrendered the control of the college by his own church, and by himself, in order that it might have the freedom he thought so necessary. He was a broad-minded man, and would have agreed with Clement of Alexandria that "The Way of Truth is one, and into it, as into a never-failing river, flow streams from all sides." Such a free surrender of denominational and personal control, when many felt he was doing wrong to make the surrender, was a truly generous and noble act, seldom paralleled—and it deserves to be commemorated by this college for all time.

But in wishing Sweet Briar to be undenominational Bishop Randolph did not for a moment, wish it to be secular or non-religious. His view of the world was profoundly spiritual. He realized "the loneliness of a soul in which there is no altar." He understood, more than any other man I have known, the place of Religion in life. But he had faith that the free and untrammeled search for Truth would lead to God, who has created in His children the desire to know.

Such were the ideals of the first President of the Board of Directors. The college was founded within the terms of Mrs. Williams' will—and since Bishop Randolph was Mrs. Williams' Bishop and the Rev. Arthur Gray, the first Secretary of the Board, was her Pastor, it can be reasonably assumed that their decisions as to the nature of the College were in accord with her wishes. I stress this point because contrary ideas began to be circulated at the beginning, and still persist to this very day. So far as can be determined, Mrs. Williams was not primarily interested in the kind of educational institution to be founded. Her chief concern was to perpetuate the memory of her daughter Daisy—and she left it entirely to the first Board of Directors to determine the nature of the educational institution established.

No study of the history of Sweet Briar can neglect the importance of its location, its environment. A recent letter from Miss Caroline Sparrow puts it this way: "Sweet Briar had been a plantation, and it kept something of its past. Quiet rested upon its wide spaces of 2,900 acres. One was closer to sunsets and to dawns."

The decisions and plans for the college had been made. It remained to put them into execution. The choice for the first President of the College fell upon Miss Mary K. Benedict. She was at the time only 32, and in those days there was less readiness to commit institutions into the hands of youth than there is now.

The first President was the daughter of a Professor—a teacher of Psychology. Miss Benedict was therefore brought up in academic circles. She graduated at Vassar, and she pursued her graduate work at Yale University, taking her Ph.D. in Psychology. After that, she had experience in teaching before coming here.

She arrived at Sweet Briar in the early summer of 1906 to put into execution the plans of the Board of Directors. When the college opened in September with its 36 students, Miss Benedict was not only President but Dean as well. She had the highest standards for the new college—both academic and personal. She was in the closest touch with the students. She knew each one intimately, and what happened to each. She seemed to know by instinct what each one did and even thought. I used to tell her that in this respect she reminded me of Ignatius Loyola, who was said even to know how many fleas bit each brother at night. I should like to quote Miss Sparrow again. "Miss Benedict radiated serenity, power. Here was a great soul. Pettiness disappeared. Problems of personality evaporated, tempers calmed, details fell into their proper place."

She faced almost insuperable difficulties with infinite patience and courage. The first Briar Patch, published in 1910, was dedicated to her in these words: "To our President, Dr. Mary K. Benedict, whose example of noble womanhood has been an inspiration to our class, we dedicate this, the first volume of our Briar Patch, as a token of our respect, admiration, and love." The words of this Dedication could have been repeated by every class from 1910-1916.

The faculty in the early years were all young and full of the idealism of youth. They were a group of strongly marked individualities, but they were united in loyalty to the common cause. They had the joy and enthusiasm of creators and pioneers.

The students shared this faith and cooperated with the President and faculty most loyally. They took upon themselves responsibility for the standards and good name of the college. They, too, were fellow-laborers in a great cause. Neither students nor faculty lost faith in the future, even in the darkest days. Often I heard some one say: "Some day this will be a great college!" It is true that much of their labor showed no apparent results, but it was all laying deep foundations on which the college could build.

The graduation of the first class in 1910 was a landmark in the history of the college, and did much to encourage the President and faculty. Bishop Randolph was to have preached the baccalaureate sermon, but he could not come, and at the last moment I had to take his place. I have never had a greater thrill than I had in preaching that first baccalaureate sermon in Room 1 of the Academic Building, then used as a Chapel.

That first graduating class of only five ranks high among all Sweet Briar classes: Nan Powell, now Mrs. William Hodges, has spent all of her life as a teacher-first at Sweet Briar, then as Principal of Chatham Hall, as Dean of Women at William and Mary College, where she married the Dean of Men, as Principal of Collegiate School in Richmond, and now as Principal of Stuart Hall in Staunton; Eugenia Griffin, now Mrs. Charles R. Burnett, taught before her marriage. She has been for some years on the Board of Directors of the College, and has sent two daughters to Sweet Briar, both of whom have been Presidents of Student Government; Annie Cumnock, now Mrs. J. Garland Miller, who has also sent a daughter to Sweet Briar, interested her own father in the college so greatly that he became a very useful member of the Board of Directors and served for several years as Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board; Frances Murrell, now Mrs. Everingham Rickards, taught at Farmville and elsewhere after graduation. She has always kept in close touch with Sweet Briar, and her daughter graduated here in 1944; Louise Hooper, now Mrs. Arnold Ewall, taught school for several years, and she has spent her life in outstanding social service of various kinds.

Thus, the first class of 1910 has had a distinguished record, and its members have all been useful alumnae. They all married! This was reassuring to many who in the early days feared that college education would interfere with marriage and be detrimental to domestic life. The 100% record of the first class at Sweet Briar helped to dissipate such fears.

There have been many political, social, and religious changes since the early days of Sweet Briar. It will help you the better to visualize the college as it used to be, if I point out some of these changes.

For one thing, women did not have the vote for many years after Sweet Briar was founded. While the agitation for Woman's Suffrage was not so keen and bitter in the United States as it was in England among the Suffragettes, there was a great deal of debate in this country. The controversy reached our quiet spot. Miss Mary Johnston, the author of To Have and To Hold, one of the best-sellers in fiction of the time, was asked to speak to the faculty on the suffrage question, about which she was a crusader. Miss Johnston began by describing very graphically all the evils of our American civilization and then she traced each terrible condition back to the exclusive male franchise. There were only four men in the group, and as she described each awful condition she would point her scornful finger at me, or at Dr. Humphries or Mr. Dew or Mr. Worthington.

Some time later, Mrs. Philip Snowden, the beautiful and eloquent wife of the English Labor Leader, spoke to the whole student body and again we men were pointed out as the sources of all evil! The controversy grew warmer.

A short time after this, there was published in a Richmond paper an interview with a washer-woman up in Maine. When asked why she was opposed to woman's suffrage, she replied, "I think if we can find some little thing the men can do without us, we ought to let 'em do it."

There were two Dramatic Societies in the old days, and much interest in dramatics. And they were ambitious in the plays put on. One year they gave As You Like It, and the next, Twelfth Night. But there was one custom that will sound strange to modern ears. When girls took the part of men and wore not simply the doublet of Shakespear's time but modern trousers and coat and vest, it was not deemed proper for men to be present. In vain we men protested the loss of our rights!

I will not say that there was no smoking among the girls in the early days. I can only say that I never saw any!

The attitude to dogs was less Franciscan than it is now. I quote, "Be it resolved by the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors that no dogs shall be permitted to run at large on Sweet Briar property, but all dogs that are kept thereon shall be either kept confined on the premises of the owner, or kept securely blocked."

The college was much more isolated in the old days. Roads to Lynchburg were rough and hilly, and the road to Amherst impassable in some seasons. There were few autos then, and trips to Lynchburg were always by train. The trains were much fewer then, and even more uncertain. The beautiful road across the mountains to Lexington had not then been built. The isolation of Sweet Briar was inconvenient, but it had its compensations. Life centered more on the college campus. There was closer fellowship between faculty and students. Week-end absences were necessarily few, and academic work was correspondingly helped.

One of the happiest features of the life at Sweet Briar was the hospitality of the Walker family. Dr. Walker, father of Miss Ruby and Miss Winifred, was a delightful English gentleman, who then lived at St. Angelo. He and his charming wife and the seven children and Auntie who were then at home each played some musical instrument in the family orchestra. The Walker family entertained the whole college some two or three times a year, and they were "at home" each Thursday afternoon, when large numbers of faculty and students trekked over the hills to their genial fireside. Such food!—and such fellowship!

Chapel services were held daily, except Monday, with required attendance both Sunday and week-days. Due to the customs of that time and to the particular conditions at Sweet Briar, such required chapel created no problem. Indeed no one was conscious that it was required. Chapel attendance brought the whole college—President, faculty, and students,—together regularly in a corporate act of fellowship, aspiration, and worship. I am fully aware that the old customs are not possible now, nor desirable. But there has been loss as well as gain. The ideal, of course, would be to achieve voluntarily the values of the old system by a practically 100% attendance today. Some day some great college will reach this ideal. I covet for Sweet Briar this high honor.

Time would fail me to tell of all the choice spirits to whom the college owes an immortal debt: Dr. Carl Grammer, for whom Grammer Hall is named, the second President of the Board of Directors, who more than any other was responsible for the choice of all three first Presidents of Sweet Briar; Mr. Fergus Reid, for whom Reid Hall was named-third President of the Board of Directors, the generous donor of our splendid Library; Mr. N. C. Manson, who was for many years Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board, who gave his time and legal services without charge, and without whose services in the critical years it is doubtful if Sweet Briar could have survived; Mr. William B. Dew, our first Treasurer, who served the college 36 years—a longer term of service than any other-and who was an invaluable adviser of the first three Presidents; Dr. Mary Harley, College Physician for 29 years, to whose generosity and foresight we owe our Infirmary. She could detect a germ a mile away-and thus kept the college in health for a generation; all the teachers who have contributed things ponderable and imponderable in the years past, and have helped to make Sweet Briar what it is.

It does not fall within the scope of my subject to speak of the notable contribution, unfortunately cut short by illness, of Miss McVea, our second President,—nor of the long and brilliant services of Miss Glass.

But I may say in conclusion of all who have served Sweet Briar in any way, from the beginning to the present, from the highest to the humblest, that their names and deeds are written in the notebooks of the angels! And I should like to apply to them all the words of the epitaph in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, to Sir Christopher Wren, its architect: "If you would seek their monument, look around you!!"

And to all the noble characters associated with the building of Sweet Briar, I think it fitting to apply the words of another: "A great character is like a great sanctuary. You visit it, you are inspired by it, you go away—and then—Duty begins!"

Ina Larkin Edwards Fund

Among the gifts announced by Miss Glass at Commencement last June was the Ina Larkin Edwards Fund of $2,000, the income from which is to be used in the music department for the purchase of books, records and manuscripts. The gift was established in memory of his wife by Mr. Percy Edwards, of Harrisburg, Oregon.

Alumnae who are of that small group which helped to establish Sweet Briar in 1906 will recall Ina Larkin as one of their number.

Small, dark and vivacious, she was chosen president of the newly-formed Student Government Association during that year and the "successful launching of its organization was due in large measure to her efforts," as one of her classmates said recently. At the end of the year she withdrew from Sweet Briar, but her fondness for the college lasted throughout her life.

After living in Connecticut for several years following their marriage in 1908, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards took their two sons and moved to Tulsa, Oklahoma, where they made their home for nearly ten years. Thereafter they moved to Oregon and settled in Eugene. Music, especially singing, was Mrs. Edwards' lifelong interest, one which she pursued seriously and intensely. She enjoyed working with and encouraging young singers. During her residence in Oregon she also developed an interest in gardening and became a member of the American Rose Society and other national organizations specializing in lilies and iris. Riding was another of Mrs. Edwards' chief pleasures, one which she continued to enjoy until illness forced her to give it up.

Mrs. Edwards' death occurred in Eugene in December, 1945.

Sweet Briar is grateful to her husband for his generous gift, the Ina Larkin Edwards Fund, which will make possible the continuing enrichment of material available to Sweet Briar girls for the study and enjoyment of music.

Students Abroad and At Home

NCE again, American students are going to Europe to study, to learn the customs of other lands, to observe the effects of the war upon the lives of people in those countries, to exchange ideas with young people of other nations, to make friends across the seas. Eleven Sweet Briar girls are of this number and one who was in Europe during the summer has returned to tell what she saw and heard there.

Anne Dickson, '45, and Jane Lawrence, '46, are among the winners of graduate fellowships, 50 of which were offered by the French government to American students. They will enroll at the Sorbonne at the opening of the winter term in November, and they will live with a French family in Paris throughout the year.

Three juniors, Mary Pierce, Caroline Rankin, and Mary Louise Lloyd, are attending the University of Geneva, where they are concentrating in French...language, literature, history and philosophy. Two June graduates, Mary Louise Holton and Caroline Rudulph, are also at Geneva, enrolled in the Graduate Institute of International Studies. All are members of the University of Delaware Foreign Study Group which ordinarily would have gone to Paris but which went to Switzerland instead this year because of the difficulty of making satisfactory living arrangements for such a large group in Paris. Mary Louise Wagner, also a junior, attended the German summer school at the University of Zurich and decided to remain there for the winter.

Clad in scarlet wool gowns, Patricia Traugott, Patricia Cansler, and Virginia Holmes have begun their courses as bejantines at the University of St. Andrews, Scotland, where they are the first Sweet Briar juniors enrolled since 1938-39. They report that they have been most warmly welcomed and there is no doubt that they are enjoying all of their new experiences.

Meanwhile, Eleanor Bosworth, '47, who was selected as one of 25 American students to attend the International Student Service Conference at Girton College, Cambridge, this summer, has returned to Sweet Briar inspired by the acquaintances she made and by what she learned from the European students who met there. Eleanor also spent several weeks in France, during which time she visited Caen and other devastated cities of Normandy and Brittany.

On the campus there is a renewed interest in the desperate plight of students in other lands. Sweet Briar has been brought in close touch with them, not only by the fellow-students who are now in Europe but also by the accounts of Prof. Joseph E. Barker and Miss Laura Buckham, both of whom spent the summer in France at the invitation of the French government, and of Miss Johanne Stockholm, who visited her family in Denmark for the first time in 10 years.

From five different countries the students pictured have come to Sweet Briar: Ileana Garcia, from Puerto Rico, who has had two years at the University of Puerto Rico; Isabel Dzung, from China, who came to Sweet Briar last February; Maria Ortega, whose family came from Spain to Cuba, and who is starting her second year at Sweet Briar; Katherine Berthier, Monterey, Mexico, a junior; Alice Madlener, Buenos Aires, who entered in September with advanced standing; Alicia Iznaga, a freshman from Cuba.

Sweet Briar also had a visit this fall from a most attractive young Italian medical student, Giovanna Ribet, now visiting colleges in this country on behalf of the World Student Service Fund. A member of the underground movement against the Nazis, Giovanna also managed to continue her studies in spite of many obstacles. She and Eleanor Bosworth met in Cambridge in July.

An opportunity to turn interest into material benefits is being placed before the community this fall through the drive conducted jointly by the Relief and Funds committees. The goal is $5,000, of which $2,000 is for the support of the two foreign students now enrolled at Sweet Briar on scholarships, Isabel Dzung and Maria Ortega; $1,700 is designated for the World Student Service Fund; $1,000 for the sponsorship of an elementary school in Paris under the auspices of the Save the Children Federation. The remainder will go to one or more as yet undetermined projects.

Aid to foreign students is the keynote this fall and interest is high!

The following news has just been received from the secretary of the University of Delaware's Foreign Study Committee: "I am very happy to add that Miss Rankin (Caroline) was one of the 13 students in our Group of 41 to receive the University of Geneva's award of the Certificat d'Etudes."

Caroline won this award for the excellence of her record at the close of the preliminary session of studies, which began August 27 and ended on October 4.

Here and Now

MISS LUCAS' busy calendar this fall includes visits to a number of alumnae groups, as well as speeches in various cities. Before college opened, late in August, she addressed the Lynchburg Lions Club on "Education and the United Nations," a talk which was broadcast over WLVA. She represented Sweet Briar at the inauguration of President Sarah Gibson Blanding at Vassar, and then she traveled to Montevallo, Alabama, where she was one of three speakers at the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Alabama College for Women, her subject being "Women's Education in a Free Society." On the following day she was the guest of the Birmingham alumnae at luncheon in that city. In addition to her address at her own inauguration on November 1, Miss Lucas will speak at the joint meeting of the A. A. U. W. and the Sweet Briar Alumnae Club in Richmond on November 12, and on November 21 she is scheduled to speak at Hollins College before the faculty and students at an evening convocation. "Religio Sisyphorum" is the title of her talk that evening. 40

Dean Lyman was the guest speaker at the opening meeting this fall of the Richmond Alumnae Club. Husbands of alumnae, parents of students now in college and faculty members from schools and colleges in that city heard her speak on "Teaching Religion in College Today." The Richmond alumnae were delighted with the success of the meeting. Under the presidency of Adelaide Boze Glascock, '40, the group is planning a full schedule of activities for the year.

"Carpetbaggers of 1946, or Reconstruction Hits the Refectory" was the title Mrs. Linda Spence Brown gave to her interesting talk in Convocation early in October. She explained what shortages of help and food were doing to the refectories, and what was being done to overcome them, as far as it is possible. The students learned that Mrs. Brown's problems are the same as their mothers', multiplied by several hundred.

Volunteer waitresses are no longer being used this year, thanks to Mrs. Brown's success in obtaining waitresses in the county. Some 13 students, however, are earning money for part of their college expenses by working in the refectories, as has been the case for more than a dozen years.

Sweet Briar has not yet gone co-educational. Twenty veterans applied for admission to Sweet Briar this fall in response to the announcement made in June that by vote of the faculty and with the consent of the Board of Overseers, male veterans of World War II, who live within commuting distance and could meet the entrance requirements, would be admitted to classes. None was able to gain entrance this semester.

Stereoscopic chest X-rays for all members of the community, carried out last February for the first time in conjunction with the Anti-Tuberculosis Association of Lynchburg, were completed for the second time on October 22, 23, and 24. This is to be an annual event, for the protection of the entire community.

Sweet Briar's charms brought return visits by Vox Pop and the Chicago Tribune's Youth on the Campus reporter and photographer during the first month this fall. Vox Pop you may recall, staged its nationwide broadcast from Sweet Briar five years ago and it met with such success that Parks Johnson asked to be permitted to return with his 'gang', featuring Sweet Briar as the college-opening program of this year. The broadcast, staged in the gym, drew a large crowd from the surrounding communities and furnished the students with a great deal of fun and excitement.

Less than a week later, Andy Pavlin and Eleanor Nangle, who had come to Sweet Briar three times since May, 1941, turned up again to take pictures of Sweet Briar girls and Sweet Briar's campus. Their weekly feature in the Chicago Tribune has covered the campus of almost every college and university in the land and its wide distribution has attracted the interest of many prospective students. Andy and Eleanor know so much about Sweet Briar now that they could qualify as honorary alumnae; they say they can't stay away very long!

Fire prevention and protection came into its own at Sweet Briar during National Fire Prevention Week, early in October. The screaming sirens of the Amherst Fire Department's apparatus summoned the entire community to a mass meeting at noon on Monday, where Major Howard B. Morris, AUS, spoke briefly and then led the way to the east dell where, with the aid of Amherst volunteer firemen, he staged a demonstration of various types of extinguishers. Fire drills were staged at intervals throughout the week, and the fire wardens had special lessons in the handling of extinguishers.

Faculty Notes

Miss Lisa Rauschenbusch, who was director of Paint and Patches' productions, in charge of speech work, and instructor in English at Sweet Briar since 1940, resigned her position here to accept an assistant professorship at the University of Rochester, New York, this fall.

During the years she was at Sweet Briar, Miss Rauschenbusch worked wonders with the students under her direction in presenting productions of a truly remarkable quality. The inconveniences of the tiny stage in Fletcher Auditorium were merely a challenge to her and their ingenuity. The idol of P & P, she also endeared herself to her faculty colleagues and her presence is greatly missed in a wide variety of campus activities, ranging from the intellectual to the purely entertaining. Her departure is a real loss to Sweet Briar, as alumnae and students who had the privilege of working with her will agree.

News of the marriage, on September 3, of Miss Marion Benedict and Wallace E. Rollins will be of interest to many Sweet Briar alumnae. Dr. Rollins, who was professor of religion and college chaplain from 1908 to 1911, returned to the campus in 1940 to make his home following his retirement as dean of the Episcopal Seminary of Virginia at Alexandria, and Mrs. Rollins has been teaching religion at Sweet Briar for the past 18 years. She is continuing her work as professor of religion and head of that department.

Alumnae who attended Sweet Briar in 1925-26 will welcome the news that the former Mlle. Anais Liron, who taught French here that year, survived the war and that she is living in Paris with her husband, Léonce Devaux, and her small daughter, Ghislaine. Her letters to Miss Harriet Rogers are most interesting, and we are indebted to Miss Rogers for permission to reprint the following brief excerpts from three of her letters:

"I enjoyed your news of S. B. and the description of the fall there very much. Though it is exactly 20 years ago I was there, I remember the place so well and all the details you gave brought it back home to me. Just imagine Dr. Harley being so active and energetic at her age!"

"THE ALUMNAE News I enjoyed very much; some of the alumnae's names I recognized as students of 25-26, and I recognized Miss Ames and Miss Glass in the pictures. I felt 20 years younger as I looked at the news of the buildings and campus. Sweet Briar seems to have developed enormously since!"

"I was so interested in the ALUMNAE NEWS, I read things about Miss Morenus, Mrs. Dew, Mr. Worthington, Miss Mattie and Gay, etc. . . I respectfully handle such a beautiful thing made of so beautiful paper, with such pleasant photographs. Some of the girls' names I recognize here and there."

Mme. Devaux' address is: 39 rue Cardinet, Paris 17éme.

Everyone wants to know, "What is Miss Glass doing?" This is what she says:

"I know how you feel when people ask you what I am doing. They ask me, and I feel like the returned graduate at college, always greeted with that question. The days fly, but I am doing nothing worth chronicling. Hours go into letters almost daily. I love not being forgotten.

"I am happy loafing, doing some of the household chores, seeing people, reading, making potpourri of exquisite rose leaves. No house yet."

Lest you think that that is all of the truth, it will be well to add that since September 1, when she returned from England where she went to attend the first postwar meeting of the Council of the International Federation of University Women, Miss Glass has been besieged with calls to speak to A.A.U.W. branches, from Rotary, and from Home Demonstration Clubs. She spoke at A. A. U. W. meetings in Williamsburg, Danville, Charlotte, and Wilmington, Del., early in October. Polly Bissell Ridler, '17, is the president of the Wilmington branch, by the way.

When Dabney S. Lancaster was formally installed as president of Farmville State Teachers College at Farmville, Virginia, on October 24, Sweet Briar's President-emeritus, Miss Glass, was the principal speaker at the inaugural exercises.

Mr. Lancaster, who assumed his new duties on July 1, resigned his post as Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of Virginia in order to accept this college presidency. Alumnae who know him as a member of the Board of Directors of Sweet Briar, those who met him when he was Executive Secreary to the Board of Overseers from 1937 to 1941, not to mention those who know him as the father of three Sweet Briar graduates, join in congratulating Farmville upon its appointment of Dr. Lancaster as president and in wishing for him all possible happiness and satisfaction in his new position.

New Faculty and Staff Members

OLLEGE opened this fall with a new president and 11 new faculty and staff members: Lawrence G. Nelson, assistant professor of English, Ph.D., University of Virginia, M.A., University of Texas, B.A., Luther College, who has taught at Hampden-Sydney and for the past three years at William and Mary; Miss Mary Anne Lee, graduate of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, M.A., University of Wisconsin, who has taught at Randolph-Macon, Cornell, and in several secondary schools; G. Noble Gilpin, instructor in music and director of the Choir and Glee Club, holder of bachelor's and master's degrees from Syracuse University who has been in the army for the past four years; Franz K. Bernheimer, instructor in art, holder of the master of arts and master of fine arts degrees from Yale, who also studied in Munich, Rome, Hamburg and Zurich before coming to this country in 1939; Miss Mary Elzabeth Wilson, instructor in English in charge of speech work and play production, holder of bachelor's and master's degrees from Cornell, where she has had four years of experience in the university theatre; Mrs. Ilora Levi-D'Ancona, instructor in Romance languages, who studied at the universities of Florence, Palermo, Naples, and Santander before coming to this country in 1939 and who has taught at Bennett Junior College and Chatham Hall; Miss Dorothy V. Estes, instructor in physics, graduate of Tennessee Polytechnic Institute and holder of a master's degree from the University of Virginia; Miss Lena C. Annis, assistant in biology, graduate of Acadia University, Nova Scotia. Dr. Frank H. Ellis, Jr., graduate of Washington and Lee and of the medical school of Vanderbilt University, who was appointed acting college physician during the year's leave of absence of Dr. Carol M. Rice who is on the staff of the Student Health Center of the University of Wisconsin. Miss Helen Howell, parttime teacher of piano, directs the choir and is organist at St. Paul's Church in Lynchburg.

Mrs. Bernice D. Lill, registrar, returned to her duties after three and a half years of service as an officer in the Navy and Miss Belle Boone Beard is back at Sweet Briar after a year's leave of absence to do research at Vanderbilt University under a Julius Rosenwald grant. Miss Beard will be chairman of the Division of Social Studies for the next two years.

NEW ALUMNAE ASSISTANT

Elizabeth Van Aken came to Sweet Briar early in September as the new assistant to the Alumnae Secretary, a post which was created to help take care of the expanding activities of the Alumnae Association.

Betty comes from Amsterdam, New York, and she is a 1945 graduate of the New Jersey College for Women. In college she majored in English, was poetry editor of the literary magazine and advertising manager of the yearbook. For the past year she worked in the business offices of the General Electric company in Schenectady. She has held summer jobs of various kinds, including that of desk clerk at a hotel in Madison, Connecticut; playground supervisor in her home city; work in a factory and cashier in a shoe store. For a year before she went to college she was assistant in the Girl Scout office in Amsterdam.

Things in the Alumnae office have been humming along at a great rate this fall, thanks to Betty's helping hands and head, her friendliness and her sense of humor. She began her new job by preparing the entire Alumnae Fund Report for 1945-46 which has recently been mailed to all alumnae. She also wrote much of the copy for the Sweet Briar Preview which accompanied the Fund Report.

Tau Phi

SIXTEEN upperclass students, eleven seniors and five juniors, were named to membership in Tau Phi at the close of the first step-singing of the fall, on Sunday afternoon, October 6. The new seniors include: Eleanor Bosworth, Memphis; Catherine Fitzgerald, Union City, Indiana; Barbara Golden, Columbus, Georgia; Laura Lee Grogan, Fort Worth, Texas; Elizabeth Knapp, Dayton; Marguerite de Lustrac, Norfolk; Mary Stuart McGuire, Richmond; Margaret Munnerlyn, Jacksonville; Lois Ripley, Shaker Heights, Ohio; Anne Webb, Concord, New Hampshire.

Of the five new junior members, two are in Europe this year. They are Mary Louise Lloyd, Dowingtown, Pennsylvania; and Patricia Traugott, Norfolk. The others are: Marion Bower, Richmond; Westray Battle Boyce, Washington; Jane Leach, Milwaukee.

Katherine Street, Chattanooga, is president of Tau Phi, and the other members chosen last year are: Judith Burnett, Richmond; Ernestine Banker, Kingston, Pennsylvania; Joan McCoy, Birmingham.

Among the members of Tau Phi this year there are a number of girls who have a special interest for alumnae. Katherine Street holds the Manson Scholarship; Anne Webb is the first holder of the Mary K. Benedict Scholarship; Margurite de Lustrac is a granddaughter of the late Fergus Reid, former president of the Board of Directors and a staunch friend of Sweet Briar for many years; Mary Louise Lloyd is the sister of Lucy Lloyd, '41; Marion Bower is the sister of Ann Bower, '45; and Judith Burnett is the daughter of Eugenia Griffin Burnett, '10, and the sister of Eugenia Burnett Affel, '42.

Professor Barker Reports On France

L ESS than a week after he stepped out of a transatlantic plane from Paris in New York, Prof. Joseph E. Barker, chairman of the Romance languages department, stepped onto the platform as the speaker at the opening Convocation at Sweet Briar on September 20. Selections from his interesting address, with its pictures of life in France during the past summer, are herewith made available to alumnae readers.

"A little before the middle of June, along with about a hundred other teachers of French chosen to represent all parts of the United 5tates and all types of schools and colleges, I received an invitation from the Cultural Services of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs to spend two months in France and resume contact with French colleagues. The invitation, by agreement with the American Department of State, carried a priority for passport and passage over, and guaranteed food and lodging in France, as well as return passage by boat.

. . . Even with a government priority, however, a number of the invited American teachers were not able to find transportation—85 actually made the trip, of whom three others were from Virginia; Miss Laura Buckham of Sweet Briar, Mrs. Philip Scruggs of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, and Madame Henriette Fallwell of Roanoke High School.

"A considerable number of cultural exchanges are taking place between France and the United States this year. You may have read about the visit of forty young French farmers sent over to study American farming methods. In addition, the French government is sending here for study and research; 15 agriculturalists, 15 doctors, 6 agrégés or holders of advanced degrees (aggrégation) in literature and languages, 5 law students, and numerous engineers and technicians. On the trip going over I shared a cabin with a distinguished surgeon of Bordeaux and Paris who had just completed a four months lecture and observation tour of American medical schools and hospitals. American colleges and universities have awarded full or partial scholarships to 98 French students for this year, most of whom, because of the devalued franc, could not have accepted if the French government had not assumed part of their traveling expenses

"Also let me share with you the news that the French government, through the Institute of International Education in New York, has awarded 50 scholarships for graduate study in France this year. Because of the generous scholarship and financial aid given in the past by Sweet Briar College and by the students and faculty to students from France, two of these scholarships have been awarded to Sweet Briar graduates, Anne Dickson, '45, and Jane Lawrence, '46. Moset of these graduate students will study at the University of Paris and will live in the American Foundation dormitory at the Cité Universitaire

"We have artificial shortages in this country, but after two months in France and a brief stop in England I wonder if we have any right to talk about our shortages as we do, so little do they affect our way of living.

"Life in France and many other countries has been fundamentally changed by five years of bombardment and oppression, and young students and elderly people are among those most affected. Many are the accounts of individual suffering on the part of students and professors that I could tell you-but I will relate only one, the tragedy in the family of old friends of mine, Professor and Madame Gouhier, whom I have known since 1928. M. Gouhier is professor of philosophy at the University of Paris, and he has been able to buy only one suit of clothes since 1940. Just a few short days ago he greeted me cordially in an apartment where the thermometer stood at 50 degrees, and led me to the room where his wife has spent more than two years in pain and nervous exhaustion. She insisted on my coming because she wanted to thank me personally for the sweet chocolate I had brought her, the first she had had since 1940. Their two children were in the country for reasons of health. Mme. Gouhier's mother, who had lived with them for years, and who never went out of the apartment except with her daughter, was no longer there, because she was of Jewish descent, though a Catholic by faith. In July, 1944, the Allied armies were advancing and the German armies were retreating, but the daily round-up of Jews, political deportees, and members of the Resistance still continued. On July 19 the Gestapo called at the door of the Gouhiers' apartment and carried away the next victim on its list. No reasons were given, there were none to give. The mother was taken to a gas chamber at Auswicz, and for some weeks afterwards Madame Gonhier expected a similar call. She has never recovered from the shock.

"The physical destruction of this war extends over a much greater area than that of the earlier world war, and is much more terrible. I saw its effect in Le Havre, Lorient, Nantes, and Tours. Other cities I found crowded with refugees who talked wistfully of pre-fabricated houses and barracks that might come from America. Railroad tracks, bridges, cars, and locomotives are being miraculously rebuilt, but there is not enough capital or material for reconstruction of schools, homes, stores, and factories. French coal mines are producing more coal than before the war, but France has not yet been given her full share of foreign coal, coal that she had to import before the war and that she needs now more than ever. Most of the coal available must go to industry if France is ever to get on her feet again. Industry needs coal and raw materials, and to get them, French wines, perfume, fashions, and luxury articles must be sold abroad for dollars and pounds. The American loan finances the purchase of wheat, coal, and machinery for farms and factories, but it is largely used up already and it must be paid back eventually. Hence industry must export and sales in home markets must be strictly limited. Yes, France has state socialism, so does England; but do you think we might not resort to similar measures if we were in the same financial position?

"Speaking of coal it makes me blush to think of the overabundance of heat in our classrooms at Sweet Briar. In the winter of 1945-46 French families had enough coal to heat their homes for a week or so. The allotment has been increased by 100 pounds for this coming winter. The ration varies somewhat in the north and south, but the average will be about 400 pounds for the entire winter. Last week I wore an overcoat when consulting books in the National Library in Paris. Next December readers there will put on gloves as well as overcoats. Briarites in France, Scotland, and Switzerland even, will do their home study this winter wrapped in coats and blankets, or propped up in bed to keep warm. They will be far better off than countless people who do not have the money to buy their ration of coal, nor to buy such warm clothing as is available for their ration tickets. Most everything is rationed, yet stores in the provinces are so empty of stocks that many of them close three days a week, others sell what they have at double prices on the black market. A man's suit is supposed to be rationed at $30 to $40 but may be sold on the black market for $100. No one could get new clothes during the occupation except "blackmarketeers." My nephew, a medical student, has had no new suits since 1940 when he was 14. In the two years since the liberation he has not been able to find a suit for his ration ticket. He is wearing old clothes of mine; that is all he has. Many schools and colleges in France are now getting clothes for their students and supplies for the school room through the generosity of American schools and colleges which have adopted them. France does not receive United Nations Relief.

"Prices of food and clothing, legitimate prices, have increased 1,000% in France since 1939, whereas wages and salaries have only increased (last month) by 25%. It takes about 80% of the average family's earnings to buy food alone. The ration for meat, just to take one example, is still only about ½ pound a week per person, and the cost from fifty cents to two dollars per pound. Additional meat can be bought on the legitimate market when available, according to the Farge plan, but at prices far above the rationed price and out of the reach of most families. Butter, milk, and chocolate are rationed in small quanties to young children and elderly people. On the black market the rich can buy butter at $1.50 a pound, or eggs at $1.60 a dozen, as compared with sixty cents at Sweet Briar.

"In short, the cost of food and clothing is higher now in France than in the United States and the scale of wages and salaries in France is roughly only one quarter to one third as high as in the United States. Teachers in particular are underpaid in France, and many of

WENGERT AIDS ATOMIC COMMISSION

Sweet Briar's connection with the newly-created Atomic Energy Commission has suddenly become very close, with the recent appointment of one of our faculty members, Egbert S. Wengert, as a consultant to the Commission. During the next few weeks he will spend considerable time in Washington.

Mr. Wengert was appointed by the Commission's chairman, David E. Lilienthal, to assist in planning the transfer of the Manhattan District project to the Commission, and to help establish personnel policies, to both of which tasks Mr. Wengert brings a wealth of training and experience.

Associate professor of government and first holder of the Carter Glass Chair at Sweet Briar, Mr. Wengert's special field is public administration. He was on leave from his teaching here from March, 1942, until September, 1945, during which time he worked for OPA in Washington, dealing chiefly with administrative and personnel organizational problems.

Wanted: Alumnae Secretary

The resignation of Helen H. McMahon as Executive Secretary-Treasurer of the Alumnæ Association, to become effective in June, 1947, has been received with very great regret by the Alumnæ Council.

Alumnæ who are interested in applying for the position of Executive Secretary-Treasurer should make inquiry as soon as possible by writing to: Mrs. T. K. Scott, 3606 Plymouth Place, Lynchburg, Virginia.

them to avoid starvation have given up teaching and taken jobs in commerce and industry. There are fewer candidates in the normal schools. All this at a time when students are flocking to school and college much as in this country. Because of the paper shortage textbooks have to be shared, sometimes by as many as a dozen students. The present French government is making heroic efforts to stop inflation, and measures taken in the last few weeks to raise wages and salaries and limit the rise of prices hold out hope for the future, not only in the opinion of French economists but also according to that of informed American economists. The next few months will show whether this hope is true or false.

"The spirit of liberty, equality, and fraternity of the French eighteenth century philosophers which so influenced the founding fathers of our own republic is still strong in France, in spite of the efforts of the former Vichy regime to the contrary. In fact, it is stronger than ever, and the parties of the left and the right are working together. The voters in a free election have rejected one constitution, and will soon exercise their right to accept or reject the new constitution that is being fashioned in the national legislative assembly.

"The Peace Conference is meeting in Paris. There is as much doubt in France as to what this conference will bring forth as there is here. The average Frenchman sees it as largely a struggle for influence between England and the United States on one hand and Russia on the other. The French press interpreted a recent speech of Secretary Byrnes at Stuttgart as a bid against Russia for the favor of a restored Germany. In the New York Herald-Tribune of September 15, William L. Shirer gave it a similar interpretation, and commented grimly that the winner of the contest will be not Russia, not America—but Germany. On the international scene today the French see little hope of lasting peace and no assurance of future security for France.

"There is little optimism or gayety in France today; the epoch

"There is little optimism or gayety in France today; the epoch of Paris boulevardiers and swinging canes is long since nothing but a myth. A small minority have followed Jean-Paul Sarte into what appears to be a philosophy of disillusionment, existentialism. The existentialists frequent the Cafe de Flore, where real coffee, black market coffee, may be had day in and day out at forty francs a cup, as compared with four francs for the mixture of roasted barley that is still served in most places and is popularly known as 'national coffee' . . .

"France lacks many things but certainly does not lack intellectual activity. The number of newspapers, magazines, and books that appear is truly remarkable for a country which is so short of paper. Limited editions of new books and new editions of the classics are sold out almost as soon as they reach the shops. The theater and cinema are throbbing with renewed activity. American plays (six were being played in Paris theaters last week), American films, and American books are also in great demand. One of the best sellers is still Gone With the Wind—Antant on emporte le vent. Forbidden by the Germans during the occupation, as were all American books, it once sold for as high as $20 a copy on the black market, because of the parallels that could be drawn between the suffering of the south after the war between the states and the suffering of occupied France. Scholars inquire eagerly about learned journals and technical books that have appeared in the United States since 1939. They are not yet in the libraries or in the bookshops, because dollars cannot be spared for their purchase. Father Duprey, principal of Saint Martin's school for boys, for example, asked me if I knew of anyone who could send him copies of educational, journals. Franco Venturi, son of the famous art critic, himself an eminent Diderot scholar, spent six years in prison and concentration camps in Spain and Italy. Since the liberation of Italy he has nevertheless published two books and has three others in preparation, but he has seen no American publications since 1939, except those I gave him in Paris this summer. The invitation to American professors this summer is another evidence of the widespread desire in France for the resumption of cultural exchange with democratic America.

"Here at Sweet Briar a new academic year is beginning tonight under conditions of physical and intellectual well-being which do not now exist in any other country in the world. These rare privileges are not given us without corresponding responsibilities. As Americans we are under higher moral obligations than ever before in our history to think in terms not of ourselves alone but of the world. A warweary and famished humanity is looking to us for material help, and for intellectual and spiritual inspiration and leadership.

"Let us not fail a world in need!"

Shortly thereafter, The Daily Advance, evening newspaper in Lynchburg, commented editorially on Prof. Barker's talk and its effect on the students to whom it was addressed. The writer said in part: "he observedly reached his audience of college students, reached their hearts and heads to a degree that was encouraging to witness

"This young generation will have perhaps the major, the real burden to carry. Their elders must continue to recognize this and aid them to knowledge and responsibility in relation to the problems they face that they are able and ready to do what is required of them, inescapably required

"It is moving and strengthening to witness college students responding as they did to Dr. Barker's exposition of the present status of France. We must help ourselves, fully and responsibly, but also help those other nations, our friends, in order that we may all stand and grow and go forward, else separately and collectively go down."

Alumna Author's First Novel

Doubtless many Sweet Briar alumnæ have read Jean Boley's sketches of Argentina in the New Yorker and Harper's without knowing that she is the former Jean Besselievre, ex'35. Jean returned to campus in September with Kitty Marshall Hamill, '34, for her first visit in more than a decade. She has been living in Buenos Aires almost that long, returning to this country for short visits every few years. Her first novel, reviewed here, has been very well received by the critics: her second is to be published in 1947, she says.

JEAN BOLEY'S The Restless is aptly titled for it is a novel of seeking, of seeking for independence and self-expression. The end product is the concrete realization that life holds disappointment, things are very seldom what they have been dreamed. The heroine says, "You've got to be prepared mentally, be always expecting change. There's only one certainty, that's uncertainty... The one fact that remains true in the modern world or any other world is that all things change."

The story is of Emily Hollin, age 33, mother of two children, and her search for release from the slick conventions that tether her. She embarks with her husband for his new job in South America. On the boat, free of the habitual routines of Westchester, she begins to cultivate her dormant courage with a pre-meditated squelching of husband Paul. Paul is well-groomed perfection, superbly polished in company, but the suave brilliance becomes affectation and condescending superiority without the crowd. Emily dares to defy him spiritually and finally in an open break. In Argentina she completes the rift by leaving him to seek freedom. This freedom is not just a release from her marriage but the emancipation of will, the Preamble's "pursuit of happiness." She craves artistic expression and security, in and of themselves, as well as in human relationships. The pursuit is a yearning which she finds herself unable to fulfill satisfactorily, even in part, until she turns back to the role of the depended-upon.

Miss Boley's penetrating observation of Emily's mental and emotional status is the book. The thought processes are superbly handled with the action to hold the reader's interest while the philosophizing, the ins and outs of theme, permeate the consciousness. Moreover, this is not a slender picture of one woman, or of one woman and two men, but a broad one, embracing two continents, assorted cultures, and the chaotic characters and standards that emerge from the varied melange of experiences. Especially noteworthy is the delineation of the interaction of personality and occupation, of the fundamental inclination that leads one to a field of work and the shaping of person by work.

Paul is the closest that Miss Boley comes to a typed character, save in some very minor people who must, perforce, fit a preconceived mold. The others are individuals, moderns, the net results of the restless insecurity that is their existence. It could be argued that they skim reality by virtue of the "abnormal" circumstances which have formed their personalities. However, so little of the world today is unruffled and conventionally normal that this criticism should be invalidated. To my mind, Miss Boley neatly compressed several aspects of the basic unrest of contemporary life into The Restless.

The glimpse of lands still distant to the majority of Americans is effortlessly achieved. Conviction is lent to her description of things unfamiliar by the clear accuracy of her accounts of those better known. The setting of place moods is artfully done with mass characterizations in the Walt Whitman tradition.

The strongest element in the novel is one with which many will disagree—the philosophies of Emily. The bare truths contained therein are self-evident, but the reactions to these concepts may be quarrelled with by some. At any rate, the concepts are valid and Emily's feelings are in accordance with the exposition of her personality. I found what I believe to be the central theme in this paragraph:

"Now . . . she knew for the first time clearly that a woman had no independence. She could not, like a man, run wild over the earth and call it her own. She could not thus risk her happiness and the happiness of those around her. What a woman knew of defiance had to be gained from observation from behind the bars of her maternity. She must find her beauty in the world of convention, her freedom must be the freedom of discipline, her genius must be the genius, not of invention, but of adaptation. She could not build her own house, but must, by her ingenuity, make of the house built for her a place beautiful to see."

The total development of Emily is a straightforward analysis—without pseudo psychoanalysis. Many will enjoy the novel for the keen intellect which has shaped it, even if they differ with its philosophy. In the facing of things as they are there is much realism but nothing sordid. The entirety has a fresh taste in its honesty. It is good to know that Miss Boley expects to publish another book next fall.

My Year At Sweet Briar

(Reprinted by permission of the A. A. U. W. Journal) By Elizabeth Jansma, ex '48, Amsterdam, Holland

BEFORE the American Association of University Women granted me an undergraduate scholarship for a year of study in the United States, about which I want to tell you a few words, my home was in Amsterdam, Holland. It was there that I received my entire preparatory education and finished the Lyceum, a Dutch high school of six years, in June, 1945.

I don't want to say that I had a horrible time during these difficult last war years, for that is never the case when you are among good friends, but it certainly was a hard time. The lyceum-building was closed because of lack of fuel, and the professors had to teach at our homes to keep the work going. We had to lack everything, not only laboratories, books, and notebooks but also necessary good food, light (there was no electric light and no gas for heating) and means of transportation, so that you had to walk terribly long distances. And when the Germans started transporting the men to German factories for slave labor the boys in our class had to hide themselves and could not come to classes any more. Therefore I can call myself very fortunate that I was able to continue my studies although with difficulty and graduate when the war was just over in June.

Then it was time to select my major subject and enter the University of Amsterdam, but it was still uncertain if the university, which had been disorganized by the Germans in 1942, could offer the course in law I wanted to take. The opportunity for good and setious study was —and still is—very small because there were but a few professors and hundreds of new students.

Just at that time the AAUW offered me a scholarship for a year of study at an American college, a wonderful opportunity to continue my study and a unique chance

Mrs. Frederic H. Scott, President Sweet Briar Alumnae Association Sweet Briar College

Dear Elizabeth:

I want to express to the Alumnae my gratitude for the gift of the heautiful bracelet and for the words of appreciation which accompanied it.

Sweet Briar and I were both young when I first came, and we have grown up together. I am proud to have had a share in the progress of the college and in the teaching of such a body of alumnae as we now have. Few teachers have the privilege of such a long continuous association with an institution nor the satisfaction of seeing the results of their efforts.

I assure you my interest will not cease with my retirement, for I expect to keep in touch with the college and you.

With many thanks and best wishes, Yours faithfully, June 1, 1946. Eugenie M. Morenus to get to know the United States and the life and thoughts of the young Americans! It is impossible to describe my happiness when the dream of my life, to see America, suddenly came true.

My first impressions of an American college, when I had arrived at Sweet Briar College, Virginia, were more those of the girl than those of the student (as they ought to be), because I had to get used to all the things that we had missed for so long and everybody in the States considers as his good right. So my first impressions will seem somewhat odd to you. For example; I was amazed at the prettiness, the careless happiness of the average college girl, amazed at the plentifulness of everything everywhere around me, even amazed at the well-fed, shiny appearance of the plowing horses in the fields outside of my window.

But these things only caught my attention for a short while; after that I started to appreciate college life, college work, in short: college education.

The system of a liberal arts college, which we don't know in the Netherlands, seems to me an excellent way of preparing young men and women for life as well as for further study and specialization. And although it is hard to express in a few sentences, I want to try to explain to you what this year at Sweet Briar College has brought to me and of what great profit it will always prove to be in my further life.

I got acquainted with American people; that means, in my case, with five hundred young American women from practically every corner of the United States and from them I learned that all we hear about the American woman is not true and simply movie fiction. The college woman I met is in many cases indeed pretty but much more important is her serious-mindedness, her friendliness, and her typical sense of humor that enables her to overcome the most difficult situations. Most of the girls I have met at Sweet Briar College had a strong sense of duty and were exact and careful students with a vivid interest in everything about them. They hated to complain or to wait with doing things that could be done right this moment. There are a great many things that I have learned from them that will always be a help for me in my later life.

While studying at S. B. C. I got interested in numerous subjects that came up in the courses I had taken or that I happened to find in research work myself. Every day brought new and interesting matters and I enjoyed studying as never before. And when I start specializing myself in international law next year, I know that I shall always be happy to have had this chance to widen my field of interest, to have gone deeper into the history of the American people and the study of English, which will prove to be of great help for my future major subject.

Therefore I am extremely glad that the opportunity is given to me in these lines to thank the members of the AAUW with all my heart. I cannot thank you enough for this wonderful year of study in the United States, just as I cannot sum up all its profits to me because there is simply too much. But there is one thing I want to tell you: this year has not only been a good one for my study, it also has been a very happy one among a great, marvelous and happy people and I thank you for that too!

We need a new secretary. I enjoy the little bit I do but I live far away from my former homes and I have a heavier schedule at school this year, so I think someone else could do much better.

During August I had a pleasant visit with Mary Tyler Mayo. I spent the night at the Y.W.C.A. in Baltimore and Mary is at the information desk there. Her address is: 205 W. Madison Street, Baltimore 1, Md.

I spent the first part of the summer at my old home in Norfolk. There I enjoyed seeing Sue Slaughter and Marion Peele. A recent letter from Sue describes her trip to Sweet Briar and her pleasant visit with Miss Lucas.

Those of you who have seen The Razor's Edge will be interested to learn that Frank Lattimore is the son of Mayo Thach Tarpley.

My winter address is again at Spotsylvania and I hope to hear from you there.

It was good to hear from four members of the class, and I hope to hear from many more before the next issue of the ALUMNAE NEWS is printed.

Alice Swain Zell wrote a brief note about her splendid family. Her son, Lucian T., is in the Army Air Corps. She has one married daughter, Alice, and one daughter, Frances, a Junior at the University of Pennsylvania. She also has two fine grandsons.

I'm sure Elizabeth Green Shepherd's life must be a busy and interesting one with four children and her Washington dress shop business to run. Her oldest son, Henry, is just out of the Merchant Marine. The older daughter, Elizabeth, who was at Sweet Briar, lives in Wilmington and has one child. Her younger daughter, Mary McClane, who attended Vassar, is married and living in Princeton. Frances Richardson's daughter was her maid-of-honor. She has a younger son, Tommy, at Lawrenceville.

Henrietta Washburn wrote from Philadelphia of her trip to Sweet Briar in July, and of her nice visit with Alma Booth Taylor and Rebecca Patton.

As for myself, I feel very close to Sweet Briar with my second daughter, Marjorie Jane, there this year. Barbara was a member of the class of '41. I have an older daughter, Eleanor, married and with me at the present time, and she and Barbara each have a little girl. My only son is a Junior at Staunton Military Academy.

My visits to Sweet Briar during Barbara's years there have brought back so many plensant memories, and it was so good to see Miss Benedict, Miss Guion, and all the familiar faces when I went back last fall, that I wish you all might visit there often too.

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Fund Agent: Lucy Lantz (Mrs. Harry Mc-Kinley), 263 Glenwood Avenue, Englewood, New Jersey.

I have very little news for this letter but, as it goes to all of you, I want to urge that you all contribute to the Alumnae Fund to insure receiving the other three issues in which I hope to have more news. It is really up to you! Please write to me about your families, your activities, your jobs and careers. Everyone is as interested in hearing about you as you are in hearing about them. Please send me a few lines in time for the next magazine (before Christmas if possible) and I'll do the rest!

For the benefit of 1920, Elmyra Pennypacker Coxe finished her semester at the University of Wisconsin and is now in the Personnel Department of Sherwin-Williams in Chicago.

In August I spent a few days with my sister, Mary Pennypacker Davis, '16, in Connecticut. Her son, Bill, is now out of the

ALUMNAE DAUGHTERS

It took some doing to get the alumnæ daughters together to pose for their proud mamas and other relatives who want to see them in these pages but here, at last, they are. At least, most of them are. service and will go to Princeton in February, and her son, Dick, has just enlisted in the Army.

I drove back by way of Westport and called on Dorys McConnell F.ile, ex-16, and met her attractive daughter, Sally, and her two adorable grandchildren, David and Lucy Faile.

Miss Glass is going to be speaker at the A.A.U.W. in Wilmington, Delaware, on October 11. Polly Bissell Ridler, '17, is President of the Wilmington Chapter. I am going to the meeting and look forward to attending a luncheon for Miss Glass given by the Sweet Briar Alumnae at the du Pont Hotel and a dinner at the du Pont Country Club.

Please don't wait for a card from me. Just sit down now and write,

Elizabeth Wilson wrote such an interesting letter about her work that I will quote from it. "I have treasured memories of my year as a freshman at Sweet Briar but, as you know, I feel loyalty too to Vassar where I spent three years and to the University of Chicago, where I received my M.A. in Social work

"At present I am Executive Secretary of the International Institute of Gary, Indiana... Gary, at the foot of Lake Michigan, has, I believe, the largest steel mill in the world.

"My work is in a specialized field of social work, and semi-legal in character, since we are a service agency for the Immigration and Naturalization service and U, S. Consuls abroad, though under private financing. Our Congress has built high hurdles to keep immigration at a minimum but, in doing so, made it such a technical field that people need help to meet the requirements.

"It's a most interesting period now because of the flood of letters coming from abroad telling of what has happened to families during and since the war. Headlines about atrocities, concentration camps, bombed and burned villages, displaced persons, mean much more when you read letters from people who experienced it all. Then there are the new arrivals-war brides, fiancees of veterans, repatriated American citizens, and soon there will be the wives and minor children of naturalized or native-born citizens who were caught abroad. All bring stories of Europe today, some of them about conditions behind the 'Iron Curtain'." She closes with warmest greetings to all her Sweet Briar classmates.

Catherine Marshall Shuler writes in Des Moines, Iowa, she is quite out of touch with Sweet Briar; she is always glad to hear news of former schoolmates. Her youngest daughter

I am sorry that I failed to report among those present in the June issue of the magazine but I had to go to the hospital in May for a "bit of interior decorating," as a friend of mine said, and was unable to get a letter written.

I have very little to report due to a shortage of answers to my post cards. I received a card from Margaret Reed Collard, who said she had no news but wanted to enswer my card, which latter I appreciated. I did have a grand newsy letter from Jane Byrd Ruffin Henry. She reports that her husband has retired from the Navy this year and that her house is still in a badly torn-up state as a result of her daughter's wedding September 14. She (Evelyn Byrd Henry) married George Sergent, who is a cousin of Nicketti Johnston Miller. Nicketti and her husband were at the wedding. Jane's son is studying medicine at the University of Virginia.

Carrie Taliaferro Scott's oldest daughter, Caroline, graduated from St. Timothy's last June and is to be a debutante in Richmond this winter.

Louise Hammond Skinner and little Louise were here to see me several weeks ago and both were fine. "Little" Louise is now back at Sweet Briar, a Sophomore.

My oldest son, Foster, is a rat at V.M.I. this year so I'm "going to college" again too!

Well, the "Big Event" is a thing of the past—our 25th reunion. All of you who did not return to campus in June really missed something! Three days of hiking and riding miles to see all the improvements made on the campus since 1921, going to all the commencement events, to Craighill & Jones for "chocolate stirs" and sitting up until the wee small hours trying to catch up on 25 years of gossip. The weather man was on our side, sunny warm days and rain only at night. There is nothing like June in Viroinia, roses and honeysuckle with the Blue Ridge for a background.

Seventeen of us were there: Kitty Datis Baynum, Ruth Geer Boice, Mattie Hammond Smith, Madelon Sbidler Olney, Marion Sbafer Wadhams, Maynette Rozelle Stephenson, Elizabeth Sboop Dixon, Mary McLemore Matthews, Frances Simpson Upson. Mry Taylor Corley, Josephine Abara MacMillan, Florence Ites Hathaway, Louise Pochat Hattersley, Gertrude Anderson, and Ophelia Short Seward. Florence Woelfel almost made it, but was grounded at the last minute in Chicago.

What did we do? Saturday most every one arrived in time for Miss Glass' tea party for alumnae, parents, and husbends, in Sweet Briar Gardens. That evening we had dinner together in the Refectory with coffee afterward in Grammer Common Room (the old gym to you), where a few speeches were made and the graduating class was inducted and introduced to the alumnae. On Sunday morning, some of us attended the Baccalaureate sermon and some took walks about the campus. After luncheon together in Fergus Reid dining room, we rehearsed for Step Singing, which took place in the Quadrangle at 5 o'clock. With Maynette leading us, we sang lustily,

"We're Meek and Humble Freshmen," as well as our Senior class song. We were applauded loudly so I gathered that the audience liked our rendition. Then to Lynchburg for our own class dinner which we had at The Columns, a tea room across from Randolph-Macon. And did we talk—and laugh! We reached campus again (it takes only 20 minutes by car now) in time for Lantern Night, Carrying home-made candle-lighted lanterns, the girls walk over the campus singing, finally gathering in the Quadrangle and on the "Golden Stairs" to finish the song fest.

On Monday we donned our old caps and gowns (some of us had to hestily baste up the hems, as it is no longer fashionable to wear them touching our heels, a la 1921). We marched across campus to the gym to see Miss Glass preside at her last commencement and to hear Bishop Tucker of Ohio address the 80 graduates. Then came our final luncheon together in the Refectory, after which we headed for home, not without a few lumps in our throats, I'll admit. Our only regret was that the rest of you were unable to be with us.

Your response for the reunion gift was generous, for it amounted to $500. It was added to the Meta Glass Fund for general endowment.

You will be interested in the results of the questionnaire which Maynette sent out to all of you. Graduate response was nearly 100 per cent, that from the ex'es not so good. But, using the figures at hand, the following observations were made: We claim 93 class members, of these, 33 graduated, 7 attended 3 years, 19 attended 2 years, while 35 dropped out at the end of Freshman year. That was 1917, the year of the war, and besides, we had been quarantined nearly the whole time because of the flu. Two have passed away—Marybelle MacNally and Katie Taylor.

Of the graduates, all but three are married, 91 per cent. We have 52 children, 25 boys and 27 girls, and one grandchild (Maynette's).

Husbands took to education also, as all but four are college graduates.

Our interests are many—we seem to be doing our civic duties in every important volunteer organization in the country. Our hobbies run the gamut also—it is astounding how many and how varied are the things we do in our spare time, from biological research to collecting silhouettes and antiques,

The questionnaires have been placed in a notebook with the pictures you sent of yourselves, your families and homes, together with mementos and programs of reunion week-end. It has been placed in the alumnae office at Sweet Briar. If you ever visit the campus be sure to ask to see the class of 1921 Twenty-Fifth Reunion Book.

At the alumnae office and in my own file here at home, I have nearly all of the correct addresses of our class. With your help I hope to keep it up-to-date. The girls at reunion asked me to continue as your secretary for another year, so I will, as I return to campus so frequently for council meetings. After that, one of you will have to take over.

Can anyone help locate these on our lost list: Alice Clark Evans, Marian E. Evans, Ernestine Shayler, Katherine A. Hawkins Baker (Mrs. F. F.), Georgia Millard, Olive Mitchell, Emma B. MacDonnell, Adelaide Rendelman, Claire Taylor, and Nina Weichelsbaum Brail (Mrs. J. S.).

Dorothy Job Robinson's (Mrs. Norman V.) new address will interest many of you—Heatherfield School, Ascot Beeks, England.

This issue of the ALUMNAE NEWS is the only one you will receive this year unless you contribute to the Alumnae Fund—as little as you wish to make it will do, but it takes at least $3.00 to cover the printing and mailing of the ALUMNAE NEWS. I still have a lot of news about many of you left over from spring so, if you want to hear more, come across, girls.

Will be talking to you all again in the February magazine!

Dottie Ham Davis, Kitty Blount Andersen, and Edna Lee Cox sent out cards to you-all and inveigled me into being your secretary, so here goes.

I saw Peggy Malone McClements in Pittsburgh on my way west in September. She and her husband were leaving the next day to attend young Jim's graduation at Wiliams. Jim is in the Navy Air Corps and at present is stationed in Memphis. Peggy Donglas Whitley writes that her husband was released from the Navy last October. They are again at home in Delray Beach, Florida, where Rhea practices law. Peggy Rhea, the youngest, goes to the Gulf Stream School at Delray. Douglas is at Salem Academy, and Allan at Exeter.

Peggy Denman Wilson is leading a busy life. She has two boys to care for and has time, even so, for League work. For several years she did Kenney packing for infantile paralysis victims. Nell Atkins Hagemeyer has two daughters, one $5\frac{1}{2}$ and one 14 months old.

Marty Close Page's Lody is home from the Navy with a Bronze Medal and citation.

Kay Norris Kelley has all her children in school—one at Dana Hall, two in Tenacre, and the little one at Wellesley College Nursery School. They have been repairing the ravages of the war years of neglect on their roof and garden and Kay says they are becoming quite civilized again.

Gil Carpenter Ellerton, her husband, and daughter Susan visited us in June and left here to stay a few days at Sweet Briar.

Early in August Edna Lee Cox with Judy and Joan, now 5½, stopped here on their way to Cape Cod. Edna reported that she and Cornelia Wailes Wailes had a nice visit with Ellen Newell Bryan and Rebecca Ashcraft McGinnis last spring. Wright Bryan was in Washington for a newspaper convention and Rebecca was looking over schools for her daughter. The Coxes are living in Washington where they have bought a house. The twin girls started kindergarten this fall and Edna is quite proud as all three of them had to pass entrance exams! Edna had a nice summer—part of it at the old Cox farm in Virginia and part on Cape Cod. Last year Edna worked one day a week at the Army Personnel Affairs Office as a member of the Women's Volunteer Committee.

Polly Cary Dew Woodson and family bought a house in Ridgewood, New Jersey. Billy is in junior high and the other boy started kindergarten. She goes back to Sweet Briar every summer and this August, with her mother, had tea with Miss Lucas whom she liked very much.

Helen Haseltine was for several years a consultant in the Delinquency Division of the U. S. Children's Bureau. She left this work and went west for a while to handle horses. During the war she was a U.S.O. Director at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. In 1944 she returned west, fell from her horse and was invalided for almost a year. Upon her recovery she worked in the Children's Division of the Illinois Department of Welfare until this September when she accepted the position of Director of the Children's Division of the Chicago Department of Welfare. In May she saw Helen Dunleavy Mitchell.

We Harrises visited Dorothy Goff McIntosh also this fall. Her daughter is a senior in high school and the son is several years younger. Dorothy is organizing choral groups and has given two concerts in Milwaukee.

We had a glorious trip down the St. Croix with Kitty Blount Andersen and husband in their houseboat. The Andersens left for the West Coast late in September.

Well, that's all I have for this issue. Please send me news and don't wait until I nag you with a card.

20-Year Reunion—June, 1947

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. W. B. Crane, Jr.), 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: CLAIRE HANNER (Mrs. Wylie H. Arnold), 2410 Vernon Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Well, here is one secretary who is completely satisfied with her job. You can't imagine how I look forward to, and enjoy, your letters. I'm gradually accumulating precious snapshots and clippings of you and your families which are now neatly assembled in a portfolio—should chance bring us together, what fun you'd have looking at them!

Twenty years agn we gleefully mounted those golden stairs—remember? I hope many of you heard Vox Pop broadcast September 24 from Sweet Briar. It made 20 years drop off—like that when they began "Oh look up here and see us and wish that you could be us."

Now is the time to get out your checkbook if you want the rest of the issues of the ALUMNAE NEWS for 1946-47. You won't get them unless you do send that contribution to the Alumnae Fund. This is an important year for us so don't delay, but send your gift to the Alumnae Office now.

With great pride we report the following new arrivals: Bebe Gilchrist Barnes 2 son, Daniel Gilchrist, born August 7, 1946; Alice Eskeven Ganzel a daughter born September 24; Rebecca Manning Cutler a son, Howard Manning, born September 2, Our heartiest congratulations to the mamas and papas!

Martha Ambrose Nunnally spent some time in Washington recently but most of her summer was spent in nursing her family back to health. Martha sees I ucy Orgill Genette and Ruth Crenshaw Turner occasionally.

Evelyn Anderson Tull and Dick are building a cabin on Lookout, near Denver. She saw Alice Eskesen Ganzel this summer in Westfield and staved overnight with Anne Patton Thrasher in Indianapolis. Anne said that having an I piscopal minister for a husband was a great help during the shirt shortage—the cletical vest covered up a lot of rips.

Betty Bachman Hardcastle came to New York for sever-1 days on her way to Bass Rocks, Massachusetts. There she saw, after 20 years, her roommate, Bettie Miller Allen, on the beach.

Jeanette "Dan" Boone spent a part of the summer at her camp, Glenlaurel, in North Carolina. She and Helen were delighted to have eight S.B. alumnae daughters among their campers—"Miss Anne" Maybank Cain's Eleanor, Ruth Annspangh Daniel's Patsy, Elizabeth Woods (ex-'29) Meeks' Libby, and Louise Chapman (ex-'29) Plamp's twins, Barbara and Lydia. Jo Snowden and Kenneth Durham and Ruth Lowrance Street and her family spent several days on campus this spring, Dan reports.

Laura Boynton Rawlings has recently moved to 1601 Neome Drive in Flint, Michigan.

Janie "Tabo" Brown Hood's son is attending Riverside Military School in Gainesville, Georgia, this year.

Madeline Brown Wood is at long last with Mac again as of August 1. They are living at Quarters M-2, U. S. Naval Repair Base, New Orleans, 14.

Elizabeth Cox spent July at Hot Springs and the bilance of the summer on the Eastern shore of Maryland and in Tidewater, Virginia.

I'm sure all of us want to express our sympathy to Margaret Green Runyun who lost her Mother on July 6.

Claire Hanner Arnold went to Pawley's Island with her husband and Julie this summer, Julie will attend the pre-school section of the Charlotte Country Day School where Nar Warren is headmistress.

Hilda Harpster enjoyed a trip to Quebec and down the coast of Maine during the summer. The only S.B. gal she sees in Greensboro is Juliet HalliBurton Burnett, '35.

Sally Jamison is working as an interior decorator at the Shaw Manufacturing Company in Charlotte.

Ruth Lowrance Street and her family drove 700 miles to Virginia recently! Last Easter vacation they were all at Sweet Briar and spent a delightful evening with Dan, Frances hopes to enter college in the fall of '48.

Elizabeth Mathews Wallace had a wonderful reunion with Sally Callison Jamison and Jane Callison Smith in Charleston. They gamboled on the green in shredded old May Dav dresses and Jane even had on orchid stockings! A newspaper clipping shows that Libbo's daughter, Dolly, looks just like her. Besides looking mighty sweet she is smart too—editor of the school paper and president of the Student Council, Mamma hasn't slowed down either—she is president of the Children's Theater and a Scoot troop leader.

Millicent Milligan Hitchman, "Sne" to us, has been in California for 17 years. The only person she has seen from S.B. during that time was M. Broun Wood en route to Hawaii—13 years ago! Of course, Sue, we all hope to take a trip to California some day, so don't give up. You will no doubt see some more of us yet.

Elise Morley Fink enjoyed the summer with her four children at their Lake Huron cottage. However, she and George were at Southampton for a while, too.

Mary Opie Meade Bailey spent some time at Wharton's Grove, Virginia.

Pauline Payne Bachus vacationed at Blaney Park and Harbor Springs, Michigan. I neglected to tell you in the April issue that her husband went to Ohio State and is a Phi Delt. Apologies "Peewee" and Foster, Elva Quisenberry Marks had a busy summer with her two boys. They went to Fort Walton, Florida, and Highlands, North Carolina. At the latter place Billy saw Elizabeth Cates Wall, Henrietta Nelson Weston, '26, and Tootie Maybank Williams. Billy and Tootie are looking forward to a big time in October at the Auburn-Tech game.

Jane Riddle Thornton spent a month at Camp Alleghany, and her two children two months. Among the alumnae daughters there were Dorothea Reinburg Fuller's daughters and Peggy Malone McClements' three. Jane enjoyed a visit from Tab Hazlewood Whitaker last June.

Julia Reynolds Dreisbach spent the vacation at Lake George, Michigan.

Florence Shortan Poland had a grand time fishing this summer in Maine and northwestern Vermont.

Io Snowden Durham and Kenneth, plus four children, made a 2,200-mile trek to the North Carolina mountains to visit Kenneth's family and many friends. They, too, saw Tab Hazlewood Whitaker who hasn't changed a whit in spite of being twice a grandmother! The Durhams were at Linville not far from Dan's and Helen Mac's camp, so they made an excursion there. Jo writes that "the cabins are all tucked away among most beautiful trees, ferns and flowers on the mountain side. The counselors have separate rooms in each cabin where six or eight little girls are under their care, and a cabin of their own for recreation moments. There are about nineteen buildings including a large playhouse or gym, dining lodge and living room, a beautiful pool, tennis courts and playing field. Would certainly like to have my sassy Snowden at camp with them next summer." Io also saw M. Brown Wood in a drugstore in Hoptown, "but better than nothing."

Connie Van Ness spent her vacation in a quaint sword-fishing village called Menenisha —on Martha's Vineyard. It sounds enchanting.

Beth Williams Cadigan's husband preached in Stamford in September, and I, unfortunately, was in the wilds of Maine (in the rain) at the time with my family.

Kitty Wilson Garnett was a counselor at Camp Alleghany for two months.

Elizabeth Wood McMullan vacationed at Virginia Beach and Nag's Head, North Carolina, while her daughter, Betty, was at Alleghany too.

That winds up my news for this time. Thanks again for your many replies—and now to the check book, you to yours and I to mine. Good luck and a healthy, happy winter to you all.

Always one has regrets! The one issue of the News that goes to everybody should contain either my last June's column or my next one, because this time I haven't sent out any cards and only have news of a few.

First of all, we had a wonderful time at Commencement in June. I drove up from Chattanonga with Mary Shelton Clark, Mac McDonald Reynolds, and Mary Frances Westcott Hale. We had a lot of fun on the trip and the drive through the mountains was lovely.

The assembled '29ers included Mary Archer Bean Eppes (with a decided Boston accent), Mildred Bronaugh Taylor, who was about to move to Washington, D. C., Katie Coe (who works at Best's in New York—I am going to switch from the Order Department to her, and get better service), Amelia Hollis Scott, who helped Gert with the picnic supper, bringing delicious pastry from Lynchburg, and Gert Prior and I.

Gert's house, over by "Free Love," remember?, is the most adorable house you've ever seen. She missed her calling—should have been an interior decorator. We '29ers had our class picnic there and included quite a number of other alumnae. Everybody had a grand time.

Mrs. Raymond sent her love to each of you. She hasn't changed a bit—still has that warm welcome for her class. The campus is startingly beautiful. We were delighted to visit with our one-time professors again, only on a different basis now, one that I like better.

We were sad to witness Miss Glass' last Commencement, but glad to be on hand to wish her luck with her future plans.

Pinky Armstrong Allen writes that she has a daughter, Mary Eunice, born in April. Also that her husband, Mark, is now out of the Army, and has returned to Standard Oil, in Maracaibo, Venezuela. Pinky and the baby will join him this fall. It sounds like a fascinating place to live.

Peg Bushey Scherr writes that she is kept busy with the two little Scherrs and one big one. She has two daughters, Sue and Eleanor.

Edna McGebee Pleasants has two boys, Lawson, 12, and John, 2. They live in Lynchburg.

Annie Perry Neal Huntting has been in Washington, D. C., since 1934, employed as Senior Attorney in the Law Department of the Federal Communications Commission. Aren't we proud of her! She managed to find time from her career in April, 1945, to marry Major Charles F. Huntting.

Gypsy Smith Boothe has moved from Plymouth, Massachusetts, to New York City where Garland has entered a law firm.

The next three issues of the ALUMNAE NEWS will come to Alumnae Fund contributors only, so get out your check books; and, please acknowledge promptly the cards I am going to send you soon (I hope).

Although it has only been a little matter of twenty years since Bus Rhea deposited us with our carpet bags at the entrance of Gray, I find few members of this famous class still conscious of that fateful day. I thought the memory of September, 1926, might prompt many old classmates to send me word of their careers, but evidently a hot, dry day in September does not remind them of Sweet Briar on Registration Day, as it does me. I always think of Charlotte Coles whom I had picked up on the train, and what a spectacle we made that torrid day in our high-heeled pumps and short, skimpy satin "travelling" dresses, hauling luggage to the third floor of Reid, hobbling back and forth across campus, to see what was going on more than anything else. How blase, homesick, smartaleck . . and scared!

Evidently, Gratia Geer Howe hasn't forgotten. She has sent me the interesting news that she has a niece, Gratia Boice, at Sweet Briar now, a sophomore. Our Gratia has two gals of her own coming along, aged 14 and 12 years, but did not say whether she had plans for sending them, too. The Howes have recently returned to their Ottawa Hills home after a three weeks' vacation in Canada. She says she has had a Brownie Troop for four years, and spends her extra time with music lessons.

I had a card returned by Lindsay Kindleberger from Flushing . . . I do wish she could find Emily Kumm for us, last heard of in same place . . . Lindsay is going to study in New York this year at the Art Students League, which sounds swell. Says she has been busy this summer escorting eight nephews and four nieces to the Zoo, Jones Beach, etc., and had a nice five-day visit at North Hatley, Province of Quebec.

I didn't realize that Elizabeth Foster Askew was our old friend "Reggie" and hasten to apologize for addressing her so formally. How many nicknames can you remember? (Mr. Worthington gave me mine, when he tried to read my signature the first day and called me "Rebud".) Reggie lives in Eden, New York, you know, and has a son, Anthony, aged four. She gave me no inside dope on her activities but said she sees some Sweet Briar gals from time to time, naming Barbara Lewis Howard, '29, Trudy Lewis Magavern, '31, and Nancy Russell Carter, '34.

By the grapevine I hear that Betty Boone (Mrs. Robert E. Willis) is now living in Albuquerque, New Mexico, in their own home which they built themselves (big news these days). The Willises have one son, Robert E., Jr., born last May 14.

You can imagine what a kick I had out of receiving the first letter in years from my ex-roommate, Ruth Keeler. She says she is still living at the old Keeler Homestead at North Salem, New York, and at the moment is simply vegetating. However, I don't believe it, as she confessed to several trips to the Cape lately and I think has made some cross-country jaunts she didn't mention. She had a surprise visit from Diddy Crane McGary, ex-'31, who has just moved east from Chicago and lives in Lerchmont. Polly Swift Calhoun and her husband called on Ruth in the spring. They have four children and live on a farm in Cornwall, Connecticut. She says Polly is just the same and "enjoying life thoroughly."

Let us hope this finds you all doing the same . . .

 My apologies to all of you for missing out on the June issue. It so happened that I was in Chattanooga the latter part of March and first of April, just about the time I would ordinarily have sent out cards, thus the delay.

In the course of my two weeks there, I ran into eleven Sweet Briar girls. I had always heard that Chattanooga had one of the largest alumnae groups in the country and after that visit I could well believe it.

Mary Shelton Clark, '29, always makes my homecoming a joy by dashing up to see me as soon as I hit Chattanooga and giving me all the local news.

On one of our numerous tours to Lookont Mountain, we ran into Mimi Wilson Corley, '30, and Carolyn Wilson Hunt, '32. Both have three children; Mimi was accompanied by her 10-year-old son.

We stopped to see Mary's sister, Jane Shelton Williams, '34, and her young daughter, Patsy, who is a perfect replica of Jane, including those lovely blonde curls.

Had lunch several times with Mary Frances Westcott Hale, '31, and Mary MacDonald Reynolds, '30. Westcott and husband, Earl, had just returned from a six weeks' trip to Mexico, having had a marvelous time. Mac has an excellent job and recently contributed a clever article to a local magazine, known as The Look-In.

Margaret Milne Reckord and Mary Milne Holton were up for tea one afternoon. Margaret was busy house-hunting, she and Leo having just returned from living in various parts of the country while Leo was in the Medical Corps of the Army.

Mary Clark and I were visiting the Orchid Farm on Signal Mountain one afternoon and ran into Kitty Howze McClellan, '33. She and Bob had only recently returned to their lovely home in Chattanooga as Bob had been in the Army for several years.

I enjoyed talking to Ruth Lowrance Street, '27, at a luncheon. She and Gordon were planning to take their young daughter to Sweet Briar Easter week-end to acquaint her with its beauties, hoping she would decide to enroll.

On returning home, I had a letter from Ginny Cooke Rea, contributing the interesting news that she and Fritz had sold their La Jolla home and would be leaving California and heading home for a normal life after these past unsettled years.

Also had a letter from Aggie Cleveland Sandifer saying that Bill had been released from the Navy last October 1 and that they had been settled in Spartanburg, South Carolina, ever since. She mentioned that Martha McCowan Burnet, ex-'31, and her husband had spent a week-end with them in February. Martha and family now live in Greensboro quite close to Mary Lynn Carlson King and Virginia Hall Lindley, '32. Martha reported that Cynthia Vaughan had returned from her duties in Hawaii and had taken a job in New York as secretary to the head of Prince Matchiabelli Cosmetics,

I was so disappointed not to get to Reunion but, thanks to Natalie Roberts Foster, I have a few bits of news to contribute concerning the lucky ones who were there. Ellen Eskridge Sanders was back. On learning that Natalie and Walter were being transferred from Dayton to Washington, she promised to welcome them with open arms, and Natalie assured me that she had more than lived up to that promise. Walter's new assignment is in Plans and Training, his office being located in the Pentagon.

Fannie O'Brian Hettrick and Gert Prior had a picnic for '29, '30, and '31. Fannie had to leave that same night to go to New Jersey in search of a new home. She and Ames have since moved to Plainfield, New Jersey.

Theda Sherman Newlin was at Sweet Briar Saturday afternoon and Natalie missed seeing her. Split Clark was there and Natalie commented on a painting Split had done which Nat liked. Nancy Worthington was back and approaching her second year as director of Camp Alleghany with "poise, dignity, and confidence."

Katie Coe brought regrets that Nancy could not attend. Virginia Camp Smith contributed the news that Virginia Bristow had been married to Lee Davis since 1942 and has two little girls.

Much to my surprise, I found myself back in Chattanooga the latter part of June with my whole family. It was a real thrill to me and a great shock to my friends, who had not seen young Shippy since he was 5½, to find him almost 6 feet tall and wearing his dad's discarded suits with great relish.

Margaret Austin Johnston, '34, and her three beautiful little girls came often to the pool and the four of them were a most attractive sight to watch.

On our way home, we stopped in Lexington, Kentucky, and spent a delightful evening with Lucy Moultbrop Alexander, ex-'32, and husband Jim. They have a lovely home out on the Versailles Pike. Lucy is even prettier than Sweet Briar days and little Lucy is a picture of her mother. My Jane was thrilled and impressed with all the ribbons and awards that young Lucy had won at recent horse shows all over Kentucky.

Just recently I had a letter from Mary Stewart Kelso Clegg telling me that she had entered Carolyn (the class baby) in the Grier School in Philadelphia for the fall term. Joe is expecting a different job which may mean a change of territory and she wants at least one member of the family settled.

It makes me feel mildly ancient to have Shippy entering high school this year. He hopes to go to Dartmouth which means some intensive study for him these next four years. Jane seems interested in the Briar, if she can be accepted.

I am going to try to send out cards during the next few months. Meanwhile—if any of you are inspired and want to write without coercion, I will appreciate hearing from you. Just a little co-operation makes this job a pleasure rather than a task.

15-Year Reunion, June, 1947

Class Secretary: CHARLOTTE MAGOFFIN, Box 56, Deerwood, Minn.

Fund Agent: MARCIA L. PATTERSON, Kent Place School, Summit, N. J.

After so long a silence, you're all probably wondering whether we have a column any more. Well, we have, and I've tried to gather a little news for this issue, but I've done a very incomplete job. I didn't even try to write many of you, because I felt sure the addresses I had for you were obsolete; if your address has changed in the past year, do be certain the Alumnae Office has your new one.

Back in April I had a long letter from Betty Allen Magruder, who is in New York and is still effervescing with enthusiasm over her psychosomatic medicine. She had a vacation in Charlottesville in August, and spent it in a regular social whirl. In her letter she said she'd seen Anne McRae a number of times. Anne was discharged from the Waves last December and is working at Presbyterian Hospital in New York and living in the Village.

Another '32er in New York is Mildred Larimer. After she returned last spring from seven months in Madrid, where she had been working for the U. S. Government, she went to work for United Nations as a Personnel Officer.

Virginia Bellamy Ruffin was full of news about all the Sweet Briarites she'd seen in the past year. Caroline Foy Robins has moved to Wilmington, and this summer Ellen Mitchell Redd and her two sons spent a month visiting Caroline. The Ruffins were at Wrightsville Beach for a month, and there Bellamy saw Mary Lynn Carlson King ('31), Jane Kluttz Lassiter ('34), her husband, and 8 year old son, and Angelia Morrison Harris ('34).

Flappy Pancake had news of Courtney Cochran Ticer, who had been in Staunton visiting Tiny Marshall Timberlake, and hasn't aged a day since 1932. Flappy also reported that Peggy Hall spent a month painting in Maine this summer. Unfortunately, Flappy herself has been closely confined at home; her father has been ill since early in the summer.

Marion Malm Fowler is back in Washington, where Mac is on duty in the Personnel Division at the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. Marion's two daughters are seven and ten, so, as she says, Sweet Briar isn't far off for them. The Fowlers see Ted Clary Treadwell and her husband quite often.

I had newsy communications from Dot Smith Berkeley and Alice Dahney Parker, both of whom expounded at great length on the attractiveness of the other's family. The Parkers spent a long vacation in Charlottes-ville this summer, during which the Parker children and the Berkeley children played together in apparently complete harmony; hence, each mother is loud in her praises of the other's offspring. Dot wrote that Connie Fouler Keeble and her two boys spent the summer at Fortune's Rock, Maine, where the Fowlers have gone ever since Connie was a baby.

The Berkeleys had two weeks at Gloucester in June, and the rest of the summer was devoted to improving the children's swimming and collecting materials for a new house.

Both Dot and Alice spoke of seeing Irene Kellogg, who was in Charlottesville briefly, on her way back to Miami Beach after a vacation in New York State. And Alice heard that Stuart Groner Moreno is living in or near San Diego in a Quonset hut; the details of this I shall be most interested in getting.

We've a new baby—or at least he was new on April 6. He is Allen Earl Cullum, and Bobbie Bennett Cullum is the proud and undoubtedly busy mother. This about winds up my news, except to remind you (as if I needed to) that we're a reunion class this year and it isn't too early to dream about getting together next June. If you contribute to the Alumnae Fund, you will get the next 3 issues of the Alumnai Niws and can keep your eye on this column for further announcements of plans.

Class Secretary: Marjorte Lasar (Mrs. E. R. Hurd, Jr.), 425 North Hanley Road, Saint Louis 5, Missouri.

Fund Agent: Julie Sadler (Mrs. Calvert de Coligny, 36 Hillside Avenue, Mount Kisco, New York.

A wonderful, long letter from Julie de College recently was full of Briggite news: the grandest of which was the announcement of her daughter's safe arrival on July 16 last summer. Miss Julia Amanda, junior, weighed in at 7 pounds, 9 ounces, and is the latest pride of the de Coligny clan. Julie and Calvert had a vacation in New York this summer where they saw Mary McCallum Neill and family and Lib Scheuer Maxwell whose son, John Wortham, was born July 25; Bonnie Wood Stookey and family and Lou Dreyer Bradley live near enough that they come calling trequently. Julie talked to Smut Mayfield Chapman in New Rochelle in June; Smut has a little boy about five years old. Julie and family also went to Virginia for three weeks in August; said that Mary Walton Livingston and entourage went to lowa to visit her husband's family this summer.

Betty Carter Clark, et al, have moved to Pasadena, California, to live; if any of you are in the neighborhood, please give her a cheer as she doesn't know many people thereabouts. Her address is 312 South Holliston

Kitty Marshall Hamill and Jean Besseliei re Boley drove to Lansing, Michigan, to see Eleanor Rust Mattern in September; Jean will be in this country through October. She lives now in Argentina. Her book, The Ressless, which is a "must" for everyone was published in August. The Hamills visited Debby Ebaugh Smith in Vineland, New Jersey, this summer. Alice Shirley writes that there is nothing new with her, but sent me Julia's address in Chapel Hill. Beanie is in her new-old house just two miles from Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; she and Natt saw Mary Moore Rowe in Cambridge in September on their way home from New Hampshire.

Jean Sprague has moved to a new address in Washington; she returned there in September from Idaho where she was called because of the grave illness of her father.

Martha Lou Lemmon (Mrs. William Frederick Stohlmann) and husband have been on the move since they were married; they toured New England this summer and are now living in Princeton, New Jersey, where her husband is in the Department of Art and Archeology. Lou Bradley is living at the Hudson House in Ardsley-on-Hudson, New York. Rosemary Frey Rogers has given up her job for housekeeping and Ruth Pinkham Nix writes of three weeks' wonderful vacation on a dude ranch in Colorado this summer. Hanson writes that Mary Ann Page Guyol is living in Washington, D. C., and Helen and Bill spent a week-end in Cleveland with Eleanor Alcott Bromley whose husband is out of the Army; they are now in their home in Shaker Heights.

Mitzi had a high old time this summer flitting from Boston to New York to visit Jeanne Harmon Weisberger and her daughter, then to Atlantic City and finally to Maryland to visit her family.

Judy Daugherty Musser is settled in her house in Indiana, Pennsylvania, and Dot Turno Gardner went home for a visit in September.

The Lydia Goodwyn Ferrells took a vacation this summer in Asheville, North Carolina, and she is planning to work in a Community Center for underprivileged children this winter.

Eleanor Cooke Esterly and her three little girls went to Topeka in September to visit her family: her husband joined her in October and they went to the Medical Convention in Chicago, Fran Durden Musick spent a week at Virginia Beach in June and Bonnie Wood Stookey and Don spent two weeks in Chatbam on Cape Cod in July; they saw Mary Moore Rowe while they were there. Anne Marvin and her mother went north this summer and saw Hetty Wells Finn and Gerry Mallory en route; they also spent a week on the Upper Saranac in the Adirondacks. I know you will all be sorry to hear of the death in June of Judge Strode, Becky Strode Lee's father. Anne wrote me of it and it was the first I had heard.

Jane Forder Stribling had polio this summer but we hear that she is first-rate now which is good news indeed.

Betty Combs Carroll writes that her husband, suffering with a chronic bronchial infection, has been ordered by his doctor to go to the southwest. Betty and the children will join him in Carlsbad, New Mexico, where Dick is employed by the Potash Company of America, as soon as he finds a place to live.

The office tells me that they do not print any new addresses because of the general impermanence of one and all so I would suggest that if you want a current address you write to the Sweet Briar Alumnae Office where they are listed.

It was a long, dull summer for my money; we did have a month in the country but were hemmed in all August and September with polio like a lot of people; school kept none too soon for all. Thanks for your grand response and let me know as you get settled.

Class Secretary: JACQUELYN STRICKLAND (Mrs. Edward J. Dwelle, Jr.), 4910 Arapahoe Avenue, Jacksonville 5, Florida.

I have missed so much news of the class of 1935 that I have thrown myself into this job from sheer hunger to hear from you. Unfortunately, confirmation of my self-appointment and the news of the October I deadline both came the day my only domestic decided to depart for greener fields, and, as mail service from Florida takes so much time, I am forced to make this a personal letter. Please let it spur each of you to answer promptly the cards that I will send for the February issue. Don't be reticent about telling us who you have seen, names and ages of offspring, and what is happening in your life.

A gentle reminder—unless you contribute to the Alumnae Fund, you won't receive the next three alumnae bulletins. I think maybe we could gather some news about those girls who have owed you a letter since the war—that ought to be stimulus enough both to contribute to the Fund and to send me your choice tid-bits.

The Dwelles (Jacquelyn 71/2, Susan 4, and •Edward 21/2) spent 31/2 years in the Navy and were lucky enough to be stationed most of the time here in Jacksonville. It's nice to be civilians again. We stayed this past summer in the mountains at Blowing Rock, North Carolina, and I saw several of our class there. Judy HalliBurton Burnett came up from Greensboro. Judy looks wonderful, has two adorable children and has just completed a year as president of the Greensboro Junior League. She had seen Becky Young Frazer who was last year's president of the Atlanta League, in Canada, and reported that Becky is as cute as ever. Lida Voight Young has a new baby girl to swell her total to three candidates for Sweet Briar. Lida sees so many Briarites in Atlanta that I am in hopes she'll keep a running diary for us all to read. She will also be on the Alumnae Council for the next two years.

Louise Wood Koonce was also in Blowing Rock, as was Banks McPherson Harper whose little girl is her image. You can imagine how thrilled we all were to sit and talk again—and what a session we had of "remember that time when"—.

Last fall when Ned and I were having a glorious trip to Mexico, we ran into Betty Myers Harding and her husband in Mexico City.

Here in Jacksonville, Agnes Williams Ellis and 1 get to talk over the telephone occasionally but the 16 miles between us prevent visiting as much as we'd like. Ag has two little girls. Eleanor Woods Cotten lives here now, too.

Eleanor Elliott Scott writes me from the far west that her two boys and little girl are not preventing her from doing some night school work. She always could do more than anyone else. Last spring Jerry Johnston Clute and her husband stopped by to see us en route to Miami. Jerry's new daughter arrived the middle of September which gives her two girls and a boy. Jerry sees Peggy Carry Durland, who lives now in Ithaca.

Sarah Turpin was married on June 15 to Benjamin George Habberton of Texas, in Centerville, Maryland.

Anne Spiers was married to Alpheus William Jessup in Atlantic City, June 29. They will live in Shanghai where Mr. Jessup will be correspondent for McGraw-Hill.

If you are finding that the P.-T.A. meetings make you feel aged, that the debutantes call you ma'am and that this year's Sweet Briar freshmen wonder how on earth you could still be alive, having gone there so long ago, please forget it and lose yourself in a card to me.

Happy Fall to you all and fondest regards.

Class Secretary: ALINE STUMP, 125 East 84th Street, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent:

I know you are delighted to learn that Stumpy is our class secretary. As soon as she returned from Camp Carysbrook in the Southwestern part of Virginia where she taught tiding, she began her news-hunting in grand style. The letters have poured in so fast I'm afraid they won't all be in this issue—sn contribute to the Alumnae Fund and read Stumpy's column next time. At present, Stumpy is swamped with work starting out her fourth grade boys at Collegiate School. I'm writing from a hotel in Minneapolis while Jim is sweating out the rest of his basic science examinations which were so rudely interrupted almost five years ago when he went in the Army.

Shall we start with reunion news? Ruth Gilliam Viar wrote just after leaving campus, "It was quite disappointing that so few of us got back for our tenth reunion, but I guess everyone was tied down with babies, and so on. Amelia Hollis Scott, '29, and I went out to the Alumnae meeting Saturday night at which time Pinkie took over as president. She looks the same as ten years ago. Martha Anne Harvey Gwinn and her husband, Jimmie, and daughter, Anne, who is 11 years old now, were back for Saturday evening and left Sunday for a vacation in North Carolina, Virginia Camp Smith was also on campus, looking younger than she did when we were in school. She had pictures of Mary Lindsey, who is a darling looking baby of eight months. As soon as Charles finds a house, they will settle in Raleigh, North Carolina. In the meantime she is with her family in Franklin. . . . Everything at Sweet Briar was beautiful as always and we had a lovely garden party. Betty Cocke Winfree was out of town during all that weekend as she was a bridesmaid in Mary Agnes Young's wedding. Aggie was married to Thomas Turner, Jr., at Walter Reed Chapel in Washington." Ruth also writes that Margaret Smith Thomasson has a girl, born April 20, and that Polly Rich has a new job working as secretary to the Dean of Yale Divinity School. Ruth herself has added another job to her busy schedule of raising her family, gardening and canning-she has been elected president of the P.T.A. for the coming year.

Pinkie and Fred Scott have moved from Richmond to Bundoran Farm, North Garden, Virginia, near Charlottesville. They moved in February and have been busy ever since changing the house, fixing up a little cabin in the yard, acquiring stove and furnace, waiting for pipes and radio for the installation, and trying to fill long shopping lists in town. The boys are loving the life there and seem to be thriving on a diet of green apples—not to mention Pinkie's delicious fried chicken from her hand-raised flock. They are now planning the new house and starting their plantings.

Mrs. Barker wrote that she spent a lonely time at Sweet Briar this summer while Mr. Barker went to France with about eighty French teachers who were invited by the French government. He came back with news of Mrs. Barker's relatives with whom he visited in Paris and Brittany; and on his return he was invited by President Lucas to speak at Convocation about his observations of the situation in France.

Marq Powell Doty writes that her best friend from France has been visiting her this summer at her new address, 7 Maywood Road, New Rochelle, New York. Midge Silvester, who visited Marq last winter, played with a stock company in Peterborough, New Hampshire, this summer. She also said that Willietta Thompson Schofield has a second boy, born August 6. Marq had seen Maggie McRae recently and learned that her husband is still in China.

On June 8, Elise (Betsy) Bowen was married to William S. Mullins who is with the Veterans Administration in Columbia, South Carolina, where their address is 1916 College Street. Alice Benet Hopkins, 309 Southwood Drive, also in Columbia, now has two children, Christie, who is five, and Alice, eighteen months. Along with housework, Alice is "smitten with the camelia disease" and therefore spends many spare hours in her garden. While at Kanuga, near Hendersonville, this summer, she saw Chloe and Garth and their three on the way home from the beach. Alice said, "I haven't seen Chloe in seven years, and it might have been seven days for all she's changed!"

Fran Baker Owen's new daughter, "Laurie," (Laura Lee Owen) arrived August 21. John is practicing in Baltimore and soon as they find a place to live, she and the children will leave her mother's home in Charlottes-ville and join him. Fran says she is dreadfully weary of the "housing separation." They have bought a lot in one of Baltimore's suburbs and hope to build in a few years. She has just completed a year's course in Interior Decorating. On occasion she has had lunch with Pinkie, and Sara Donghtie Crile has been to see her and brought fresh vegetables and fruit from their farm at Greenwood, Virginia.

Chic Gregory took a moment out from her job and books to write a note for "moral support" and says she is still plugging away at her degree every spare moment she can muster. We're all back of you Chic! She had called on Miss Lucas at Radcliffe and had a very pleasant chat.

Katie Niles Parker gives a glowing account of her visit with Miss Lucas: "I thought she was one of the friendliest, most intelligent and natural people I'd ever met, aside from being very attractive." Katie's latest news is the arrival of John Wells Parker on the 27th of August and she says he is handsome like his father and a hearty eater like his mother. Katie's letter radiated the happiness of a reunited family and of having Frankie home every evening on the 5:30 instead of just seeing him every year or so. They had dinner with Dodie and her husband one evening last winter. Dodie has been Mrs. Basil Walker for about a year now and Katie found them a very happy couple. It looks like Katie and La are at the head of the class, for recently came a card to "announce the arrival of number four"-a penny postal, nothing more, this from James and La Donabue McCormack, and the fourth boy, Malcolm Mc-Cormack, was born July 25.

Marian June Lilygren was married to Henry V. Farrell of New York on June Ist and Adalyn Merrill was married to James N. Luthin of Berkeley, California, on April 25 in Glendale, California. The Luthins spent their honeymoon in British Columbia and will live at 101½ South Naches Street, Yakima, Washington.

Logan Phinizy Jones sent Stumpy the Richmond news. Logan's life consists of trying to get Ferdie, aged five, a primer-farmer to and from school, keeping Mary Porter, aged two, entertained, and two months old Allen bathed and fed and dry. Bill has been out of the Navy almost a year now and Logan says she sees him occasionally as the large per cent of population undergoing surgery seems to account for almost too much of his time, but that he seems to thrive on it.

Jackie, Hoofy, and their precious little Billy, just turned one, have bought and moved into a darling new house not far from Logan. Jackie is in the throes of getting settled, searching for a maid, etc., and Logan says of great interest to the class is the news that "the" car—that dashing red-trimmed Ford convertible—ias still the Hoofnagle's mode of transportation and does remarkably well in spite of its ten long years of service. A worthy representative of '36.

Maria Gray Valentine Curtis, Ted, Calvin, their five-year-old daughter, and little Teddy, aged 1¹/₂, have also moved in a new house just one block from Jackie. Maria Gray in her spare time is doing Junior League work and trying to get one of the crowd on the tennis court.

Kitty Lorraine Hude and Telay built a little house in the same neighborhood and several days liter announced the arrival of Terry Tyler, a little sister for Janet. Kitty had a letter from Andy DeGraf Cross who has just had her third child, a son named Woods.

Corinne Fentress Gray now has a family of three. Her oldest boy is five, her second boy is three, and her baby girl is about six months. In August she was able to get a larger house, and Katie, who saw her last fall, says she talked of Old Town with enough enthusiasm to rate her a member of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Well, there's room for just one more baby—It's Ray Heelan, Jr., born last January to June DeFrees Heelan and Ray, who are now living in Philadelphia.

Please let Stumpy hear from you soon.

LILLIAN Cabell GAY,

Secretary pro tem.

10-YEAR REUNION, JUNE, 1947

Sccretary: Harriet Shaw, 221 Highbrook Avenue, Pelham Manor 65, New York. Fund Agent: Natalie Lucas (Mrs. M. S. Chase), Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

1938

Fund Agent: Janet MacFarlan (Mrs. Charles Bergmann), 244 Ackerman Avenue, HoHoKus, New Jersey.

Hope you all had a super summer and will write me everything you did soon. Somehow the response to my lovely reply postals wasn't as good as usual, but I have high hopes of hearing big news from each of you before long.

Lucy T, came through with her usual good letter but I was so sorry to hear that she had been I id up for some time. Thanks for word of Judy Bemis Will's new daughter, Sally. Macky went to see Judy when she was on a visit to Stamford with her father. The old gang of Macky. Adele, Kay and some others hope to have a big reunion this Fall, so don't fail to pass along all the details to me. Kay paid Lucy a visit not long ago and is still quite happy with her joh. Isabel Franke de Graaf and husband, Lee, who live in St. Petersburg, flew up North (with a son on each lap—one six months old and the other 2) and Lucy saw her several times.

As usual there are a preponderance of babies. The latest arrivals on my list include Marian Judith Hein, M. J. Miller's pride and joy. Big brother John and the daddy are mighty excited over this September 4 arrival. Dot Tison Campbell writes from Bennington, Vermont, of her new daughter, Dorothy Batchelder Mauer Campbell (8½ pounds) who was born August 31. She is dark with loads of black hair, in contrast to Jamie, Dot's red-headed, blue-eyed 2½-year-old son. I believe I told you of Billy Heizer Hickenlooper's third boy, Andy. Her hands are completely full with three small fry, but she did find time for three grand weeks in Michigan this summer and she and Bo plan to go to New Orleans in November.

Quite a few 38'ers have migrated to the sunny slopes of California. Win Hagberg St. Peter is living in Sunnyvale and her husband will start dental practice in San Mateo soon. Johnny is 16 months old, and all are mighty happy to be together again. Stan became a civilian in June.

Dail writes from Laguna Beach that she is having a real super vacation. Her baby boy is at home with a nurse so she is having one glorious time week-ending in Mexico. San Francisco, and other delightful places. Also on the West Coast, but temporarily, is Hope Hastorf who is still in the Red Cross and on her way to Yokohama, Among the stayat-homes is Mary Brown-Serman Walke who gave me a welcome reply to a desperate plea for news of her. She and husband, Steve, are living in Chattanooga after a long vacation home this past spring and early summer while Steve studied in Washington. Her little girl, Muffin, started school this Fall, and "Steamer" (age 4) is living up to his name and is "simply enormous."

Also in Chattanooga is Moselle Worsley Fletcher who is involved with Emily (age 2), the League, bridge, and "occasionally Quigs," who, being a doctor, stays mighty busy. Moselle hasn't seen Smeady in some time as Smeady is in turn busy with her two little daughters and a new house.

Which brings me to my big news about "Chubby Checks" Wilson. It was my great joy and delight to have a party in September, announcing Rilma's engagement to Bob Allen of Memphis, Tenn. He has been here with Westinghouse since the first of the year, and just as soon as they can find an apartment they plan to get married, which they hope will be some time in November.

This from Dor Gipe Clement: "John was discharged last Ianuary, is working here (Wyandotte, Michigan) for his father. We are living with my mother and have just received the working drawings for the house we hope to build this fall—don't laugh! . . . It looks like a dream come true to us both after twelve Army moves."

Adele spent the month of July at Normandy Beach, New Jersey, with a house on the shore and had a fine time with her two boys. She recently saw Louise Bailey Brooke and Janet Mac.

Jin Faulkner Mathews and Bill are Jiving in Charleston, West Virginia, and she's busy working as Arts Chairman for the Junior League; it involves promoting two radio programs. Maud writes from Cleveland that she and Hardy are busy finding out what "normal living" is—and having such fun! Eleanor, age two, keeps her jumping, but Maud did get to Louisville for a week in June and saw Eady, Alf, and their darling haby. Maud recently heard through an old friend in London that Rose Hyde Fales has a flat in London and a country place in Surrey where she and her two girls spend most of their time while her husband is busy at the American Embassy. Also, that she entertained Miss Glass on her flying visit there last month.

Jo Happ Willingham spent the month of May at St. Simon's Island where Spain joined her on week-ends. She is still busy doing Junior League work and teaching Sunday School but looking forward excitedly to a trip to Bermuda in October.

Babbie and Arthur Chenoweth hope to be civilians ere long. The General Hospital to which he has been attached in Springfield, Missouri, closed September 30 and they are in Birmingham in their newly finished home, Chip (3) and Emily (1) and no help and a succession of guests all summer have kept her hands full. Alex Houng and family spent the summer at Lake George and have recently moved in to their new house in Schenectady.

I ran into Barbara Fish Schiebel for a few hasty, though pleas nt, minutes at Roaring Gap this summer. Later she wrote me that she and Max flew to Pennsylvania in August and were slightly lost till they found themselves over Lynchburg and Sweet Briar which looked prettier than ever!

Pauline Womack Swan writes that she and George are looking forward to the Army-Michigan football game in Ann Arbor October 12. They hope to spend Thanksgiving in Baltimore, and Christmas in her home in Texas—so, if plans work out, they will escape most of the Michigan winter. Their baby, little "Trisha," is almost a year old now, and Nancy is in the third grade. Pauline wants news of the Richmond girls, Jane Kent, Jo Sutton, Ellie Little, Molly T., Mickey McGuire, Cornelia Hicks, Ann Walker, and Nancy Old.

The Tates seem to be settled at long last! Jack is working here in Charlotte now, and we have bought a little brick bungalow which we are enjoying thoroughly. Sort of living from hand to mouth as yet amid boxes and barrels, but still it's ours and now you will have a new address for me. Please do use it, and send your contribution in to the Alumnae Office so that you can continue to get the Alumnae News throughout the year. Remember this is your only complimentary copy—the October issue.

Once again we start a college year. I'm sure we all think perhaps enviously of the many, many freshmen all over the country.

Bnb and I are back from a wonderful trip to Virginia. We stopped by Sweet Briar, of course. Bob agreed it was worthy of all reports. All seemed much the same, but the dormitory reception rooms have been spruced up a lot. Miss McMahon was driving in from camp and Miss Chipley was wandering outside Fletcher. It was good to see them and both looking so well. Chips asked about you in particular, Mary Mac. We attended a wedding in Roanoke and, while there, telephoned Martha Rector, who has been back since April. While a WAC she met Irene Vongehr Vincent in Calcutta. Anne Luck Lancaster was at the wedding reception. We called on Augusta Saul Edwards and her husband, who is the city's new mayor, the youngest Roanoke has ever had, and everyone says he is doing a splendid job. Madame Mayor takes it all with the utmost poise. She's meanwhile knee-deep rearing two husky boys, 51/2 and 21/2. Her house abounds with tricky floral arrangements, and she kept quite busy during the war arranging musical programs for a veteran's hospital.

In a letter from her upon my return, she said that Patty Balz became Mrs. Patrick Russell Vincent the latter part of July. Her address is 20 Victoria Street, Hull, Yorkshire, England. Lee Montague Joachim went to several parties given for her this summer before Patty departed for her waiting groom. Lee's husband has been home for some time. His last station was Nagasaki, Japan. He is now in New York City and while he finds a place to live there, Lee is with her parents. Sarah Belk spent two weeks with her this summer.

Mary Jeff Welles Pearson and family will be in Lexington this winter with her parents, while John goes to Washington and Lee. They're coming from St. Peters, Minnesota.

Sarah was in turn visited by Helen Mc-Creery. Helen is vice-president of the Denver Junior League, and she's busy whipping into shape a "follies" for December 6.

Julie Vanderbilt Brown was born to Boot and Jonathan July 12 (I'm godmother!). She has blonde, curly hair, I am told, and is adorable. Bitsy Gordan Jeffers reports that Boot treats her as though she were made of castiron. She was christened in the Vanderbilt christening robe which came from Switzerland over 75 years ago. Bitsy has been spending week-ends at Westport, Connecticut. She raved about Olivia de Haviland's performance in "What Every Woman Knows." Anne Parks, she says, is loafing, but meanwhile doing a wonderful paint job on the Parks home. On the street a while ago she saw Hortense Powell, '40, who is working for United Nations in New York, in the Secretariat, on the staff of the Press Division. Yvonne Leggett Dyer has been in Westhampton for the summer, and had a wonderful time, despite lots of company and lots of rain. Boot sent a clipping about Nancy Gatch's marriage to Dr. Hendrik Svien of Rochester; he's a Lieutenant Commander, USNR, and after a honeymoon in New England, they returned to the Mayo Clinic in July.

Friends, I've scored a triumph. Grace Robinson McGuire has been heard from and it's worth quoting: "My 4-year-old daughter, Betty, is the cutest, smartest, most spoiled child in the world except for 2-year-old Bill, Jr., who really ought to be in the movies, he is so cute and good looking. One-year-old John is the sweetest of all. He is good as gold and has buck teeth and hair that sticks straight up." She was about to acquire a spinet and undergo music lessons—yes!

Kay Bonsall Strong has had a bad time. She lost her second daughter at birth in July, and two weeks later had an emergency appendectomy. John became a civilian in December, and they moved into their new home in Highland Park, New Jersey, in September. She and John did get in a nice vacation in the Poconos.

Janet Thorpe flew back to New York after 10 days with Steve and Kitty Lawder Stephenson. Nelle Huggins Levvis westhere too, so, of course, there was much Sweet Briar talk. There have been so many constant changes of address that a list per issue is to be abandoned until people settle more permanently. Janet says Kitty's house on Paris Mountain is darling and that their little girl is most attractive. Janet starts back to work at her same job, secretary in a small company that produces advertising and educational motion pictures. Jean Moore, Lottie Lewis, Janet Trosch, and she still lunch together once a week. Jean spent her vacation in Mexico in May. Her engagement was announced in September to George N. von Sternberg. Jean McKenney Stoddard is dividing her time between Garden City and Connecticut.

Mary Muckintosh Sherer writes that Joe's orders came through and by now they are settled at 251 Regent Street, Apartment A, Armstrong Gardens, Hampton, Virginia. He is at the Veteran's Hospital in Kecoughton.

Mary Treadway Washburn was married on September 14 to Frederick Robert Downs, Jr., in Bristol, Connecticut. Tready made a visit last spring to see Betty Frazier Rinehart far away in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Fraze sent a picture of their new home, and it looks divine. She's close to all their friends, has just survived the hottest summer in 10 years, and likes it. Mag Cornwell has also made the trek to visit Fraze.

Ellie George Frampton and Bill went to a wedding in Boston in May and spent the week-end with Betsy Durham Goodhue and Albie. Betsy says that Ellie looked wonderful and was so proud of her daughter, Anne.

Eleanor Claflin Williams, Tommy, and their two children, aged 5 and 3, spent the summer in Cohasset in a made-over boathouse—4 bedrooms, though! Their new house burned down last year, you remember. They've been in Marblehead and cruising in Maine recently.

Betsy and Abie were at Osterville, Massachusetts, sailing, golfing, and clambaking. They left for Lake George the first part of September, thence to visit Betsy's family at Virginia Beach.

Virginia Wellford was here in September. She was managing a farm for a friend who is busily engaged hunting bear in Alaska or catching trout in Wyoming much of his time. October 1 she opened a nursery school. She's always loved children, so here's her chance for a field day. She certainly seemed to know how to hendle mine, and 1 know you all join me in wishing her much success in this new venture. She sees Anne Harrison Brown a lot. Anne has three little girls. Virginia saw Betty Barnes Bird while she was in Connecticut this summer and says her little boy is adorable.

Ruth Harman Keiser and Art were lucky enough to find a house in Princeton, New Jersey, where Art works for Audience Research, Inc. He became a civilien in January and their 7-month-old daughter is healthy and happy. She had lunch with Daphne Withington, '42, who was on 2 months' leave in the United States from Red Cross service in Dutch New Guinea, and the Philippines. Daphne had just come from a short visit to Miss Rogers and Miss Crawford at Red Top at S.B.C.

My big news is that we have bought a house. We have 6 acres and all just one mile from the office. We won't get in until Spring but I'm having a wonderful time anticipating.

Class Secretary: NIOA TOMLIN (Mrs. R. C. Watts, Jr.), 100 Madison Street, Lynchburg, Virginia.

There have been countless changes of address during the past few months—many of which are unknown to me and to the Alumnae office. Space for recording new addresses is no longer available in this magazine. Therefore, please help Helen MacMahon and me by sending your correct address if you have moved anytime within the last year and are now more or less settled. We, in turn, will be glad to help you locate any "missing friends" by sending you other people's addresses when you request them. It will be easier for everybody concerned if you would write directly to me for information.

Ever faithful Ann Sims wrote that she had a wonderful time being in Ruth Beach Robinson's wedding. Besides having a reunion with Lisa Pugh (now studying Spanish in Mexico), Ginny Leggett Cameron (just moved to Cincinnati) and Louise Lembeck, Ann talked with Clara Sasscer in Washington. Ann also spent several hours between trains with Marion Daudt McBride. Ann has resigned from her bookshop job, but expects to be back at work before too long. In the meantime, she is violently keeping house, going to club meetings and such. According to Ann, Jane Furniss Simpson's husband went back into the service last May. Since her discharge from the WAC, Martha Rector has been going to Radio School in Washington.

It was very gratifying to hear from Mildred Moon Montague in Chattanooga. Mildred and Bill have had a grand vacation at Ponte Vedre Beach, Fla., and are up to coping with Deadrick who has reached the crawling stage. Mildred saw Helen Anderson Bryan not long ago and says that there was a charming newspaper picture of Helen and her daughter. Mildred tells me the good news that Nancy Haskins Elliott expects to come home in January as David plans to get his Ph. D. at Harvard.

Connie Currie Fleming's son, Dickie, was born September 10. Ann Carter Young, Cynthia Noland Young's daughter, was born the same day and weighed the same as Connie's boy. Cynthia's house in Stanford is still a distant prospect, but she hasn't lost hope.

Jeanne Harris is another swell person who always responds to my frantic call for news. Jeanne is worthy of anyone's admiration. She has been working constantly since leaving Sweet Briar and has gone on studying and broadening her interests. At this point, she is studying at Columbia University for her M.A. degree in Chinese. After three years work in New York, Jeanne plans to go to Peking. She has seen Patricia Joblin (ex-'40) who is secretary to an executive in the Standard Oil Company. Patricia is enthusiastic about her position and about living in New York. Ruth Goodwin has resigned her job with a Richmond Insurance Company to study in order to work for an export firm. Margaret Vallance is with the State Dept. in Washington, continuing the O. S. S. work that she did during the War. Irene Vongehr Vincent, her husband, and daughter are still in Kalamazoo.

Mrs. William H. Hardy, formerly Hug Schmidt, writes that her two young lads, Bill and Sandy, are practically independent at the ages of four and two respectively. Billy is attending Nursery School before taking on the Kindergarten responsibilities next year. Billy is the strong, silent type and Hug can't get a word out of him in regard to his school experiences. Hug is involved in many civic activities, etc. She is working on a new Junior League project of a nursery school for spastic children.

Janet Runkle Wells and husband, Bob, have bought a large orchard at Pataskala, Ohio. They remodeled the farm house and have already moved in. Janet heard from Becky Pannill Gwin that the Gwins have purchased a house in Houston.

Arline Simmen MacArthur moved into their new house in June, and Chet is back at work for the Continental Can Company, A fenced-in yard helps Arline keep track of three-year-old Bruce.

The Richmond round-up gets bigger and better each time, Mary Johnston Bedell has joined this group. I was there the last of September and saw a lot of people, but unfortunately missed seeing all of them, Mary is very, very slender these days, I only saw her for a little while, but there was time to meet the attractive new husband, see the lovely wedding pictures, and hear a few of Mary's interesting overseas experiences. Canny Lancalter Pasco's two sons obligingly had a double date with Emory Gill Williams' two pretty daughters, so I had a chance to see the foursome. Emory was about to move from her family's home to an apartment. Jane Goolrick Murrell is settled in their stunning apartment. On the Murrell's vacation this summer they saw Beth Thomas Mason and Tate in Ann Arbor. Eve Williams Turnbull and Knox are the proud possessors of a farm near Richmond and hope to live there event-

As for me, there are just two things on my mind at the moment. Number one is to write "finis" to this and number two is to spank our puppy who has just lunched on a nylon stocking. You can understand my predicament, so I'll close by beseeching you to send your contributions promptly to the Alumnae office.

Looks like the fall season is once more under way and I'm back again at my old reporting job after 28 months in the Navy and a good, long "readjustment" period. I'd like to thank Do Albray publicly for the good work she did for me.

A brief report on the mighty 5th reunion is in order first. We were a small but very enthusiastic bunch and were flattered that '41 still lingered in the minds of the people on campus. Those of us who attended had a wonderful time and we covered everyone and everything from Reid and Grammer days to Betsy Tower winning the Sullivan award graduation day.

To begin with-the babies.

Mimi Worthington Foster has a little girl, Louise Kingsbury, August 29. Edge Cardamone O'Donnell had another son, Richard, the same day. Franny Balduin Whitaker is the proud mother of Meade, Jr., born September 13.

Evelyn Cantey became Mrs. Andrew Burnet Marion on September 20, Betty Jo Mc-Narney was married to Major Charles E. Williams, former aide of General McNarney, August 27, in Germany. After a honeymoon in Switzerland, Italy, and Capri, they are living in Berlin, On August 30, Peg Tomlin announced her engagement to Paul Graves of Lynchburg. Paul, a brother of Laura Graves, was graduated from the University of Virginia. August 20 was a red letter day for me, as I, too, announced my engagement-to John E. Roth, Jr., of this fair city. Neither Peg nor I are sure about the wedding dates, but we've had lots of fun comparing notes on the success or hopelessness of gathering together the necessary items for housekeeping.

I llie Damgard Firth write a perfect letter, loaded with news. She and Swede have been lucky and rented an apartment in Charleston, West Virginia. Swede is a real estate agent there. Ellie's Molly is 2 and a "cherub." She reports that Betry Fawcett, (ex-'41), is now Mrs. James Collier and has a young son, Jimmy. They are living in Iowa City while her husband goes to law school.

Libby Lancaster Washburn, William, and young Bill are in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where they have a house, William is working in a paper mill. Betty Doucett O'Neill and Jack have found a house in Pleasantville. Barbie Neverus Wickerham wrote a grand letter saying Wendy is 4 and in nursery school. Barb had just returned from campus, her sister transferred there this year. She had fun but it made her feel kind of ancient. She's talked to Beanie Wiltaker Bartel. Beanie, Joe, and the baby are living at her mother's in Winston-Salem.

Pat Sorenson Ackard and Bill have taken up residence in Denver where Bill is in the insurance business. Pat Potter Roach and her husband are in Louisville while he goes to law school.

Got a wonderful letter from Franny Wilson Dowdey. She writes that they have a publication date on November 7. Doubleday is bringing out husband Clifford's one and only non-fiction book, "Experiment in Rebellion." Franny said the last days on the book were reminiscent of the two-day reading period before exams. Bebo Chichester Hull is still living in New Jersey and rapidly gaining fame as a cook.

Shirts writes that she and Dick have finally moved into their house—an old one which they have redecorated—and are pleased to death with it. Butch and Johnny are with Butch's mother, having had no luck along the househunting line. Janie Loteland Byerts and little Bill have joined Bill at Hickham Field, Honolulu, where Bill is with A. T. C. Anita Loting Lewis and Bill are established in Washington, and from Anita's report it's a busy and gay place to be. Eunice Foss Sneed has returned to Lynchburg. She, John, and wee Ann DeBard are waiting to move into the house they have boilt.

Remember, you get this issue of the Alum-NAE News gratis—a contribution to the fund will bring the other three copies to you too. Better send in a contribution and keep up with activities. Don't wait for me to write you, you write me.

In spite of the long summer vacation, many of my wonderful intentions were never realized. One of them was the matter of sending out postals. However, I do have some news of '42, and, since this issue reaches all of you, I hope that you will be inspired to do two things: contribute to the Alumnae Fund (you will then receive future issues of the NEWS), and send me the news of your whereabouts and goings-on.

Sally Walke Rogers wrote me last May that John was at 1-st out of the Navy and that they were settling then in McDonald, Pennsylvania. After John got home in December they went to Sea Island where they saw Sally Schall Van Allen and Bill. Si had seen Laura Graves in Lynchburg and while in New York she called Cynthia Abbott Botsford, who reported that Bots arrived home the early part of the year. A future item from Si says that Bobbie Ripley was out of the WAVES and plannning to come to the East Coast this summer, and that Betsy Chamberlain was married in March to Peter Duncan Burchard.

Annie Barrett George has, on a couple of postals, reported the names of three candidates for the class of '66. Melissa Allen is the daughter of Diana Stout Allen and was born in April. Chookie Groses Martin has a daughter, Evelyn, born May 7, and Marion Robbins Parrish is the mother of Betsy, born in March. A future beau is Anne's son, Tog (the third Orme George) who arrived July 16. Annie and Orme are now back in Houston and, miracle of miracles, have at last found an apartment.

From St. Paul, Minnesota, comes a letter from Frannie Boynton Drake. Carl, who was on one of the first ships to enter Tokyo Bay, has been home since the first of November. Carl and Frannie are the parents of a redheaded son and a black-haired little girl. They see Swede quite often as well as Ping, whose husband is Carl's brother.

Since my return to Charlottesville I have seen Penny Lewis a great deal. Penny looks wonderful and tells fascinating tales of her sojourn abroad with the O.S.S. After working at Mountain Lake this summer, she is now debating about the future.

I had dinner at Toppin Wheat's the other night. Toppin's interest in music has not diminished. Her exercises for her fingers are fascinating.

At the VMI-Virginia game I saw Anne Morrison Reams and Nancy Goldbarth Glaser. I had a chat with Nancy and Milt, who are now settled permanently in Richmond much to their delight.

So ends all news for now, but do write to me at St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Virginia, and if any of you are in the vicinity, drop in on me, won't you? In the meantime, remember the fund and remember that June 1947 marks our fifth reunion.

Class Sccretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: KAREN KNISKERN (Mrs. Robert White), 988 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Mass.

I have been off on a lengthy vacation in the wilds of Canada and have somewhat neglected my duties, but have managed to gather up a few items so here they are: First on the list are four new infants-one, Gwendolyn Law Taylor, born to Mary Law Taylor on August 12. Mary has been at Fort Washington with her husband so I haven't met her daughter yet but expect to this month when Mary comes to Baltimore. The other three babies are boys. Theodore Hervey Geuthing, III, was born on June 6 to Camille Guyton Genthing; Ed and Janie Lampton Middleton had their first on September 13; and Dorothy Campbell Scribner had another son, Donald, born July 11, weighing in at 9 lbs. 14 oz.

Betty Schmeisser has announced her engagement to Karl J. Nelson of Cranford, N. J. The wedding is scheduled for October 12 and they will live in West Orange, N. J., in a house with eight other men and no women! Then, on October 26, the wedding of Sarah Louise Adams to Robert S. Bush of Montclair, N. J. This romance blossomed on that trip of "Ouija's" last spring, after a friendship had started in San Antonio during the war. Also Viola Miller, (ex-'43), who early in September announced her engagement to Alfred Milton Scott, is now married and living in Virginia Beach.

Harriet Pullen became Mrs. John Ormsby Phillips on July 6. Harriet wrote me from Pittsburgh, where Orms is with Heppenstall Steel, that they honeymooned at a ranch in North Carolina. She expected to take her State Board exams in nursing in Pittsburgh and must have done so, as Page tells me that she has a part-time nursing job. They have an apartment and everything seems to be perfect. All Anne McJunkin Briber's post cards report failures at house hunting in Milwankee. She and Frank have been living all summer in one rented room, eating their meals out. "Ping" is looking too-in Boston. She and Em saw Junk and Frank on their way back after Em got out of the Navy. Ping's husband started as Chief of Surgical Residents at the Veterans' Hospital in West Roxbury.

Boston seems quite a gathering place. "Tookie Kniskern White is still there. Fay Martin Chandler and Al have just moved in, while Huide and Lynn Emerick Huidekoper have bought a house right outside in Milton. Lynn hasn't seen a Briarite for so long that she is saying rashly, "Tell anyone who comes near here to please look us up." Jimmie and Karen Norris Sibley have left that area after Jimmie's year at Harvard Law School.

Marguerite Hume wrote me last spring of an engagement, but her card missed the deadline by one day. So, in case you haven't heard over the summer, Janice Fitzgerald is to marry Judson Mease, who has been overseas and is now finishing his course at Chapel Hill. Marguerite also said that Helen Lawton is still "Dot Tell It All" for the Conrier-Journal in Louisville. I wish she'd tell me a little more.

Janie Findlay finally crashed through with a letter from Canada where she was summering. She wants to try working in New York this winter, but her plans are uncertain as the girl she expected to live with departed for the west suddenly. I also heard from Judy Snow Benoit not long ago. They have bought a house which Judy isn't overly enthusiastic about. Still, it is a home and a relief after moving five times in less than a year. Marey Shugart Dennehy has anchored in Norfolk where Rod's ship will be until February. After that, Shug expects to stay on there as she is tired of moving too. Her family has increased by one puppy which takes turns chewing at and being chewed by Baby Joan, who is a year old now. Shug says Elsie Jackson Kelly is going to live in Atlanta.

Katie Parker is still in New York but with a different job. She is now working for the Transport Union—CIO—organizing the airlines, and writes that she loves it. Virginia White has a new job this summer too—at an Episcopal Mission in the Blue Ridge Mountains. The last I heard from her she was vacationing at Mackinac Island, Michigan.

As a matter of fact, everyone, including me, has been summering too much to keep in contact. By the next issue I hope to have gathered up many interesting tidbits, so please all of you send in your contributions (for the Fund to Brooks, for the column to me).

Effie has moved to Columbus, Ga., where her husband is a cotton broker and where she has a "miscroscopic" house; Louise Moore Nelson was up from Charlottesville and looking very lovely at a wedding here; Martha Bobbitt McTigue has gone to a very romanticsounding spot—Limatambo, Peru; and Jane Hardley Harris has been living in Richmond for a while.

I have a last-minute flash from "Snookie" Campbell Shearer bringing news of Fayette McDowell's engagement to Ros Willet. He used to come to S.B. occasionally so maybe some of you remember him. The wedding is to be October 19. Snookie herself is back at Princeton where she often sees Brac Preston. Logan is working in Philadelphia for the Insurance Companies of North America and they hope to move there as soon as possible as the commuting problem is all-consuming.

As usual I'm full of excuses for my gaposis of literary elegance. This time it's packing -alas, undone. Have been home for two weeks on my Christmas leave, and have had great luck seeing the local '44's. Ran into Helen Cantey Woodbridge and West in the pouring rain on Fifth Avenue, but we postponed our get-together until we could gather a few more. So-Janet Staples, Lulu Sadowsky, Helen and I managed lunch together one day. Staples, now a civilian, is in the early throes of the New York School of Social Work, and living at Hartley House. Lulu is studying art and living her usual hectic life. She reported that Sidney Holmes has a new job with the New York Times. Also, Ann Bowen is back; in New York, but hard to find. Helen and West are, with the great majority, house-hunting. Barbara Clark, ex-'44, now has her degree in Economics from New York University.

We're keeping up our quota of weddings and babies . . . though sometimes the news is old by the time I finally hear it (this is a subtle hint, please). Recent and not-so weddings are as follows: Evelyn Pretlow to Alexander Ormiston, June 15. Evie and her husband are living in Canada. Josephine Soule has been Mrs. William Walker Claghorn since her marriage in Honolulu in November, 1945. Her address is 2128 Kalakaua Avenue, Honolulu, T. H. Virginia Gowen, ex-'44, was married to Robert Garland Brown, III. of Carthage, Texas, on June 1. Hazel Fellner Tuttle and her husband are living at 1198 University Station in Charlottesville while he is studying at the University. Their wedding in June was a big occasion, and one that I am sorry I missed. Betty Haverty was married to Alexander Wyle Smith in Atlanta on August 31. Juliette Tchou Ling (Mrs. James C.) is now settled in North Plainfield, New Jersey. Helen Crump's engagement to Jack Cutler has been announced, and the wedding will take place this fall. Our new babies are Betty Boyd, IV, who was born to Betty Boyd Farinbolt Cockrill and Iim in August; Sharon Booth, daughter of Mimi Ethridge Booth, and Elizabeth Connor Jacobs, an August arrival, daughter of Marian Shanley Jacobs. Our only boy is Stephen Richard, son of Kitty Holleman Richard. Sympathy goes from all of us to Kitty and Hank for the loss of their oldest son this summer.

Some of us are lucky! Sterling Nettles Murray reports that they have a house, prefab. style, but home! Another new house owner is Susie Landis Lancaster. She and John are settled at 348 Oakland Beach Avenue, Rye, New York. The Camms, too, are at last rooted. Millie Littleford Camm is in Cincipari

News from Brad after all these years. She's back in Lexington, Kentucky, but was about to move on to New York when last heard from. She thought that Susie Somervell was still in Italy, being Aide to General John Lee. Margy Brendlinger has stopped WAVE-ing and hopes to do some graduate work when the furore in education-seeking calms down a little. Here's some of the news she sent me: Martha Lindsey and Adeline Taylor are gracefully and efficiently managing their respective homes, as Margy saw in a recent visit to both. She met Frances Longino's fiance, Hugh Schrader, in Atlanta. Leslie Herrick is still enthralled about her "35 childen" and the teaching at Walt Whitman School. Helen Gravatt paid Margy a brief visit between a church convention and Evie Cantev's wedding. Tina White, it seems, is the belle of Rochester; and is thinking strongly about a little graduate work too. Babe Loveland Swanbeck, Ray, and little Jimmie have a house near New London now.

Peg Gordon is combining teaching English and administrative work at the University of Georgia Extension in Savannah. Gunner and Paulett Long Taggert have recently moved from Rahway to Boston. Pat Patton MacMannis is in New York waiting for their new abode in Larchmont to be completed. Mary White is working at William Morris in New York and living at the female branch of the Allerton house.

Had a long and newsy letter from Muriel Abrash Salzberg. Arny is doctoring at the V.A. Hospital in Rutland Heights, Massachusetts.

Lunched in Montclair with Goody not long ago, and the Goodspeed tradition is in fine fettle. Goody is combining drama (running the League Children's Play, Little Theatre, etc.), being a Nurses Aide, domesticity, and a violent social life, with her usual calm and aplomb. We reminisced madly and had a grand time doing it. Tried to phone Dottie Tobin Ayers and Ginnie Hall, but was doubly unsuccessful. Alice Sarah Hepburn sent me a 3-page volume ending with the following "To be brief, I am out of the Army." She is now attending Westminister Choir School at Princeton and living c/o Mrs. Wentworth at 42 Lincoln Lane. I called her up the other evening, and was extra pleased to hear that old Hepburnian bellow. Bea Boericke, too, is out of the Army and home again at Deepdene. Giddy Whitehead keeps me posted on the latest S.B.C. doings. She's busy accumulating "experience" with her mountain climbing variety of social case work, and is thrilled with it all. Her schedule leaves me, weakened as I am by Army versions of the 8-hour day, shuddering when I finish reading it; but she seems to be thriving. The last post card to sneak in under my deadline was from Dotty Benttell Smith. She's keeping house, watching her daughter turn into a real grown-up (241/2 inches tall) and loves teaching piano on the side. Again I repeat my plea-please drop me a line even if you don't get an inquiring postal. We'd all like to hear from all of you.

I really do feel like the foreign correspondent. I find myself comfortably situated in far-off North Carolina for a nice visit when it suddenly dawns on me that I must throw together, at last, bits of news for you. I'm sitting in Pooch Porcher's home in Charlotte.

The best place to begin seems to be where we left off in May—McJunk and I picked up Mary Haskins at SBC and then drove on down to find Perk Traugott sitting on the steps at the Buchanan cottage, at Nag's Head, waiting to greet us. McJunk and I drove back through SBC, spent the night there and saw Leila Barnes, Martha Holton and Jean Moores who were all there for our first class reunion. Where were the other 67 members? Missed seeing you all! I cila was on her way home from W&I. finals, I atest news from Jean is that she is working in a doctor's office as assistant, secretary, receptionist and right hand man.

The first of June seemed to find everyone's (well almost everyone's) third finger, left hand, completely cluttered up with diamonds. Beck Avery started the ball rolling when she announced her engagement to Frank Duff. They were married October 12. Mil Carothers and Sarah Temple announced theirs by unique means. A plane flew over the assembled guests and dropped small bits of propaganda about Mil and Bill Heally and Sarah and Tom Moore. The former were married in August and the latter wedding will take place October 26. At the same time our little Alice Edwards announced her engagement to Joe Davenport of Chattanooga. They will live in Chattanooga after their wedding October 5. Betsy Smythe was married to Richard L. Hayden on August 22 in Dallas, and they are living in New Haven.

Cappy Price's wedding to Bruce Bass took place in Louisville in September with Steve Nicholson and Betty Healy as bridesmaids. Mary Herbert was married September 6 to Dr. Edmund Taylor.

Tickie Clark was married in August to Lt. Robert S. Farrell. They are living in California. Tay Reese was the only Briarite to get to the wedding which took place on Fisher's Island.

Elaine Krause married Lt. William Kelty at Fort Benning in August.

Engagements recently announced include Doreen Brugger's to Dr. Paul Wetzig from Pueblo, Colorida. Last word from Deen she was doing research in a Staten Island hospital. Huldah Edens has just announced her approaching marriage to Captain Thomas H. Jackson of Shreveport, Louisiane.

News from the newly-weds, Gus Hazen and Clyde, is that Clyde is attending college in Ames, Iowa, and Gus is teaching chemistry.

There are now two more members of the class of '62. Nancy Feazell Kent and Bob have a new daughter and Mary Kathryne Frye and Sam's daughter, Kathryne Glenn, was born September 1.

Several 45'ers spent the summer seeing America first. Mary Haskins and Susan Buchanan went to California with Dr. Haskins who was attending the medical convention in San Francisco. Zu Zulick took her two weeks in St. Louis visiting Hedy Edwards. Edie Page Gill was in Philadelphia for a short time. Ginny Berrier vacationed in New York and vicinity.

Virginia Beach takes the prize for luring the biggest crowd. Lyn Dillard, Leila Barnes, Hilda Hude, Betty Cocke, Irene McDonald Hill, Pooch Porcher, Kagee Agee, Jane McJunkin (who also visited Perk in Norfolk), Edie Page Gill, Lella Burnett and Frances Brantley all happened to be there around the same time.

Betty Pender's wedding to Dick Lazenby sounded like another May Day with Mrs. Reams making the dresses. Kagee, Irene, Betty Cocke, and Anne Dickson were all in the wedding.

Our own South American, Mary Symes, has returned to the "States" and is living in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. She and Diddie Gaylord got together in New York for a little visit. I had a post card from Chris Wright the other day and she was a secretary at Middlebury College this summer. Last year she went to Katherine Gibbs'. Betty Cocke seems to have spent a busy winter in Memphis. She went to business school and then May first started a wonderful job at Cotton Carnival Headquarters (Cotton Carnival being the Memphis equivalent to Mardi Gras). All this sounds like the "job of the year"-Selling tickets, writing letters, entertaining men and then at six o'clock begin working by going to parties, dinners and balls. Edith Farr is going to teach Spanish in the Fairfax High School this fall. Not long ago she spent the day with Bunny Gray Wilson whose husband now has a residency in a Richmond hospital. Audrey Betts is wonderful about keeping me in touch with big city life. She's still working but ready for a vacation this fall. She's done so well with her job that she no longer has to report on Saturday morning.

The first of September found Charleston full of Sweet Briar people and it was really wonderful seeing so many all together again. Ade Jones' ('46) wedding drew many and others just happened to be out in that part of the country at the same time, so we had quite a reunion. Pooch and Lyn Dillard arrived on the same train and the next day Lovah Willcox and Polly Kent (all '46) were there, too. Such fun as we did have. Lovah visited Kagee and then stopped in Charleston for a while. Then she and Pooch and I set out for Charlotte. I have seen Manda Parsley, Peggy Booth and Frances Brantley here. Who knows I may be seeing all of you before this trip is over.

Doesn't it seem strange to be the class who's now "lost in the wide, wide world"? We all had pangs when September rolled around this year and we weren't heading for Virginia and the mountains blue . . . Hope this letter will help to bring us together again, if only on paper!

You all were wonderful to come through with such long letters after my frantic pleas for news. The class of '46 has certainly been busy, what with trips, marriages, jobs, and post-grad work . . . Jean Carter, after being at both Ellie Clement's and Ade Jones' weddings this summer is teaching English to seventh graders at the prep school she attended in Chattanooga. Betty Ann Bass is also teaching (7th grade geography and 8th grade American history) in a Knoxville junior high school. She tells me that Mary Vinton is working in a dress shop in Memphis.

Ade Jones married Coerte Voorhees of Bedminster, New Jersey, on September 7 in Charleston, West Virginia. Besides Carter, Nancy Dowd, Polly Kent, and Nancy Waite (who's been in New York since the wedding) were also on hand, and Flo Cameron was maid of honor. Ade and Coerte honey-mooned at Sea Island, Ga., where they met fellow-honeymooners, Jessie Strickland Elcock and Walter B. Elcock, Jr., who were married on the same day as Ade, and are now happily settled in Atlanta.

Intellectual curiosity has gotten Dowd in a big way; she's working for her M.A. in psych at Ohio State University and is loving every minute of it. Says it's quite a contrast to S.B .- 24,500 students with twelve men to every woman! Also post-graduating are Margo Sibley, who's at the University of Texas, working on her Masters in Chemistry; Catherine Smart at Chapel Hill, getting a Masters in American history; Louise Crawford at the University of South Carolina working for a Masters in English, planning to finish in May; and perhaps the most exciting posgrad, work of all is being done by Mary Lou Holton and Caroline Rudulph, who are at the University of Geneva in Switzerland, having sailed on August 16 on the Queen Mary! Virginia Wynne is taking a few courses at the University of Louisville as preparation for possible future teaching.

Catherine Smart sent me all kinds of news (thanks loads, Catherine!). She says that Grace Schoenheit is at the Barbizon in New York, studying at Katy Gibbs. She has two jobs lined up for the future: modelling and writing, Eleanore Sherman Sorenson (ex-'46) is living in Burlingame, California, keeping house for her student husband. Anne Stubbs (ex-'46) has been on an extended automobile tour of the United States with three Newport News friends. Most exciting experience: being on the "Queen for a Day" radio program in Hollywood. Marilynne Mayer (ex-'46), after graduating from the University of Colorado, is now taking a business course at Salina, Kansas. Bev Randolph visited in Charlotte, North Carolina, last July, and is now, as far as we know, back home.

Pinkie Butler is now Mrs. William James Maxwell, having married "Red" in Florence, South Carolina, on October 12. They are honeymooning in Texas, and so will be able to go to Hallie Tom Nixon's wedding on November 9 when she will marry Jack Powell in Corpus Christi. Babs Hood and Ruth Houston will be present, too, so it ought to be a great get-together for those suite-mates! Hallie Tom and Jack are to live in Tyler, Texas.

News of other Texans is that Sissy Inge is studying "music and more music" in Dallas under a famous concert pianist, and is also taking musicology courses at Southern Methodist University. Ellen Robbins recently returned to Houston after an extended trip to Colorado.

Crutcher Field travelled in Canada this summer, is now back in Miami, and is going to try to pay the campus a visit as soon as she gets her car. She says that her extoommate Margaret Fish (ex.'46) is going to marry Ensign Clyde Rockwood, U.S.N., on November 16 and live in San Diego for the present. She also told me that Helen Wilkinson (ex.'46) was married to Dan Neal recently.

Polly Vandeventer is now assistant librarian in the William and Mary Division in Norfolk. She's asked questions "from dreams to democracy!" She went out west with her family this summer in their new Chevrolet, covered 10,000 miles of the United States and part of Canada.

Miss Glass is making her home this winter with her niece, Mrs. Arthur Goodwillie. Her address is Roslyn, Route 2, Charlottesville. NEW

SWEET BRIAR

PLATE

by

Here it is,

. . . the design for the new Sweet Briar plate, the result of lots of time, thought, discussion and correspondence over a period of two years. Word is being impatiently awaited concerning the length of time it will take to make the necessary engravings, and the date when the first deliveries of plates from the Wedgwood potteries may be expected. The plates will be made in mulberry and blue, Wedgwood shades which are almost duplicates of the former china made by Cauldon; the Wedgwood green is very different and the Council voted not to have it.

The drawing was made from many photographs, by an artist employed by Jones, McDuffee and Stratton, distributors of the china. Look closely at the border and see that it is as distinctly Sweet Briar's own as is the center design . . . the flowers are sweet briar roses, magnolia and mountain laurel.

You will receive notice when the time comes for orders. Please be patient a bit longer! We hope to send order blanks within the next six months.

MRS. FRANK E. BRIBER (Anne McJunkin, '43) 8103 West Bluemound Road Milwaukee 13, Wisconsin DEAR ALUMNAE,

The Alumnae Council met for its mid-winter meeting at Sweet Briar for three days of hard and interesting work beginning Thursday morning, January 30.

The first day was occupied exclusively with the meeting with the faculty which is reported on page 4, and with working out plans so that discussions may be held by all of you along similar lines. All of us alumnae came away from this meeting wishing that each of you could somehow have been there and taken part in it. You will have similarly interesting gatherings, I know, when your club meets in March and in May to discuss articles written for the alumnae clubs by Miss Lucas and Dean Lyman. We have worked out plans which we hope will guide you so that the discussions will move along parallel lines and produce conclusions valuable to the college as well as to the alumnae. Miss Lucas, Mrs. Lyman, and the faculty are enthusiastic about our undertaking, and are watching its development with real anticipation.

A letter will come to club presidents soon, from Mrs. Edward C. Marshall (Edith Durrell '21), vice-president and chairman of clubs, introducing the project, together with the outline for club meetings which has been prepared by a special committee of the Council whose chairman is Mrs. Fred Andersen (Katherine Blount '26). If you are in a group not organized as an alumnae club and would like to receive this material, please notify Mrs. Marshall. If any of you have suggestions as to how the discussions should be guided, send them to Mrs. Andersen. Their addresses are listed on page 1.

The second and third days of meeting were concerned with more usual business. We spent much time on reports of and plans for the development of our alumnae clubs. We have a few really active clubs, and many others which have been in a state of suspended aimlessness. Our hopes are high that the projected discussion groups will be the nucleus around which will gather interested people and interesting activity. Our concern was with the working cut of ways in which the committee on clubs and the Council could serve the anticipated need. We occupied ourselves also with a study of the report on constitutional revision, on which a committee has been working since last June. The chairman, Mrs. John Twohy (Grace Merrick '24), has made an exhaustive study of constitutions of organizations of every type. A full revision of the Constitution and By-Laws, carefully studied and after many stormy sessions approved, will be presented to the Alumnae Association in the spring. Reports of the Alumnae Fund and the Engagement Calendar sales, study and recommendations for the Alumnae Association budget for 1947-48, reunion plans for May 31-June 2, were all carefully considered.

I should like to tell you how inspiring it is to meet and work with the 20 members of the Alumnae Council, who come at their own expense from as far away as Minnesota, and who apply themselves steadily while at Sweet Briar to the problems at hand. We enjoy so much the coming back to college with work to do, and not with the aimless and lonely feeling which comes when you visit a place where once you were busy and useful and where now you seem to have no part. We work very hard, with meetings all day, and committees working at lunch time and at night. We revisit our old friends among the faculty, enjoying the new relationship which our increased maturity brings, and all of us make new and valued friendships among those faculty members who are new since our time or whom we happened not to know well in college. We talk most frankly and earnestly among ourselves, and we enjoy each other tremendously. We all go home exhausted in body but refreshed in mind. We hope that you will be pleased with what we have done, and that you will be interested in the report prepared by Martha you Briesen '31 of our discussion meeting with the faculty.

How Isolated Is Sweet Briar?

by Eva Matthew's Sanford

"O WEET BRIAR is so isolated!" We hear these words from Students and faculty and staff—rarely from our visitors, whose arrivals and departures seem to leave them unaware of our isolation. Like the clichés of the world outside our gates, this statement covers a multitude of sins; it is easier to use a cant phrase than to admit that most of our limitations spring from the inertia of the inner woman, or man, and not from the compulsions of our environment. Curiously enough, we hear it often from those who seem in practice least inhibited by the narrow sphere of the campus; students who seldom have any "nights" left over at the end of a semester, and members of the faculty whose activities have wider ramifications than their words suggest. I think it is a bad thing for the college that we use this phrase so thoughtlessly. If I were a parent, I should not wish to send my daughter to a college that in this day and age was really isolated, and apparently content to continue in its segregated state. Certainly I should not care to teach in an institution where isolation was a chronic

I shall not dwell on the geographical factors of our location. After all, we have the Southern, though our desires often outrun its performance. There are good roads, and some of us have cars. We have a good telephone system, and if the lines to Lynchburg and Amherst are often busy when we wish to use them, it is because others are using them. Our radios are not always subject to static, and we subscribe to a tremendous bulk of newspapers, magazines, and reviews. The Postoffice handles more mail than the authorities think its limited space justifies, and that mail comes from and goes to all states of the Union and most parts of the world. Visitors often strain the resources of the Inn and of our hospitable neighbors; we are coeducational over the week-end, and few parents are dependent on the Viewbook or the Calendar or their daughters' descriptions for their mental picture of the college. The committee on lectures and concerts provides a varied and interesting program every year. Obviously, here as elsewhere, isolation is a state of mind. But is it really our state of mind? Have we converted the Boxwood Circle into an ivory tower? If not, it is poor publicity to keep saying that we have.

Dr. Sanford is associate professor of history. She is distinguished as a scholar, especially in mediaeval and classical history, and she is the author of The Mediterranean World in Ancient Times and of a great many articles which have been published in learned journals. Miss Sanford also enjoys a reputation as a writer of witty verse, as a cook of no mean ability, and as an indefatigable knitter and gatherer of clothing for Greek War Relief.

A survey of student activities that are pertinent to this question would be fruitful and enlightening. However, I shall confine my observations to the faculty. We all have minds, not necessarily better than those of the students, but presumably more mature and experienced, and, in theory at least, our use of our minds plays a dominant role in our lives, and a not inconsiderable part in theirs. The isolation of Sweet Briar has not yet produced a local dialect such as is characteristic of other remote communities. We speak many varieties of the American language interspersed with accents from across the southern and northern borders of the country and from Europe. The majority of the faculty are Americans, from the South and the Deep South, from the north Atlantic and middle states, the far West, and Texas. Most of us have studied and taught in other parts of the country than those in which we were born. We have spent considerable time in Europe and the Near East, the Far East, or Central and South America. according to our various scholarly interests, our personal predilections, and our opportunities. Among the members of the faculty who came from outside the United States to help link us with the rest of the world are Mr. Connor and Miss Agnew from Canada, Miss Boone from England, Miss Stochholm from Denmark, Mesdames Johnson and Barker from France, Miss Huber from Switzerland, Miss Stücklen and Mr. Bernheimer from Germany, Mr. De Rocco from Belgrade, Mrs. Levi D'Ancona from Italy, and "Senor" from Italy and Spain (and Connecticut!). At present Mr. Masur, a former professor at the University of Berlin, who has lived for some years in Colombia, is substituting for Mrs. Raymond in modern European history. When Senorita Flores arrived from Mexico last fall to fill a last minute vacancy in the Spanish ranks, she brought Mr. Connor a gift from her Italian teacher, who had studied under him at Pomona one summer. Last summer two of our number, Mr. Barker and Miss Buckham, were among the hundred teachers of French in secondary schools, colleges, and universities, from all parts of the United States, whom the French government invited to visit France, that they might study its present conditions and problems at first hand, and interpret them to American students. Two out of a hundred seems a large proportion to assign one small college. Here is eloquent testimony that news of our isolation has not reached Paris.

The system of sabbatical leaves helps keep us in touch with the world. Dr. Rice is teaching at the Medical School of the University of Wisconsin this year. Mrs. Raymond

Alumnae Council and Faculty Talk

"What about our college and its opportunities for serving the future?" With this question, President Lucas started the ball rolling at the day-long session during which the Alumnae Council and a large group of faculty members discussed some of the aspects presented by this provocative query. These meetings marked the first day of the Council's midwinter session.

Wake Up, Alumnae!, Miss Benedict's article in the October Alumnae News, was, in fact, the springboard for the program for the day. In it she suggested, you may recall, alumnae discussion groups centered on educational topics related to Sweet Briar in order that "the individual's ideas should be welded into the group's contribution" to be passed on to the college, as a vital contribution which only the alumnae are in a position to make to their college.

This proposal gained momentum when President Lucas wrote in her first statement to the alumnae last October, "Let us have the benefit of your judgment and perspective in re-thinking Sweet Briar's course of study and in re-evaluating our entire college program."

Enthusiastically, the Alumnae Council at its fall meeting welcomed the opportunities thus presented to them. Here was something, they felt, which all alumnae would

The meeting of Alumnae Council with the Sweet Briar faculty got us off to a running start in this urgent business of taking stock of ourselves and of re-evaluating the ends and means of a liberal arts education. I am only sorry that every one of you could not have been with us to give us your ideas on the questions discussed. But there will be further opportunity in the months ahead. You may be surprised to learn, as you talk together, how smart you are . . . after all these years since you turned in that last exam! You will be meeting and talking this spring; and perhaps you will get back to college soon to take part in an educational symposium here on the campus. Great things can come of our reading and thinking and talking together . . . for the future of education . . . bere and everywhere!

Southa B. Lucas

welcome too; a chance to express themselves, in group discussions, concerning the values they had received, the weaknesses they had found, in their own college experience, not to mention the hopes they cherish for Sweet Briar's future. Accordingly a committee was appointed and began to formulate plans for starting the discussion groups. Headed by Katherine Blount Andersen, '26, the committee consists of Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, Alma Martin Rotnem, '36, and Anne McJunkin Briber, '43.

So much for the immediate background of the venture. The first discussion was opened by Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, alumnae president, on Thursday morning, January 30. President Lucas briefly introduced the large topic, and then the talk began.

A dozen questions, formulated by alumnae and faculty members, had previously been placed in the hands of all those who came to the meeting, in order to channel the discussion somewhat. In the comparatively short time at hand, however, not all of the questions were touched on, nor was any one of the topics exhausted! Skillfully directed by Mrs. Scott, the lively exchange of ideas went somewhat as follows:

Toward what goals in life should women be educated today? Should women's education differ from men's education in any essential way?

Miss Lucas: The old cry of career-vs.-marriage has now pretty well subsided, for it is generally recognized that marriage, home and family are, in fact, a career. If pursued successfully, it calls upon a woman's best resources. But "home" is more than four walls! Today it is seriously charged that women's colleges and community agencies are failing to bridge the gap between campus and community. What can we do about this?

Other speakers:

The extension of life means that women have to prepare for a long life span and our ideas of woman's career need to be revised. Women should develop as early as possible continuing interests so that they will have something to carry on when the children are grown.

——In her talk here last year, Margaret Mead, the anthropologist, pointed out that there isn't anything which women do in some cultures that men don't do in others. I believe that education for women should be the same as for men.

——We should arrive at the essentials of education for men and then what in addition should be essential for women.

What do you consider essential in education for citizenship?

This question involved discussion of the place of such an organization as the League of Women Voters on the campus. The Sweet Briar chapter, which flourished for a few years, died about a decade ago for a number of reasons, about Education at Sweet Briar including the lack of good program organization. One faculty member pointed out that students in at least one sociology course now get an introduction to the kind of civic organizations they are apt to find in most communities. Another suggested a similar presentation, in condensed form, to the entire student body annually.

It was the opinion of one that students during the last few years are less interested than were students of a decade ago in carrying through the responsibilities of elected office. Miss Lucas felt that student government could serve much more effectively as a training ground for future civic participation if wiser adult guidance were given in the colleges and universities.

An alumna, herself active in community affairs, said that in her experience it has been those who were not leaders in college, rather than those who were, who have taken the most active part in community affairs. Someone else reminded the group that it takes many good followers to make a good leader effective.

——We could train students to be more critical of those they elect to office and more critical of how they carry through their jobs after they have been elected. Practical experience will give them the take-off for community enterprise.

Our juniors and graduate students now in Europe realize that they and their fellows here, for the most part, haven't formed the habit of really thinking and talking about subjects beyond the movies, fashions, etc.

———Isn't that partly because they haven't been pressed by political and economic problems and realities as have the European students they are meeting?

A faculty member pointed out that European students are chosen by other standards than ours . . . and added that students of her generation, for example, were vitally concerned in the struggle for woman's suffrage, now no longer an issue. "Also, we have to face the fact that present-day problems are far more disturbing than those we faced. Do the students want to be disturbed?"

Miss Lucas replied, "We are obliged by our very nature as a liberal arts college to disturb the mind, to free it from its prejudices."

Someone inquired: "Do the parents of our students want them to be disturbed?"

To which an alumna said, "I should like our college's position so clearly understood that those parents who do not want their daughters to be disturbed no longer send their daughters here."

Is the homogeneity of Sweet Briar students desirable or undesirable?

A faculty member said, "We have to try to compensate for the homogeneity of our students by trying to make vivid, in the abstract, the variety which they will later encounter. Somehow to increase the variety of students at Sweet Briar would be one of the answers to this problem, it seems to me."

Dean Lyman writes:

I found it a most beartening experience to share in the discussion of the Alumnae Council. It is good to have the interest and support of the alumnae groups in the central business of this college and their help in making both materials and the methods of its instruction as fruitful as possible for our students. It is the first time that I have known of a meeting of members of the administration, of the faculty and of the alumnae body all participating in such a discussion. Many valuable suggestions came from the meeting which will be of help to us here at the college, and we look forward eagerly to the continuation of these talks in the alumnae groups throughout the country, and to our receiving further suggestions from them. It has been good education for all of us concerned, and we take special pleasure in its being an adventure into the field of adult education—a very timely outreach of Sweet Briar's work.

An alumna asserted that if they haven't already learned something about "the other fellow," college is the place to begin to get that experience at first hand.

Miss Lucas' question, "What opportunity do our students have to know the kind of students whose education has been fought and died for?" led to a discussion of scholarship opportunities as a means of attracting students who could not come to college without substantial financial assistance.

Dean Lyman asserted that providing enough people for the jobs that need to be done (on campus) has been the problem in the last two or three years. But responsibility toward a job can not be rested only on the need to earn, she pointed out. This year, when the library was greatly in need of workers, the posts were filled by girls who were willing to do the work as a civic service and responsibility, and with considerable success.

As for recruiting students who do need "all-expense" scholarships, one faculty member said that such a student needs to consider very carefully the college she wishes to attend. What does it offer her as preparation for her future?

That led, naturally, to another topic, the liberal arts education as preparation for an occupation.

The negative response in regard to questions we get about the introduction of courses in typing, home economics, etc., into our curriculum, should be replaced by a positive attitude, pointing out what the liberal training offers as preparation.

——Students should be encouraged to use their summers in pursuit of the vocational training and skills which they don't get here. A good many of them do that very thing now.

Sweet Briar goes a long way toward fitting girls to teach!

Someone wanted to know if Sweet Briar graduates could teach in public schools, lacking required "credits in pedagogy." Yes, was the prompt reply, Virginia welcomes college graduates as teachers today and provides as added inducements opportunities for in-training positions and scholarships for teacher-training in summer schools.

Dean Lyman spoke of a plan to present the needs for . . . and the rewards of . . . teaching to all of the students. President Lucas added that liberal arts graduates are peculiarly well fitted to teach. Many of our faculty members, she added, are trying to interest students in teaching.

In answer to an alumna's question as to the present vocational guidance set-up at Sweet Briar, the chairman of the faculty-student personnel committee explained that it is generally considered inadequate and unsatisfactory. The faculty members are too busy with other matters, none is really trained in personnel work, clerical assistance is unobtainable. "The overhead for a good set-up is too large for a small college to carry by itself." Nevertheless, many of today's graduates are placed in jobs; all others who want them have no trouble finding them a few months later.

Should a liberal arts education be modified to offer more practical courses in preparation for marriage?

In answer to inquiries, Mrs. Wailes, who teaches them, told about the courses in The Family now given here. One is for students who have had at least one other course in sociology, the other is for seniors who have had no sociology. The content of both courses is similar, the treatment is different. Students are asking for more consideration of parent-child relations, child psychology, behavior problems. Changes in the courses are based somewhat on requests such as these. The second semester course, Economics of Consumption, takes up questions of economics in homemaking.

At this point, it was suggested that a course in Social Relationships might be established as a "core" course, given at the sophomore level, to include some material now generally covered in various economics, sociology, government, and psychology courses. Another suggestion concerned a non-credit senior seminar based on the same topic.

It was further suggested that reading lists of material having to do with marriage and family life be published in the ALUMNAE NEWS. These could serve, ideally, as a basis for group discussions.

Following luncheon, discussion was resumed, this time by a smaller group of faculty members who had volunteered to serve on a faculty-alumnae committee to draw up plans for study programs to go to alumnae clubs that want to form discussion groups. Mrs. Andersen was chairman of the afternoon session.

It opened with a plea for a curriculum based on Christian, rather than Classical, concepts and ideals, a spiritualistic rather than a materialistic point of view, which was presented by Mr. De Rocco, instructor in art. Miss Pearl (professor of Greek and Latin and chairman of the Committee on Instruction) pointed out that it would be difficult to separate the "Christian" from the "Classical," since the Christian ethic is based so largely on Classical philosophy.

Returning to the question of getting information from the alumnae, Dean Lyman remarked that the alumnae are best fitted to answer vitally important questions concerning the strengths and weaknesses in their education. They have had the experience here and out in the world and they have the objective point of view which those who are here, daily immersed in the work of the college, cannot get.

Miss Buckham suggested an alumnae-faculty institute, with outside speakers, to be held for several days after commencement, as a means of getting some of the answers. "Have a good pow-wow," she said, "about all the questions which face the alumnae in their communities and in their homes."

A counter-proposal was that of having small "institutes" first in the local groups as preparation for a larger gathering here.

Several alumnae mentioned that their own clubs were eager to begin study groups at once. Dean Lyman and President Lucas volunteered to make out a brief reading list to be sent to club presidents along with the study plans. Further details about the plans as agreed upon in this meeting appear in Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott's letter to all alumnae.

Just before the session was brought to a close, Miss Mull threw out this question for alumnae consideration:

Through what channels can the alumnae best operate to bring about improved conditions in the primary and secondary schools in their own communities?

Miss Pearl then proposed the following questions:

Have you acquired intellectual and moral values in college which enable you to make proper judgments?

Do you feel that you need a "course" in order to learn anything?

Have you become acquainted with some one subject thoroughty enough so that you have a respect for scholarship and for intellectual achievement?

Have you acquired a sufficient "speaking acquaintance" with various fields of knowledge so that you aren't completely at sea and do have an interest in them?

In closing, Miss Lucas said, "We are asking for a reevaluation of your own education received at Sweet Briar in the light of your experience, your reading, and your thinking since you left this campus. We have high hopes for the future!"

Sweet Briar Day—December 28, 1946

Sweet Briar was present in the conversations, as well as in the hearts and minds, of many alumnae in many parts of the country on Sweet Briar Day, December 28, 1946, according to the reports which have come in from the chairmen. Some met at breakfast, some at luncheon, and others at tea or coffee parties.

New York, observing Sweet Briar Day for the first time in three years, broke several records. Not only was it the largest gathering in the country (150 alumnae, faculty members, parents, and students) but it was apparently one of the largest similar meeting on the records.

President Lucas, making her first visit to this group, was the guest of honor and chief speaker. As if that weren't enough, the assemblage also had the pleasure of seeing and hearing Sweet Briar's first president, Miss Benedict, and Dr. Connie Guion, one of the early faculty members.

Sweet Briar's past, present and future and the role of the alumnae in the development of the college were the themes of the talks given by Miss Benedict, Dr. Guion, and Miss Lucas. Because they contain a message for all Sweet Briar alumnae, the following excerpts are taken from Miss Lucas' address.

"The time is probably past when college women can fulfill their obligations to society by occasional alumnae tea parties with the usual exchange of trivialities. The world is in crisis. Everyone is analyzing the cause and suggesting a cure. Many thoughtful people are tracing the trouble right back to the homes. And that is where the majority of women are, if they are pursuing one of the most important careers of the world. It is a career, this business of creating the kind of home in which children can grow into mature, well-adjusted human beings—the kind of human beings of which our world is so desperately in need "To my way of thinking there is no career in the world of more fundamental importance to the future of a Free Society than marriage. I am not speaking of the kind of so-called marriage which has already taken a third of our war alliances to the divorce courts, but of that most demanding asd comprehensive of all occupations, the making of a home with all the ramifications of homemaking, child-rearing, and community planning which such a career should involve. From the emphasis which psychiatrists are now giving to the importance of a sound emotional start in life, it is clear that the schools, colleges, and churches, the whole formal process of instruction and character building, can give only 'too little and too late' if the parents have failed in their initial tasks at home. A tremendous responsibility for the women of the world, but that is only the beginning! The world now stands in desperate need of the intelligent participation of women as well as men in civic, national, and international work. Demanding as are the mechanics of homemaking and childrearing, women must and can shoulder their share of civic responsibility and, as time and aptitude permit, extend their active citizenship into national and world affairs.

This is the way the Alumnae Office looked just before the Christmas mailing was sent on its way. Maria Gregory, '47, is helping Betty Van Aken, assistant alumnae secretary. Unfortunately the picture does not show Frankie Gardner, '47, and a dozen other diligent students who worked hard to get Miss Lucas' letter out to all alumnae.

"For these essential and important tasks, the world needs liberally educated women. These are crucial days we are living through, days when humanity is looking to the forces of education for its very survival. If we in the colleges are to fulfill our responsibility of educating women for the important work ahead, it is time to take stock ourselves, to re-examine our purposes, and to re-evaluate our needs to this end. Already we at Sweet Briar are launched upon a discussion program preparatory to adjusting our curriculum and our teaching procedure to meet the challenge of these times. We need and want the opinion of our alumnae on these important questions of educational policy:

"With the enthusiastic cooperation of every alumna, Sweet Briar can, I believe, make an important contribution to world understanding and lasting peace."

Credit for the success of this stimulating meeting, which took place in the Music Room of the Biltmore Hotel, goes to the co-chairmen, Gerry Mallory, '33, and Gertrude Dally Massie, '22, and to their aides in Manhattan, Westchester, Long Island, and New Jersey.

Emphasizing the values of the liberal education in the modern world, Dean Mary Ely Lyman spoke at the Washington luncheon, at which she was guest of honor. Westray Boyce, '48, acted as spokesman for the present students, bringing the alumnae the news of campus happenings and student discussions. Forty-one were present at the meeting.

Further south, in Charlottesville, another lively, although smaller, group carried on its discussion concerning

Sweet Briar. Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, '36, president of the Alumnae Association, gave the group an outline of the plans being made by the Alumnae Council for discussion and study groups for alumnae throughout the country, with Sweet Briar the focus of their attention. Miss Glass told of her trip to England last summer as a delegate to the meeting of the Council of the International Federation of University Women. Dr. Harley was also a guest of honor.

Boston alumnae heard Miss Laura Buckham, associate professor of Romance Languages, speak about her trip to France last summer as one of 100 teachers who were guests of the French government. Twenty-three attended the meeting and an interesting discussion of club plans was followed by a tea.

Taking advantage of the Chicago appearance of Mary James, '41, in Apple of His Eye, the enterprising chairman, Barbara Duncombe, '44, not only persuaded Mary to come to the lunchcon but also arranged a matinee party for those members of the group who wanted to see the play. Lunchcon began at 12:30, and in addition to the account of college news brought by Judith Campbell, '50, there were brief talks by Marjorie Woods Williamson, '44, and Louise Konsberg, '44, who told of the jobs they had taken upon graduation for which their education at Sweet Briar had fitted them.

Several clubs had non-Sweet Briar speakers. One of these was Richmond, which invited Clifford Dowdey, widely known author, and husband of Frances Wilson, '41, to speak informally after the luncheon, held at the Oak Leaf Inn. Forty-nine were present. Pittsburgh, which has allied itself with a community welfare agency known as Heart House, had as its speaker Miss Elizabeth Kuhl from that organization. As an annual contribution, the Sweet Briar Club of Pittsburgh is giving records for the children at Heart House. Twenty alumnae attended the luncheon, held at the University Club.

Mrs. Edward C. Marshall, recently elected to the Board of Overseers of the college, was the guest of honor at the Charlotte Sweet Briar Day meeting, which was attended by 27. The speaker on that occasion was the Rev. George Henry, of Christ Episcopal Church. He urged the alumnae to discuss their ideas for the improvement of the college, to compile them, and forward them to Sweet Briar. Perhaps he would be willing to serve on the new Educational Policy Committee of the Alumnae Council! Two students, Margaret and Evelyn Woods, assisted the alumnae chairman, Catherine Smart, '46, in welcoming the 27 guests.

One of the largest groups met in Norfolk for luncheon at the Norfolk Yacht and Country Club and later heard Council members Louise Hammond Skinner, '19, and Grace Merrick Twohy, '24, tell about the fall meeting of the Council and the inauguration of President Lucas which they had attended. The 42 alumnae became very much interested in the proposed study groups and reports have it that they are eager to begin their discussions.

The Cincinnati Club conducted a most interesting Information Please program, participated in by several well-informed alumnae, and Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, vice-president of the Alumnae Association, carried news of Alumnae Council plans and news of the inauguration of Miss Lucas to the 33 alumnae gathered for luncheon at the Country Club. Chattanooga heard similar reports from Margaret Thomas Kruesi, ex-'12, another Council member, and Anne McJunkin Briber, '43, was heard in Milwaukee. Helen McMahon, '23, alumnae secretary, spoke to the group in Huntington, West Virginia.

Guests at the Lyncrburg lunchcon, held at The Columns, included Dean-Emeritus Emily H. Dutton, Mr. Wheaton, college treasurer, and E. S. Wengert, associate professor of government, recently appointed as a consultant to the Atomic Energy Commission, Both Mr.

Wheaton and Mr. Wengert spoke informally.

Other meetings held on Sweet Briar Day included the following: Amherst; Asheville; Atlanta; Augusta, Georgia; Baltimore; Birmingham; Charleston, West Virginia; Cleveland; Columbus, Georgia; Detroit; Indianapolis; Jacksonville; Louisville; Minneapolis-St. Paul; New Orleans; Philadelphia; Roanoke; Savannah; Seattle; St. Louis; Tampa; Toledo; and Wilmington, Del.

Although the number of cities in which Sweet Briar Day was observed this year was smaller than in the past few years, the individual meetings were marked by a new enthusiasm, according to the letters from chairmen. Alumnae everywhere, stimulated by Miss Lucas' Christmas letter and by her previous statements to the alumnae, are eager to begin the group discussions through which they can make their individual contributions to the development of the college.

MAY

3 May Day.

Americans All

Miss Lucas' introduction to the series of chapel talks which are scheduled for February and March, was given on February 4. Those who heard it were deeply impressed by it and believe it will also be of interest to alumnae readers.

UR CHAPEL program roday begins a new series to be entirled Americans All. We are to have during the next six weeks guest speakers who represent many different groups of people in this land of ours; groups which some of us have not had an opportunity of knowing and understanding. Our speakers will include the following:

Deaconess Mary S. Hutton, The Mission, Pine Grove Hollow, Virginia, who will speak on Isolated Mountain

Folk.

Mr. William S. Meacham, Director of Probation and Parole, Richmond, who will speak on The Second Chance.

Dr. William M. Cooper, Hampton Institute, whose topic will be Our Negro Minority in the Post-War Period.

The Rev. Sherwood Day, Amherst, speaking on The Story of the Conscientious Objector.

Mr. W. L. Gibson, labor union leader, Lynchburg, who will speak on Labor's New Role in American Society.

Father William J. Meredith, Lynchburg, whose topic will be The Catholic American.

Rabbi Ariel L. Goldburg, Richmond, who will speak on What is Judaism?

A Japanese-American student and veteran of World War II from the School of Military Science of the University of Virginia.

Of all the things the peoples of these various groups have in common, one of the most important is the fact that they are Americans All.

Before we can launch ourselves with any degree of enthusiasm upon such a program as this, it would probably be a good idea to decide what we mean by Americans All—or by just any American. It is clear, I think, that we do not mean it in the sense that America is a place. Nor in the sense of exclusive nationalism or pompous patriotism.

Some years ago John Randall remarked in his compendious volume, The Making of the Modern Mind, that:

"Whatever its origin and ultimate value, patriotism is beyond doubt the most widespread social ideal of the day; it is the modern religion, far stronger than mere Christianity in any of its forms, and to its tribal gods men give supreme allegiance. Nationalism is always the one idea for which the masses of men will still die."

This is certainly not what we have in mind when we speak of Americans All. Nor was it what John Latouche had in mind a few years ago when he wrote the Ballad for Americans, which I am sure every one of you has heard sung on the radio by Lawrence Tibbett or Paul Robeson.

John Latouche is the boy from Richmond—who went to college at Columbia University. While he was at Columbia he wrote the college show, and just out of college, collaborated with another young man on the song which Latouche calls A Pampblet for Democracy. The song, you recall, presents a composite American—a person of all races, creeds, and activities. Says the protagonist in the song (Paul Robeson to you!):

"I am the teacher, beauty specialists, bartender, mechanic—all of them—I am the etceteras and the and-so-forths that do the work."

Another voice: "Hold on there, what are you trying to give us?"

Second voice: "Are you an American?"

Solo voice: "Am I an American? I'm just an Irish, Negro, Jewish, Italian, French-and-English, Spanish, Russian, Chinese, Polish, Scotch, Hungarian, Litvak, Swedish, Finnish, Canadian, Greek-and-Turk, and Czech and double-Czech American!

"And that ain't all. I was baptised Baptist, Methodist, Congregationalist, Lutheran, Atheist, Roman Catholic, Orthodox Jewish, Presbyterian, Seventh-Day Adventist, Mormon, Quaker, Christian Scientist—and lots more."

That, from a young men from Richmond—and what he means by America.

For me, America is not place, or national pride, or even a composite of race, creed and activity, though this last is nearer my meaning.

For me America is prophecy and dream. It is a concept which is basically and historically religious. To my way of thinking, it is especially fitting that our program on Americans All be presented in our chapel hour, in an atmosphere of worship.

The America that is prophecy and dream has a long, long history, far back beyond 1776 or 1492 or even the beginnings of Christendom. Since early days, human beings have been divided on a great question:

Is the nature of the world and of human life such that every man has that in him which demands moral consideration from every other man?

Or is the nature of the world such that "human personality" deserves no moral consideration—that, in fact, there is no moral content in man or in his universe? That the strong and unscrupulous men will and should inherit the earth?

In the very beginning of our own Hebrew-Christian culture, there was a disturbing confusion of these ideas. It is, in fact, in the book of Genesis that we find amid the Hebrew sacred legends of the beginning, a famous myth of racial superiority. Beginning with Genesis IX-24: we read:

"When Noah awoke from his wine and learned what his youngest son had done to him he said: 'Curst be Canaan. The nearest of slaves shall he be to his brothers.' Also he said 'Blessed of the Lord my God may Shem be. And let Canaan be his slave. May God expand Japheth and dwell in the tents of Shem. But let Canaan be his slave.'"

In Hebrew thinking we find a gradual growth from this Master race idea to the consummation of quite another idea in Christian thinking, for example:

 (I Kings) Assembly in Shechem, 931 B.C. Rehoboam's tyranny was opposed, again in behalf of the beoble.

 (I Kings) Jezebel's murder of Naboth to get vineyard for her husband, King Ahab; rebuked by the prophet Elijah, speaking again for the "little man."

4. The great prophets like Hosea, Amos, and Isaiah called out for social justice (Amos' great exhortation) "Let justice roll down as waters and righteousness as a mighty stream."

5. Jesus' attitude as shown in the parable of the Good Samaritan. Samaritans were outlanders, half-breeds. Yet Jesus cited a Samaritan for his rightous act. It was Jesus who taught: "Love the Lord your God and all men as yourself."

So in our Hebrew Christian history a great idea was presented and slowly developed. I have reminded you of only a few of the early chapters in the long history of this great idea. Of course the myths persisted, and it seemed to be the strong rather than the just who inherited the earth. But somehow men could not forget the great ideas, the ideas of justice and the rights of Everyman. And so the dream continued—and there came a time and a place. Which was America. Whether they landed at Plymouth Rock or Jamestown in one century or at Ellis Island in another, they came believing in a dream; the dream of freedom—in speech, in thought, and in action; the dream of opportunity for every man, to work and save and build for the future.

Tragic to tell, not all the ships have been ships of dreams, in search of a better world. The year 1620 which saw the Pilgrim Fathers landing at Plymouth also saw a Dutch sloop slipping into a harbor at Jamestown in Virginia. This ship disembarked not men with dreams of freedom but the first cargo of Negro slaves to be delivered to these shores. American slavery had begun with the enslavement of Indians for gang work in mines and on plantations. It was, strangely enough, a good and humane man, Las Casas, who urged that Negroes be brought to America to spare his persecuted Indian protégés. There was an imperative need for labor on the plantations in the south if those plantations were to "pay off." In fact, so great was the need that, when the supply of Indian captives proved inadequate our southern planters turned not only to Negro slave dealers but to the jails and poorhouses of Europe. Of course, thes? exinmates of the latter institutions have long since been absorbed by the dominant free population of this country, their descendants not infrequently pointing with pride and convenient ignorance to their "colonial connections." But Negro slavery continued on, through the days of the Revolution and for the better part of another century.

True, many thoughtful men in the colonies had uneasy consciences. One of Thomas Jefferson's accusations against the Crown and Lords of Great Britain was that the attempts by the colonists to restrain the slave trade had been checked by the great proprietary interests in Great Britain. The Virginia Bill of Rights said: "All men are by nature free and equal," and outside in the blazing sun toiled the Negro slave. That cup of anguish has been handed on to us, out of the moral blindness of the past. That and our dreams of America as the time and the place for social justice and the freedom of every man.

A few years ago, Mr. Archibald MacLeish published a little book, a poem which he called America Was Promises:

America was promises—to whom?

Jefferson knew: Declared it before God and before history: Declares it still in the remembering tomb. The promises were Man's: the land was his-Man endowed by his Creator: Earnest in love: perfectible by reason: Just and perceiving justice: his natural nature Clear and sweet at the source as springs in trees are. It was Man the promise contemplated. The times had chosen Man: no other: Bloom on his face of every future: Brother of stars and of all travelers: Brother of time and of all mysteries: Brother of grass also; of fruit trees. It was Man who had been promised: who should have. Man was to ride from the Tidewater: over the Gap: West and South with the water: taking the book with him: Taking the wheat seed: corn seed: pip of apple: Building liberty a farmyard wide: Breeding for useful labor: for good looks: For husbandry: humanity: for pride-Practising self-respect and common decency.

And Man turned into men in Philadelphia
Practising prudence on a long-term lease:
Building liberty to fit the parlor:
Bred for crystal on the front-room shelves:
Just and perceiving justice by the dollar:
Patriotic with the bonds at par
(And their children's children brag of their deeds for the Colonies).

Man rode up from the Tidewater: over the Gap: Turned into men: turned into two-day settlers: Lawyers with the land-grants in their caps: Coonskin voters wanting theirs and getting it.

Turned the promises to capital: invested it.

America was promises to whom?

Tom Paine knew.
Tom Paine knew the People.
The promises were spoken to the People.
History was voyages toward the People:
Americas were landfalls of the People.
Stars and expectations were the signals of the People.
Whatever was truly built the People had built it.
Whatever was taken down they had taken down.
Whatever was worn they had worn—ax-handles: fiddle-bows:

Sills of doorways: names for children: for mountains. Whatever was long forgotten they had forgotten-Fame of the great: names of the rich and their mottoes.

The People had the promises: they'd keep them.

They waited their time in the world: they had wise sayings. They counted out their time by day to day.

They counted it out day after day into history.

They had time and to spare in the spill of their big fists. They had all the time there was like a handful of wheat seed.

When the time came they would speak and the rest would listen.

And the time came and the People did not speak.

The time came: the time comes: the speakers Come and these who speak are not the People.

Listen! Brothers! Generation! Companions of leaves: of the sun: of the slow evenings: Companions of the many days: of all of them: Listen! Believe the speaking dead! Believe The journey is our journey. O believe The signals were to us: the signs: the birds by Night: the breaking surf.

Believe

America is promises to America is promises to To take them Brutally With love but Take them.

O believe this!

"America is promises to us-to take them with love." This dream, these promises, I started out by saying, are for me essentially religious. The dream, I think, can be realized only through Love. In the language of religion:

"Social progress is vitally bound up with the experience of co-working with an Eternal Creative Good Will."

Those words were written by one of the major prophets of our time, Dr. Eugene W. Lyman. A prophet whom you and I have the privilege and joy of honoring in his own country. I know of no other philosopher who has in his many writings so clearly, consistently, and with such high inspiration related religion to life. In Dr. Lyman's book The Experience of God in Modern Life he stated:

"The largest issue confronting our time is between an aristocratic, deterministic, nationalistic ethics and the ethics of democracy, of moral freedom, and of internationalism."

Dr. Lyman published that statement in 1918. In 1943 he went on to say, in his Religion and the Issues of Life:

New Board Members

TWO NEW members, Mrs. Edward C. Marshall of L Charlotte, North Carolina, and William Neff, Abingdon, have been elected to the Board of Overseers for six year terms.

With the exception of the college presidents who have been made members of the Board, Mrs. Marshall is the first woman not an alumna of Sweet Briar to be named. Her interest in Sweet Briar covers a good many years, during which several of her nieces (Myra Marshall Brush, '30; Susan Marshall Timberlake, '32, and Mary Marshall Hobson, '24) have attended the college and have been graduated from it.

Active in many community welfare projects in Charlotte, Mrs. Marshall is president of the Board of Managers of the Good Samaritan Hospital, the oldest Negro hospital in America and the only one of its kind in Charlotte.

Mrs. Marshall's interest and her work in connection with this institution led to her connection with the Charlotte Memorial Hospital. She assisted with the entire project from its beginning to the completion of the building, and at present she is the only woman on its Board of directors.

Young people, especially girls, are her particular hobby, Mrs. Marshall admits, and she reports that she is looking forward to renewing her connection with Sweet Briar.

Mr. Neff, a member of the State Board of Education for the last eight years, has also been in the state senate as a representative of Smyth and Washington counties and the city of Bristol for four years. Prior to that, he represented Washington County in the House of Delegates for 12 years.

Education has long been one of Mr. Neff's interests. He began teaching shortly after he received a degree in engineering from the University of Virginia, from which he had previously taken a master of arts degree after winning a scholarship from Emory and Henry College. He taught for several years and then served as principal for a number of years of the high school at Chilhowie, Virginia, before entering upon a business career. At present he is the general manager of a chain of hardware stores in southwestern Virginia.

Both Mrs. Marshall and Mr. Neff will attend their first meetings of the Board of Overseers in the spring.

"The indwelling of the spirit of Christ will give us . . . discernment and strength for meeting the issues of our fateful time. It is our privilege to count ourselves among those for whom the Apostle prayed 'that Christ may dwell in your hearts through faith.' As this prayer finds an answer in our experience, we shall be led into a deepening insight into the meaning of life and of history."

We earnestly desire that your insight may be deepened by the experience of the chapel services during the next six weeks, the series to be called Americans All. We earnestly desire that you may also gain strength to meet the issues, to take the promises, of our fateful time.

has just gone to Bermuda to find a congenial atmosphere in which to start writing a study of Lord Lytton for which she has been gathering material for some time. Miss Boone will soon sail for England, combining a visit to her native land with research on labor policy on international relations. Mr. Smith of the Art Department is working in South America, on a Guggenheim Fellowship.

The Librarian gives us able assistance for such research as we can carry on here in our spare time, by obtaining necessary books on inter-library loans; such aid often facilitates more efficient use of time spent in vacations at research centers. The college budget provides funds each year to help defray travelling expenses for attendance at the meetings of learned societies, and thus enables us to keep in touch with research in our individual fields, and with the current problems and policies of other colleges. The committee on faculty research administers an annual grant to provide for the purchase of books, microfilms, and laboratory equipment needed by individuals for their research. The resulting scholarly output is not impressive in amount, but it is varied, and of sound quality, and represents a fair achievement for the faculty of a small college. In answer to the annual questionnaire sent out by the committee on faculty research, for the year 1945-1946, sixteen of the faculty reported publications in various fields, including major articles and book reviews in a number of important journals, and two books, Mr. Short's edition of Four Great American Novels, and Mr. Wengert's History of the Training Branch of the OPA, a government publication. Three of the faculty are working on their doctoral dissertations, and seventeen others report research in progress, in fields ranging from literature and history to cellulose chemistry, chamber music, the functions and methods of bureaucracy, labor problems, social problems of the aged, and a checklist of the invertebrate fauna of the campus. The two latter show a real concern for the present and future happiness of members of the community. Thirteen of us gave addresses outside Sweet Briar last year, in places ranging from Amherst and Lynchburg to Maine and Paris. Thirty went to meetings of learned societies, state, regional, and national, and several hold offices in these associations. Last summer three taught at summer schools in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and New Orleans, and eight took summer school work, some of these in different fields from those in which they teach, as an inoculation against mental isolation. One divided her energies between electroencephalography and Russian! Two travelled in Mexico, and two in France, and several spent short periods at special study-centers in this country.

The impression you may have formed by this time that the report of our isolation has been greatly exaggerted is borne out by the list of our activities in local, regional and even in national enterprises. Miss Crawford, Mrs. Wailes, Miss Belcher, and Dr. Rice are especially active in various Amherst County agencies, including the Public Health Association, the Red Cross, the Home Demonstration Clubs, and the Planning Commission and Board of Zoning Appeals. Mr. De Rocco is prominent in the latter, and has made an interesting plan for the future development of the civic center of Amherst. Miss Beard has long been active in the Virginia Merit System Council, the Virginia Cancer Foundation, and other state agencies, and both Miss Glass and Miss Beard have been listed in the Richmond Times-Dispatch Honor Roll for outstanding services to the state. Several of the faculty have served on the State Planning Board. Miss Boone was a public panel member of the War Labor Board during the war. Mr. Wengert, having helped demobilize the OPA, is now serving as consultant to the Atomic Energy Commission, and his personal energy enables him to commute weekly to Washington without damage to his work at Sweet Briar. The wide range of interests in which Miss Glass and Dean Lyman participate is well known to the alumnae. Miss Lucas, the internationally-minded philosopher who is now our president clearly belongs, like them, to the peripatetic school in her far-ranging activities, and is well immunized against the infection of isolation.

Isn't it time to find another description for the prevalent atmosphere of Sweet Briar?

Here and Now

SWEET BRIAR enjoyed the opportunity of being host to Dr. and Mrs. Henry Noble MacCracken when the former president of Vassar came to speak at the Freshman Honors Convocation on Thursday, February 20. That same evening Dr. MacCracken spoke at an informal gathering of community members in conjunction with the observance of National Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the Y.W.C.A. He is president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and he was in England last summer to help organize the International Conference. He is also president of the Kosciuszko Foundation, a non-political organization for the furtherance of cultural relations with Poland.

Under the leadership of its president, Margaret Munnerlyn, '47, the Y.W.C.A. carried through a program for Brotherhood Week which began with a chapel talk on Sunday evening, February 16, by Isabel Dzung, marking the World Student Day of Prayer. It continued with an open meeting of Tau Phi in the Browsing Room on Tuesday night at which Eleanor Bosworth discussed the International Student Service organization, Catharine Fitzgerald told of the International Student Organization, and Natalie Hall and Margaret Munnerlyn explained the World Student Christian Federation. Dr. MacCracken's talk on Thursday evening was also a part of the program.

Dates and cars and dancing and gaiety held sway on campus over the week-end of February 7-9, when the sophomores' Midwinter dance was the chief attraction. The gym had been transformed into a bit of Paris for the occasion, and the small gym, where refreshments were served, was disguised as a sidewalk cafe. Joan Johnston, Oklahoma City, was the chairman of Midwinters, and Brantley Lamberd, Lynchburg, was assistant chairman. On the calendar for the week-end was an informal open house in Grammer Common Room on Friday night, an informal dance there on Saturday afternoon, buffet supper in the Refectory preceding the ball, and an open house in Grammer on Sunday afternoon.

The second semester opened minus Mrs. Raymond and Miss Gladys Boone, both of whom have taken sabbatical leaves of absence. Mrs. Raymond sailed on February 1 for Bermuda, where she is continuing her research and writing, and Miss Boone is sailing for England in March. In addition to visiting her family there for the first time in almost a decade, she is working on "labor problems and international relations."

In their places, Sweet Briar has Gerhard Masur, visiting professor of history, and Robert P. Shay, instructor in economics. Dr. Masur, formerly professor of Mediaeval and Modern History at the University of Berlin and now a citizen of Colombia, is distinguished as a scholar and author. Mr. Shay, a graduate of the University of Virginia, is a graduate assistant in the school of economics there. He is also the husband of the former Esther Cunningham, '45.

Four former students, including Sweet Briar's first war veteran, returned to college at the beginning of the second semester. Mary McDuffie, Columbus, Ga., and Mary Virginia Grigsby, Phoenix, Ariz., had been out of college because of illness; Dorothy Wallace, Flossmoor, Ill., attended another college for the last three semesters; Margaret Saunders Jones, Binghamton, N. Y., was recently discharged from the WAC.

After her withdrawal from Sweet Briar two years ago, Margaret took nurses' aide work and a business course, and in June she enlisted in the WAC. She became a medical technician and was stationed at army camps in Seattle, Des Moines, and San Luis Obispo, Calif. Her 15 months of service came to an end last November and she lost no time in getting back to college.

Members of the Paderewski Club at Lynchburg College came to Sweet Briar on February 10 to present A Night of Opera, which included a group of operatic selections and the performance of Mozart's first opera, Bastien et Bastienne. Last fall four Sweet Briar piano students gave a concert at Lynchburg College, and this program was brought by way of exchange.

Sweet Briar's Choir is scheduled to sing at the chapel vesper service at the University of Virginia on Sunday afternoon, March 9. Under the direction of G. Noble Gilpin, their program will include two Brahms chorales and a group from the Russian liturgical music.

The closing hymn on the Hour of Charm program on Sunday, February 16, was dedicated "to the young ladies of Sweet Briar College."

Alumnae in Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore had their first opportunity to meet Miss Lucas when she spoke on February 14, in Philadelphia. Eugenia Burnett, '42, (Mrs. Herman Affel), Elkins Park, Pa., is president of the Philadelphia alumnae.

Now You Can Hear Miss Lucas

Records have been made of Miss Lucas' inaugural address, preceded by the induction ceremony, and they are now available for loan to alumnae groups. The set consists of four records and the reproduction is excellent. The playing time is 30 minutes.

Please write to the Alumnae Office if you wish to borrow the records. Shipping costs are to be paid by the borrower; there is no other expense.

Alumnae in the News

What are alumnae doing? is a question which often comes to the Alumnae Office. Within the last few weeks, the following items have come in and they offer an answer to that question. These are by no means the only alumnae who are engaged in interesting activities; they are merely a few whose work merits attention.

Health educator on the staff of the city health department in Danville, Virginia, is Martha L. Clark, '37, who began her work there on January 1, 1947. Her new occupation does not lack for variety, for she handles the publicity for the health department, helps make up departmental reports, and acts in a liaison capacity between the medical profession and the community, according to the Danville Commercial Appeal. She is reported to have said that one of her professional ambitions is to develop more readable material for the public, booklets with no technical terms and with less information, since so many of these new available are so crammed with information that they confuse the reader.

Martha studied at Duke University following her graduation from Sweet Briar, and took her master's degree there. She then went to Cornell for further study. Later she taught high school biology in Durham, N. C., where she became interested in public health work. Under a fellowship of the General Education Board she spent a year at the University of North Carolina, at the end of which she had won her M.S. in Public Health. Since 1945 she has worked as health educator in Rocky Mount, N. C.

Two volunteers in community service who have made valuable contributions in Lynchburg are Amelia Hollis Scott, '29, and Lucy Harrison Miller Baber, '30. Amelia has just completed a three-year term as Commissioner of Girl Scouts, during which she also had charge of the summer camp arrangements. She did an outstanding job, as witnessed by the fact that she recently received a Thank You badge, awarded for meritorious service by the national organization.

Lucy Baber is given credit for being the originator and guiding spirit of the Child Care Center. A recent issue of the Junior League's Blaze told of her work as follows: "Realizing the need for a day nursery for children of working mothers, Lucy set out to interpret that need to a group of business men who promptly raised $25,000 and gave it to her with the understanding that she would devise a plan to secure and maintain an annual operating income for this institution. Thereupon, she solicited the officials of all the industries in Lynchburg, who agreed to gay a monthly fee for each child at the school whose mother was employed by them. The rest of the operating expenses, which have now grown to approximately $24,000 per year, she obtained from the City Council, Community Chest, church groups, and parents. In its three years of existence the Center has cared for over 80 children and has never been without a waiting list.'

As an outgrowth of this work, Lucy has become convinced of Lynchburg's need for a separate juvenile and Domestic Relations Court with a full time judge, and she is now bending her efforts to aid in its establishment.

Young people and their welfare are also the primary concern of Louise Weisiger, '15, whose appointment as research director for the Richmond public schools, as consultant to the youth affairs committee of the Richmond Citizens' Association, has recently been announced. According to the Richmond Times-Dispatch, facilities for recreational and character-building activities for high school youth and out-of-school youth up to 20 years of age will be surveyed by the committee, which has expressed concern over mounting juvenile delinquency in Richmond. Louise, who received her Ph.D. degree from Columbia University in 1945, was assistant principal of John Marshall High School from 1930 to 1942. Prior to that time she had been head of the Latin department there for a number of years.

From Cleveland comes news about another graduate, Sarah Merrick Houriet, '26, who is serving her community well. In face of the great shortage of teachers, Sarah volunteered to be a substitute in Shaker Heights elementary schools. Requests to fill in for a day or a week, or longer, usually come without warning and often shortly before classes begin. Sarah served her apprenticeship in teaching when she lived in Houghton, Michigan, for two years after her marriage, and since moving to Cleveland she has kept up her interest in schools and school problems through membership in the PTA. Now that the youngest of her three children is in junior high school, she finds teaching on a part-time basis an occupation for which she is qualified.

Another part-time teacher is Alma Martin Rotnem, '36, who teaches first grade in the Chapin School in New York City. In addition to that, she is chairman of volunteers for the Visiting Nurses service in Manhattan and boroughs. Her five year old son, Rickie, goes to kindergarten in the school where Alma teaches, which, she says, makes everything very simple! After her graduation from Sweet Briar Alma attended the National College of Education in Evanston, Ill., from which she emerged with a bachelor of education degree in 1938. She taught in the Greenwich Country Day School and in St. Agatha's School in New York, and since 1944 she has been at the Chapin School.

Bertha Pfister Wailes, '17, who was one of the first women to be appointed to the Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia several years ago, has now been appointed a member of the Executive Committee of that Board. She is also a member of the Committee which is charged with the selection of a candidate for the presidency of the University upon the retirement of Dr. Newcomb. Besides being assistant professor of sociology at Sweet Briar, Bertha is active in many local and state welfare activities.

Martha Lowsley, ex'45, comprises a third of the staff of the New York Medical Society's Veterans' Service. The

Our School in Paris

"Les jeunes filles de Sweet Briar" became the fostermothers of some 700 French school children last fall when they adopted the Ecole de la Rue Balard in Paris, through the auspices of the Save the Children Federation.

Pouring out their gratitude for the aid which has been extended to them, the children have written many letters and sent crayon drawings demonstrating their faith in the "hands across the sea." Their pleasure in having found new friends, as expressed in these letters and illustrations, is truly touching.

Sweet Briar's initial gift of $1,000, pledged before the Relief Drive last October, has long since been paid to the Foundation and its benefits are reaching the school. At Christmas the Y.W.C.A. invited everyone in the community to a carol-sing around the tree in Grammer Common Room. Each was asked to bring gifts for the children, and as a result almost 400 pounds of gaily-wrapped articles of clothing, food, school supplies and toilet articles were sent to the French school.

Anne Dickson, '45, and Jane Lawrence, '46, who are studying in Paris this year on graduate fellowships, have visited the school several times and their letters about it have appeared in the Sweet Briar News. According to them, they had no words to describe the penetrating cold of the school rooms, nor could they describe the warmth of the welcome which the children gave them when they found out that the young ladies came from Sweet Briar! They had to know at once just exactly where Sweet Briar can be found on a map of the United States.

The school actually consists of an elementary division, for boys and girls from two to six; a school for girls from six to 14; a school for boys from six to 17. Located near the Citroen factory in Paris, the school was bombed several times during the war, and it was closed for three years as a result.

Alumnae who wish to share in Sweet Briar's aid to this school should send parcels to the Save the Children Federation Workroom, 8 Washington Place, New York 3, New York, marked as follows: F.S. 1000. (The school is the 1000th in Europe to be adopted by an American school or college).

service aids doctors, returned to the metropolitan area from war activity, in finding offices, residences, equipment, positions, and additional schooling. In their slightly more than a year of work Martha and her two associates have been able to give concrete assistance to 60 of the 1,400 doctors who have applied for help. They canvassed realestate offices, medical schools, prospective employers, hospitals, chambers of commerce, and automobile salesrooms, and from the proverbial scratch have built up an informed directory of solutions to the problems of the doctor-veteran. Full credit for the near-miracle that has been accomplished thus far belongs to the three young staff members who will continue their efforts so long as there are war-displaced doctors in need of facilities for work, living and further study.

Martha was at Sweet Briar for two years, has studied at Columbia University, and is now working for her degree at the New School of Social Work in New York.

MR. BEARD

It is with deep sorrow we have to announce that on December 4, 1946, Mr. John P. Beard suffered a sudden heart attack, and in spite of prompt medical aid, he passed away within a very few minutes. Fortunately Mrs. Beard was with him at the time.

For over twenty years, Mr. Beard served Sweet Briar faithfully and well, and his passing is an irreparable loss. His unfailing loyalty and courage, often in the face of great difficulties, have always inspired his campus associates with admiration and confidence. His integrity and gentle dignity have left an indelible impression on all who knew and honored him, and have made a contribution to Sweet Briar which nothing can erase. Students who have worked closely with him through the years bear eloquent testimony to his helpfulness and wisdom. His sterling character and generous kindliness have endeared him to us all—faculty as well as students and alumnae. We realize that he gave to Sweet Briar the best years of his life, and by that devoted service he inspired in each of us a sense of security and serenity which strengthened and enriched our own daily lives. For this we are deeply grateful. L. S. C.

ACADEMY AND SPECIAL STUDENTS

Class Secretary: MARION L. PEELE, 602 Fairfax Avenue, Apt. 1-C, Norfolk 7, Virginia. Fund Agent: MARGARLT POLIS (Mrs. Henry H. Williams), 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

From the receiving end, it seems to me you haven't noticeably weighed down the mails in sending me news of yourselves since we have been having a letter in the ALUMNAE NEWS. With the broadside in December from our outstanding new Fund Agent, Margaret Potts Williams, a number of you perhaps have been thinking more of our relation to Sweet Briar and that it would be a fine thing if the Academy, too, would wake up to its responsibilities and take this opportunity to grow into a more cohesive group. While the "old grads" will have more place and will bear the brunt of discussions among alumnae along the lines Miss Benedict has suggested in her article and that Miss Lucas so effectively put before us in her letter to all alumnae just before the Christmas holidays, yet the way is open for us, too, to take an active part in whatever ways we can. You will remember that one thing Miss Lucas said was: "You whose lives are centered around children have quite an important career cut out for you!" And Miss Benedict has written recently, "One of my happiest experiences about Sweet Briar is seeing how the academy girls whom we regarded as an integral part of the college, have developed into as fine women as those we put into classes where they had numerals after their names."

At Christmas time it was my good fortune to attend the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in New York. Elsewhere in this issue of the NEws you will read what a really grand party that was, with both Miss Benedict and Miss Lucas present, as well as Miss Guion, Mrs. Dew, Miss Benedict's sister, Miss Agnes Benedict, and so many once familiar faces that it would be a roll call almost to name them. The ballroom at the Biltmore all but overflowed with Sweet Briar, and as always, they seemed just Sweet Briar, with no special regard to time or era.

I had lunch, too, with Clara May Brooks Trickett while I was in New York and there was a lot of time to cover since the very early days of Sweet Briar when we had last seen each other. Clara May is as sweet and gay as at eighteen, and she told me of her daughter, Claralyn, the first student at Miss Spence's to win a scholarship to Radeliffe.

Sue Slaughter sent me the following delightful bit that 1 include for your enjoyment, especially all of you who remember Katherine:

"One golden day in late October I drove to quaint old Gloucester County (Virginia) for lunch and, to my surprise, met 'little' Katherine Withers and her husband, Phil Hamilton, who have retired to that quiet corner of the world and are building a lovely house which they, appropriately enough, will call 'Watermeads'. It lies in a meadow on a point of land running out into the blue York River. While the bricks are being laid, Katherine is doing a lot of transplanting for her garden. She says she has a 'whim of restoring some of the really old flowers and shrubs given around among our family connections in Gloucester in the very early days. My grandmother, who was 102 when she died, gave me a list where each thing in our garden came from, and some of them were from slips brought over from England in colonial days.' Besides the garden, the house, and the husband, Katherine has two fine sons, Phil, who is a school boy, and Peter, 20 years old, and now at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey. Katherine's address is Mrs. Philip W. Hamilton, Naxera Post Office, Gloucester County, Virginia. A Christmas card from Katherine made some comments which will waken a response in most of us, I think. She had received the October Alumnae News and wrote that she thought 'the picture of Miss Benedict is one of the most beautiful faces I've ever seen. It seems to me wonderful to find an older woman's face filled with such beautiful tranquility. Most of the people I see around me now-a-days are not aging well at all. They all get scrawny and harried-looking, or petulantly fat, instead of comfortably plump. Personally, I expect to resemble a dried-up

Inauguration Program

Complete proceedings of the inauguration of President Lucas on November 1, 1946, together with several pictures taken that day, were published as an issue of the college bulletin series in January.

These were not sent to the alumnae because much of the material had been printed in the October Alumnae News, but copies will be sent to all alumnae who wish to have them, upon request to the Office of Public Relations at Sweet Briar.

Commencement 1947

Reunions this Commencement, May 31 to June 2, will be held for the classes of 1917, 1922, 1927, 1932, 1937, 1942, and 1946. Events begin with the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association on Saturday afternoon, May 31. Later in the afternoon is the President's Garden Party for seniors, alumnae, and guests. The first Alumnae Banquet since before the war will be held on Saturday evening.

Sunday morning the Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Dr. C. Leslie Glenn of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, Washington, D. C.

Commencement is scheduled for Monday, June 2, and Dr. George C. Zook, President of the American Council on Education, will be the speaker.

hickory nut, but, at least, I do feel happy behind my expression."

From the Alumnae Office comes word that Anna Norris, formerly of Barnesville, Ohio, on October 12 married Ralph R. Hanlon, a representative of the Chatfield-Wood Paper Company of Cincinnati. Their address is 826 Converse Avenue, Zanesville, Ohio.

We regret to record the death of Delia Lindsay (Mrs. Gilbert P. Bogart), in January. Delia was at Sweet Briar for 4 years, 1910 to 1913.

Fund Agent: Eugenia Buffington (Mrs. Russell Walcott, Tryon, North Carolina.

Christmas vacation in Norfolk was the equivalent of a trip to Florida. Sunshine, warm breezes, camellias (two of them) blooming in Lafayette Park and a mild day for the Sweet Briar luncheon at the old Country Club. Marianne Martin, Marjorie Couper Prince, and I rode there and back with Sue Slaughter. Across the table sat Annie Cumnock Miller, Frances Murrell Rickards, and Miss Morènus.

Before the luncheon 1 chatted with Cilla Guggenheimer Nusbaum and Helen Hobbs Duvall.

We listened to very interesting accounts of Miss Lucas's inauguration and the current events of the college.

Sue Slaughter spoke of the importance of alumnae participation in the educational policies of a college, as outlined in Miss Benedict's article, "Wake up Alumnae", in the October ALUMNAE NEWS.

Sue and I were the only members of 1913 at the Norfolk luncheon, but we saw so many of our contemporaries and near-contemporaries that we felt as if we had been to a reunion.

Speaking of reunions it is not too far ahead to make plans for our own. Isn't 1948 our year? Let's hear from you.

Secretary: Marjorie French (Mrs. Charles L. Nevens), 1430 Bishop Road, Grosse Pointe, Michigan.

Fund Agent:

Anne Schutte Nolt wrote a nice Christmas letter from Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where she and her husband, who is in the lumber business, are building their new home.

I have just heard that Marjorie DuShane Stedman had a bad accident which resulted in a broken back and she is in St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Yakima, Washington. I'm sure she will welcome a word from you all.

I am afraid that's all this time.

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Fund Agent: Lucy Lantz (Mrs. Harry Mc-Kinley), 263 Glenwood Avenue, Englewood, New Jersey.

I am now serving as a Petit Juror in the Federal Court in Philadelphia and, although I'm finding it very interesting, I also find that I have little time left for writing, so will send this off with the little bit of news that has accumulated and hope that you will all provide me with material for my next letter.

At Christmas time I received a card from Emily Kersey, ex15, in answer to my card of last spring. She graduated from Pratt Institute in 1914 and then kept house for her family and later took her B. S. degree at Columbia in 1922. I'm sorry she didn't give me more news of her present activities.

Faye Abraham Pethick, ex17, wrote me in December and suggested that I come to New York Sweet Briar Day luncheon. She said "We seem to be having all the celebrities." Miss Benedict, Dr. Guion, and Miss Lucas were the guest speakers. The temptation was more than I could resist so spent the week-end with Faye and went to the luncheon and had a wonderful time. Among those at my table were Lucy Lantz McKinley, ex15, Gertrude Bilhuber, academy, Dorothy Grammer Croyder, ex17, Helen Schulte Tenney, ex10, Florence Freeman Fowler '19, and many others of later date. After the luncheon Margaret Grant '15, appeared and we fell on each other's necks in true Sweet Briar fashion. Margaret is now with United Nations, working in Economic Affairs. It was a joy to see and hear Miss Benedict and Dr. Guion and I'm sure that everyone was delighted with and impressed by Miss Lucas, who gave us a splendid talk.

Before going to the luncheon I called on Miss Ruth Howland and Miss Charlotte Hull. They expect to retire at the end of the winter term. At present their future placs are somewhat uncertain but they may go to California this winter. Miss Howland has been teaching at New York University and Miss Hull has been teaching violin in New York.

Class Secretary: Cornelia Carroll (Mrs. K. N. Gardner), 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Louise Case (Mrs. C. F. Mc-Guire, Jr.), 3310 Warrington Road, Shaker Heights, Ohio.

We have a letter from Bessie Sims to Miss Dutton which tells its own story:

"I am back in my beloved Nanking . . . I am mission representative, have charge of our property, head up the women's work at St. Paul's Church, supervise the altar work, often doing it myself, teach an English Bible class, and for my ambition in having acquired the degree of Bachelor of Theology before 1 left America, the Diocesan Committee of Religious Education, of which I am a member, has decreed that I write a Teacher's textbook for third grade, prepare the children's material to accompany it, write a book of services arranged according to the Christian year for children's worship, and a book of instructions to teachers. I shall call it "Talks to Teachers."

"I sailed on a freighter from New Orleans, July 3, and arrived in Shanghai September 1. The ship wasn't slow, but we anchored off Ta Ku Bar, the port of Tientsin for nineteen days, waiting for barges in which to unload our cargo of gasoline and kerosene. I was a bit weary of the freighter when finally we left her. If it weren't serious, this inflation of Chinese currency would be amusing. U. S. currency was $1 to $4,150 when our November salaries were exchanged, but when it costs $12,450 a day for food alone and having to pay the cook $150,000 a month, with everything else equally expensive, being a millionaire in Chinese currency doesn't mean anything. The Mission is giving us a bonus every month in order that we may live with a minimum amount of comfort. Coal is U. S. $250 a ton. Wood is somewhat less expensive so I have in my study a contraption which faintly, oh, so faintly, resembles a sheet iron wood stove which can be bought in America for $4 or $5. It cost $85,000 and looks like a black spider on four legs, and a long-legged spider, as it is fourteen inches from the floor. I brought out with me a good bed, a dressing table, and a desk, and even though the Bishop says I'm living in a barn, my barn-which paint will cheer, is not too uncomfortable even with a freezing temperature outside, if 1 concentrate on my study. What a sentence. The room is 68 degrees today since I've sealed up the windows. So by having my meals on a small table close to the stove I'm fairly comfortable. But in the Church there is no heat, and when the organ keys and my hands are cold, I fear the music isn't at its best.'

"It is fun to be back in China. Nanking is rapidly recovering from the effects of war, and if it were not for this dreadful inflation which has made rickshaw coolies and common laborers wealthy and has impoverished the educated classes, . . China would again be her old self. Christian work goes forward!"

Fund Agent: Rosanne Gilmore, 1303 Terminal Tower, Cleveland 13, Ohio.

A long newsy letter from Delia May Gilmore Gates says she has taken up flying "for no good reason except my own pleasure" and she speaks of flying a couple of hundred miles as I would speak of taking a walk. Her older son is still stationed in Japan but her 19 year old hopes to be home soon. Her daughter, who lost her husband early in the war, is home with her 4 year old son. The older son also has a son, so Delia is twice a grandmother. She was a Captain of the Red Cross Motor Corps and an Officer of the Civil Air Patrol in San Antonio during the war.

Florence Gage White writes that she is completely wrapped up in her antique business. She and her husband display at many of the shows in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Chicago. They have one son who was in the army in France and Germany 2¹/₂ years during the war. He was slightly wounded but is home now and in college this year.

A nice letter from Rosanne Gilmore speaks of a visit at Sweet Briar. She keeps busy at the office, a small independent bus company in Cleveland, and keeping house. She saw Rachel Lloyd Holton and her husband this fall hut missed her usual annual get-together with Dorothy Wallace.

Mary McCaa Deal's post card speaks of running a three ring circus but it sounds worse than that to me. In her off time from teaching English and History daily in a private school, she is President of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, attended its meeting to Philadelphia, is Director of the Children's Theater of Nortolk, coaches children in English and Latin on the side, and still manages to run her house and feed a hungry husband. My hat is really off to you, Mary.

Idelle McNeal Covington says she had a wonderful summer with her two sons, home from the service. They are both in college. She also has a son and daughter who are seniors in High School. She speaks of herself as being "fat, forty and grey" but aren't we Elizabeth Lewis Peters writes that she has no news but at least she did write.

This makes 15 of the old class who have answered my appeals and I hope the spirit will move more in time for the next letter.

Fund Agent: Gertrude Thams, 800 Race Street, Denver, Colorado.

Again I dusted off the old suitcase for a trip to the campus, for the Midwinter Alumnæ Council Meeting. The meetings are quite stimulating, and while we all are exhausted after three days and nights of talking and planning alumna affairs we really are actually quite refreshed. Life on a college campus is a little world all its own, and a revelation to us who seem to be caught in a whirl of families and jobs back in our own towns,

Since the last issue of the magazine I have heard from a number of you. Mary Stinson Alexander lives at Lawrenceburg, Indiana, where her husband is a Methodist minister, Her son, and only child, is at Duke. Mary was very ill last summer with a thyroid infection, and in the hospital for months. She writes me that she is well again, and getting back into circulation.

Dotty Job Robinson is enjoying her new teaching job at Heathfield School, Ascot Berks in England. Allie, her daughter, is teaching there also. Dotty has kept up her contacts with other Americans in England. At Thanksgiving, she and her husband attended the dinner and ball of the American Society in London. She wrote of the hardships under which the English people are now living-shortages of food, clothing, and other things which we take for granted. She and Allie are planning to come home next summer for a visit to her mother, who is still living in Ashland, Kentucky.

Christmas always brings me cards from some of you, and best of all are the notes which are written on the back! Flo Woelfel writes that she attended the Chicago Sweet Briar Day party, where she saw Helen Fossum and Ilmyra Pennypacker of our "vintage."

Gert Anderson spent Christmas with her brother in the east. Marg Abraham had the gayest Christmas in four years with all of her children home, Gert Pauly and Bob had a winter vacation in Florida, arriving home just before Christmas. "Lette" reports that her child, Betty, and also "Lette" McLemore Matthew's daughter are at Mary Baldwin this winter. Shelly's card was a picture of little Alice, age 5, and a "chip off the old block!" Kitty Davis' card is always a delight to receive! She designs her own, and it has been fun to watch the Baynum children grow taller each year. Her daughter, Mary, graduates from Endicott Junior College in June, while Bob is at Lehigh, and Grier is in Junior High in Maplewood, New Jersey.

This fall I also had a note from Maynette Rozelle Stephenson, "The grandehild" was to spend the holidays with them, so her cup of joy was running over!

Marian Shafer Wadhams writes, "We announced our daughter Jane's engagement to George Douglas Ward of Rochester, New York, this Christmas. Jane graduates from Wells in June. They will be married this Betty Ioy Cole is now National President of the Special Libraries Association. She is librarian of the Calco Chemical Division of the American Cyanimid Co. in Bound Brook, New Jersey.

Our Cincinnati Sweet Briar Day luncheon was a success this year. Eleanor Finke Helmers, Jane Becker Clippinger, Ruth Ulland Todd, and I took part in an "Information Please" about Sweet Briar, which was a lot of fun. Also Martha von Briesen sent up a number of her beautiful photographs of the campus for a "picture gallery." We always try something different each year. Last year my Ann showed her Kodachrome slides, She has assembled a nice collection in the four years she has been in college. I can hardly believe she is a senior!

Two of my ex-roommates have daughters at Sweet Briar-Ruth Ulland Todd's Betty, and Elizabeth Hodge Markgraf's Betsy are both freshmen, and love Sweet Briar as much as their mammas did.

This finally exhausts my information about the Class of '21. The rest of you take your pens in hand, so I'll have some news for the April issue.

25-Year Reunton, June 1947

Class Secretary: RUTH FISKE, (Mrs. Charles Steeger), 1 Park Lane, Mount Vernon, New York.

Fund Agent: BURD DICKSON, (Mrs. F. J. Stevenson), R. F. D. No. 1, Blackburn, Sewickley, Pennsylvania.

I've been tossed this mantle of class correspondent by Gert Massie and so help me, you'll all have to give with the news or I'll haunt you! So-you'll be hearing from me. In the meantime, of interest.

Loiette Hampton Hume was in New York last winter for a visit. She worked during the war in one of the aviation plants in Atlanta-she always was a star math student. Her son was married this fall and she has a most attractive daughter.

Phoebe Evans Shideler's father died last summer and we all send her our sympathy, I know he was a good friend to Sweet Brian Julia Benner Moss and her husband spent a week with us in Maine last summer. Gert Dally Massie was co-chairman of the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in New York and did a beautiful job. It was a most successful affair, the best we've ever had; an orchid to Gert for her share.

Mary Hackmann Cohill was the only other member of our class there. She has a couple of strapping big sons-very handsome gents.

Hope you are all laying the ground work for your trip back for our 25th-start planning now and make your arrangements with your boss, be he husband or employer.

Class Secretary; Wanted!

Fund Agent: JANE GUIGNARD (Mrs. Broadus Thompson) P. O. Box 480, Columbia, South Carolina.

We extend our sympathy to Jane Guignard Thompson, whose husband died early in January. Jane spent a few days after the holidays visiting old friends at Sweet Briar.

Helen Fossum Davidson writes of her children, Walter, who is 9 and "quite unconcerned over anything not directly related to football," Gail, 13, and Margery, who is to be "exposed to Sweet Briar's charm" this spring in expectation of its winning her as a prospective student.

The class of '23 can well provide the college with alumnae daughters for some years to come, Ellen Brown Nichols' daughter, Ellen Carter, is 8 years old and already talks about going to Sweet Briar, an ambition which she hopes will be realized. Ellen is librarian and head of the English Department of Caroline High School in Denton, Maryland.

Mary Chantler Hubbard is working as head of the field staff of the Study of Child Health Services for the American Academy of Pediatries.

Class Secretary: Wanted!

Fund Agent: FLORENCE BODINE (Mrs. Frank P. Mountcastle) 51 Aberdeen Road, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

It is with great sorrow that we report the death of Dorothy Austin Currie's only son, 19, on the day after Christmas. He was on his way back to his base, having attended his grandfather's funeral in Detroit.

Class Secretary: Frances Burnett (Mrs. Louis Mellen), 22325 Calverton Road, Shaker Height, Ohio.

Fund Agent: Jane Becker (Mrs. John Clippinger) 1263 Hayward Avenue, Cincinnati,

Settle down in a nice easy chair, Children, because this time we really have some news, Last July a wonderful, long letter arrived from Deedie Kirkendall Buchman. She was working hard at the Oakland Pier, U. S. O., helping to entertain troops in transit, with food, games, etc. Her 7, year old son came with her during the summer and helped to unload trucks and run errands. Deedie's oldest son was discharged from the Navy in June. He had a couple of months of high school to finish and future plans were uncertain. Fred, age 17, is a senior in high school and worked on the family fruit ranches in Yakima in the summer. Deedie hoped that Sweet Briar meetings in the Bay area would be resumed this winter.

A card from Pop Graham Hunter reports that their fourth son was born October 1. All is well and he's a great joy. Her only outside activity this winter is as President of the Seven Hills Garden Club. I can't imagine having time for anything outside. Pop must be a marvelous manager.

Mary Sailer Gardner writes, "Betty MacQueen Nelson and her husband spent the night with us on their way back to California. They had driven their two sons east to school. Betty looked wonderful and we surely had a good gabfest." "Sailer's" daughter, Fair, is studying to be a doctor's assistant at Edgewood Park in New York. Joe, Jr., is at the Peddie School in New Jersey. Her main interests are her family, home, and garden. Extra curricular activities include a Bible study class, silver jewelry class, Brownie Scont troop, and volunteer work at the Pennsylvania Industrial Home for Blind Women.

Virginia Whitlock Cobb's daughter hopes to enter Sweet Briar next fall. She and Louise Gibbon Carmichael's daughter want to room together as their mothers did. Virginia's two sons are in college at Davidson, North Carolina. She is President of the Y.W.C.A. in Durham and every Sunday teaches the Business Woman's Class at their church. This Class Secretary job is very inspiring. You all make me feel like a piker!

At long last we have word from Marion Greene Buckelmueller. As you can see she has excuse for not writing. Marion has two daughters, Trina age 11, and Gretchen 8. One brown-eyed pigtaler, and one blue eyed with curls, both blonde (just like their mother, 1 hope). She is chemist in a laboratory, and is also Industrial Editor, runs and writes the plant paper. Then in her spare time she is president of the P.T.A., gardens zealously and collects antiques—and—she still loves Sweet Briar and is hungry for news of her friends there.

Martha McHenry Halter writes that their long anticipated trip to America is materializing. Getting passage on a ship and going through the formalities took longer and was more complicated than Columbus's voyage on the Santa Maria. They sailed December 27 on the Queen Elizabeth. I quote from her letter: "Switzerland remains ordered in a world of confusion and turmoil. Everyone in Europe seems to consider it the isle of the blessed and whoever can crosses its borders for a period of peace and recreation. Last summer there were thousands of foreigners here again and the cities had once more a cosmopolitan air. One still sees, now and then, groups of G.I.'s here on furlough, but they do not come in great numbers as they used to. I suppose many have been able to go home. I am glad for them. With all with whom I talked that was the foremost desire and longing."

I hope some of us will be able to see Martha and meet her family. I get a thrill out of just thinking about what this trip must mean to her.

Mary Dowds Houck is back at their ranch in Sapphire, North Carolina. Dan was with the War Shipping Board and they lived in Princeton, New Jersey, last winter.

Jane Becker Clippinger's daughter, Judy, is registered for Sweet Briar next year. Sally started to junior high this fall and Johnnie is a very active 3 year old. John and the girls have been doing a lot of riding and last summer surprised Mama with a hunter-"Old, thank heaven, but about as big as the Empire State Building. You know my riding days ended 18 years ago and my form just never existed." She hilariously describes the process known as "getting Mom's confidence back" and says never did rainy days look so good to her. It seems she had complained of being a "horse widow" and could eat her words. Never mind, Janie-we'll probably see you in the movies, running the equitation class in the National Horse Show. I well remember you at the Amherst County Fair.

Elsie Muuro Haller started her news on a postcard and ran it on into a long letter. About five years ago the Hallers purchased "Fairmeadow" at Duxbury, Massachusetts. The house has 18 rooms which Elsie mentions because, since their couple left, she counts them daily as she cleans. During the war years they had a big garden, which Ralph worked, and she canned 400 or so jars of food. The land runs down to Cape Cod Bay. Prior to the war Ralph was engaged in putting in air fields in South and Central America. Elsie, Jr., is a senior at Derby Academy in Hingham, Massachusetts. She is an accomplished pianist and has been featured in many recitals. Elsie was head of British Relief Work and also spent several hours weekly in a hut out over the water, as a plane spotter. Quote "I had a telephone over which I tried unsuccessfully to tell headquarters in Boston what kind of plane was coming from whence and going to where but as it only takes a plane about ten minutes from the tip of Cape Cod to Duxbury, by the time I figured the thing out, it had gone to Boston and the operator usually cut me off saving they had all the information. so I don't feel I earned the lovely engraved certificate the air patrol sent me."

Are you all worn out? The letters were so fascinating I'd like to have each one printed but as I am reminded, there are other classes, so, until our next, Happy New Year.

Class Secretary: WANDA JENSCH (Mrs. Welton W. Harris), Greenville, Delaware. Fund Agent: KATHRYN NORRIS (Mrs. Stillman F. Kelley) Babson Park 57, Massachusetts.

The position of class secretary is a very pleasant one. With little or no effort on my part I now have close contact with all the grand "gals" of '26.

Was delighted to hear from Mart Buchman McCoy. She wishes she had some real fascinating news, but admits she leads a pleasant life with the charming husband and daughter, and a million dogs and cats.

Dot Keller Iliff writes that her husband was released from active service last January and went back to Denver to be in business with his father. Dot and her two girls stayed in Pittsburgh with her mother until March, when they could move into their present home.

I envy Lib Rountree Kellerman living in Honolulu these cold days. She lives near the ocean and enjoys swimming and surf bathing. Lib admits she is not very domestic. Can you imagine our Lib cooking or sewing? The Kellermans have 2 boys, Keoki, age 412 and Jimmy, 21/2.

I am sure all of us want to express our sympathy to Helen Adams Thompson, who lost her mother last February. The Thomsonshave a new and permanent home (after 19 years of being shuttled from one spot to another). Helen's son, Bill, is in the Navy and after his 2-year duty he hopes to attend W. & L. for a pre-med course. The little girls, Janeth, 11, and Joan, 9, are busy with G:rl Scouts.

Page Dunlap Dec is in Mt. Carmel, Illinois, at present, but hopes to return soon to live permanently at their winter home in St. Petersburg, Florida. Mr. Dec has successfully drilled 21 oil wells, which he controls from his office in Mt. Carmel. Roy, Jr., is a sophomore at St. Leo College Preparatory School, Florida. Page often sees Virginia Mack Senter who lives in Chattanooga, Tennessee.

I talked to Betty Mocre Rusk who had heard from Peg Rheinhold. Peg is looking for a teaching position in San Diego, California. Betty reports that Marj Shepherd is still with the Red Cross in Washington. She has a new position but Betty could not tell me her title.

Peggy Malone McClements and Ruth Taylor Franklin and husbands visited the Harrises in October, at which time we celebrated Peggy's and my birthday and a jolly time we had. While Peggy and Ruth were with me I entertained the Wilmington Sweet Briar Club at a luncheon to honor Miss Glass, who was in Wilmington to speak to the A.A.U.W.

Kathryn Close '29, is in Pittsburgh again after having served with the U.N.R.R.A. in Germany.

Margaret Krider (Mrs. Gordon Ivey) writes from her new address, Mardon House, Teignmouth, Devon, England: "Life is very heetic these days. When we returned in '44 we spent 9 months in Wales and I hated it. We decided not to return to Kent so sold our home and were lucky enough to find one in South Devon. I love it here—we have always been keen on the sea—and it's a grand place to raise a couple of boys. We are only a 10 minute walk from the front and it is a sandy beach. There is a river (Teign) with a good harbor and we have Dutch and Swedish ships loading with china clay here. Th moors are only 15 miles away and we have had grand picnics there. Our house is an old one, about 130 years old, with walls 2 feet, 6 inches thick. It was bomb-damaged a bit and we had decorators in and out for a year. This Christmas I think we can call the house our own. I have to go shopping every day, that is, if we want to eat. The rationing is very fair and, fortunately, we all like fish. I went on a business trip with Gordon and visited Helen Finch Halford for two days. She is very fit and in the usual high spirits. Both my boys are in good schools now. Jim, 15, is away at college in Shropshire and Harry, 101/2, is a day boy in a prep school here. They were lucky to be placed as all schools are full up and the new Education Act makes it difficult until it gets working properly.'

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. W. B. Crane, Jr.), 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: CLAIRE HANNER (Mrs. Wylie H. Arnold), 2410 Vernon Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Thank you for your contributions to the Alumnæ Fond. Bear in mind that 1947 is a milestone for us. Every alumna I meet advises me to put in a plug for our 20th reunion which I can't do too heartily. I hope cach of you will do some rounding up so that we will appear in great numbers at Sweet Briar in June.

Actually, I've seen Rebecca Manning Cutler, Helen Smyser Talbot, Alice Eskesen Ganzel, Connie Van Ness, Elise Morley Fink, Virginia Wilson Robbins, Elizabeth Cates Wall, Kelly Vizard Kelly since my last writing and am here reporting all looking well and happy.

I wish that all of you could have gone to the luncheon in New York to see, hear and meet Miss Lucas. It is almost unbelievable that one person could have so much. In spite of being very pretty, looking most chic and being very young, Miss Lucas has a commanding personality combined with great charm. Her andience was held spell-bound from the minute she started to speak. In fact, many of us were so carried away that even meeting old friends, which is the usual magnet of Alumnæ meetings, seemed a very secondary part of this gathering.

Most of us seem to be robots of routine, but here is some news from those who are not.

Tootie Maybanks Williams' home must be a good vacation spot, in the fall particularly. Sally Jameson, Claire Hanner Arnold and Billy Quivenberry Marks have all been there for a visit,

New Orleans will be in vogue in the near future with M. Broun Wood as hostess. Caroline Comtpon and Connie Van Ness both have plans. Madeline saw Ruth Annspaugh Daniels when she and her husband were there on a newspaper convention. In the fall Compy ran into Madeline and her grown children in a drug store in Vicksburg. They were on their way to Kentucky for a short vacation.

Margaret Lovett left the Navy last September, after which she and her mother made a trip to California. Of course she looked op Sue Milligan Hitchman and had a grand time talking over the old days. Margaret is back home now making plans for her future.

Betty Miller Allan also went to California last Fall for a short stay.

Camilla Alsop Hyde has moved back to Richmond.

Tabo Brown Hood has been in the huspital for two months with her leg broken in several places, due to a bad smash-up when her station-wagon collided with another car. She managed to go to Asheville for Christmas even though still not well enough for crutches. We hope that when she reads this she will be fit as a fiddle again.

Jo Snowdon Dorham sent me a picture of herself and Ken and the four children gathered around the piano singing carols. I wish you could see it—they are a handsome group—I can tell you. Kenneth is thinking seriously of coming East for his reunion at W. & L., and if he does, Jo will come along. It looks now that our chances of seeing Io at Sweet Briar in June are pretty good.

Speaking of handsome groups you ought to see the picture I have of Elise Morley. Fink and her husband and 4, too.

Daphne Bunting Blair is having a busy year. She is secretary of the PTA, on the hospitality committee of the College Club, and belongs to a Reading Club, and her youngest isn't in school yet! Frankie Sample, who lives in Boston, comes down to visit Daphne occasionally.

Elizabeth Cates Wall is in Florida this winter. At present her husband's work is there. However, to keep track of Cates I think it's best to keep her Spartanburg address.

Beatrice Curson Arndt lives in Chestnot Hills, Pennsylvania. While driving their son David home from Staunton Military School, last June, they visited the college.

Theodora Cheeseman is active in the Red Cross in Cincinnati and does mountains of knitting.

Laura Boynton Rawlings is enjoying her new home at 1601 Neone Drive, Flint, Michigan. She and Elise Morley Fink see one another now and then.

Emilie Halsell Marston has also been visiting in California. There she saw Catherine Johnson Brehme and her family. Nancy Lee, Emilie's daughter, is attending Potter School in Arizona. Emilie wrote from Texas. Recall her home is in Baltimore—she does get around.

Emily Jones Hodge sees Wilmington Sweet Briarites once a month; among them, Esther Dickinson Robbins, Polly Bissell Ridler, Wanda Jenseh Harris, Marion Cross and Janet Bailey.

The Charleston, West Virginia, Gazette had an article recently announcing that Harry Wallace, Lib Mathews' husband, was named West Virginian state chairman of the 1947 March of Dimes. He has long been prominent in civic affairs.

Gretchen Orr Swift is studying for her M.A. at Boston University. Her twins have applied for Sweet Briar for next year.

Jo Plumb Palmer lives in California as you remember. She has been back East several times since she has lived there, coming through the canal twice and flying once. She is now feature editor for a trade publication and is doing some ghost writing for a local newspaper. She and her hosband have just remodeled and enlarged their house.

That's all—keep your eyes and ears open for news and when you get spring fever this year you won't have to think twice about where to go—to Sweet Briar of course—where our hearts are always young and gay. And I might add "You owe it to yourself."

Class Secretary: POLLY McDiarmid (Mrs. Pierre Serodino) Signal Mountain, Tennessee. Fund Agent: Belle Brockenbrough (Mrs. John S. Hutchins), 250 Birch Street, Winnetka, Illinois.

Hallet Gubelman Knowles and Sue Tucker Yates are both the parents of sons as yet not reported in our class column. Hallet's little boy was born on July 12, 1946, and Sue's in October.

Lisa Guigon Shinberger's husband, Baird, has retired from the Army to study for the ministry at the Virginia Episcopal Theological Seminary. They will be living in Alexandria for the next 3 years.

Class Secretary: Sally Realiard, 5525 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis 8, Indiana. Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George Writer, Jr.), 21 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Of course, this magazine is a bit short on recipes, household hints, etc., but won't you admit that it improves your morale and personality, not to mention your conversation when subjects of education are being discussed? When you read the gossip columns and see the names of those companions of the "Best Years of Your Life," don't you have a faint surge of the giddy girlish exuberance that once caused you to sing, scream, and roll in the aisles? If you know any of our old friends who do not realize that even the most modest contribution to the Alumna Fund will bring them, absolutely free, this periodic Refresher Course in Rejuvenation, please pass the word along.

I have been lucky in finding a long-lost member of this outfit, Virginia Dail Mc-Carthy, and am sorry I didn't have her on the list long ago. She was so pleased to be found that she not only sent a nice contribution to the Fund, but invited me to come East and meet an attractive eligible bachelor she knows! (Maybe this job has possibilities after all). Ginny and Fred have two children, Patty, aged 8, and Bill, 6. They live about 15 miles from Manhattan, is Douglaston Manor, Long Island. Remembering them from the days when they lived in Indianapolis, I know they have a gay and happy household and one or two Chow dogs for local color.

Another grand surprise was a letter containing a warm welcome to Newton Centre, Massachusetts from Carolyn Martindale Blouin who has moved there from Montclair. She says they have a 15 acre farm, a 200 year-old house, 3 children, and 0 hired help. So I guess that adds up to a good day's work for that gal. When they moved they took with them a little new member of the family, Craig Van Arsdale Blouin, whom they had acquired in June, 1946, and who now is undoubtedly Lord of the Ancient Manor.

Carolyn gave me some statistics we certainly should have had some time ago of other arrivals this year: Agnes Sproul Bush has her third, a girl, born last spring; Lucy Shirley Otis had her third (girl? boy?) last summer; Kathryn Graham Seiter her fourth child; Mary Huntington Harrison, her third daughter and fourth child, born January 27; and Gwendolyn Olcott Writer's boy, born last spring is her third child. You would think that at least the Fund Agent would be on speaking terms with the Class Secretary!

In addition we have had two weddings. Emilie Turner was married on October 19 to Samuel Willis Cowling, Jr., and they are living in Newport News, Virginia. Marjorie Sturges became Mrs. William R. Moose, Jr., on December 21. She is living in Detroit, Michigan.

Class Secretary: MARTHA McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman), 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio.

Fund Agent: PERONNE WHITTAKER (Mrs. Robert Scott), 648D Beverly Road, Teaneck, New Jersey.

Once more I take my pen in hand to record the news. Thanks to the assistance of my new secretary, namely, my ten year old Jane, I managed to get the cards out on time. Since it is an acknowledged fact in this family that her hand writing is much more legible than mine I think I will take her on permanently.

A card from Jean Countryman Presba last September announced the arrival of a son, David Bert, born last May 24th. This is Jean's second child. I was sorry to learn that Jean's father had been quite ill, necessitating an operation, so early fall had been a difficult time for her.

Another recent arrival is a son born to Marion Murphy Munz last April. Prior to his advent, Marion had held a position as an Engineering Draftsman for Corning Glass, but is finding her present job of housewife and mother much more to her liking.

Right on the heels of Marion's letter came a card from Sally Perry Dorfeld, Marion's roommate at Sweet Briar. As you may recall, several years ago a truck crashed into the side of Sally's house, causing her such serious injury that she was laid up in the hospital for months. She writes that she is much better but still unable to drive a car or do much walking. Luck to you, Sally, you've had a long siege.

Helen Sim Mellen had a most pleasant surprise last September when Fanny O'Brian Hettrick and Gert Prior dropped in on her. The former is now living in Plainfield, New Jersey, and Helen writes that she has a beautiful home, with lots of room for those "three very fine boys." Helen's son is now four years old and attending nursery school and, like most youngsters his age, he is full of energy and Helen rather welcomes those leisure hours.

Natalie Roberts Foster was still in Arlington, Virginia, when I heard from her in November but thought she might be back in Ohio by the first of the year. Her 6 months stay near the capital city has been a real thrill, along with enjoying several nice visits with Ellen Eskridge Sanders and sister, Elizabeth.

From a different Arlington (did you know there is one in New Jersey too?) came a note from Jane Tucker Ferrell. She is still busy with P.T.A., church and Red Cross work, and keeps slim rounding up her three children—Harry 12, Bonnie 9, and Tommy 2.

Ever faithful Polly Swift Calhoun reports that all four of her children are now attending school or nursery class and her biggest worry at present is "fractions." Wait 'til you start wrestling with Algebra and Latin declensions, Polly.

Caroline Heath Tunstall is now permanently settled in Bristol, Virginia, having bought a house and planted a garden. That not being enough to keep her occupied, she is teaching sixty-five first graders. Her one Sweet Briar contact has been Miss Willa Young, who is secretary of the Y. W. there.

Ginny Quintard Bond keeps busy caring for her two sons—Ted and Whit (ages 7 and 5). They attend school mornings but there is no afternoon session so her public life is practically nonexistent except for odd jobs for Red Cross and Community Fund. She had just entertained the Cleggs for dinner as a farewell gesture prior to their leaving Boston. Joe is temporarily located in Baltimore and Carolyn attends the Grier School out of Philadelphia and Stewartie divides her time between them and her former home in Dayton. All the Cleggs got to Dayton for the holidays and we had a grand reunion with them one evening when they came up for dinner, bringing Carolyn, whom Shippy enjoyed esquiring around. Seemed kind of strange for the four of us to be sitting home quietly while our offspring were out "on the town."

Marjorie Webb Maryanov and husband are finally settled in Cambridge, Maryland, where the latter has opened an office and is practicing medicine. Marjorie finds that being a doctor's wife is sort of hectic but better than army life any time.

Nancy Worthington is still the most travcled female I know. When she last wrote she had just returned from attending a meeting in Asheville, North Carolina. While there, whom should she run into in the clevator at the Battery Park Hotel but Jane Mublberg Halverstadt and husband, who were there to enjoy the golf and a few days of leisure. Nance added that Jane looked even lovelier than May-Queen days.

Another faithful contributor who always manages to cram loads of news on one card is Peg Ferguson Bennett. She and Joe had had a pleasant summer, first enjoying a visit from Miss Gladys Boone of the Sweet Briar faculty, then they took the children and visited Peg's sister, Meredith Ferguson Smythe, '29, in northern Michigan, and from there to Wisconsin for a visit with loe's family.

Plans for attending Miss Lucas' inauguration were cancelled due to Olivet College having Homecoming on the same date. Olivet has a number of foreign students this year, among them a Danish lad who was interviewed by Miss Stockholm in Denmark this summer. Also, there are boys from Guatemala, Germany and Nigeria, and girls from Persia and Haiti.

Helen Laurence VanderHorst and family have moved from Macon to Philadelphia where they have been settled for a year. They all love it and Helen has attended one Sweet Briar luncheon and is looking forward to her next one.

A Christmas greeting came from Nancy Coe. Thanks, Nancy, and please write about yourself sometime soon.

Jean Cole Anderson sent her usual breezy and refreshing letter. At last she and her husband have bought a home after "nomading" all summer and fall between her sister's home in Memphis and her mother's place in Georgia. Jean hopes they are settled for a while, at least, until it is possible to build. She and Elizabeth Forsyth '26, attended the luncheon for Miss Lucas in October. There she saw Peg Harding '29, Mary Nice Jemison ex'31, and Alwyn Redmond Barlow '29.

A most interesting letter came from Evelyn Mullen. It seems that my card was the first piece of mail to greet her on her return from Germany.

As you may recall, Evelyn became an Army librarian in April, 1943. After attending several camps here, she and four other girls went overseas in July of 1945, flying to Paris for some special training, then on to Heidelberg for assignments. Two girls and she were sent to the 7th Army and from there to the 7th Infantry Regiment of the 3rd Infantry Division, with headquarters in Hersfield, which is located 45 miles south of Kassel and 90 miles northeast of Frankfort (near the Russian Zone). Her area was 150 miles long by 50 miles wide and, with the use of a Bookmobile, she covered that territory, distributing reading matter to our soldiers. The work was constant but interesting and she enjoyed three nice vacations: a ten day leave in England, a three day leave to the Bavarian Alps and three days at the Salzburg Music Festival. In spite of her many interesting experiences Evelyn was glad to get back on American soil and says she is anxiously awaiting the next alumnæ magazine so she can catch up on the news.

Had hoped to meet Polly Woodward Hill in Cincinnati for luncheon early in December but a last-minute change of plans spoiled our reunion. Am still hoping to see her before she and Bob and young Jane take off for the usual Florida trek. Her younger daughter, Barbara, and nurse have already joined Polly's family there.

In October, I deserted my family and domestic duties long enough to have a full week in New York. Had planned to call some of you in the suburbs for a brief chat but my good intentions all went hay-wire, when I found myself flat on my back with gastric enteritis for three days. Once on my feet, I did manage to see several show; and do a little Christmas shopping and a lot of window shopping but I felt too deflated to work up much enthusiasm.

Guess this winds up the news for the present and let me wish all of you a belated Happy New Year, with a sincere wish that among your resolutions, you who have been remiss in answering my cards will do so more promptly instead of pushing them in a cubby hole of your desk to gather dust. What would happen to this column if all of you did that?

15-YLAR RLUNION, JUNE, 1947

Class Secretary: Charlotte Magorian, Box 56, Deerwood, Minn.

Fund Agent: Marcia L. Patterson, Kent Place School, Summit, N. J.

I'm not particularly proud of the response I got this time; being Scotch inside and out, I'm moved to remark that it seems like a darned waste of perfectly good postcards. Well, anyway . . .

Marcia Patterson is still a school-marm during the week, and undergoes stiff counteractive treatment at home on weekends by devoting herself to her 7 year old cousin.

Marcelle Dominique Perrot, ex'32, sent this snapshot of herself, her daughter, Martine 4, and her son, Dominique, 2, which was taken last summer. They live in southern Erance, not far from the place where the initial landings by the Americans were made in the summer of 1944. If you wish to write to her, her address is: Mine, Maurice Perrot, Chemia des Deux Portes, Martigues (Bouches du Rhone) France.

First, I've a wedding to report, as of April 27, 1945—which shows you how I keep up with the world. Emma Knoulton Humphreys is now Mrs. Stuart B. Lytle, and is living in Chicago. Not only that, but Robert James Lytle II arrived March 17, 1946, a very appropriate date, as I'mma remarked, since he is named for his Scotch-Irish grandfather. I'mma's daughter is almost 10, and in the fifth grade.

From Harrods Creek, Kentucky, Sally Shallenberger Brown wrote with enthusiastic anticipation that she and Lyons were going to Mt. Tremblant in Canada on a skiing trip later this winter. Sally is carrying on her painting, and has recently built a studio at the back of her garden.

Lib Donghtre Bethea and her older daughter forsook Memphis in November for a two-week holiday in New York. On the way home, they stopped in Washington to visit Ted Clary Treadwell, had lunch with Marian Malm Fowler, and Ruth Remon Wenzel, and saw Annabel Essary Ansell ('33). Lib wrote glowingly of Miss Lucas' visit to Memphis and of the tea at Virginia Fineb Waller's, which gave all the Memphis alumnae an opportunity to meet Miss Lucas.

Ruth Wenzel's life certainly sounds like a full one. She has a part time job in social service with the Washington Heart Association, and this winter she has also been helping to raise money for the equipment fund of the new George Washington University Hospital. Plus a home to care for and two children, aged 5 and 7, to "raise up."

Gussie Gilbert Davy has become a confirmed Californian, from atop her mountain just above Berkeley. Her two children are 8 and 10, and now that they're old enough to look out for themselves a little, Gussie is taking advantage of her freedom by doing San Francisco thoroughly.

Alice Weymouth McCord's family spent last summer at her mother's home on Long Island, and in September went to their farm in Vermont, their first visit there since 1941. Alice's daughter started to school this year, and Alice intimated that she's feeling her age. Mamma, not daughter. As who isn't, it says here and not in small print.

Jane Hays Dowler says she leads a quiet life, but knowing of the existence of Steve, 5, and Penny, 4, I doubt it. The Dowlers have recently acquired a lake cottage which they are going to do over, and that sounds like fun.

Ginny Squibb Flynn and Jim have been living in Massachusetts for over a year and still aren't used to all the snow. (You should try a January in Minnesota). This past fall they were in New York, where they met Sue Burnett Davis and had a big time doing the rounds.

Tetha Morris Wood wrote that she had nothing exciting to report. Letha has two prospective Sweet Briarites, Lee and Nancy, and if her days aren't exciting, I'll wager they aren't dull, either.

The first of December, Betty Allen Magruder began a two-year residency at the New York State Psychiatric Institute. She says it's exactly what she wanted and intensely interesting work. Uncle, anything implying that much knowledge and responsibility is positively awesome.

I can report first-hand on Alice Dubney Parker, Helen Pratt, Graff and Eleanor Wright Conway, for I saw them all when I went east on my long-anticipated and thoroughlyenjoyed vacation last October. Helen was just up from a nasty bout with pneumonia which had her down for several weeks, but she and El and I put in a full afternoon of talk out at her house, nevertheless. I spent several days at the Parkers' and had a grand time with Alice (who doesn't look a day older) and Johnny and their two girls, and I was with El Conway and her girls over a week, Ted had flown to Tokyo for a month; a later report from El says he got back safely but that his baggage was stalled . . . I wonder if it ever turned up.

How about reunion, you people? Congealed and practically snowbound as I am at this point, the thought of Sweet Briar and climbing roses and honeysuckle and birds singing and cokes in the dell and strawberry sundaes at the Inn seems like something out of a dream. So help me, I'm going back and prove that it isn't . . . or else. And since a number of the rest of you evidently feel the same way, I'm looking forward to it even more.

Class Secretary: Wanted!

Fund Agent: Sue Graves (Mrs. William K. Stubbs), 2105 Island Drive, Monroe, Louisiana.

Needed: Class secretary! Won't somebody collect the news for the class of 1933?

Sue Slaughter, class of '13, sent us a letter telling of one of our long unheard-from exes, Augusta Wallace Handel. Miss Slaughter writes:

"After leaving Sweet Briar, Augusta Wallace, ex' 33, attended Vassar, the Sorbonne, and Columbia (where she got her degree). Then followed an interesting career on the stage and in 1942 she married Leo Handel of Vienna. She has one son, Tommy. They live at 154-17 Ash Avenue, Murray Hill, Long Island . . . (I hope that she may) participate with the New York Sweet Briar Club in its discussion of education at Sweet Briar. Surely one who has tried 4 colleges has a good deal of perspective by which to judge what is useful in higher education and what isn't!"

Class Secretary: Marjorie Lasar (Mrs. E. R. Hurd, Jr.), 425 North Hanley Road, St. Louis, Missouri.

Fund Agent: Julia Sabler (Mrs. Calvert de Coligny), Bon Air, Virginia.

Tacky's second little boy, Prentiss, junior, was born November seventh, but I have had no further word from her since that momentous day.

Helen Bamford writes that all her family keep well and they have had a wonderful time skating on their flooded tennis court. Nan Carter says she keeps busy with her four with the usual round of colds and tonsils to come out.

Martha Lou and her husband spent Christmas in Springfield and Marcia writes that her mother came to Temple to spend Christmas with her family.

Mary Moore Rowe writes that she and her husband are settled in Brookline she saw Beanie when she was in Cambridge visiting her sister and she also occasionally sees Langhorne Watts Austen and her three children.

Bonnie and Lib write glowingly of the Sweet Briar Day in New York during the holidays. There were ten from '34 including Looise Greenwood Lippitt, Fig Newton Hollis, Emilic Emery Washburn, Smot, Jill Bender and Julie. They were quite carried away with Miss Lucas and I am hoping she will wend her way westward so we can have a glimpse of her here.

Cookie writes of a pleasant Christmas and the Rose Bowl game and parade.

Betty Suttle Briscoe says that she and Mary McCallum Neill had two days together in New York this past November. Mary lives in the same apartment house and her husband is at the New York Hospital; they spent Christmas in Laurel, Mississippi. Julie and her family came over at Thanksgiving to see Betty when they were in Bryn Mawr visiting her sister. Betty and family are moving in February to Bala-Cynwyd. She also hopes to come out here to a medical convention next fall which sounds grand to me.

Our life pursues its even (!) tenor from day to day punctuated by the advent last September of a baby dachshund which has been a lot of fun. That seems to be the high point in the local news. Please write again soon.

Class Secretary: Jacquelyn Strickland (Mrs. Edward J. Dwelle, Jr.), 4910 Arapahoe Avenue, Jacksonville 5, Florida.

Fund Agent: CYNTHIA HARBISON (Mrs. Carl W. Heye), 26 Lawrence Street, Scarsdale, New York.

Thanks to you who answered my cards. It was good hearing from all of you. Before the year is over, I hope to have written everyone, so please do drop the "return" card in the mail. I want the names of the whole class to appear in print.

Elizabeth Crawford sent me a clipping regarding her musical activities. I know you are as interested and proud as I, so I pass it on in its entirety:

"Interviewed by the Intelligencer, Miss Crawford reported a busy schedule for the New Year. Under the auspices of the United State Department of State, she will make a concert tour of the Middle East with the invitation of the British and other governments there. She made quite a success in singing there two years ago fur the G. 1.'s and they wish her to return. There is also an invitation from the Greek Government, which she was unable to accept.

Meanwhile, concert engagements are increasing. Her recent appearance as guest artist of the welcoming party for the United Nations representatives, at the Waldorf, received very favorable comment in the New York press. She is also doing considerable radio work, particularly in introducing the songs of Grace L. Austin. Negotiations are under way for making records for Columbia.

'It's a toogh life, but a good one!' Elizabeth told us. "We all work hard. Really excellent singers of all voices are about a dimea dozen in New York, but all carry on valiantly."

Anne Baker Gerhart writes that her two children, Anne, 3 years, and Peter, 18 months, plus Howard, keep her busy. Besides these minor duties, she is teaching a class of Junior League provisionals. The Gerharts hope to get in a little skiing this winter—and with the February blizzard I imagine it is their means of transportation for a while.

John Bryant wrote a note for Kitty Brandt Bryant to say that young John Bryant, Jr., had her occupied at the moment. (Junior arrived on November 4.) The Bryants have a daughter, Carol, 4 years old, and are living in Grand Rapids.

Betty Klinedinst McGavran is living in Columbus, Ohio, where her husband is practicing Internal Medicine. He received his discharge from the army in May.

Martha Jane Gipe Smith has 3 boys, Fritz, 8 years, Tom, 6, and Davy, 4. She and Betty Fox Moon see each other often. Betty has 2 children, Lynn and Tony.

Marguerite Duval McGinnis has moved to Lynchburg where her husband is with the L G. Balfour Co. Marguerite says she has two boys, Mac, 7, and Deane 3,—"both Tarheels, but will make excellent Virginians, I hope . . . I promise not to wait five more years to answer one of your cards." Anyone else inspired?

Cary Burwell Carter's mother answered my card to say that Cary and Nick are back at the Gilman Country School, Roland Park, 10, Baltimore. Cary has been doing some refereeing in basketball. She has two children, Anne 5½ and Francis III, 3. Cary and Nick were here in Jacksonville during the war and we enjoyed seeing them.

Alice Laubach wrote from Asheville that she was in the market for some gardening helpers. If anyone is interested—and Asheville in the spring is wonderful—please write Alice.

Jerry Johnston Clute is busy. I quote, "We're about to dig in for the long winter months. A group of 34 men and girls have formed a choral group and we're going to try some Fred Waring arrangements. Also, I have my 99 Girl Scouts—16 Leaders and 22 on my Committee to keep me jumping. The March of Dimes is on now and I'm distributing boxes for that. And what with Sunday School classes, Hospital Guild, Bridge Club, and a very congenial good-sized group of young people around here, we really keep busy in this small town."

Dorothy Barnum Venter says that they are out of the Navy now and settled permanently in their house by the sea. She has two children, Mary Lou, 7½ and Si, 15 months. She saw Cynthia Harbison Heye and her two children recently.

Eleanor Elliott Scott sent me a picture of her 3 attractive youngsters at Christmas. Lida Voigt Young manages a letter occasionally Class Secretary: Atini Stump, 125 East 84th Street, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent: Francis W. Gregory, 185 Upper Mountain Avenue, Montelair, New Jersey.

I am taking over with grave misgivings. I ven now I am not receiving the co-operation I'd hoped for. Few of my penny postals have been answered. Please write me bits of news about yourselves and others in our class. Thanks.

Attention magazine readers! Phoebe Pierson Dunn is on Page 1 of the January "Ladies' Home Journal." The Dunns and their two children, Suzanne (7) and Judy (4) are living in Darien, Connecticut, along with rabbits, cats, dogs, and a horse in the barn.

Nancy Parsons Jones's little girls, Suzanne (5) and Margot (2) are growing by leaps and bounds. Suzanne started kindergarten this fall and loves it. Nancy and her husband, Vincent, took a delightful trip to Canada this fall.

A recent telephone conversation with Grissy Deringer Plater was frequently interrupted by the happy voices of her two boys, Marck (1¹2) and Zygmunt (3¹/₂). Grissy is the president of a nursery school composed of forty-two little ones from Jackson Heights. She hopes to see Helen Rae Wainwright during the holidays. Helen, her husband and two children, Harris, Jr. (6¹/₂) and Sarah (4¹/₂), have recently moved to Tuckahoe, New York, from Manchester, New Hampshire.

Thank you, Ruth Gilliam Viar, for your nice letter. Ruth is busy with her children who are now going through the cuwboy age. Neal is in the third grade, Elizabeth in the second.

Emily T. Bowen was married December 14, to George Wesley Muller, Jr. He served 2½ years in the Air Force and has resumed his position with the National Sugar Refining Company in its New York offices.

Mary Agnes Young became Mrs. Thomas Turner, Jr., in October. They are living in Mt. Ranier, Maryland.

A fourth son, Malcolm Tyler, was born July 25, to Kathleen Donoline McCormick, Virginia Rutty Anstice adopted a son, who has been named Gardner Reynolds Anstice.

Jane Marquardt Murphy and her doctor husband are living in Montelair, New Jersey, where Gordon is now practicing. Their two children are thriving. Bobby is now 2¹2 and Nance 1. Jane writes that Ellie Krekeler Chrisman was living in Bainbridge, Maryland, the last she heard. Ellie has three, two girls and a boy.

News of Alva Roof Bound comes directly from her husband whom I saw several months ago at a Navy reunion, Alva was Chairman of the Mt. Kisco Chapter of the Red Cross during the war. Although she is busy with her children, Aida (9), Charles (7), and Alva (3), the finds time to sing in the church choir with none other than Julia Sadler '34.

Nancy Brashell Holderness is living in Tarboro, North Carolina. Nancy has three: boys 6 and 4, and a little girl, 2, and, according to Nancy there are never less than seventeen others in the house.

Aside from her duties as a Sweet Briar Council member, Alma Martin Rotnem is teaching at the Chapin School in New York City and is Chairman of the Volunteers for Visiting Nurses' Service in Manhattan and boroughs. Alma's little boy, Ricky, recently celebrated his fifth birthday. Alma saw Ada Denton Roberts at Madison, Connecticut, this summer where she was enjoying the week-end with her newly returned Navy husband.

Muggy Gregory Cukor, my next door neighbor, spent New Year's Eve with George Anne Jackson Slocum at Beacon, New York. G. A. has a boy, Jack, 2½, and twins, Julie and Jim, a little over a year old. Another near neighbor, Adele Bouman Smith, finds her time fully occupied with little Adele (4½). Midge Sylvester, I'm told, is likewise living nearby and is at present active in radio work in New York.

Libby Hartridge is once again a member of our New York roup. During the war Libby, a Lieutenant in the Waves, did personnel work in the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts in Washington. When released from active duty in April, 1946, Libby went to California.

The New York Sweet Briar Day was a tremendous success. Our class was poorly represented as Jeanne Grandeman Losee and I were the only two present. Jeanne, looking lovely as always, has 2 boys, Tommy (6) and Alan (2). Despite her busy life, she finds time to study music.

As for me I'm thoroughly enjuying a two weeks' vacation from my nine year old school boys and am looking forward to many letters from all of you in the near future. "A college", dear thirty-sixers, "is as strong as its alumnae."

10 YEAR RIUNION, JUNE 1947

Class Secretary: HARRIEI SHAW, 221 Highbrook Avenue, Pelham Manor, 65, New York.
Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S.
Chase), Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

I hope you will begin to plan now to return to campus this spring for our tenth reunion. Remember what we used to say when we were in college when the alumnae returned! However, I have just met Miss Lucas and came away so thrilled, and with my interest in Sweet Briar so rejuvenated, that I know a trip back to see her and what she is doing, combined with the pleasure of meeting old friends, would be an inspiration to us all.

In New York at Christmas I saw Sid Gort Herpers, May Weston Thompson, Rosalie Hall Cramer, and Bobbie Jarvis. Sid and May seem contented suburbanites, while Lee and Bobbie are active business-women. Fred is still with the occupational forces in Germany, so that Lee is running the family business solo.

Anne Lemmon enrolled January 6 in a school of merchandising in New York City and will reside at the Hotel Le Marquis on East 31st Street for some months.

Polly Lambeth Blackwell is back home in Winston-Salem with her 2 children. Lawyer husband, Winfield, has recently been elected to the North Carolina Legislature, so part of Polly's time will be spent in Raleigh. She has recently joined the Junior League in Winston-Salem.

Marjorie Cruiksbank Truxtun was married to Holmes Morphy Dyer July 31, 1946. They are living in Atlantic Highlands overlooking the ocean on the Jersey Shore,

Some old news about some comparatively new people—to Anna Mary Charles Straub came a son on July 11. His name is Jackson L. Straub, III. And Morev Shepard is the daughter of Vera Searcy McGonigle; she was born July 30.

Natalie Lucas Chase lost her father suddenly this Fall. He was a prominent and much-loved physician in South Carolina.

I resigned my job in Wall Street this spring, and have been recuperating from an over-dose of subwayitis. Late in January I am flying to Puerto Rico for an indefinite stay with friends. It is my birthplace and I have not seen it since I was seven, so I am very much excited. When I return I hope to help rejuvenate alumnae activities here in Westchester County. I would like to hear from any of the rest of you who are active in alumnae groups and perhaps we can exchange ideas. Do be sure to re-read Miss Lucas's and Miss Benedict's articles in the October Alumnae News.

There are still many members of our class who appear to be lost. Will you help out by sending me any address-changes since October 1 that you know about?

Class Secretary: DOLLY NICHOLSON (Mrs. John A. Tate, Jr.), 212 Middleton Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Fund Agent: Janet MacFarlan (Mrs. Charles Bergmann), 244 Ackerman Avenue, HoHoKus, New Jersey.

The sympathy of us all is with Mary Alice Berckmans at the untimely death of her husband David Bush Canby in November. Mr. Canby, an expediter for the Dupont Company in Wilmington, had been ill for several munths.

On December 29 the engagement of Sarah Lou Taylor, ex'38, to Dr. Thomas Gephart was announced, Louise Bailey McGuire was married last July 20 to Edward P. McDermott. Her address in Montelair is the same.

Your class secretary Dolly Nich, whose son was born December 30, will no doubt be with you again in April.

Class Secretary; BETSY CAMPBELL (Mrs. Robert S. Gawthrop, Jr.) 326 West Miner Street, West Chester, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agents Yvonne Llggett (Mrs. D. L. Dyer) Alger Court, Apt. 5-G, Rivermere, Bronxville, New York.

Just couldn't face sending out postals this time, but come March I'll shoo them off once more, so send along the news then, won't yoo? Happy came through with a grand letter, though emerging from a bad siege of ptomaine poisoning. She wrote of Rilma Wilson's wedding December 30, where she sat across the table from Vesta Murray Haselden and her husband. The general wedding commotion was added to by the announcement of the arrival of a son to Jack and Dolly Nicholson Tate. Jack is Rilma's cousin.

Hap heard from Henri Minor Hart in White Plains, and she often sees Becky Wright Myers who lives three doors away. They take turns transporting their children to a kindergarten, largely composed of Sweet Briar alomnæ children. Snooks' Robinson McGuire's oldest, and Martha Matthews Munroe's older daughter are among them. Sister Mary is still playing in "Apple of His Eye" and is on tour with the Theatre Guild. Mary sees many S.B.C. friends, who all must get as big a thrill from seeing her back stage as I did. Happy herself is occupied with her children, Richard 4½ and Charlotte Observer.

Tragic news from Virginia Wacr Busser. Her husband, Dr. Anton Busser, died suddenly of a heart attack November 17. She will remain in Auburn, Indiana, with her two daughters for the present. I know everyone joins me in sympathy for Virginia at this sad time.

Lots of babies! John Victor, Jr., born December 27, to Mary Jeff Welles Pearson. His sister, Betty, is 19 months old. Philip, son of Lee Montague Joachin, was born December 11. Elizabeth Lane is Jean Oliver Sartor's new daughter. George Rogers was born June 11 to Margaret Roger Willis.

Marion Mann Murray married Dr. Stuart Zeh Hawkes in October. They are living in Boonton, New Jersey.

Helen Cary Stewart and John have bought a house in Hohokus, New Jersey.

Mary Frances Buchanan Flowers is at home with her mother who is very ill. I know you all join me in hopes for her recovery.

Marguerite Myers Glenn wrote in October, too late for the last news. She is in Long Beach, Washington, where she had a glorious summer at the beach with Frankie and Guy. They have a large farm; grow raspberries, blueberries, strawberries, and specialize in rhododendron and artichokes. She was bosy freezing the luscious produce when she wrote. She told of the Salmon Derby held annually at the mouth of the Columbia River. Tents are pitched for the fishermen who compete for a grand prize of $1,000. All shared in the catch of salmon which average 25 to 30 pounds each.

Julia Ridgeley Peacock has had some lovely trips since last we heard from her—Maine, Southern Pines, a visit with Anne Espach Weckler in Detroit, and she attended Nancy Gatch's wedding. Nancy has taken a job in connection with the hospital in Rochester. Julia is now doing part-time secretarial work for the husband of a friend. She works with a soundscriber, and says she feels like a typist, switchboard operator, and street-car conductor all rolled into one.

Boot Vanderbilt Brown raved about Miss Lucas's Sweet Briar Day speech, and says that the New York contingent all wishes they were 10 years younger.

I was thrilled on Sweet Briar day to hear about the French school Sweet Briar has adopted. Or do you all know about it? The students raised $1,000 for it last fall. Clothing for boys and girls, ages 6-14, dried fruits, rice, and chocolate, soap, toothpaste — anything is welcome, and these are to be sent to Mary Stuart McGuire at Sweet Briar. I have been working with the church and the Emergency Aid for foreign relief, and heifers are the most unique contribution we've had. The crying need of all Europe and China continues and one only wishes her resources were unbounded.

Sweet Briar Day was grand. The students were so attractive, their reports so vivid and inspiring; we're representing one fine college, ladies!

Fund Agent: MARGARET WOODS (Mrs. Louis C. Gillette), R.F.D. No. 1, Norwalk, Connecticut.

There seems to be a whole new crop of wee ones to report. As a matter of fact, some of them might be about to enter Sweet Briar, or at least old enough to toddle around the boxwoods by this time. However, their appearance was unknown to me. Jane Baker Grant's daughter, Victoria Ann, arrived 'way last August. Blanche Fleming Gray's son, Frank Biddle, Jr., was born last July. Jean Blount Blount is the mother of a little girl. Connie Currie Fleming had a son, Richard Elliot, Jr., as of September 10. Irene Wychoff Gustafson's son, David, was born in August. Richard John Both, Jr., met his sister, Blair Bunting, on November 21. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. McBride (Marion Daudt) are rejoicing over the birth of their child, Patricia Ann, who was born on December 6. One bright cheerful day in October, Lawson Turner, Jr., called me to say that Frances Moses Turner would be unable to attend our party that afternoon, as she had just had a small party of her own named Lawson III.

Our group of doctor's wives seem to be doing fine, in spite of their somewhat exacting roles. Mary Miller Naquin writes from Boston that Dr. Naquin is finishing his medical residence at the City Hospital and will go to Johns Hopkins in July for a one to three year period. Alice Gass Dornberger's husband is still at the Mayo Clinic, but is on a leave of absence and the Dornbergers are spending the winter at Sun Valley. This spring, they will be established in a new house in Rochester. Reba Smith Gromel also has a new house and has at last said farewell to painters and electricians. Dr. Gromel opened his office last summer in Allentown, Pennsylvania. Reba says that she is frantically busy, but that a Bendix makes her life easier.

It was so grand to hear from Ruth Mealand (ex '40). She is living in Cleveland. Ruth worked for United Airlines for several years. Now, she is at Western Reserve University as its Placement Adviser and Personnel Director. Ruth says that a short time ago, she saw Eleanor Bowworth Spitler in a Cleveland newspaper picture of the Women's Symphony Orchestra Committee. Ruth corresponds often with Libby Conover of St. Louis and reports that Libby loves teaching her large kindergarten class there.

C, P. Neel Mahoney writes of herself and her two Georges. George, Sr., will finish his work at the University of Virginia in June. In the meantime, C. P. feels lucky to be living in an attractive guest house on a farm near Charlottesville. The Mahoneys spent Christmas in Kentucky.

On December 6, Mary Jane Burnett became Mrs. Perry Childs Hill. Mr. Hill is a newspaper man and political columnist, in charge of the Madison Bureau of the Milwankee Sentinel. Mary Jane said that after months of discouraging hunting that they found an apartment which they would have been thrilled with even when there wasn't a housing shortage.

It was a great pleasure to have Agnes Spencer Burke and Jack as our week-end guests not long ago. Since then, Ag has seen Peggy Caperton in Washington. Peggy was visiting her family there and told Ag that she is enjoying her Red Cross work at Lakehurst, New Jersey.

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE, (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.), 3135 Victoria Boulevard, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Fund Agent: PATRICIA DOWLING (Mrs. Alfred von Wellsheim), 17 Higby Road, Utica 3, New York.

There were wonderful surprises this time—unsolicited news, which is doubtly appreciated, and a right good result from the inevitable postcards.

Reports on future Briarites and gentlemen friends are first on the agenda. A cute notice from Bill and Pat Screnson Ackard announced the arrival of Stephen Lawrence on December 1. Dan and Emory Hill Rex had an addition to their family on December 17. Their new daughter's name is Anne Loren. Allen Bagby McNeil had a daughter, Maria, born October 11. Tom and Janie Clark Hartrick have what Janie terms a "little charmer," Ann Frances, born November 20, and she says the big brothers are crazy about their wee sister. George and Helen Watson Hill have adopted a young man, who came to them December 16 at the age of four weeks. Helen enclosed a picture of Geoffrey William and he is indeed adorable. Bill and Barbara Holman Whitcomb had a second son, Charles Holman, born November 27, and I just learned that Olivia Rhodes Woodin has a son, name and birthday unknown to me.

Since last edition I became Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr., and find that Dedore Roth doesn't sound bad at all. We were married November 23 and are in a furnished apartment until the completion of the one we are waiting for. Peg Tomlin became Mrs. Paul G. Graves January 4 and has deserted Cincinnati for Lynchburg where Paul is busy farming. Louise Kirk Headley made the trek from Tallahassee for the festivities and we had a time eatching up on things. Mary Scully became Mrs. James Burt Olney on October 19.

The careers are well-diversified. Libba Hudson is working in the G-2 War Department offices at Arlington Hall. Do Albray has been promoted from secretary to the president to assistant to the president of Bull Steamship Lines. Besides getting advancements, Do is running the business end of the Young People's Dance Group in Maplewood and is busy with the local Little Theatre group, Jimmie McBee has three sections of history at the Northampton School for Girls and 216 popils in the class she helps in at Smith, all of which results in 400 papers to correct all too often, but she says she's crazy about the work and having a wonderful time.

Betty "Dowsie" Neill wote a harrowing account of helping Barbara Nevens Wickerham get married. Her fiance's ship was delayed from Germany, and everyone was rushing around getting to the license bureau before it closed on a Saturday, waiving time limits, etc., but anyway Barb is now Mrs. Ralph E. Young. A nice letter from Margaret Stuart Wilson Newbold said she was married June 29 and is now Mrs. Kenneth Hall Dickey. Her little daughter, Genie, is almost 3. Craigie was married February 1 to Carl Price, a young lawyer in Washington.

I have caught up on a lot of the girls and their families and thought you would be interested. Chee-Chee Broun-Serman MacRae has two daughters, Fan and Marian, and they are living at the Seminary in Alexandria, where Mac is a pediatrician. Cheech has become an ardent Red Cross Home Service gal, untangling the trials of veterans. She reported that Pat Eaglesfield Kirchoffer, ex 41, was married to a seminary student and lives close by. Allen Baghy McN:ill and Mac have bought a house in San Marino where he is still in law school.

Douce said Charlie and Betsy Tower Bennett have rented a house next to them in Pleasantville, and they are good neighbors and lots of fun. Edge Cardamone O'Donnell has two sons, Bobbie and Dick, and they have bought a house in Utica. Mary Anne Somertell Brenza has two children, Anne and William, and is living in Miami. Wyn and Joan Meacham Gay have two lively sons and are moving into a lovely old house in Hudson, Massachusetts, in February. Tommy and Martha Jean Brooks Miller are moving from Washington to Charlotte where Tommy is becoming jonior partner in a law firm.

Helen Watson said she's heard from Bobbie Clark Hall that she was home for Christmas but thinking of returning to Coronado, California. Martha Ingles Shrader is still in the tropics with Jack and son John Robert. Lucy Parton Miller has a son, Bobby, and they are living in State College, Pennsylvania. Helen Guin Wallace, ex 41, and Johnny have bought a house in Falls Church, Virginia, where he is still with the War Department. Cyn Harrison Drinkwater is living in Hingham, Massachusetts. Brownie is uut of the Navy and back at the bank there.

In the middle of winter, we can all envy Lucy Lloyd, who is off to Trinidad for a two month vacarion.

1 know you all will be saddened by the death of Winifred Vass last August 2, 1946. The news came as a complete shock to everyone.

5-Year Reunion, June, 1947

Class Secretary: CATHERINE COLEMAN, St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ANN HAUSLEIN (Mrs. Thomas G. Porterfield), 262 Kent Road, Wynnewood, Pennsylvania.

My postals have for once brought forth some replies, although there are still some from whom I hope to hear.

From one of my "children" from Charleston, I hear that Sally Schall Allen is the proud mother of William Kent Allen, Jr., who was born the 17th of October last.

Other proud mothers and their offspring are: Florence Gillem Pressly, son James Boyce, Jr., born July 2, 1946; Ann Hauslein Potterfield, daughter Ann Dawson, born September 23; Mary Ellen Thompson Beach, son, Robert Thompson, born November 25; Betsy Chamberlain Burchard, daughter Elizabeth Rockwell, born November 19; Margie Troutman Harbin, a second son, Henry Troutman, born December 11; Mary Stone Moore Rutherford, a daughter born in November; Jane Taylor Lowell, daughter Joan Diane, born November 11. Jane also has a little boy, Bobby, who is now eighteen months old. This paragraph reads like the genealogical portions of the Bible, I know, but at least you will all be able to see how the ranks of '42's young are increasing. I am also not sure whether the birth of Thomas Daniel Davies, Jr., on the 27th of March (1946) was ever reported. The parents are, of course, Tom and Eloise English Davies.

Among recent weddings of the class was that of Laura Graves and Gordon Price Howell. They were married in Lynchburg, December 21, 1946. From the newspaper I have gleaned the information that Gordon is from Charleston, South Carolina. Any further details will be welcome. Also among the not-too-long-ago weddings are those of Sue Bratten, who was married to Johnston Cooper Adams on October 5, and of Dorothy Ann Myers and Dr. Robert Page Morehead on May 18. Sue and her husband are now living in Memphis, but that alas! is the extent of my information. Dotty Myers, however, is one of the kind souls who wrote in answer to my card. She and Bob are living in the Twin Castle Apartments, in Winston-Salem. He is a pathologist and teaches in the Bowman Gray Medical School. For their wedding trip they went to Sea Island and then to Hot Springs, Virginia. On the way back they stopped at Sweet Briar, and found Franny Caldwell Harris there for Baccalaureate. Dotty reports that she looked grand and is now living in Louisville. Also living in Winston-Salem are Elsie Digges and Sam Orr, who have "two darling little boys." By the grapevine, Dot adds the information that Sudie Clark Hanger and Bill now have three children, of which the latest is a boy.

Doris Ogden Mount crashed through with a letter, telling all about Johnnie, her son, who was seven months old last November. At that time Oggie had her hands full trying to keep him from walking off, play pen and all. From Oggie 1 also learned that Jessie Marr Strahmam and her husband have been busily erecting a new house on an old foundation, which fact makes it rate as a notnew house and thereby facilitates matters. (You figure it out).

Annie Hauslein Potterfield is naturally taking up all of her time caring for young Ann and the affairs of domestic life, but she has managed to see Dougie Woods Spront and Eugie Burnett Affel, both of whom are now living in Philadelphia. Eugie is now president of the Philadelphia Alumna Club. Annie also had Betsy Gilmer and Mike Tremain as her guests in the fall. And, for my part, I can report that Betsy's Carolyn is as cute as she can be. Betsy and Mike are now living here in Charlottesville, and they have managed to fix up a most attractive house.

Arkie King wrote, reporting nothing of herself, but she did say that Vive Walker Montgomery and her little boy have now moved to Columbia, Missouri, where their husband and father will be at the University of Missouri for the next three years. Arkie also revealed that she had received a doll from Jan Darby, who is now in Tokyo with the Red Cross.

Daph Withington also wrote that she had news of Jan, whom she had seen at the Banker's Club in Tokyo. In addition, Daphne saw Betty Dunn in Manila, when she was returning from a two month stay in the United States. From all indications Daphne seems to be back in Tokyo and is, of course, still with the Red Cross. From Shirley Hauseman's card I note that she, Daph again, is to be in the Pacific area for another year. Shirl, unfortunately, reports nothing of herself,

From Williamsburg, Virginia, comes word that Polly Peyton Turner and her twin daughters are still waiting for the "Houston" to settle down. She and Carol are praying for:
1) shore duty, 2) a new car.

In spite of the fact that Ruth Hensley and John Camblos are now living here in Charlottesville, and practically at my door, I have yet to see them, and Ruth's note announcing her arrival gave no other information. I have seen Mimi Gallouay Manire, who is working at Madison Hall, while Jim studies. And also working here in Charlottesville are Toppin Wheat, who is running a nursery school, and Penny Lewis, whose locus operandi is the University Library. Penny and I had been expecting a visit from Korah Smith, but she departed for San Francisco before she managed to get here, so we are still waiting.

A Christmas card from "Slug" Sanford reveals she is back in Dallas after her sojourn with the Marines, and she has promised a letter at an early date. Hope she remembers.

Still with the War Department is Jean Hamer, who hopes that by spring her services will have become unnecessary so that she can get to reunion. Let's hope that we all make it! Jean is still living in Cincinnati. Another ex'42, Betty Duffield, writes that she is teaching in New York City and loves it, though the living is ghastly; however, she had landed a sub-let just before Christmas, which should improve conditions.

After having been in Virginia throughout the war, Rufus Pierson and Ted Fischer have now settled in Glendale, California, and much to their delight, they have even succeeded in buying a home. Others who have reported their whereabouts and not much else are Margaret "Flush" Gwyn, who is living at home in Houston and Lois Hussey, who still lives in Oyster Bay and is now working at the Museum of Natural History. Why not send details? To end with my most recent letter is to end with news of an engagement-that of Jean Hedley to James H. Currie. They plan to be married in May, and will live in Southport, Connecticut, She too, promises to write more later.

Remember the fund; remember reunion in June, and right now, remember me! that April letter comes so soon.

Class Secretary: CLARA EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: KAREN KNISKERN (Mrs. Robert White), 988 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

This time I am making no attempt to organize my usual heterogeneous material with those far-fetched connecting links, but will see how it works alphabetically. So, to begin with-"Ouija" Adams Bush is living in Montclair, New Jersey, and Brooks Barnes has gone to Honolulu, where Louise Peak is too. Nancy Bean has spent two weeks away from her job with Life to visit Pat Robineau Vandevere's sister in Florida and try to counteract the work of nasty old sinus on her constitution. In February Pat herself moved to Miami for good. She and Bill have bought a house! By the way, did you see the author's acknowledgement of help from Beanie in the Book-Of-The-Month Club's selection, "Thunder Out of China"?

After a 3 year silence I had a card from Skip Bracher O'Connell telling me mostly of a very important addition to her family—Michael Wilson, born on October 24. Besides trying to handle this situation Skip has moved into her new house. She said she had heard from Dot Long Cousins who is now living in Austin, Texas, and trying to keep up with her 2 year old son "one of the toughest characters she has ever met."

Alice Chamberlain (ex' 43) was married September 6 to John Doster Lamar. They are living in Montgomery where he is the engineer in charge of radio station WMCM. Mary Carter Richardson has a daughter, Catherine Carter, born October 23. I saw Didi Christian's brother this fall and found out that she is working—and also playing—in Washington, D. C. And a Christmas note from Janie Findlay revealed that she is still with me in the ranks of the nnemployed. However, she did do personal shopping in the Christmas rush and also acted in an amateur production of "George Washington Slept Here."

Janice Fitzgerald will be married on March 8 to James A. Wellons, Jr., a lawyer in the hometown of Smithfield, North Carolina, Dorothy Friday was married in January to William S. Cassilly.

The news from the G's is babies—one apiece for Charlotte Garber Rudulph and Frances Gregg Petersmeyer. Cha's son, John, Jr., was born last July but somehow this new issue didn't make my last issue. Gregg had a daughter, Susan Calhoun, on November 5.

Esther Jett reports that Carolyn Miller McClintock and Gales have finally moved into a new apartment after months of camping on the Millers. Margaret Swindell Dickerman and Paul have also just settled in their own home where Sally Dick has a grand time crawling from room to room. I have not been very fully informed about this child but I gather that she is now approximately 9 months old and I'm sorry I couldn't tell you all about it before. Esther said, too, that Anne Mitchell has announced her engagement to Dick Roberts but doesn't know when the wedding will be. Esther herself sounds very gay and says she finds college week-ending again is great fun and a good way to see many Briarites. I myself was most disappointed at the Virginia-Princeton game to miss at least 15 of you by sitting on the wrong side. I did see Virginia Beasley and Brac Preston, both looking grand, Chesley Johnson is now Mrs. James Amerman Dale—as of some time last summer. Sally Lerner married Capt. Alan David in Rochester, New York, on September 29, and on the same day Nancy McIver became the bride of William Dickman Kemp.

Beth Dichman Smith, who is frantically larger-apartment hunting in New York says she sees Mary Belle Lee off and on as she comes up on buying trips. Mary Belle is now a full-fledged hosiery buyer for Garfinkels.

Anne McJunkin Briber is freezing in Milwaukee and longing for that tired old red scarf. Jody Morgan '45, wrote me that Junk and Frank had finally found an apartment. Junk, Anne Noyes, and Frances Taylor Trigg were at Sweet Briar for the inauguration of Miss Lucas and all gave enthusiastic accounts of the new president. Anne wrote me a long letter about it and about the new paint jobs in Carson, Senior parlor and the Library. She was the representative of the University of Kentucky at the inauguration as she received her law degree there in June and has recently passed her bar exams. Just before her trip east she went to Frankfort where she was sworn in and presented to the Court of Appeals. Anne also told me that Anne Tweedy is married to Phil Ardery, an attorney in Frankfort who ran in the last Democratic primaries for Senator from Kentuck".

I saw Fay Martin Chandler briefly on her way to Norfolk where she is depositing daughter Douggie while she moves into an apartment in Brookline, Massachusetts. Al is undergoing the rigors of working for his Ph.D. at Harvard. Fay sees Nancy Pingree Drake and Tookie Kniskern White in Boston. Ping had a very exciting holiday present—a son, David Hadley, born December 17.

Down Norfolk way Byrd Smith Hunter beat Ping by about 10 days. Her daughter, Carter Byrd was born December 8. Seems like the class of about '67 should be pretty well stocked with alumna daughters.

And to wind things up with a bit of the extraordinary, Betty Weems Westfeldt is about to graduate from the University of Colorado with a Sweet Briar degree. She has been taking courses while Pat finishes law school. No easy task, I should imagine, with two bouncing boys to rear on the side.

I am sure you all join me in expressing deepest sympathy to Frances Taylor Trigg, who recently lost her mother.

News about me? I'm off on my first skiing expedition. Best send further communications c/o North Conway Hospital.

Notes on Christmas cards are the nicest things! Caught up with several of '44's lost lambs that way. Most exciting was a card from Mary Jane Brock who has been attending the University of Geneva in Switzerland since October, It will be grand to hear about her trips to St. Moritz and about her "native family" when she returns this summer,

West and Helen Cantey Woodbridge have finally found a hat-hanging place—in a Port Washington garage apartment. Another happily-housed couple is the Behnkes, Bob and Sally Skinner and son, Carl. They have a lake edge home in Medina, Washington, which has a floating bridge to be crossed to get to Seattle and has millions of blackberry bushes and a spare house to rent out! Sally's life is a round of housekeeping, keeping up with her son, catching mice (!), and skiing on Sundays. Bob is working in Seattle and going to "taxation school."

News from the lamented and long-lost Chaunce Williams is that she is still in the whirl in Richmond and is working in the same building as does Hannah Mallory. Bowen reports from New York that she is working at "Sheltering Arms" on 29th Street and the amazing announcement that "Have a family of 29, from 14 months to 18 years." Staples is at the New York School of Social Work and has frequent pep talks from Bowen to help her spirits.

Gunner and Paulette Long Taggert are settled in Boston where she is in her element directing dramatics at a settlement house and Gunner is happily being a consulting construction engineer. They live in a wing of a lovely old house. Lucille Christmus Brewster and Bill live in nearby Plymouth, Ginny Lee Griffith and Copie Morton are homemaking in Baltimore with their latchstring out to all comers. They have been visiting Alice Lancaster and Pete Buck in their trailer home in Charlottesville. Ginny reported seeing Tommy and Harriet Taxenner Clausen, Hazel Fellner Tuttle and her husband. Bill and Jean Ryan Kehl are in Wellesley Hills and Jean has promised us a long letter soon. Persis Ladd is back in the States after her stay in Salzburg; she's another who should submit a full report. Snookie Woods Williamson is living a hectic life in Winnetka and spoke at the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in Chicago. Dunc, who ignores me, is doing a marvelous job of organizing the alumnae in that section, I hear, Typically a la Boericke was her two-year Christmas card. It started at Nichols General Hospital in 1945 and ended at home in 1946, with nary a break in continuity. Bea is reconverting to a civilian by relaxing and Nurses' Aiding in the Philadelphia Naval Hospital Maternity Section, but yearns to return to her beloved P. T. We have had several patients in common.

I wish you all would send snapshots of your offspring, even though we haven't yet reached the 5-year mark. We have more and more babies: 5 daughters that I know of are —Marian Shanley Jacobs' born August 31, named Elizabeth Conner; Alice Johnson Fessenden's Faith Trimble, born October 31; Betsy Bryant Robb's little Elizabeth Walker; on December 4 came Catherine Tift Porter's namesake; and Sharann was born July 8 to Mim Ethridge Booth.

And of course there have been several weddings. Anne Hynson was married December 28 to Ellis Samuel Rump, Jr., and they are living in West Chester, Pennsylvania. Helen Crump married John Milton Cutler September 11 and they are in Macon. Susan Somervell married Lt. Commander John Wool Griswold, U. S. N. R. December 20 and they are looking for a spot in New York City.

From Virginia Noyes comes this account, "I am teaching 12 hours and taking 6; plus having a Girl Scout troop and being treasurer of the dorm, so I'm pretty busy. It's loads of fun, though, and I do love Madison and the University."

Lulu Sadowsky has just illustrated a book! It is "The Care and Feeding of Friends", an amusing treatise of recipes and light-reading, by Tracy, published by Viking.

Nancy Eagles O'Bannon and Whitney are in a pre-fabricated house in Louisville, Nancy does volunteer O. T. work at Kosair, Crippled Children's Hospital. Ruth O'Keefe Kobzina sent the announcement of June Eisenberg Gurnick's new little girl. Wish more of the exes would come across with news! Martha Lee Hoffman McCoy is teaching at St. Anne's School while Mac becomes a lawyer at the University of Virginia.

The last I heard from Margy Brendlinger she had plans for graduate school about now, after having again mastered the fine art of being a civilian. Dot Denny will be married this spring, according to Barb Clark. Barb also sent us the clipping of Mary Coleman White's engagement to L. Preston Hollander, Jr., of New York.

Nothing from me except that I had the pleasure of meeting Miss Lucas when she came to Memphis last month and my usual plea—remember that old box 181 is lone-some for communiques from you all.

Class Secretary: Jodie Morgan, 1538 Quarrier Street, Charleston, West Virginia. Fund Agent: Mary Haskins, 901 Oak Street, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Since the last time I wrote to you I've been to Durham to visit Susan Buchanan. I got home in time to unpack one day and pack up the next and be off to Chattanooga with Kagee Agee and Jane McJunkin, to take in the weddings of Beck Avery and Sarah Temple. We got there in time for Ave's spinster dinner which Mare gave. It proved quite educational; Kagee gave us a few hours' talk on her experiences at John Powers' and she has never been funnier-showing us how to stand, walk, turn, sit, and even give a comehither look. Ave's wedding on October 12 was lovely. Mare Haskins was maid of honor, Mil Carothers Heally, Sarah Temple, and Gloria Lupton were all bridesmaids, and oh yes, the groom was Frank Duff. Lyn Dillard and Mary Kritser were there for the wedding. The Duffs, after a honeymoon in Cuba, are living on Lookout Mountain.

Now for Hedy Edwards' wedding which took place in St. Louis on October 5, Sarah Temple was in the wedding and McJunk was there, Hedy and Joe Davenport were off to Hot Springs, Virginia, but back in time for Sarah Temple's marriage to Tom (Luke) Moore, October 26. McJunk and 1 felt terrible about being at the Haskins household for so long, so we decided to give a party our last night there, and Jane, a little reluctantly, carried on in fine Aints and Asses style, saying that we had had such a wonderful time that we wanted to start a "We Will Return Campaign" and since two weddings had kept us there for three weeks we thought another might bring us back-so our candidates for this campaign are-and with that a five-piece colored band with tuba and drum, marched in full blast, and behind them a huge banner saying, "Vote for Mary and Jet," followed by Mary and her fiance, Jet King. They are to be married in March. They are waiting for the arrival of Nancy Haskins Elliott and David from India sometime in February. Jet is with the Fleetwood Coffee Company (adv.) in Chattanooga, so he and Mare will be living there.

More wedding bells have been ringing for the class of '45 all over the country. Elaine Krause was married to Lt. William Kelty, Jr., in the post chapel at Fort Benning, Georgia, last August and they are living in Columbus, Georgia. Deedee Enright was in the wedding.

Jerry Dean Cornell was married December 21 to Thomas Lucas Means of Charleston, South Carolina. He is director of promotion and publicity for Station WOL in Washington, D. C., where they are living.

Doreen Brugger was married November 2 to Dr. Carl Paul Wetzig. Ann Bower and Marian Keddy were there for the occasion. Deen and Paul live on Staten Island.

Lella Burnett was married December 12 to George Felker, III. They have an apartment in Danville where George works for the Dan River Mills.

Ann McLean was married to Lt. Gilbert Loomis, Jr., on December 1+ in Alexandria, Virginia. They are living just down the street from Lyn Dillard.

Betty Healy became Mrs. Gordon B. Cutler December 21. Perk Traugott, Lovah Willcox, and Steve Nicolson were all there. Betty and her husband are in Cincinnati.

Ruth Longmire chose the day before Christmas to be married to Willard Wagner, Jr., in Temple, Texas. They are living in Austin.

Huldah Eden and T. Haller Jackson, Jr., were married in Orange, Virginia, on December 28. Their home is in Lexington, Virginia.

Peggy Booth selected January 4 to be married to Major Henry Pierce. Three days later Betty Carbaugh became Mrs. James Mann. Edie Page Gill and Ellen Dodson were in Chattanooga for the occasion.

Edith Farr was married to Jack Elliott from Richmond, on January 11. He was an air force captain and has returned to the University of Virginia so they are living in Charlottesville. Nancy Feazell Kent and Jinx Gans were in the wedding and Bunny Gray Wilson and Georgia Ellis were there.

Margaret Steinhart is engaged to Reginald M. Rowe and Jean F. Portman's engagement to David B. Allen was announced December 20, So the weddings will continue for a while!

Mary Herbert Taylor claims to be living at the North Pole or a reasonable facsimile, Ed is with the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, and Mary's latest venture has been learning how to ski.

Lib Low Orth and Charlie have moved to Greensboro, North Carolina, and took a short trip to New York not long ago.

As for our career girls, Martha "Chips" Lowsley and two other girls have been in charge of the Medical Societys Veterans' Service in New York City. (See story in this issue of the Alumnae News). A note from Chips tells of her other activities—as if the work were not enough. She is attending classes at the New School in Greenwich Village, working for her degree in psychology. Chips lives with 2 other girls in what they call "The Tenement" on 3rd Avenue. She added in her letter that Jane Tomlinson had had a story and two poems published. One story concerning Chip's and Jane's work at the Hartford Retreat won a prize in a large contest.

Jean Ridler is taking a course in technical Russian at Princeton and after 5 lessons they read aloud from Tolstov. Chickie Chidester has finished her year of training and is now a full-fledged laboratory technician. She was in New Orleans for two-weeks study at Charity Hospital. Margie Koonce was there for one week-end during which they saw Betty Grayson Geer. Betty is doing graduate work at George Washington University and research at the Library of Congress. Steve Nicolson has a job with British Oversees Airways. She has a British boss and spends her time taking dictation, planning trips and parties for visiting nobility, and last summer arranged a trip to London for our Miss Glass.

Gearheart was unemployed for two months but went back to TWA the day after Christmas. Diddy Gaylord is still teaching school. Mary Symes has returned home from South America at last. She went to see Diddy and Gearheart and Zu for a grand rehash and now is in Baton Rouge with her family.

Ann Dickson is studying at the University of Paris on a graduate fellowship. What a wonderful chance for Dick! Edie Page Gill was in New York for 6 weeks this winter taking a course on how to mould and fit contact lenses. While there she saw El Gilliam and Tib Foree, who are studying at Columbia University.

Hugh and Pani Matton Williams are in Philadelphia where Hugh is studying medicine and Pani is teaching Spanish—both at the University of Pennsylvania, McJunk has a grand job as receptionist for the United Carbon Company here. In the evening she and I have been taking sewing lessons.

Andrey Betts gave up her job in October and is right hand man for all her relatives and friends for a while. She saw Ginny Berrier, Deen Brugger Wetzig, Diddy Gaylord, Anne Bower, and Ann Warren at the Sweet Briar lencheon in New York. She had a chat with Betty Gray who was on her way through New York. Betty is working at a sanitarium in Connecticut and finishes her occupational therapy training in June.

Lovah Willcox had such a gay holiday season in Norfolk that she's off for a few weeks in Florida to rest in the sun. L'n Dillard and Leila Barnes are also driving south this month.

I had a long letter from Mary Kritser attempting to bring us up to date on the Lone Star State. To go back a few years-Rosemary Harwell, Ann Richey, Gloria Lupton, Betsy Smythe, Susie Thomson, and Kritz all graduated from the University of Texas. Sadie Gwyn transferred to Rice and made Phi Beta Kappa. Susie went on to Parsons in New York to study art. Ann Richey married Laurie Oliver last March and they are living on a ranch near Lampassas, raising sheep and roats and Ann is diligently making butter. Sadie Gwyn Allen was married in the spring of '45 and is living in Houston. Bev Turner is returning to Houston after finishing at Barnard. Kritz has been taking flying lessons and last week she soloed.

Before ending, there are a few young people you should meet: Betsy is the 9 months old daughter of Liz Joseph Boykin and Raymond. Diane Dale is Dale Saylor Hull's little girl. born December 13, 1946, Capt. and Mrs. Hull are living in Arlington, Virginia. Anne Stuart Pinnell also arrived in December. She is the daughter of Franny Bickers Pinnell and Buck. A Christmas note from Bicky says that they are living in Richmond and Buck entered law school the first of the year, Robert Bryant, son of Bob and Tutti Hall Peckham was born on January 1, and the latest introduction is to Esther Cunningham Shay's son, born January 25. Husband Bob is teaching economics at Sweet Briar the second semester of this year.

Well, gals, anytime any of you have a pen in hand and an extra penny post card, just remember, I'd love to hear from you!

Class Secretary: DOROTHY CORCORAN, 4545 Ortega Boulevard, Jacksonville, Florida. Fund Agent: DOROTHY S. CALDWELL, 4707 Bayshore Boulevard, Tampa, Florida.

More wedding bells are chiming with the New Year. First bride of the year was Anne Owens, who married Lt. Commander Richard Mueller in Norfolk on January 18. Dick left for the Mediterranean on the USS Leyte around the first of February, and when he returns in April they will probably live in Newport, Rhode Island. Martha Titterington became Mrs. Daniel Graham Reid on February 7 in St. Louis. A reception at her home followed the wedding. Twitter announced her engagement at a luncheon in December.

Leila Fellner's wedding took place December 21. She was married to David Joseph Piel in Dwight Memorial Chapel at Yale and is living in New Haven, Connecticut. David is finishing college after his 3 years service in the Marines. Julia Jerman is now Mrs. Thomas D. Neal, Jr., and living in Richmond. Peggy Brink has become Mrs. Leo G. Feuer, Jr., and lives in Brookline, Massachusetts.

Anne Hill will wed Griffith Edwards (son of Dr. Preston H. Edwards, former professor of physics at Sweet Briar) on March 1 in Amherst. Charlotte Sprunt's wedding will be on April 26 and Lee Stevens writes that Mary Jane Lively will marry Leslie on February 15, but further particulars I have not.

Members of "this season's debutante coterie" are: Flo Cameron in San Antonio, Ellen Robbins in Houston, Al Eubank in Waco, and Jo Thomas in New Orleans.

Rosie Ashby writes from Norfolk that she has been teaching kindergarten and in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, Eleanor Myers is doing the same. Candy Greene has a fascinating job with "Newsweek" in New York, Boots Taylor is doing social work in Norfolk.

Polly Vandeventer is contemplating a possible trip to Europe in June. Scheduled for a visit here soon are Lee Stevens and Shields Jones, on their way further south. Betsy Bowman says that New York is worlds of fun. She's working for Lastern Air Lines at La Guardia Field and uses her romance languages major in interpreting.

Dottie Sue Caldwell visited Alice Eubank before Christmas. (The psych, majors u:ll get together). Dottie is working with spastic children in Tampa. Corinne Klemm says she's "having a glorious time seeing the United States and Sweet Briar girls." She spent the holidays in Madison, Wisconsin.

Jimmy Marr Kurz, in New York, is doing research work for an advertising agency. Her ex-roommate, Palmour Holmes McIntyre, spent Christmas in Atlanta and now she and Pope are back in Athens. He is in law school at the University of Georgia. Jane McRae Schroeder has moved into a new apartment in Savannah. Jane is mental testing for the Veterans' Administration and Aage is in the real estate business. Sam and Ann Atkinson Keever have moved into a new home in Ennis, Texas.

Wheats Young is working with her mother in Hartford, Connecticut, buildin homes for veterans. She's off to Europe in the spring (lucky girl!) where she hopes to see Patty Traugott and the other S. B. C.'ers in Idinburgh, Ann Dickson and Jane Lawrence in Paris, as well as Caroline Rudulph and Mary Lou Holton in Geneva. Larry Lawrence, incidentally, is spending this year at the University of Paris on a graduate fellowship.

Allison Buchanan has returned to her native Scotland and may be reached at this address — Whinfell, Broom Road, Newton Mearns, Glasgow, Scotland.

Rudy and Mary Lou have kept me very well-informed on their activities in Geneva. Rudy spent Christmas in Bremen with her brother William, who is stationed with the occupation forces there. She went to Bremen on a train that was run especially for army children in school in Switzerland. The trip took 4 days of arduous traveling. She says it was fine though after she reached her destination and she was charmed with the to Paris for Christmas and visited Dickie and Larry. They went to midnight mass on lessons. She plans either to take a job soon or mediaeval atmosphere of Bremen. Lou went Christmas Eve at Notre Dame and during the course of their holiday they saw Sartre's new play.

Berrha Lee is in New York taking voice to continue educating herself with courses at Columbia. Joan Berend Morse is working in her father's public relations office in New York and writing children's stories in her spare time. The first to be published will appear this spring in the magazine "Calling All Kids." Florence Taylor is also working for her father, She's secretary and treasurer in his real-estate office in Jacksonville.

Do keep me posted on all your latest activities for there is always another issue of the News just around the corner in April. Remember that our first reunion comes in four months!

Alumnae Clubs

Are Talking

Liberal Education

at Sweet Briar

SINCE the end of January, when the first faculty-alumnae discussion about the curriculum took place at Sweet Briar at the time of the mid-winter meeting of the Alumnae Council (see the report in the February ALUMNAE NEWS), many groups of alumnae have met at least once for the purpose of beginning their re-evaluation of what college meant to them. From all sides have come reports of enthusiastic and heated discussions, with requests for more information.

In accordance with the plan for these discussions, statements from Miss Lucas and Dean Lyman have been prepared for distribution to all groups who are conducting discussions. Both statements are printed in this issue of the News, in hope that alumnae who are not able to join active groups will be inspired to put their thoughts on paper and send them to the chairman, Mrs. Frederick Andersen (Katherine Blount, '26) Bayport, Minnesota.

Reports of alumnae discussion meetings have reached the alumnae office from 25 cities, some of which have had two or more meetings already. Miss M. Dee Long, professor of English, took part in the discussion at Lexington, Kentucky, during her spring vacation from Sweet Briar, and Miss Laura Buckham, associate professor of Romance languages, was invited to come to Lynchburg's second meeting. Alumnae Council members have also assisted with meetings in many cities. All reports indicate real enthusiasm and concern for the plan and for its purposes, and alumnae groups which have been inactive for some time have come to life because the members are eager to take part in this program. They realize its value for them as well as for the college.

Although the exact number of groups which have started the discussions is not known at present, the following have sent word of their progress: Alexandria, Va.; Annapolis; Atlanta; Baltimore; Boston; Charlotte; Charlottesville; Chattanooga; Chicago; Cincinnati; Cleveland; Indianapolis; Jacksonville; Lexington, Ky.; Long Island; Louisville; Lynchburg; Memphis; Minneapolis and St. Paul; New York City; Norfolk; Philadelphia; Richmond; Washington; Northern New Jersey; Westchester County, New York.

At the request of the Alumnae Council, the papers written by Miss Lucas and Mrs. Lyman as contributions to the alumnae discussion programs are reprinted here for the benefit of the alumnae who do not live near cities where alumnae groups are meeting but who are very much interested in the entire program and whose participation, as individuals, is equally welcomed by Sweet Briar.

A letter to Sweet Briar Alumnae Clubs from Miss Lucas

CINCE our Alumnae Council meeting last November, O your representatives on the Council and we here at Sweet Briar have been thinking and talking about you and your education—and about your college's future service to a world in crisis. Since I wrote to you at Christmas time, I have had the pleasure of meeting and talking with many of you. And your Alumnae Council has met again at Sweet Briar, this time with members of the faculty and staff to ponder together these weighty and exciting questions. You have had a play-by-play description of this meeting dashed off to you via the ALUMNAE NEWS. You know that a joint committee of alumnae and faculty volunteers is now at work to examine and evaluate our college's past, present, and future-especially in the light of your criticisms and opinions. And that's where I come in-and why the alumnae-faculty committee has asked me to send you this tete-a-tete, for discussion at your next meeting. As a background for your critique of Sweet Briar, I have been asked to send you my thoughts on Liberal Education at Sweet Briar. I'll try to pack my ponderous cerebrations into the first few paragraphs, so that those of you whose happy fate it is to fix the tea and arrange the olive sandwiches will get the full impact before creeping off.

Of course Mrs. George Burns, nee Gracie Allen, has really said the last word on curricular revision for the American college. She was asked recently what she thought of the Chinese Question. She replied that she really couldn't say until she had studied Chinese—because she felt that a Chinese question deserved a Chinese answer!

But now to Sweet Briar and Liberal Education. Our college has from the day of its opening been a liberal arts college. You as Sweet Briar students have had a liberal arts education. The Greeks, of course, had a word for itand gave us theirs. It was Aristotle who in his Politics originally defined liberal education as that education which makes men virtuous, or, in his meaning, excellent, both intellectually and ethically. Aristotle's "liberal education" was, as a matter of fact, education for a leisure class; but he intended that it should fit a man to employ his spare time in a manner worthy of the responsibilities which go with privilege. Of course, our social picture has changed greatly since Aristotle's day. Instead of the well defined categories of gentleman of leisure, artisan, and slave, we find in our society today a very much more general distribution of possessions, privilege—and, of responsibility. A fundamental premise of our system of government-by-thepeople rests upon the belief that all men-and womencan be sufficiently educated to participate in this government. Nevertheless, we have inherited and adapted to modern usage the classical distinction between two very different kinds of education, liberal education and vocational training. While much is being said these days about their contrasting benefits, they are actually concerned with quite different values and could not possibly be substituted one for the other. Even during the war, when technological and vocational training were so urgently needed, our liberal arts tradition in education was zealously protected, and not only by professional educators. Mr. Wendell Willkie, you recall, in that celebrated address at Duke University, declared that the liberal arts are "so important for our future civilization . . . that education in them should be as much a part of our war planning as the more obviously needed technical training." In peace time, or the planning-of-peace time, the importance of the liberal arts goes without saying. Or does it? Sometimes, it's the best known term which we least bother to understand. And because this particular term, "liberal arts education", is of such vital importance to the making of a peaceful world, it is important for all of us to understand its meaning and its implication for our lives and for society.

Essentially, a liberal education, as the words indicate, liberates our minds. It frees our minds from bondage, from bondage to impulse and emotion, from bondage to our acquired prejudice and misconceptions. As we gain the habit of thinking under the disciplines of liberal arts studies, we begin to decide and act in terms of our whole personality, in terms of an integration of desires, interests and powers, instead of as slaves driven by some overwhelming passion, whim, or momentary temptation. The practice of thinking serves to coordinate our impulses, to organize the various aspects of our personality so that no part of us rides roughshod over the rest. We think before we act; we have achieved self-discipline. Of course, the college is not alone responsible for this first liberation; we are indebted to our homes and to other social agencies, including religious institutions for helping to free us from bondage to our emotions.

But the colleges do serve as the special means of freeing us from the second kind of bondage, that arising from ignorance, prejudice, and narrowness of mind. This freedem can only come with a comprehensive view of the nature of human beings, our history and our hopes, as related to the universe in which we live. A big order, this gaining of perspective. What it actually gives us is freedom of choice. Instead of seeing one side of a question, we begin to see other possible sides and to base our own choice upon a weighing of comparative values rather than upon our ignorance and prejudice. Without this kind of perspective, it is not possible for us to direct ourselves or others wisely. Unless the people who occupy positions of responsibility have such perspective as well as self-discipline, our society must suffer. And the "catch" is, in our free, democratic society, that every adult human being has the measure of responsibility which goes with his vote. Inevitably, if our society is to survive, more and more of our people must have the opportunity to get a perspectivegiving education, as well as the technical training needed for vocations. It is the liberal education which enables us to make responsible decisions, whether individual or social.

But how should the college go about giving this muchneeded perspective? One principle of organization for our college work is suggested by the difference between knowledge (the "know-how" of dealing with problems in a particular field), and knowledge of results, that is, knowledge of what has already been discovered or achieved in that field. Then too, perspective must grow, as our experience grows, in two directions, breadth and depth. Perspective in breadth may be achieved through the elementary study of various selected subjects representing the main fields of human inquiry. Sweet Briar now attempts to assure this perspective by its Group Plan, requiring that 48 of the 120 credit hours necessary for the degree be distributed throughout the four groups representing the four major fields of knowledge: Languages, Natural Sciences, Social Sciences, the Arts. While the time allotted to these "breadth" courses is not sufficient to permit intense and penetrating analysis, it is possible to give a comprehensive view and broad appreciation, sufficiently emphasizing methods and results to permit us to make responsible judgements in the fields. Intensity and penetration, however, are emphasized in the "depth" portion of our plan of study, that is, in the "major" plan. Whatever major a student prefers, whether Chemistry, or English Lit., or our most recent addition "Psycho-Sociology", the purpose is the same. It is to give that student, through an intensive and critical study of a limited field of human experience, a first-hand experience of thoroughness. It is to give a real understanding of the values of verified knowledge as distinguished from opinion, vague generalization, and wishful thinking. Of course, the phrase "Ars longa, vita brevis" (Classic majors, please translate!) is especially applicable to the liberal "arts". The liberal arts college, at its best, can only open the doors to the Realms of Gold. It can only give us the inspiration and the discipline for educating ourselves, the rest of our lives.

We have been thinking and talking a lot at Sweet Briar about what our curriculum should include and how we should teach, if this college is to meet the challenge of the present crisis in world history. And we want you to think and talk together about education and the world and you, so that we may be able to have your criticisms and your suggestions as we plan for the future of your college. Our current catalogue and a booklet published last year entitled "Education at Sweet Briar", which we are sending along for you to have at this meeting, will give you a picture of Sweet Briar at the present time. Then Mrs. Lyman will be sending you, for discussion at your next meeting, a paper on "The Sweet Briar Curriculum, Today and Tomorrow".

And so, carry on! — with our collective blessings and affection.

Southa B. Lucas

Sweet Briar's Curriculum Today

By DEAN MARY ELY LYMAN

PRESIDENT LUCAS has already set before you the aims and ideals of a liberal arts education and now we are to look at our curriculum here to see how Sweet Briar is attempting to fulfill those high aims. Miss Lucas has pointed out that our group-plan is intended to give perspective on the broad vistas of human knowledge; and that we provide opportunity for thoroughness and depth by a concentration of study in a major field. How do these aims make their impact on the Sweet Briar student?

Let us come to Sweet Briar with one of the members of an incoming class, Peggy James. Peggy has stood well in her secondary school work. She qualified for admission to Sweet Briar and in that very fact has already fulfilled one of her high ambitions. In the summer before she comes to Sweet Briar she receives a catalogue of Sweet Briar and a letter explaining what the work of the freshman year is like. She receives also the bulletin "Studies in the Freshman Year" which contains fuller descriptions than does the catalogue of the courses open to her, and an explanation of the general plan of the four-year course. She learns that social studies, a laboratory science, English composition and a foreign language are the usual program for a freshman plus one further course of her own choosing, perhaps art, or music, religion, philosophy, mathematics or sociology. Perhaps Peggy is one of those who "can't do science." Or perhaps "history has always been hard for her because she can't remember dates." Or she may be one of those who "just can't write" or who "has the most terrible time with irregular verbs in French" (or any other foreign language). Why should Peggy be asked to face up to any one of these difficulties? Why should not college offer her the chance to go on with what she knows she can do well and likes? "I just loved Miss So-and-So who taught such-and-such at my High School," says Peggy, "and I know that is the subject I want to go on with at college. Why all these others, especially when there is one that I just can't do?"

Peggy hears President Lucas speak on the Liberal Arts program in the orientation program of the first few days. She also talks with her faculty adviser and begins to see how on this more mature level of study some of the fields about which she was less keen in high school are truly needed in the process of creating an informed mind, a mature and responsible attitude, and a liberal and tolerant spirit. She may not find it out all at once in freshman week nor even in her freshman year, but we hope that gradually Peggy discovers her need of the long look back that history affords in order that she may gain patience and perception for the long look ahead. She begins to realize that literature and language can be a real bridge of understanding between classes, nations and races; she finds that history and the other social sciences may give her the perspectives she needs on the norms for life today; she discovers that it is worthwhile to study science because some first-hand experience of the laws of the natural world is a different thing from reading about science in a popular magazine or even in a perfectly respectable text-book and that she needs that experience as a basis for her understanding of the world in which she lives.

Peggy may have many days of dull and uninspired grubbing. She may have some times of discouragement, but when the real flash of insight comes, it floods all the duller hours with new light. It may come to Peggy when she is looking through the microscope at a slide and a new comprehension comes of order and design in the natural world. It may come in some classroom discussion where the larger meaning of an idea takes possession of her, and she feels herself a part of a great commonwealth of good will, building justice and brotherhood for all men. It may be in the library as she reads a line of poetry in which music and meaning are perfectly matched; or it may be through a mathematical formula in whose dependability she feels for the first time the law-abiding character of the world in which she lives. It may be an experience of music in a listening hour, or in her own creative work in art or music, that a fresh kindling of her spirit takes place. Somehow we hope for this response in her that makes her glad to have her own part in the great human adventure of learning and living; that makes her want to take her place in the great laboratory of human trial and error, of discovery and effort. When this quickening of spirit comes, Peggy has begun to be rescued from ignorance and prejudice and half-baked ideas, and like

"Some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken," she is stirred to seek through all her life those "goodly states and kingdoms" of the mind to which her college study should be the open door.

Peggy's first two years at Sweet Briar are designed to acquaint her with these goodly states and it may be that in them she has some new interest never realized before. Miss So-and-So who made her like her special subject in secondary school may have opened the way to her major field but if so, the other subjects pursued have helped, we hope, to make that choice a real and vital one. If perhaps some new interest has come, the choice has vitality through that very fact.

Now as Peggy approaches her junior year, come some choices as to the method of study to be followed in her major field. Peggy may have stood so well in her work that she will be eligible to read for honors, and perhaps she is strong enough in her techniques of study to enjoy the freedom of that more independent type of major work. If this is the case, and she is interested to apply for the Junior Year at St. Andrews, she may be one of the fortunate two or three chosen for this special opportunity for broadening her horizon of experience.

Whether she reads for honors or not, a junior year abroad is now possible in French under the Delaware Plan in Switzerland, in Spanish in Mexico, and in the social sciences at Geneva under a plan sponsored by Smith College. Other plans for work in foreign countries are shaping up as life in post-war Europe becomes more normal, and more varied opportunities for a junior year abroad are almost sure to come.

If Peggy chooses to spend her four years at Sweet Brian under the usual plan of course-study, she may choose from any one of eighteen fields. If she is interested in the correlation of two or more fields of knowledge, she has the opportunity to follow one of several interdepartmental majors which have been arranged. Sweet Briar takes pride that it was something of a pioneer in working out these plans for majors that cut across departmental lines, and offer a chance at concentration on some special subject, idea, or influence. Whatever her choice of a major field, Peggy now seeks the counsel of the chairman of that field and plans the work of the two final years under the guidance of that professor as adviser. At the close of her four years she is likely to have a comprehensive examination on her major field. For work on the honors plan of study this is always the case, and some departments already use the comprehensive examination to conclude the major; most others will introduce it in 1948.

What are our hopes for Peggy as she follows this curriculum through? Increased knowledge? Yes, but that is far from enough. Peggy probably comes to Sweet Briar at seventeen and is still in some ways a little girl. The four years have failed if they have given her only a store of facts. Wisdom and maturity, responsibility and a purpose to be useful in a needy world cannot be taught in specific moments of drill, but if they do not come in the process of the four years at Sweet Briar, then the purpose of her education has not been fulfilled. Peggy should increase in maturity through knowing the great things that have been thought and said in the past, through the appropriation of the inherited culture of the race, through the kindling of her imagination, and perhaps most of all

Richmond Alumnae Club Project

Richmond alumnae of Sweet Briar and Hollins joined forces and sponsored a recital by Ernest Mead, Jr., one of Virginia's outstanding young pianists, at the Woman's Club in Richmond on Tuesday evening, April 8.

Judging by reports, this first joint venture by the two alumnae groups was very successful. Not only was the concert well received by critics and by the audience, but it gave members of the two groups a chance to work together for their colleges. It was also an opportunity to give a local artist support from within his own community, and its success forecasts other similar joint projects in the future.

through contact with men and women of vision and commitment to high ideals. The capstone of education is spiritual maturity. One student put the need for this phase of higher education this way: "They teach us everything in college, except how to live."

So we hope that Peggy is learning at Sweet Briar "how to live." Many of you alumnae have daughters who are Peggy's contemporaries or classmates. Do help us out of your wisdom and your knowledge of your children's hopes and needs to know how to make Sweet Briar do its full job for Peggy and her colleagues.

Some of the questions we are facing today as we plan for Sweet Briar you have already discussed. Some you will discuss in relation to this little story of our curriculum plan. Please let us have your findings and suggestions.

Perhaps your discussions may lead you to a study of your own community—your own schools where Peggy and her friends prepare for college. Professor Buckham tells me that she has already spoken to Sweet Briar alumnae groups in two cities where the discussion of Sweet Briar's educational aims has reached out into questions and action in the local community—study of the local schools and the improvement of education there. There is no better focus for educational discussion than that. And whatever else comes, you are actually engaging in adult education yourselves as you discuss the questions you yourselves adopted for study through your council meeting here last January. More power to you!

Additional questions for discussion:

Is the curriculum plan of Sweet Briar an organic unity as you see it?

Would it be strengthened or weakened by a series of core-courses taken by all students here? By a larger place for free electives in a given student's course?

Is democracy better furthered by a common experience of required work shared by all or by a "democracy of choice" in the elective system?

Can freedom of thought and speech be harmonized with the conveying of given ideals for personal or social life?

How can alumnae groups best channel their own educational ideals and achievements into service to education in their own communities?

Here and Now

S PRING is definitely in the air and on the campus, at last, and thoughts are turning to plans for next year as well as to final events for this year. Commencement takes place on Monday, June 3, and Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, will deliver the address at Sweet Briar's thirty-eighth annual graduation exercises. The Reverend C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Washington, will preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning, June 2. Details of plans for reunions will be mailed to all alumnae soon.

Five students have already made definite plans to study in foreign universities next year, two at St. Andrews and three at the University of Mexico in Mexico City. Martha Ellen Query, Concord, North Carolina, a graduate of Concord High School, and Sarah Porter Melcher, Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania, a graduate of Springside School, have been chosen to spend their junior year at St. Andrews. Martha will read for honors in psychology and Sarah in English upon their return to Sweet Briar. Sarah Strickland, Cincinnati, a Withrow High School graduate, Joan McCarthy, Glencoe, Illinois, graduate of New Trier High School, and Nancy Jones, Jackson, Ohio, graduate of the Columbus School for Girls, have been admitted to the Smith College Group to spend the junior year in Mexico City.

Paint and Patches' final play of the year, Dear Brutus by J. M. Barrie, was presented on April 11 and 12, under the direction of Miss Mary Elizabeth Wilson, and the annual spring concert of the Sweet Briar and University of Virginia Glee Clubs was given at Sweet Briar on April 26, under the direction of G. Noble Gilpin of Sweet Briar and Stephen D. Tuttle of the University of Virginia. Bach's Cantata No. 78, Jesu der Du meine Seele, and ten of Brahms' Liebeslieder Waltzer were sung by the combined choruses and the remainder of the program consisted of groups sung alternately by the two glee clubs.

Amherst County Day is scheduled to take place on Saturday, May 10, for the first time since 1941, under the joint auspices of the college and the local branch of the A.A.U.W. Guests are invited to come at 9 a. m. and stay until evening, and there will be the usual program of events planned for the enjoyment and edification of young and old alike, including the Better Baby Clinic, agricultural demonstrations, Home Demonstration Club events, games and contests for children, swimming and boating, etc. Miss Lucy Crawford is chairman this year, assisted by Gertrude Prior, '29, as co-chairman. As usual, students and faculty and other community members will be called on to help take care of the visitors and to aid with different parts of the day's program.

As a stimulus to students interested in teaching and as a means of encouraging others to consider entering the field, the Personnel Committee held a panel on teaching early in March. Three of the speakers at this highlysuccessful venture were alumnae, Nan Powell Hodges, '10, Lucile Cox, '36, and Harriet Willcox, '45. Mrs. Hodges, principal of Stuart Hall, presented the point of view of secondary school teaching in private schools; Lucile, who teaches Latin in E. C. Glass High School, Lynchburg, spoke on public high school teaching; Harriet told of her work and experiences as a pre-school teacher in Miss Turnbull's School, Norfolk. In addition, Miss Sarah Daughtrey, Amherst, presented administrative work in rural public schools, and Mrs. Monica Owen talked about application for teaching positions. Mrs. Owen is on the executive board of the Co-operative Teachers Agency, New York, and teaches in the Chestnut Hill School, Newton, Massachusetts.

Exhibited in the gallery of the Mary Helen Cochran Library during April were 18 water color paintings by Carl Y. Connor, professor of English. The paintings represent his hobby, which he has pursued for a good many years and to which he has devoted considerable study. These landscapes, painted in Florida, Virginia, Ontario, and the Canadian Rockies, reflect varying moods and seasons and the entire show was interesting and pleasing to beholders.

Change in Requirements for Admission

The following announcement was issued by the college in November, 1946:

Sweet Briar College is asking all applicants for admission in 1947 and future years to present the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Entrance Examination Board in fulfillment of the requirement of an aptitude test. In cases where hardship would be involved in meeting this requirement the College will cooperate with the applicant in making special plans.

There seems to our Committee on Admission definite advantage in having one common measurement of all applicants as a basis of comparison in selecting applicants for admission. The Scholastic Aptitude Test commends itself as an excellent test given under controlled conditions consistent with the high standards of the College Board. Over a period of years the number of applicants using the Scholastic Aptitude Test has increased so that only a small proportion of Sweet Briar applicants were not doing so. For these reasons we believe the requirement of the Scholastic Aptitude Test will facilitate fair and democratic administration of admissions.

Marion Bower

President of Student Government

Inducted into office on April 10, Marion Bower, New York, is the new president of the Student Government Association, successor of Judith Burnett, Richmond. Editor of the Briar Patch this year, Meon was president of her freshman class. She en-

New Alumnae Secretary Named

Harriet Shaw, '37, has been appointed as the new executive secretary-treasurer of the Alumnae Association, succeeding Helen McMahon, '23, whose resignation becomes effective on July 1.

Harriet, who is eager to begin learning about the duties and opportunities of her new position, will be at Sweet Briar beginning May 1. This means that she will have a chance to participate in the activities leading up to commencement, the busiest time of the alumnae year, before she actually takes office. She will be on hand to greet returning alumnae and to help make everything run smoothly while they are on campus.

For several years Harriet worked as a salesman in a Wall Street investment firm. At the outbreak of the war, she became a full-time volunteer office manager and assistant to the director of Civilian Defense in Pelham, New York, which is her home. An active member of the League of Women Voters and other civic organizations, Harriet has also been class secretary of 1937 for several years. She has recently been head of the Westchester County Sweet Briar Alumnae Club.

Her experience includes graduate studies in the School of Business Administration of New York University. Both her volunteer work and her business career have given her qualifications which will be of real value in her new post.

While she was a student, Harriet was the editor of the Sweet Briar News in her senior year. In addition, she was on the staff of the Briar Patch and on the executive committee of the Student Government Association, and she was a member of the International Relations Club.

Salary and Fee Increases

In order to maintain the high calibre of its faculty and to give to other employees fair compensation for their services in this period of high living costs, Sweet Briar this year put into effect salary and wage increases based on the results of a careful study made by a special committee of the Board of Overseers.

"It is our earnest hope," said President Lucas in announcing the increases, "that by wise use of our limited funds, Sweet Briar may be able to maintain and even strengthen the calibre of its faculty. This we consider to be of fundamental importance for the services which this college may render to its students and to the world."

To meet these advances in salaries and wages, the college was forced to raise its fees, effective in September, 1947. Tuition was increased from $450 to $600 and fees for room, board, etc., from $635 to $650, making the new total of $1250.

In taking these steps, it might be pointed out, Sweet Briar is doing what other colleges throughout the country are doing this year, and for similar reasons.

Letters From Juniors Abroad

What are our undergraduates who are now studying in Europe learning about Sweet Briar? How are they benefiting from their experiences in new environments?

The following letters, written by Patricia Cansler and Patricia Traugott, at St. Andrews, and Caroline Rankin, at Geneva, answer some of the questions.

Sunday, March 9, 1947.

Your letter arrived a few days ago—at rather a bad time, since we are all up to our eyes in exams! Patty and Virginia promise to write you as soon as they can find a spare moment, and I am seizing a few minutes before bed time to try to answer your questions.

All three of us have been very interested to compare the work here at St. Andrews with that which we did at Sweet Briar. We are frequently questioned by the students and teachers about our American colleges and universites—most people here are very vague about the whole system in the U. S., or have distorted ideas of college life, gained from magazines and movies. Another splendid reason for exchange students is to correct these misconceptions!

The work over here seems more intensive, compared to the wide, extensive range of subjects which we cover. Even in the first year at St. Andrews the students may carry at the most, three subjects. These subjects are of a general nature in the first year—and become specialized in the second and third years. The better students frequently remain for a fourth year to do honors work.

The classes are almost invariably entirely lecture, with no class discussion at all, which deprives the stodents of the stimolus and clash of ideas and makes class periods more formal and impersonal. There is far less student-professor contact here, and there is no advisor system for the women students, and only a limited one for the men. We feel that this is rather regrettable. The tutor system at Oxford and Cambridge—rather like our honors system at Sweet Briar—is different.

The work is really no more difficult. The emphasis is just placed on slightly more detailed information about fewer subjects. There are rarely explicit assignments made. The professor states the field he will cover in his series of lectures and the student is expected to do his reading independently—only one theme a semester is assigned—rarely to exceed 2,000 words—and the student is not required to use foot notes, bibliographies, etc.—even when he uses several books as sources.

The standard of grading is much higher—60-70 is considered second class work, 70-80 first class, and above that, exceptional! The Greek letters, Alpha, Beta, Gamma are used for grading—with an elaborate gradation of pluses and minoses. Regular term examinations are held at the end of the three terms—and then about two weeks after the last term, degree exams—covering all the work for the whole year, as held for all students of all classes!

The attitude toward learning over here is much more serious than at Sweet Briar! The students here have a good time and like to play as much as we do but they know why they have come to the university. It was hard for lots of them to get in. They are well aware of how fortunate they are and they work hard to make their time here worth while. They take a serious pride in a job well done and are determined always to "do better next time." I hope we can learn from them a deeper appreciation of education, as well as give them some of our nwn American youth and humour.

Sincerely, PAT CANSLER.

Wednesday, March 12

At present I'm on a train bound for the Lake District and so I hope this will be readable. I believe Pat explained to you why I am late in writing—a matter of exams. I finished yesterday and am literally exhausted. I don't believe I've ever worked so long and hard over my books. However, I feel that I've accomplished something!

Ever since I've been at St. Andrews I've been very impressed with the serious attitude of the students toward their work. Everyone seems to be all out for an education, There's definitely that "intellectual vitality" which we've often heard mentioned at Sweet Briar. I'm told that this serious attitude has come about mainly as a result of the

To All Former St. Andrews Juniors:

Probably each of you is in receipt of a communication from the "University Halls St. Andrews Graduates' Association," telling of a Jubilee Reunion, a Jubilee Prize Fund (scholarship for overseas study) and offering, rather diffidently, an opportunity to all former University Hall residents, whether graduates of the University or not, an opportunity to join the Association.

Any gift to the scholarship fund would be appreciated. The annual fee for membership in the Graduates' Association is 2 6, about fifty cents at the present rate of exchange.

Would it not be a very good thing for all of us to become members of this St. Andrews Alumnae Association? Financially our composite contribution would be small; judged by other no less important standards, however, I feel strongly that it would be valued and should be made.

In case the use of your maiden name and undergraduate address has confused the post office, and you have not received the notice, dues are to be sent to: Miss M. E. Osman, 7 Queens Gardens, St. Andrews, Fife. An easy, if somewhat extravagant way to send 2/6 is to send a one dollar bill.

> Sincerely, Katharine Niles Parker, '36.

return of the ex-service people, who are at the university to get an education—and as quickly as possible.

I've never seen students so keen about studying. Instead of people trying to see how little work they can do as is often the case at Sweet Briar, they try to see who can do the most work. In such an atmosphere one can't help but want to study also,

I love the courses that I'm taking—British History, Economics, and English Literature—although at times I dislike having to go into so much detail. But I do like working on my own. We never have assignments except for essays. But we know what period of history we have to cover and what period of literature we have to read. I've just taken an exam on Shakespeare—and all the work was done entirely by myself. We have no lectures at all on what we were examined. Our lectures had been on Hamlet and we couldn't bring in Hamlet on exam.

Consequently I had to do an immense amount of reading of Shakespeare's plays and about his life, style, etc. Never having done much before, it was quite a job. Likewise in history, we have to read books (of our own choice) and make our own notes although the lecture notes are very important too.

The work here is on a more mature level than at Sweet Briar. When we tell the students about our assignments and tests they just say, "Oh that's like school!" By the time they've reached a university, they like to work independently,

The exams I've just taken had questions very similar to ones asked at Sweet Briar but since there seems to be a higher intellectual level here, the exams are graded more stiffly. Fifty per cent is passing and, if you make in the sixties, that's considered quite good. It's very rare that anyone makes an eighty. I was ill last December during the exam period and so these are my first exams. After I get the results in April I'll be better able to judge the relative standard of work required at St. Andrews and Sweet Briar.

Most sincerely, PATTY TRAUGOTT.

Geneva, March 1, 1947.

Thank you so much for your letter, but as for the assignment I don't know how good a reporter I'm going to be. There's so much to say about Geneva and the University and when you get right down to brass tacks, Mary, Weezie and I feel pretty much the same way about things in general.

First of all, the whole attitude and atmosphere is entirely different from that of Sweet Briar or any other American college or university. There is next to no campus life, due to the fact that no one lives at the university itself. The school is divided into various "faculties" (letters, law, medicine, theology, etc.) but almost everything seems to take place in one large building. The students range in age from eighteen to eighty and consequently we don't begin to know everyone. Classes start in the morning at eight and go all day until seven. We've just about gotten used to coming home in the dark for dinner at 7:30. The classes are large on the whole, and the professor stands on a platform to lecture. The students beat their feet on the floor when he has delivered an especially good lecture but when they disagree they scrape their feet (and that often happens, by the way)! The professors give no assignments, but everyone is expected to read what interests him—and that means a trip to the library! It's truly an experience to try and get a book out—in the first place, no one but the librarian ever sees the books and after a wait of at least 45 minutes, the librarian returns with something that isn't at all what you wanted. So to my way of thinking, the Mary Helen Cochran Library has it all over the Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire of Geneva.

All in all, however, we're getting a great deal out of this entirely new and different way of life and study. We love Geneva and the Swiss people and customs, and find all of the professors excellent in their various fields. It's terribly difficult to accustom oneself to deciding how and what to study after having been pampered and more or less spoon-fed at Sweet Briar. But exams are starting a week from Monday so we'll see how successful our efforts have been.

And then Mary and I hope to go to Spain for two weeks—we plan to go directly to the south and visit Granada, Alicante, Cadiz, Seville, etc., and then meet the group at Avignon for two weeks at the Riviera. We're both so excited that it's going to be a real chore to settle down and study hard for the fast approaching exams.

Sincerely, CAROLYN RANKIN.

In Memoriam

Dr. Katherine Lummis, former dean of Sweet Briar, died March 5 at her home in Philadelphia after a brief illness. Miss Lummis came to Sweet Briar as associate professor of Latin in 1917 and a year later she became professor. In 1921 she was made Sweet Briar's first dean. She continued as teacher of Latin and dean of the college until 1923, when she resigned to go to Wells College, where she remained until her retirement in 1936.

Born in Natick, Massachusetts, she was the daughter of Dr. Henry Lummis, former head of the Greek and Latin department of Lawrence College, Appleton, Wisconsin. Dr. Lummis was graduated from Stanford University and also studied at Johns Hopkins and Columbia Universities and the American College in Rome.

Report of The Committee for the Revision of The Constitution and By-Laws

Here are the new Constitution and By-Laws of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association. We, the Committee, Louise Hammond Skinner, '19, Martha Valentine Cronly, Academy, Norvell Royer Orgain, '30, Grace Merrick Twoby, '25, and all the members of the Council who havestruggled and worked over them for the past eight months wish that we could believe that you will greet their appearance as avidly as your children do the latest Funny Books or you do the latest edition of Vogue. However we know that By-Laws like Treasurer's Reports, regardless of how important they are fall under the classification of necessary reading so the most we really can hope is that you will read these By-Laws and go over them carefully, then cast your vote either by mail or at the Annual meeting of the Association at Commencement.

There is one important change that we want you to be sure to notice and that is the single slate for Officers and Council members. Our last Nominating Committee recommended this but the change was only agreed to by the Council after a long and thorough discussion and after consulting innumerable By-Laws of organizations similar to ours. Most of us felt that the single slate is the most satisfactory form of election for an organization as large as ours.

There are no other drastic differences between these new By-Laws and our old ones but they have been reassembled and simplified. We hope that if they are adopted they will serve us for years to come.

Your careful reading and vote are humbly solicited by your

Constitution and By-Laws chairman,

Grace MERRICK Twoby

ACADEMY—SPECIAL

Class Secretary: Marion L. Peele, 602 Fairfax Avenue, Apt. 1-C, Norfolk 7, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Margaret Potts (Mrs. Henry H. Williams), 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Congratulations are due the Academy-Special group! Not a word of complaint can be offered, for in immediate response to requests, Martha Valentine Cronly, Dorothy Wallace Ravenel, and Juliet Parris Gill have my pockets fairly bulging with news of so many about whom, doubtless, you have often wondered.

Invitations are out from Vice Admiral and Mrs. Lyal A. Davidson (Carolyn Gwathmey) to the marriage of their older daughter, Judith Ament, Sweet Briar, '41, to Major Anthony Walker, USMC, at St. John's Church, Washington, D. C., April 12. Carolyn's other daughter is married already, and Admiral Davidson has retired. They are now living at 2909 Thirty-fourth Street, NW, Washington.

Martha Cronly wrote: "Obedient to your order, I have racked my brain for news of real interest, but am afraid I'm not going to be of much help. Starting with myself, we have been back in Richmond in our own home since Christmas 1945. John, Jr., returned from Japan in February 1946 and is working in Richmond. He will be married May 17 to Anne Rose, also from here. I spend three days each week working at the Valentine Museum, as curator of costumes and accessions. At the moment we are busy with our annual costume exhibit which opens for Garden Week. It is to be A Century and a Half of Brides.

"The January meeting of the Alumnae Council at Sweet Briar was a huge success, as you have probably heard. We had our first educational discussion program meeting in Richmond last week; it was well attended and there was a lot of interesting discussion on the subject of Miss Lucas' letter concerning Liberal Arts Education at Sweet Briar.

"Fannie Miller Williams is again a grand-mother; Carrington, Jr., and Emory Gill, '40, have recently had a son. "Lib" Cock has been spending the past two months in California. I was staying with "Greenie" Shepherd (Elizabeth Green, '14) in Washington in late February, and saw Florence Cann Seaman, who lives in Washington now. I had hoped to see Nellie Davidson Thomas, but she fell on the ice and broke her leg. You will be saddened by the news that Ruth Watkins Taliaferro (ex-'17), died early in March. Bill told me over long distance telephone that she had a heart attack. I see Virginia Robertson Harrison and Mary Johnston Jerman frequently, but none of us is doing anything which would be exciting in The News.

News from another direction came from Dorothy Wallace Ravenel, Charleston, South Carolina, who said among other things: "It is rather depressing to think of ourselves as grandmothers, but Allen Sinkler Deas, Mary Simonds Sparkman, and I are the only ones here from the early days at Sweet Briar who aren't. Sara Simons Hastie, Sallie Miller Bennett, Carla Sloan Shackelford, and Elizabeth Sloan Mullaly are all enjoying their grand-children. I look like a grandmother without having the pleasure of being one.

"At present my two boys are at college. They went back when they returned from the Pacific and I hope they will get their degrees. They are here at The Citadel and it's wonderful having them at home. My days are taken up with them and my doctor husband, and I really should install a steam table to take care of the various meals that are served at all hours.

"I hear from Henrietta Washburn, '14, and Rebecca Patton, '14, every now and then. They seem quite young, doing all the things they write about. Bessie Grammer Torrey, '13, hasn't been well, but her son writes that she is better. Her youngest son was stationed here during the war and spent week-ends with us. It was so nice having a boy in the house when both of ours were away."

Of course, everybody goes to Washington sooner or later, some often, and evidently Juliet Gill sees any number of our "old girls." She wrote, too, of Nellie Davidson Thomas' bad fall on the ice. Nellie is now at home, but is in a cast and it will be months probably before she is walking again. Juliet says Nellie is cheerful and chipper, as always, and of course is making the best of it. While Juliet and Nellie were together in New York in February they visited Margaret Cobb Howard for several days at Oyster Bay. Juliet said: "As usual, we had a most wonderful time in her beautiful home, and Margaret is as beautiful and gracious as ever, more so if possible. Kitty Quinby Castle was here not long ago with her husband for her I would write you a few items of news she had just stepped out of Vogue. She and nephew's wedding. Kitty looked as though her husband are now in Florida, where they go for several weeks each winter. They have several grandchildren.

"Martha Cronly you probably know about. She was here not long ago visiting "Greenie" Shepherd. She is always full of pep and so attractive. Did you know that Delia Lindsay Bogart died January 4, in Winnetka, Illinois? She had been ill a long time and left a husband and daughter, Dale who went to Sweet Briar. I saw Emmy Thomas Thomason in November. She was representing the Red Cross for Chattanooga. She is the same old Emmy, always good fun, and hasn't changed a bit. Her husband was with her and all of us like him immensely. I heard from Cynie Magee at Christmas; she is living near Philadelphia. Jessie Dixon Saylor is pleased with becoming a grandmother. Mary Osborne Steeves visited Florence Cann Scaman here this winter and Greenie said she lunched with them.

"Mayo Thach Tarpley is a frequent visitor in Washington as her mother and brother live here. She is sweet about looking up her old friends, and is so good looking and attractive and full of personality. No doubt you know what a name her son is making for himself in the movies as Frank Latimore. Frances Richardson Pitcher stops several times a year, too, on her way to Charleston, West Virginia, to see her mother. Frances' real home is in Vermont, but she and her husband are spending the winter in New York. Eloise Orme Robinson has her two boys safely back from the war and is happy making a home for them again."

Isn't this a marvelous roll call of familiar names? I tried for news of some of you at great distances, but without much luck. So, won't some of you near Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis, or Los Angeles write me news of those of our group whom you see or hear from? You can judge from the bits of news above how interesting it will be to many others.

Class Sccretary: (for this issue), FRANCES MURRELL, (Mrs. Everingham Rickards), North Shore Point, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

Fund Agent: EUGENIA GRIFFIN, (Mrs. Charles R. Burnett), 5906 Three Chopt Road, Richmond 21, Virginia.

Although I am not your secretary I thought concerning those of us in Norfolk and Richmond. A letter from Eugenia Griffin Burnett says she is leaving this week for a trip to Natchez and Greenville, Mississippi. Some of you may remember that her second daughter, Judith Cary, who has been President of Student Government (the second in the family) graduates from Sweet Briar this year.

Annie Cumnock Miller and I had luncheon with Marjorie Couper Prince a few days ago. We three and Louise Hooper Ewell are doing the same old thing, keeping house. While Norfolk is not as hectic as it was during the war years most of us have to get along without much or any help.

My daughter, Frances, class 1944, is with me this winter and is taking some mathematics at William and Mary Division.

About two weeks ago the Sweet Briar alumnae of Norfolk were invited to hear our Dr. B. B. Beard who was guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Quota Club. Afterwards we went to Ellen Blake's, '29, President of the Norfolk Alumnae Club, for more refreshments and a good old fashioned party where we all sat around talking about everything!

If you have any news about yourselves or others please send it to me or Eugenia Burnett.

Class Secretary: Josephine Murray, (Mrs. J. Whitman Joslin, Jr.), 200 West Madison Avenue, Johnstown, New York.

Esther Keller Brown and her mother spent last summer with Esther's daughter and her family in South America. I will quote from a note received from her at Christmas time.

"Our trip turned out just as planned, which is remarkable really, when one flies; and I got home just in time to attend teachers' meeting the next morning. Mother is a good flyer, and I never notice any discomfort. I did get very tired of all the red tape and the eternal waiting. If I go again, I hope to take my time and go on a boat. It's more restful.

"We spent two months in Iquique living with Anne Marie and her family. Her two little boys quite came up to our expectations and I had a wonderful time with them, especially Marito, the younger, who was two while we were there. The rest of the time we were in Santiago. Anne Marie and the children were there too."

Frances Murrell Richards has sent us a most interesting account of the recent return to China of Alma Booth and her husband, Dr. Harry Taylor. These are excerpts from the story in The North China Daily News:

"The arrival of eight Americans last week was an occasion that caused pleasant excitement. Dr. Taylor, who has worked in St. James Hospital for many years, was now returning after internment and repatriation, and his innumerable friends took his arrival as a time to welcome him warmly. The city as a whole has missed the service of the hospital deeply during the years it was closed by the Japanese, and is now eager to have it re-open. Representatives of the officials and gentry as well as a large gathering from the Churches came down to the river bank to welcome Dr. and Mrs. Taylor, the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Pickens with their two children, and our new medical social worker, Miss Virginia Hobbert, Flowers were presented, a bouquet to each new arrival, by pretty little girls in gay dresses. A welcome banner has been prepared by the church members, and a fine, red bien, or tablet was presented to Dr. Taylor by members of the China Inland Mission. These were borne aloft and led the military band, the procession started with the new arrivals and friends in line and amid the roar of fire crackers. This roar continued at frequent intervals during the roundabout progress, as friends along the route took this method of showing their joy at Dr. Taylor's return, and only ceased after the compound was entered. Then the inevitable photographs were taken and Dr. Taylor interviewed by reporters for the local paper.

"A lovely service of thanksgiving was held on Sunday, February 2, followed by an open air meeting of welcome with speeches by many. Dr. Taylor is now in the midst of the usual round of feasts.

"The hospital has been gotten into condition for re-opening by the strenuous work of the two early arrivals, ably assisted by the Rev. Graham Kwei and the entire staff, and they have done a remarkable job. The first patients have been seen and one admitted to the reconditioned hospital. St. James Hospital has been a tower of strength and health for the past forty years to all within the city's walls and to many without, serving high and low, those with money and those without.

The Chinese have what they call their Three Lucky Stars, Happiness, Prosperity, and Longevity, all represented by three old men. The three are found in almost every home. On Dr. Taylor's return, many people have expressed their appreciation of him by calling him "An Chin tih Fu Hsin", Anking's Star of Happiness!"

Class Secretary and Rennion Chairman: LOU-LIE M. WILSON, 2034 16th Street, Washington, D. C.

Fund Agent: MARGARET THOMAS (Mrs. Paul J. Kreusi) Riverview, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

This is our 35th reunion year. I hope we will see the familiar faces of 1912 at Sweet Briar in June, and let's try to have some news for the June magazine for those who can't come.

1913

Class Secretary: MARY PINKERTON (Mrs. James Kerr), Box 143, Spotsylvania, Virginia.

191

Secretary: Marjorie French (Mrs. Charles L. Nevens), 1430 Bishop Road, Grosse Pointe, Michigan.

Fund Agent: WANTED!

My letter this time will have to consist of news received too late for previous issues.

A card from Laura Portmann Mueller tells of her interesting family, but little of herself. She has one son in high school and a daughter, Carol, 21, at Chicago University working for her M.A. in Political Science. Ilse (Radcliffe '41) is an administrator in F. P. H. A. in Washington. Darya, married and with 2 children, is in Minneapolis.

Rebecca Patton's answer to my card asking her to write all about herself, says: "Possibly 'all about myself' will include confessing to a very gray head, slow gait, mellowed thinking, and a middle spread." However, she does admit to being chin up in things and, following Sweet Briar philosophy, loves being so.

Grace Callan Bond wrote of her very busy life as Vice-President of the National Society of the Daughters of 1812. She has 2 married daughters and 2 grandchildren. Her older daughter, Lydia, graduated from Albany State Teachers College and Betty from Barnard in '44.

Eleanor Furman Hudgens answered my card from Washington where she has been living for eight years and where her husband is associate administrator of the Farm Security Administration. Eleanor has 2 children, a married daughter who is the mother of 2 boys, and a son who is a senior this year at the Hill School in Pottstown, Pennsylvania. He expects to enter Princeton in the fall.

I'm sure all these items are just as interesting now as they were to me when I received them, too late for the last issue.

Class Secretary: Bertha Pfister (Mrs. Benjamin Wailes) Sweet Briar, Virginia.

Fund Agent: POLLY BISSELL (Mrs. Earl S. Ridler) 608 Lindsay Road, Wilmington 20, Delaware.

Reunion Chairman: BERTHA PEISTER, (Mrs. Ben Wailes) Sweet Briar, Virginia.

Hope to see you all at Sweet Briar May 31st for our 30th Reunion! Polly Ridler is sending questionnaires which will be compiled into our reunion book, and it won't be complete without your contribution.

Polly is off in Texas and in California now with Caroline Sbarpe Sanders ('19). Polly is President of the Wilmington, Delaware, A.A.U.W. and their delegate to the A.A.U.W. conference in Dallas. While she is in the west she plans to visit Ruth Mc-Ilrary Logan in Piedmont, California. It sounds like a perfect way to spend 6 weeks.

It is with sorrow that we bring to your attention the death of Ruth Watkins Talia-ferro, on March 4, 1947.

Marianne Martin has had such an interesting winter. She has been taking graduate work at Emory University in Georgia. She found that "even after a quarter of a century", her Sweet Briar degree could hold its own with those of the other graduate students! She matriculated in the Candler School of Theology, and, in addition, took courses in other departments of the University: Marianne found the graduate students interesting to talk to. I am sure the rest of '18 join me in congratulations to her in tackling such hard study.

Mary Reed has been very busy at home. Her mother's health has failed and Mary has taken over the nursing, housekeeping, and gardening. She finds time to keep up with her friends but the outside activities which she used to take part in, such as Y.W. and the League of Women Voters she has had to forego. She says she loves to hear from her classmates and hopes to return to college for our next reunion.

Betty Lowman Hall insists that she has no new degrees or honors this winter—she has just been a busy housewife and mother. She also plans to return when '18 has their next big reunion.

Iloe Bowers Joel writes that her son, Jack, was in the V-12 at Wabash College, at pre-Midshipmen School at Asbury Park, and Midshipmen School at Northwestern University where he won his commission as an Ensign. After additional training in Miami, he was sent to the Pacific. The whole family welcomed him in California after the war ended and now he is studying pre-law at Wabash. Another son, Bob, is a pre-med student at the same school, and so is the son of Mary Virginia Crabbs Shaw. She said she thought of Sweet Briar and longed to slip down there last year when she was in New York but there just wasn't time, Catherine Marshall Shuler has been in Florida for two months. She says the grand-children are darling—I can hardly wait to see them.

Amy Elliott Jose also has some grand-children; 3 little girls. One is 3 years old, and the other 2 a month old. Her son and his wife are both graduates of Swarthmore. Her daughter is at Wheaton College and the second son is just 17. She says she loves to hear and read news of Sweet Briar.

Corinne Gibbon Woollcott writes that one son, Philip, Jr., is a student at the University of North Carolina and the second boy, Jim, is attending Asheville School. Mary Barber Ambler's son, Charles, goes to Asheville School also. Corinne's niece, Louise Gibbon Carmichael, hopes to enter Sweet Briar next fall.

Word has just reached me that Vivienne Barkalow Hernbeck and her husband, who has been ambassador to the Netherlands, have returned to Washington. Vivienne has undoubtedly had many interesting experiences and we shall hope to have news from her before June.

Many thanks for your news and letters. It was grand hearing from you all.

Fund Agent: Rosanne Gilmore, 1303 Terminal Tower, Cleveland 13, Ohio.

Elizabeth Hodge Markgraf was the only one who answered my plea for news this time. Her daughter, Betsy, is at Sweet Briar and, I notice, is on the Freshman honor list for the first half year, though Elizabeth was too modest to mention this. Her son, Hodge, is a Junior in High School and will be a candidate for college in another year. She herself, speaks of having gone to Sweet Briar for Miss Lucas' inauguration and returning home rejuvenated. I know exactly what she means as it is the one place I can go and toss my family cares aside completely.

I paid Louise Hammond Skinner a visit several weeks ago. It was the first time I had seen her darling little home in Norfolk, and I thoroughly enjoyed her, the new house (which, by the way, she calls the "basinet" because it is all done in pink and blue,) and her friends. On her return visit here recently I entertained in the kitchen as my cook was off.

I understand Jo Payne Miller is taking an active part in the new Alumnae Club program. I'm sorry I was not able to attend Richmond's first meeting about a week ago.

If you would have more news of each other please send me some in time for the June issue.

1920

Class Secretary: WANTED!

Fund Agent: GERALDINE JONES (Mrs. R. Taylor Lewis), Route 6, Gainesville, Texas.

Dorothy Wallace writes that she has resigned her position as Assistant Professor in Chemistry and Physiology at Goucher and on the first of the year began work for the Argonne National Laboratory of the University of Chicago. This is the metallurgical laboratory of atomic bomb fame where Dorothy worked during the war.

1921

Fund Agent: GERTRUDE THAMS, 800 Race Street, Denver, Colorado.

A note from Mildred Featherston told me of the recent death of Peg Spengel Runge's husband. I am sure your classmates, Peg, join me in offering you our deepest sympathy. Peg's address is 4237 Southwestern Blvd., Dallas 5, Texas.

I have little news for you since you did not take your pens in hand to write me as I suggested in my February letter. However, I do want to tell you the "Wake Up, Alumnae" discussion program now being started in 56 cities, started with a bang in Cincinnati last week. I do so hope you too, in your cities are starting discussion groups, as outlined in the letter sent your clubs by Kitty Blount Andersen, Chairman of the Educational Program Committee of the Alumnae Council. Read about it elsewhere in the issue as well as in the February Alumnae magazine, and, if you are interested in the project and no one has urged you to participate, write to me or to Kitty, Mrs. Fred Andersen, at Bayport, Minnesota. I am sure you will find the discussion plan interesting and the results, when compiled from alumnae all over the country, will be of great value to our college, we hope.

25 YEAR REUNION

1923

Class Secretary: WANTED!

Fund Agent: Jane Guignard (Mrs. Broadus Thompson), P. O. Box 480, Columbia, South Carolina.

Stanley Miller Hopkins writes, with well-merited pride, of her 3 children. The youngest, Kingsley, Jr., hopes to be at Lawrenceville Prep next year. The older girl, Frances, is a sophomore at Wellesley College and Julie is a fresman at Stephens College in Missouri, and both of them are on their respective Dean's lists. Julie is president of her house for next year, too. Stanley says she "toys with the notion of coming back for our 25th reunion" and looks forward to seeing her friends again in 1948.

1925

Fund Agent: Jane Becker (Mrs. John Clippinger), 1263 Haywood Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Welcome news that of Martha McHenry Halter's visit to Evelyn Pretlow Rutledge in Coral Gables, Florida. We haven't had any first-hand accounts but read in the papers that this is the first time Evelyn and Martha have been together since they left Sweet Briar lo these many years ago.

1926

Class Secretary: WANDA JENSCH (Mrs. Welton W. Harris), Greenville, Delaware.

Fund Agent: KATHRYN NORRIS (Mrs. Stillman F. Kelly), Babson Park 57, Massachusetts.

I wish all of you could have had the opportunity that I had recently of meeting our new President, Miss Lucas. I think you would agree with me that she is a worthy successor to Miss Glass.

In the interest of having better news from all our classmates 1 am sending cards to only a quarter of the class at a time. Therefore, each of you will only receive one card a year, so when you receive your card please do not fail to answer with news about you and yours.

Sis MacGregor sent a typewritten card with the comment that only a scorsman could write so much for one cent. Sis is liviog among the stars these days. After 15 years at the Board of Education Adminstration Offices, in June 1944 she became Office Manager of the Buhl Planetarium and Institute of Popular Science, the newest and most modern of the five Planetariums in the U.S. Sis finds her work fascinating and is kept busy hanging up the stars in the sky and dusting off the moon. She lives in a residence with 240 other gals and it reminds her of dorm life at Sweet Briar. Edith Ma-Kelvey, Katherine Tracy, Margaret Laidley Smith and Sis manage a few reunions each year. Sis recently gave her 15th pint of blood at the Red Cross.

I was pleased to have inspired Anne Maybank Cain to answer her card. Anne saw Tab Hazelwood Whitaker just before Christmas. Tab had come to Columbia, South Carolina, to see her husband's new grandson. Margaret Elliott Manning, Retta Nelson Weston, Tab and Anne had a good reunion. Margaret had an exhibit of her miniatures and Anne says she does exquisite work. Retta's son Bill was King of May Day at his school last spring. Anne and Jane Riddle Barbour are planning a trip to Myrtle Beach this spring.

Dot McKee Abney hopes to spend part of the summer at Ocean City, New Jersey, and 1 only hope 1 will be there at the same time. Dot wrote that her son Hamp, a Junior in high school and daughter, Barbara, 13, keep her busy with their activities. Peggy Malone McClements' youngest daughter is in the same class as Barbara at school.

I learned from Mew White Knobloch that Helen Fineb Halford and family spent the Christmas holidays in Switzerland. Mew is kept busy attending board meetings of the V.W.A., Y.W.C.A. and the Garden Club. She thinks she is on too many boards but admits she enjoys her work. Mew is headed for Nantucket this sommer. This spring she plans to see Dottie Hamilton Davis as they are driving down to Sweet Briar—lucky gals!

Helen Mutschler Becker wrote that her oldest daughter, Pat, is married and living in Lowell, Massachusetts. Helen also has a daughter, 10, and a boy, 6. The Beckers like living in Winter Haven, Florida. Markel, her hosband is a country doctor. Helen keeps busy with P.-T.A. work, playing golf and taxiing her children to school, piano and dancing lessons.

A letter, mind all of yoo, not a card, from Kitty Peyton Moore said that keeping up with housework, a husband and two boys, 16 and 12 is a full time job. Kathleen Willis Peavy fives just a block from Kitty. Kathleen has a boy at Texas University and another son just seven. Kitty also said that Dottie Reinburg Fuller and her three children are living in Lynchburg.

Wish some of you gals would do as Dot Bailey Hughes did. Dot cleaned out her desk and found one of my cards, then answered it. The Hughes lead an uneventful, but happy existence, says Dot. Kenny and Bail are both in high school and Joe is in the 6th grade. Dot's interests are the usual ones, P.-T.A., Community Fund, Red Cross, Boy Scouts, and attending all high school athletic and dramatic affairs. Dot said her boys are nice guys, even the papa, so life is fun. I was glad to hear that Dot still finds time for bridge.

I had a grand letter from Ginny Lee Taylor Tinker with which she sent a newspaper clipping about her daughter, Joan. Joan is a sophomore at Kimberley School and is one of a long line of high school students who have played the chimes at St. James Chorch for a period of two or three years, Joan also plays the piano, sings in the glee club, studies voice, and is head of the junior girls' choir at St. James. She hopes to enter Sweet Briar the fall of '49. Ginny Lee's son, George, attends Montelair Academy.

I have received word that we have two recent marriages in the class. Rebecca Ashcraft McGinnis is now Mrs. Robert D. Warren, She is living in Memphis.

Annabel Eberbardt, also an ex 26, was married to Carl E. Carter in Pittsburgh.

20-YEAR REUNION-JUNE, 1947

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. W. B. Crane, Jr.), 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: CLAIRE HANNER (Mrs. Wylie H. Arnold), 2410 Vernon Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Reunion Chairman: EMILY JONES (Mrs. Hanson H. Hodge) Shipley Road, Wyckwood R.D. 2, Wilmington, Delaware.

I was glad to hear from so many of you even though it appears that March is the most trying of the seasons with children recovering from all manner of things which started with a mere sniffle, and mama worn down with worry and toil and her sinuses, in the state that most of '27 is in at this writing. It is some consolation to know that when this reaches you everything will be green again and the snow suits will be in moth balls!

Here is news and good news, too! Florence Shortau Poland and her husband adopted a 4-months-old baby boy on Valentine's Day. Nar Warren Taylor has just returned from New York where she attended a meeting of the Secondary Education Board. She spent some time with "Shorty" and tells us that the baby, William Dennis Poland, is a handsome husky young fellow.

Claire Hanner Arnold's little girl, Julia, attends Nar Warren's school and apparently follows in her mother's footsteps in personality and beauty. Claire and Jolia spent several weeks in Florida. I wonder if they ran across Elizabeth Cates Wall?

It was a pleasure to hear from Hilda Harpster who teaches at the University of North Carolina. I find myself quoting her: "Being so near Virginia I am quite conscious of Sweet Briar. And proudly so! Only yesterday a member of our staff, a Goucher graduate, spoke in very complimentary terms of our Martha Locas. As alumnae, we take great pride in Sweet Briar's new president, not forgetting for a moment those who guided us in the past. Spring is slowly creeping into North Carolina. None of us will ever forget the spring at Sweet Briar, when we took our daily excursions to Bos Rhea's. 'Twas a good gang that loitered there.''

Caroline Compton is busy painting portraits in Vicksburg. We are mighty proud of her and only wish we could see an exhibition of her work.

A grand letter from "Ibby" Luck Hammond tells us that Hall, one of the few Democrats elected to office last November is now Attorney General for Maryland. "Ibby" and Hall had a wonderful trip to California and saw Babe Albers Foltz, her husband and two adorable boys. Babe looks fine. She drove them around the fabolous Los Angeles soburbs and was an excellent guide.

Jane Riddle Thornton promises news from Richmond next time. She was convalescing from flu when she wrote.

Julia Reynolds Dreisbach spent a week in New York shopping, seeing old friends, shows, etc. She may get back to reunion. She wants to bring Georgia, her eldest daughter, down because she too, hopes to attend Sweet Briar next year. Georgia was elected to the National Honor Society and was voted "Best Citizen" of her school.

Our friend Paoline Payne Bachus writes only a brief card, to this secretary's disappointment. Besides her usual duties as housewife, etc., etc., she is teaching Spanish at the University of Toledo.

Laura Boynton Rawlings and her family are planning to spend the summer in California. This nipped in the bud her plans to come to reunion with Virginia Stephenson.

We wish to express our sympathy to Genevieve Black Newton whose mother passed away last fall.

Ruth Lowrance Street is taking an active part in the Chattanooga Alumnae Club, particularly on their newly formed Educational Policy discussion group.

Rebecca Manning Cutler is back to two jobs again—i.e. home and law.

Elise Morley Fink and George, plus the four children, should be at the moment you read this at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Virginia.

Kelly Vizard Kelly's husband has been advanced to Vice-President of the American Brakeshoe Company.

Alice Eskesen Ganzel enjoyed a dinner party at Margaret Green Runyon's when Alice was in Westfield at Christmas. Dot Garland Weeks was another of the guests.

Marjorie Stone Neighbors, way off in Texas, doesn't find it easy to get to New York for lunch as I had suggested. I live in hope that Jo Snowdon, besides her trip to Virginia in June, is plotting ways and means of getting to New York in April.

To bring us up to date on Maude Adams Smith, she lives at 94 Main Street, Concord, Massachusetts. After her two years at Sweet Briar she attended the University of Illinois. Her husband, Harold C. Smith, is an Illinois graduate too. He is now President of the Colonial Press, book manufacturers, in Clinton, Mass, They have three children, Lewis, 13; Carolyn, 10, and Miriam, 5. Maude has taken an active interest as trustee and executive secretary in Brooks School, which all of the children have attended (the little one is there now). Her other interests are: League of Women Voters and the Concord organization for French Relief. She has attended the Boston Sweet Briar Alumnae meetings regularly for the past ten years and enjoyed talking to Dan Boone when she visited the Boston group last spring.

There is some news of me; I am shaking the dust from my house and Connecticut as of tomorrow. March 29, and I'm heading for New Orleans. I plan to spend as much time as possible with M. Brown Wood and shall tell her, for all of you, that the class of '27 is most anxious to have her and her "box" back at our 20th. We ought to beseige her with cards and committees and flowers to get her there. As far as I know Connie Van Ness will be the next "committee" to visit her.

Thanks every blessed one of you for your help in this column. I do appreciate the praise which many of you have bestowed upon me, but it is really you who deserve all the credit. Just the fact that some of you return the cards, even though they say "no news", means something.

Believe it or not Sophie Louttall Chambliss is back on our records by her own hand. We certainly are happy about this news—for we searched in vain for her last year. It brings joy to our hearts to remember how she brightened our Freshman days with her wit and humor. Will find out more for the next News. Information is scanty now but she is Mrs. Jack Chambliss, 1 Le Grand Place, Montgomery, Alabama.

Our reunion extends from Saturday, May 31, through noon, Monday, June 2. Try to make it if only for a short time. Wish I could predict for you who will be there but all I can say this windy, snowy March day is that many are planning and hoping. However, regardless of how many others show up, to be on the campus again and to meet Miss Lucas is a sure guarantee of a good time.

Class Secretary: Katherine Brightbill (Mrs. Robert O. Biltz), 161 W. Maple Avenue, Langhorne, Pennsylvania.

Class Secretary: POLLY McDiarmio (Mrs. Pierre Serodino), Signal Mountain, Tennessee. Fund Agent: Belle Brockenbrough (Mrs. John S. Hutchins), 250 Birch Street, Winnetka, Illinois.

That reminder card from the Alumnae Office comes at the darndest times; it seems to catch me either coming or going. But never mind, I have someone in mind to succeed me, who will be simply wonderful, and never skip. Right now, she has a new baby, so the approach will have to be delayed a short while!

Pete and I have just returned from a month at Captiva Island in Florida. We left young Peter as a boarding student at Baylor School, here in Chattanooga, which was a fine experience for a 12 year old. We loved every minute of our trip, in spite of the cold weather and poor fishing, (although in one afternoon four of us caught 102 lbs., mostly sheephead).

We ran into several Sweet Briar girls, Jane Shelton Williams '34, who had been down there visiting her husband's mother for three months, with her darling little girl, Patsy. Mary Shelton Clark '29, arrived to pick up Jane and to stay a while too. This was Mary's second trip to Florida this winter as she spent New Year's week in Miami, with her two Georges, initiating their new boat.

At Vero Beach, we picked up Peggy, my twin sister, remember? who had been visiting one of the grandest Sweet Briar girls I know, Kay Zeuch Forster '23.

Within two days of our return, we took off for Cincinnati. Going through Lexington I called Anne Brent Winn '29, who had just returned from Little Rock, Arkansas. I didn't find out how, why, or when, because soon as it was my turn to talk, Pete and Peter were furiously honking the horn outside the filling station. I'm still kicking myself for being so easily bluffed.

We spent the night in Louisville on our return trip with Ruth Ferguson Smythe '29, and her precious family. They are a joy to watch growing up. Ruth had just returned from a League of Women Voters meeting in St. Louis.

Edith Roach, 'ex 29, of Richmond, was married October 19 to Sverre Tollefsen. They are living at her old address in Richmond.

Sally Callison Jamison reports that Belle Brockenborough Hutchins has a new baby boy, born January 18th, and named Brown Brockenborough Hutchins; this makes four boys for Belle! She and John are now vacationing in Bermuda.

That's all for now. Next time I won't take you on a travelogue, as I see no trips in sight.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George Writer, Jr.), 21 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York.

While doing some archaeological work near Richmond, Virginia lately, I found, in the historical sub-strata, a real original species Elizabeth Gorsline! She claims she has been around there for years, was recently evicted from her residence and is now living in the country but "panting for the city streets". She is working at the Medical College Hospital as a secretary but gave me no other news of herself. However, she had some interesting rumors to pass along. One, that Louise Nelson, returned from Service, married a farmer and lives near Richmond. Another, that Emma Riely is "married to a Frenchman". I shall try to dig up more details Remy Lemaire is the gentleman's name.—Editor.

In my explorations I have found some more treasures:

Peg Carpenter Terry, lost for many years, was discovered among the cave dwellers of the Ohio Valley, all in one piece, excellent condition, a wife and mother of three children. They are Marshall, Jr., aged 16; Lee, aged 14; and Sandra, aged 11. Peg lived in Cleveland five years, Akron seven and now outside of Cincinnati for six. They call their place "Seven Acres" and have gone in for a large garden, as well as the Egg & I game. The old girl seems to get around, though, as she says she is active in the Writers and Players groups of the Woman's Club, is on the Board of the Council of Church Women and for four years was active in the Red Cross Motor Corps. She says she sees Elizabeth Smith Reaves a great deal and that Elizabeth has a six year old son named Rusty. Peg and Elizabeth roomed together at Miami University after they left Sweet Briar.

The above was not all squeezed on a post card, you know. And now, I am proud to say, Margaret Fanlkner Camp is also kind enough to write a letter and squander a 3c stamp for auld lang syne! Margaret is in Lynchburg and (this will take you back) is working at Millner's, that Mecca of our weekly pilgrimages. I am sure she has fun seeing the Sweet Briar girls and keeping posted as to what goes on. She has two children, Roderick Taliaferro Camp and Elizabeth Cabell Camp, the former of whom will enter college in the fall. Could you stood it? Margaret says Jette Baker Davidson has four children and Lucy Miller Baber has two.

Am delighted to tell you that I have heard from Helen Smith Miller, who returned last summer from three years in the E.T.O. with the Red Cross. She is now Assistant Director of the A.R.C. in the Veteran's Hospital in Rutland Heights, Massachusetts and says she loves it—"there is so much to do and it is so interesting." She refers to having lost her father and I know you will all want me to write and express our sympathy. She has sold her home to Betty Neill Danner ('29) but her official address is still Sparkill, New York.

Among the "Volunteers of the Year", one selected from each Junior League in the country, is our own Lucy Harrison Baber. Lynchburg League's representative to the Civic Committee for Children's Services, Lucy "arranged with those industries employing mothers of the children, a means by which a Child Care Center, on a civic level, could be established. Besides being the official guiding hand, she has worked at the center, personally interviewing mothers and prospective teachers, getting to know the children, and serving as Chairman of the Center's Board of Directors,"

Did you think our WAC Captain, Marjorie Sturges, was still taking salutes and running errands for General MacArthur? Never more. She has been taking felicitations and doing K.P. for a new Commanding Officer, William R. Moose, Jr., whom she married in December! Arrived in San Francisco December 12, mustered out at Fort Dix December 18, married December 21, moved to Detroit where she sat down to lunch on Sweet Briar Day with Serena Ailes Henry and the rest of the gang; becoming "Queen for a Day" and especially entertained in honor of the occasion. This gal must operate on atomic energy! She says her 32 months in the Service were so interesting that they flew by. She went from Brisbane to Port Moresby, to a place I can't decipher, to Manila, to Tokyo where she arrived on October 18, 1945 and remained for 15 months. Wish there were space to quote her descriptions of Japan, from the devastation of bombed areas to the "unspeakable beauty" of other sections. Do advise you to write her (2210 Pingree Street, Detroit, Michigan), and I suggest you, Christine Reinralt Moose, to hurry over there and see if you Mooses ain't related!

Class Secretary: Martha McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman), 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio.

Fund Agent: PERONNE WHITAKER (Mrs. Robert Scott), 648-D Beverly Road, Teaneck, New Jersey.

No class letter this time, as Martha says a siege of flu has made the Shipman's life a mere struggle for existence. Our only consolation is that the news should be bigger and hetter than ever in June!

15-YEAR REUNION-June, 1947

Class Secretary: Charlotte Magoffin, Box 56, Deerwood, Minnesota.

Fund Agent: MARCIA L. PATTERSON, Kent Place School, Summit, New Jersey.

We've two recent arrivals to introduce. Josephine Marshall Dabney was born on January 24. This makes three children for the Dabneys, and Edith Railey Dabney says she's so busy she does well to get as far from home as the corner drug store. Our other new member is John Wright Conway, who arrived on February 4, at the end of a case of mumps which his mother, Eleanor Wright Conway, had been sporting for two weeks. Proof that adult mumps can be a very serious matter.

A newsy card from Billie Hancel Sturdy tells us that her husband was made a partner in the law firm of Gibson, Donn and Crutcher in Los Angeles very shortly after his discharge from the Marines. Billie's 9 year old daughter, Mary, gave a piano recital in December; her mother was so nervous she was practically a physical wreck, but the poised young lady did beautifully and displayed considerable talent.

Barbara Munter, after 20 months of exciting Red Cross duty, is now working in the advertising department of Frederick and Nelson, Seattle's largest department store. Last spring, she had a good visit with Jane White Burton, who lives in Portland, Oregon.

When Hildegarde Voeleker Hardy wrote at the end of January, she was looking forward to the return of her husband, who had been making a survey in South America for the past two months. Hildegarde had recently seen Susanne Gay Linville, and reported that the Linvilles were planning to move to Scarsdale in the spring.

Way last fall, Flappy sent me an item which I certainly intended for the February issue, but omitted for some unknown reason, It was an account from the Suffolk paper about Rev. Louis A. Haskell, Sarah Bright Gracey's husband. He had just resigned as rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Suffolk to accept a call to St. John's Episcopal Church in Florence, South Carolina. The account praised him highly for his parish work and for his participation in community activities and local war projects.

Found: Elizabeth Job Jopp. Jobie and her husband cavorted around the country at such a rate during the war that I lost them completely. At last through Squibby, I've nailed them in Hazard, Kentucky, where they're at least partially settled. While in the Army, Gus worked on the Manhattan Project, and was at Alamogordo when the first atom bomb was dropped. Since the war, he has been much in demand as a speaker, and his wife sits basking in reflected glory. Jobie wrote in most interesting fashion of their life in a small coal mining town, and of their contact with Mrs. Mary Breckenridge's Frontier Nursing Service, which is doing such a tremendous job to help the mountain people.

Finis for now. I'm hoping to see dozens of you at reunion.

Class Secretary: Anne Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Sue Graves, (Mrs. William K. Stubbs), 2105 Island Drive, Monroe, Louisiana,

You will all have to help me as I have never been a class secretary before and this is an entirely new venture. I will write to as many of you as possible before the June issue and trust to have a large response from my cards as well as from those I do not get in touch with this time.

Since starting my new job of trying to collect the news for the class of '33, I have had the good fortune of seeing Hetty Wells Finn and two of her children. They spent the first week of April here in Charlottesville. Hetty is her usual charming self and it was wonderful to see her.

Mary Buick is still with the American Red Cross and is stationed in Korea. Her leave in 1946 was taken in China where she had many interesting experiences. Mary has applied for her release from the Red Cross and expects to be back in this country soon.

Charlotte Tamblyn Tofts is in California with her three sons and daughter. Her husband is with the West Coast office of the advertising agency of W. Earl Bothwell, Inc., and they are living in North Hollywood. Charlotte is taking night courses in Spanish. Enna Frances Brown was married over a year ago to Ned Batsell and in March of this year moved to Tulsa, Oklahoma.

I find on my list that these '33 alumnae are lost. If anyone has any of their addresses, please send them in to the alumnae office, or to me with your news of you:

Alice Martin (Mrs. Thomas R. Cooper); Elizabeth Selden (Mrs. Edward Stainbrook); Mary Rose Taylor (Mrs. Severt A. Anderson, Jr.); Ethel M. Cameron (Mrs. Allen C. Smith, Jr.) Kathlean Carmichael (Mrs. George R. Mather); Mary Alice Durham (Mrs. William Ellis); Ruth Einhart; Annette Enderly (Mrs. Henry T. Birgel); Jeanne Harmon (Mrs. Lloyd Weisberger); Mabel Hickman (Mrs. John M. Flaitz); Eleanor Hottenstein (Mrs. Richard B. Foster); Catherine Kells (Mrs. R. O. Furlong); Mary B. Lankford; Janet Mc-Gregor (Mrs. Talbot Curtin); Eleanor Niggli (Mrs. F. A. Tyler); Martha North (Mrs. John V. Pollitt); Mildred Rahm (Mrs. Frederick MacDonald); Isabel Scott (Mrs. Claude L. Bowen, Jr.); Dora Tracy (Mrs. A. G. Ridgely); Virginia Vogler; Mary Jane Walne (Mrs. Whitfield H. Marshall); Sarah Zoller.

Class Secretary: Marjorie Lasar (Mrs. E. R. Hurd, Jr.), 425 North Hanley Road, St. Louis, Missouri.

Fund Agent: Julia Sadler (Mrs. Calvert de Coligny), Bon Air, Virginia.

Jean Sprague's father died very recently after a long illness and I know the class of '34 will want to express its sympathy to Jean, her mother and brother.

1935

Class Secretary: JACQUELYNE STRICKLAND (Mrs. Edward J. Dwelle, Jr.), 4910 Araparoe Avenue, Jacksonville 5, Florida.

Fund Agent: Cynthia Harbison (Mrs. Carl W. Heye), 26 Lawrence Street, Scarsdale, New York

I had a nice card from Barbara Miller Gibson who writes that they are in the process of buying a house in Houston where the Standard Oil Company of Texas has jost moved Jack. Also, she announces the arrival of a daughter, Jacqueline, on February 5. She weighs 10 pounds now and has just been to Rising Star, Texas, to meet her grandparents. Barbara says it is wonderful to be settling into their own home. Jack has been out of the Army for just a year.

Another new baby is France Spiller Merrill's son, Berkley Spiller, who was born January

Geneva Crossman Stevens reports that she and Edson, with Edson, Jr., 3, and daughter, Leslie Gale, 7, are settled in Birmingham, Michigan. Gen has heard recently from Cynthia Harbison Heye who has two little girls and Margie Curtze Vicary who keeps very busy with her three children, Charles, 10, Carolyn, 7, and Tommy 5.

Virginia Cunningham Brookes writes from Orinda, California. The Brookes with their two boys, age 7 and 5, have a ranch house high in the hills. Jane Bryant Hulbert spent last summer near them.

Becky Young Frazer says that they all loved meeting Miss Lucas when she visited the alumnae club in Atlanta. Natalie Strickland Waters and Lee McPherson Virgin are living in Atlanta too.

Mary Marks is in Denver doing personnel work for Sweet Briar Shops (a chain of women's clothing stores). Ruth Kaufman Davis in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, wants to hear from Mary Marks and from Sue Strassburger Anderson. Ruth has two children, Pat, 9, and Dianna. 6.

From Syracuse, New York, comes news of Virginia Gott Gilbert, whose husband is teaching mathematics at Syracuse University. Lucy Hoblitzell has just completed 60 days an attache at the West Virginia State Legislature. She announces that Janet Imbrie Frey now has a daughter to grow up with her three boys! Ruth Gill Wickens says that they have created their own housing problem in Albany, New York, where she and Val live with their two active little boys.

Class Secretary: Aline Stump, 125 East 84th Street, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent: Frances Gregory, 185 Upper Montclair Avenue, Montclair, New Jersey.

I sound like a lecturing ol' school marm (which I am), but again I appeal: Please answer my penny post cards or, better still, write voluntarily, if you want a "newsy" 36 column.

Muggy Gregory Coker presented her husband with a son on March 5th. His name is Richard Gregory.

Libby Hartridge has really settled in our midst. She is the Assistant Personnel Manager of Dentist Supply Company. Libby finds herself again buried in books and lectures as there is much to learn.

Thank you, Martha Williams Tim, for your prompt reply! Martha writes: "Fred and Allen, 3½ and 2 respectively, keep as all from having any dull moments. I manage to get in some volunteer hospital work in a prenatal clinic and am now trying to gather a team to sell tags for the Children's Hospital."

Emily Bowen Muller is now living in New York. Before her recent marriage, Emily was working as a civilian in the research department of the U. S. Army Signal Corps in Washington, D. C. Emily has recently seen Lucille Scott Knoke. Scotty has "three wonderful boys:" Scott, David and Paul.

Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott and her husband were recently in New York and Loudonville, New York. Eight families in the Scott neighborhood in Virginia put their heads together and started a Nursery School. A tenant house on the Scott farm was selected and painted and repaired by all. The fathers built a jungle gym and twenty young ones of varying ages, including Pinkie's three boys, are now gleefully attending school.

Ruth Gilliam Viar, your cooperation is superb. Ruth acquired new livestock recently: "To our dog and four cats we added a pony. Neal and Elizabeth named him Outlaw. In my more rational moments I have been organizing adult study classes and forums in the school. The P.T.A. is keeping me busy too."

Ruth continues: "Our vital statistics in Lynchburg are as follows: Betty Cocke Winfree has three children, P. B. Jr., is 9, Macan, 6, and Penny, 21/2. Penny is one of those power-driven youngsters who keeps Betty on the run all the time. Lib Morton Forsyth has three children also: Betty 8, Elsie 5, and Harry Jr. 2. Since her Mother's death, Lib is president of C. B. Fleet Company. Margaret Smith Thomasson recently elected president of the Lynchburg Alumnae Club has two children: Bill 6, and Elizabeth one. Mary Hesson Pettyjohn is living near Monroe, Virginia. She has two, Mary Gayle 4, and Tommy 1. Lucile Cox, with a Master's Degree, is teaching Latin at the E. C. Glass High School. Maggie McRae Allen is in Richmond working for the State Department and Polly Rich is still at Yale."

La Donabue McCormack has four sons which keep her "pretty" busy. The baby, Ty, 7 months is now looking forward to beef steak, for his first tooth recently appeared. La's husband has recently gone into business for himself; "Mail-Me-Monday of Greenbay," an accounting and toy service for small businesses.

La's newsy letter included the following: Marie Griffin took a trip around South America, arriving home at Christmas time. Carol Straus Ney has two sons and is living in Alexandria, Virginia.

Martha Anne Harvey Gwinn, states she is leading "a very commonplace existence—with never a dull moment." Her three children, the P.T.A., and Junior League keep her well occupied. She and her husband did find time however, to spend a few days in Hot Springs and New York City. On their return to Huntington, the Gwinns saw Fran Baker Owen in Baltimore.

Thanks to Mary Poindexter Willingham, I can at last report on Chattanooga doings! Mary and her family (three girls and a boy) are living on Signal Mountain in their reconverted summer home. The children love it as there is time after school for horseback riding and hiking. Jane Shelton Williams and her daughter spent several months at Captina Island, Florida.

Mary saw Chloe Frierson Fort at a football game in the fall. Chloe has two girls and a boy. She is again singing, this time 'tis the Episcopal Church in Nashville, Tennessee.

10 Year Reunion, June, 1947

Class Secretary: WANTED!

Fund Agents: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase), Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina Reunion Chairman: DOROTHY PROUT (Mrs. Robert Gorsuch), Chapel Hill, Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey.

1938

Fund Agent: Janet MacFarlan (Mrs. Charles Bergmann), 244 Ackerman Avenue, HoHoKus, New Jersey.

First of all I want to apologize for falling down on you in the last issue, but giving birth to our son and heir took priority over other matters, regardless of their importance. Anyhow, I'm trusting you'll forgive what belated news I offer, and receive what new news I have with an open and forgiving mind!

As long ago as September (too late for the October News) I had a postal from Kate Sulzberger Hecht Levi, telling me of her marriage on June 4, to Edward Levi who is a professor of Law at the University of Chicago. Kate is as happy as a lark after a short romance, a Mexican honeymoon, and finally housekeeping in a small apartment. Belated felicitations, old dear.

The "mother of our class", Becky Kunkle Hogue reports all of her children are fine and that young Peter is already teaching the triplets plenty of tricks. Needless to say, she has her hands slightly full.

JEANETTE BOONE, '27

HELEN H. McMahon, '23

Sweet Briar College, Sweet Briar, Virginia

Cards in the fall from Fergie, Cobbie, Helen Hays Crowley and Molly Talcott Dodson gave me news of vacations and housekeeping, and I'm hoping I'll hear from them and the rest of you with more recent news. How about it?

Rilma's wedding was lovely but unfortunately I can't give you first hand information. The account of it was given me while I was abed in the hospital where I went four days prior to the wedding. She and Bob Allen of Memphis were married at 7:30 in the Myers Park Presbyterian Chapel and afterwards instead of the usual reception the family entertained at a large dinner dance at the Charlotte Country Club. It was quite an affair and very lovely. Vesta and Eddie came up from Columbia and it was good seeing her for a few brief moments.

Janet MacFarlan Bergmann writes from Ho-HoKus, New Jersey, that the Bergmanns had a grand Christmas season, which was highlighted for her by Miss Lucas' appearance at the Sweet Briar Day luncheon in New York on December 28, Mac was most complimentary and all the rest of us who have not been so lucky as to meet her are looking forward to that occasion. It was a pleasure to me to be at the first of a series of meetings the other day at Sarah Belk's at which time a letter was read from Miss Lucas to the alumnae. You all know of this new departure. I am sure, and we all took part in a discussion of the liberal arts education offered today at Sweet Briar. Happy James Wathen ('39), Emily Sebrell (ex '41), Rilma and I went along together,

A card from Jin Faulkner Mathews announces the birth of Ann Carver on March 8. Congratulations, chum.

Next month you all will be receiving reply postals from me and I hope you'll have some good news all cooked up for publication. Be on the lookout and send them back to me promptly.

Fund Agent: Yvonne Leggett (Mrs. D. L. Dyer), Alger Court, Apt. 5-G, Rivermere, Bronxville, New York.

This letter will perhaps give you some information not covered by Yvonne's letter; then there's just time to catch your breath before the next issue, so do let's make a well represented finale.

Ann Parks spent a few days with me before binding herself to a job. She came just after a blizzard and was amazed at the inclement north, for birds had been twittering and flowers blooming in the garden spot of Norfolk. It was grand seeing her again, and it's delightful to feel that only an interlude has elapsed between visits, when there have been six years and a war. She reports that Bitsy Gordon Jeffers' mother had pneumonia after nursing Bitsy's father through a tough siege of illness, so Bitsy is going to Norfolk every 3rd. week. Bill is "out of the pulps", and happily settled in another magazine job. Ann had been to see Bennett Wilcox Bartlett who is busy with her two children and now settled in their new house. Her four year old fell out of the window and fractured his skull the first day they arrived, but things have gone well since.

Julia Ridgely Peacock has the same job but the office has moved one block down town and is just beside an outdoor swimming pool. The boss' children often come and write on the floor for Julia's benefit, lending to the office an informal atmosphere which she appreciates,

We have had a wedding, Eleanor Haley, ex '39, is now Mrs. R. W. Pendergrass, and living in Palo Alto, California.

Betsy Durham Goodhue always has news, and she's gracious in imparting it. She and Tag were about to set off for a visit in Richmond. She reports that Eleanor Claflin Williams is now settled in her rebuilt house. You may remember that it burned down last spring. She and Tommy are having a skiing vacation at Aspen, Colorado, leaving behind, naturally enough, 6 weeks old Lee, their third child. Ellie George Frampton was home for Christmas and will visit Betsy in June, when she goes cruising to Nantucket.

Mardie Hodill Smith has a new daughter, Candace Anne, nicknamed Candy of course, born on November 1. Courtie is thrilled with her little sister, who is so far a "good" baby Mardie is now a neighbor of Teenie Domboff Wright, who lives four doors up from their duplex. She has a daughter seven months old, and a son 2½. Leila Bond Preston and Eleanor were there recently, going from Erie to Fort Lauderdale for a two month vacation. Leila had a siege of typhoid last summer, you remember, and Eleanor had just had her tonsils ont, so they definitely deserved the trip, but I'm sure we're all green with envy.

Ruth Harman Keiser was visited in December by Alice Hooper '38, who's living in Philadelphia and working in Washington. She is using her knowledge in language now, as she did as a WAVE during the war. Dusty Rhodes Salmon recently wrote her, casually mentioning her three children, which rather rolled Ruth off her feet. She is busy enough with their year old daughter and 8 months' old puppy. She says that living in Princeton is wonderful in that it offers so much in the way of plays, lectures, and concerts, and she enjoys tremendously the New York Philharmonic once a month

News from abroad is of Pat Balz Vincent in Hull, England. Pat tells of preparing breakfast in wool slacks, heavy coat, scarf, and mittens because crockery is so cold in an unheated kitchen. The coal allotment was pitifully inadequate for their severe winter. However, Pat's mother reports that in her latest letter she said that the sun was shining and the organ-grinder was on the street.

You know about the Episcopal conference to be held at Sweet Briar in June? It will be rigorous, and there are no arrangements for children unless there is a strong demand for such, but I strongly recommend it for anyone who is in a position to go. Another item of interest is that alumnae are having discussions re-evaluating their Sweet Briar education and experience, and the liberal arts background in general. Twelve of us met in Philadelphia for a most interesting discussion of Miss Lucas' article on a liberal education, and the questions sent to us by the Alumnae office.

P. S. A card just came from Elizabeth Barge Schroder announcing the birth of John Timothy Schroder, 6 pounds, 14 ounces, born March 3.

Fund Agent: Margaret Woods (Mrs. Louis C. Gillette), R.F.D. No. 1, Norwalk, Connecticut.

As Nida is the mother of a boy born in mid-March, the news this time consists of material which drifted into the alumnæ office.

Nancy Haskins Elliott writes: "David and I have just gotten home from India after ten weeks of traveling—including a shipwreck and a real North Atlantic storm. We made it in time for Mary's wedding though—and are so happy to be here, particularly as Lahore is a center of rioting now. We'll be here until the end of May when we go to Boston where David will enter Harvard. Have no idea where we'll be living."

Barbara Godfrey reports from Smith College that she is working towards a master's degree in physical education. She says that the college and campus are quite different, of course, from Sweet Briar, and on a much larger scale, but she remains loyal.

In the baby department we have a son, P. Huber, III, born to Jane Hopkins and P. Huber Hanes, Jr. On January 11, Emory Gill Williams' second child, a boy, named Mason Miller Williams, was born. And a daughter, Susan, joined Mary Sue Kilbam Davis' boy, on March 1. Mary Sue's huband, Landon, is a Lieutenant Commander in the Navy.

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.) 3135 Victoria Boulevard, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Fund Agent: Patricta Dowling (Mrs. Alfred von Wellsheim) 17 Higby Road, Utica 3, New York.

A few quick ones, will try to do better for the graduation number.

Judy Davidson was married April 12 to Major Anthony Walker, Marine Corps, in Washington, D. C.

Finally we have lots of details about Margaret Craighill Dorney's marriage on February 1 to Karl R. Price. He was graduated from Vanderbilt University, from Yale Law School, and was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford. During the war he was a Captain in the 82nd Airborne Division. He is now Law Clerk to Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson of the Supreme Court. Margaret and Karl and Margaret's daughter, Sharon, almost 3, are living in Washington.

Ethel James writes from the Philippines that she is enjoying the warm weather there very much. Still in the Red Cross, Ethel is stationed at Clark Field, not too far from Manila, so that she participates in gay city life quite frequently. She had just returned from two weeks in Japan.

From Kansas City comes a great catchingnp on Mary Elizabeth Mullory, who has been married for some time to Dr. William Ernest King, Jr. They have a 7-months-old daughter, Kathryn Louise. Dr. King will be called by the Navy in July so that they are still in temporary lodgings.

Caroline des Granges will be married to

J. Herbert Wallis on May 17. They hope to make their home in Baltimore.

FIVE YEAR REUNION

Class Secretary: CATHERINE COLEMAN, St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ANN HAUSLEIN (Mrs. Thomas G. Potterfield), 262 Kent Road, Wynnewood, Pennsylyania.

Reunion Chairman: MARGIE TROUTMAN (Mrs. Thomas S. Harbin) 309 East Third Street, Rome, Georgia.

I know that all of you will be as shocked and distressed as I to hear of the death of Anne Bundy Thurman's husband, Robert. Anne's present address is in Norfolk, where she and Ellen Reid, who was born October 29th, are living.

After all these months, I have finally seen Ruth Hensley Camblos though I have yet to get around the corner to Lewis Mountain Road to see her home and her offspring. Ruth is most active at present in bringing all the Charlottesville alumna together. Her son bears the overwhelming name of Joshua Frye Bullitt Camblos, Jr.

Ruth Jacquot Tempest is still in Ruth, Nevada, and is now the proud mother of Rone Brenton Tempest III, who was born January 6. From Ruth, I hear that Di Greene Helfrich is still at Annapolis while Harry is at sea.

Anne Morrison Reams furnished a great deal of news. Among those now in California are Crosswell and Bobbie Engb Croft, who are in Corona del Mar. Crosswell is with Anaconda. They have two children, Billy who is 2½ and Mary who was born last October. Other class babies are Gloria Ann Sartor, the daughter of Gloria Sanderson and Lane Sartor, and Mary Ann Rutherfoord, whose birth was reported in the last issue, minus a name. Mary Ann is the daughter of Mary Stone Moore Rutherfoord. Anne and Bernie are naturally rejoicing over having a cute apartment too.

Elizabeth Williams, one of our "exes," is with the Red Cross. At present she is at the Vallay Forge General Hospital.

From Louisville comes an epistle from Frannie Meck Young telling me of her year old daughter, Melissa Rumsey. Frannie says that she sees Frannie Caldwell Harris quite often.

Jane Hamilton McNaughton of Schenectady is the mother of a daughter, named Christine Grieg, who was born December 3.

Wish I had more news to relay, but the flu bug hit St. Anne's and I have been playing auxiliary nurse, so the letter had to suffer.

This is the last letter before reunion. Hope to see you all back at Sweet Briar for the first gathering of '42 in five years.

Almost forgot, from the Richmond Times-Dispatch, I see that Lucy Call Dabney is now a member of the Richmond Junior League, and that Margaret Halsey Gearing's engagement to Henry Taylor Wickham, who is a graduate of Virginia Law School, has been announced. Peggy is living in Alexandria at present.

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govan P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: KAREN KNISKERN (Mrs. Robert White), 988 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Even more than usual the news is predominantly hearts and flowers, pink and blue yarn, orange blossoms, etc.

When I was in Boston I saw Tookie who passed on news of Barbara Bolles' engagement to Bill Miller. They will be married sometime this spring, and in the meantime Barbara is doing volunteer work for the Red Cross Home Service, where she used to work during the war. Also a nice letter from Gloria Zick informs me that she will be aisling it in the spring too-May 31 to be exact. Her engagement to Lowell M. Sigaro of Kansas City was announced December 29. Mary Love Ferguson Sanders will be her matron of honor, and also veil provider if they can solve the problem of this garment's mysterious disappearance from a storage house in Texas. Gloria and Lowell are lucky enough to have an apartment and so are having a grand time getting it ready to move into come June,

And keeping right up with them is Mary "Padncah" Wheeler who is about to marry Henry Hilliard from Louisville. It is nice to hear something of "Paducah" again. Janie Lampton Middleton unearthed the news that she has been working in Louisville. Janie also says that Fayette and Ros Willet are a perfect couple—blissfully happy. Ros is working for his father's lumber company. This pink cloud life of theirs is no unique position, but I get too many similar reports to list them all. Chesley Johnson Dale and husband all snuggled away in a place in the country are another typical example.

My card caught Louise Woodruff Angst at a very opportune time for news from her family, as she had just become a proud mother. March 9 she had a big baby boy-Robert Woodruff Angst, named after her father, and to be called "Woody." Weezie "he has a moon face and snub nose like his ma." Snookie Campbell Shearer's new baby, on the other hand, looks more like pa, being a definite red head. She was born in Philadelphia toward the end of February. She is Elizabeth, Jr., but Snookie says a nickname is in order since Elizabeth is too big a mouthful for her, and "one Snookie per family is quite sufficient." She and the baby are back in Kentucky for a while as their housing situation was catastrophic.

I hear, too, that Karen Norris Sibley had a son in the fall. Alice Johnson Fessenden, '44, wrote me that Karen and Jimmy were living near where she used to live in Atlanta. Also, Julie Tchon Ling has a daughter. Her husband is a chemical engineer and they live in North Plainfield, New Jersey.

The first baby of the year was born to Norman and Elizabeth Hall Bennett on January 1. Oh, she's a daughter, and has remained nameless to me. Judy Snow Benoit also has a new little daughter, named Andree Alida, and Elsie McCarthy Samson has a son, John McCarthy Samson, already popularly known as "Red," born on March 16.

In the wedding bell department we have Dodi Cheatham who, on January 18 became Mrs. Harry James (unh-h, not Grable's). They went to Miami on their honeymoon and are now living in his home town of Wilmington, North Carolina. Dodi loves it there as it is near where she used to spend her summers and she has lots of friends. And another bride, as of last August, is Primmy Johnston. She married the Reverend Arnold Bates Craven and they are still living at Cos Cob, Connecticut.

Rita Silberstein became Mrs. Alan Raphael on March 16. They are looking for a new apartment in New York. Rita is on the editorial staff of the New Republic. Her new husband served five years in the Navy.

And 'way back last November 30, Harriet M. Swenson was married to Frederick E. Munschauer, Jr. They are living in Eggerts-ville, New York, a suburb of Buffalo.

I was delighted to receive from Della Read in China a lengthy response to my queries. She says that after a year at Gibbs and one working in New York, she had her share of commuting and the travel bug bit hard." The State Department needed clerical help in China and sent her to Peiping (November 1945). She says they are understaffed and the work gets harder and longer all the time-evenings, weekends and holidays being no exception-BUT-she has solved her commuting problem. She has her own house and everything she wants is practically next door-the office, the Marines, the Army, tennis courts that are flooded for ice-skating in the winter, badminton courts that are cover-overs for the summer's swimming pool. Nearby are fascinating places to shop and there are picnics among "the temples in the Western Hills," and a spot called Chala "where a group of Marist Brothers spend their time making wine." All sounds like a new Shangri La to me, but nevertheless Della is looking forward to a home leave next winter. This summer Nurse Brooks Barnes is coming home too, in spite of the very gay time she is having in Honolulu.

Pulled in two long letters the other dayfrom B. J. Leighton Lane and Prentiss Jones Hale. The Lanes are still living at Leightens and son Johnny is about 16 months old. Chet is working for the Yankees and is Publicity Director for the Newark team, so when the baseball season is on he works from 9:00 A. M. till 1:00 at night on weekdays and until 7:00 on Saturday and Sunday. No wonder she says she feels like a widow at times! A short while ago she saw Barbie Briggs who now has an apartment in Cincinnati. Prentiss' husband seems to be quite a beaver too; he teaches a course at the Yale Graduate School, has an office for the practice of city planning and community development (now engaged in revamping six Connecticut towns and one in New York) and manages to practice architecture "on the side." Prentiss makes models of the houses and finds it lots of fun and a diversion from her apparently extensive civic activities. She says Annabelle Forsch has been doing "spots" for the New Yorker-those little fill-in drawings you see in the middle or at the bottom of the page; and that Kitty Doar Jones is living in Richmond. Tommy has a civil engineering job there. Kitty sees Ginny White, who has joined the Oxford Groop.

In my wanderings northward I visited "Ping" Drake, Fay Martin Chandler and Nancy Bean, saw Tynn Emmerick Huidekoper, Cyn Harrison Drinkwater '41, Libb. Corddry Jones, Tookie Kniskern White, and also Muie Grymes whom I never see in ye olde home state, but always expect to see in any and every other state, (the chances are best in Florida now as her next destination was Pat Robineau Vandervere's). I phoned Frances Gregg Petersmeyer, who is living in New York now, so on the whole I managed to see quite a few '43ers, and it was such fun getting together again that it made me realize what sport our reunion should be next year (next year that is! Can you believe it?)

Extra special flash—Nancy Bean was married March 29 in New York City to Theodore H. White. Mr. White is co-author of "Thunder Out of China," and you may recall that Beanie's name appeared with the customary acknowledgments for technical h.lp. He is a Harvard graduate and was a correspondent for Time in China for seven years. He has recently joined the staff of the New Republic. After a trip to the West Indies they will live in New York.

Class Secretary: CONNIE SUL BUPLONG, Occupational Therapy Department, Box 181, Kennedy Veterans Hospital, Memphis 15, Tennessee.

Fund Agent. MARIAN SHANLEY (Mrs. William L. Jacobs), Box 41, Newport, Arkansas.

It seems that meeting deadlines is a spectre that's going to stick with me for good! News is plentiful this time—and here it is.

We have—new arrivals! Virginia Lee Morton, daughter of Jinny Lee Griffith and Copeland Morton, was born on March 6th, and Charles Loveland Swanbeck, who arrived February 5th to Babe Loveland and Ray Swanbeck.

We have too-engagements and weddings, past and future. Betty Maury's engagement to Granville Grey Valentine was announced in February. "Weesie" Konsberg wrote that she and her Bill are to be married June 21, with Libby Vaughan and Fvie Pretlow Armiston in the wedding. Weesle also said that Mary Trimble, ex-'44, is now Mrs. Lawrence Elam Kelly, Jr., and is living in Napiersville, Illinois. Barb Clark, ex-'44, writes from New York that the last she had heard from Dorothy Denny there were plans for a spring wedding. Barb, by the way, has an imposing new title at Central Hanover Trust, assistant to the senior vice-president! News from Chattanooga was that Jane Williams was married the 22nd of February to James Creekmore Wann. Announcement has been made too, of the marriage of Norma Bradley to Joseph Lee Arnold, on March 26th in Lexington, Kentucky. We have no details yet.

I had a grand letter not long ago from Betty Haverly Smith. She and Alex are in Athens, Alex going to Law School and Betty being domestic. Helen Crump and Jack Cutler are temporarily in Carmel, Calfornia, my old stamping ground. Jack will be off for Japan in late summer and Helen will follow soon. Betty says that Tee Tift Porter's little girl is as darling as any offspring of Tee's should be, and looks like Jimmy. The long lost and well lamented Betty Fence Williams has reappeared, on my list of "the faithful in ways of correspondence," She and Hannah Mallory are holding the Richmond front and having a gay time, when not struggling with Fence's recalcitrant wisdom teeth. Mugsie Abrash Salzberg and Arn are still stationed at the V. A. Hospital in Rutland Heights, and enjoyed the winter sports there. Mugsie was about to launch on a costume committee (shades of the past) for the WORC Girls' Club presentation of Jack and the Beanstalk. Helen Cantey Woodbridge produced a grand and newsful letter. Helen Gravatt, she said, is now a newspaperwoman; can you imagine Gravy writing obituaries! Dykie Watts by now may be in Japan, where the Wattses are to be stationed. Skid Holmes is still college-advising for the New York Times.

Me, I'm in the throes of reorganizing Ward Service here. All that means so far is another stripe on the cap, (my patients say, "Gee, a corporal!") and many hours a day beating the rudiments of craft work into my 25 grand grey ladies—and if anyone knows any living creatures more strenous than middle-aged women, let me know!

Rennion Chairman: Eleanor Myers, 208 Hermitage Road, Charlotte, N. C.

Lee Stevens, our ex-prexy, will be married to Lee Graveley, also of Rocky Mount, on May 17. Lee got her ring right after she returned home with Shebe Jones from a trip to Fort Lauderdale and Jacksonville. I hope a household with two Lee's isn't going to prove confusing!

Jane Pickens Church, ex-'46, writes from New York that she and her husband are experiencing some of the effects of the housing shortage; they are living in a one-room apartment in Greenwich Village, and things seem pretty congested! She has seen Moc Christian Schley and husband, Dick, quite often. Moe and Dick now live in an apartment near St. Luke's Hospital. Pickens also relayed the news that Tassie Brooks Augustine, ex-'46, and Jimmy are living in Dayton, Ohio. Their daughter, Jane, will be a year old on April 21, and is, from all reports, a beautiful child.

Mary Mac Holland, ex-'46, is teaching shorthand near Richmond now. (I ought to run up for a lesson or two, myself, since I'm now secretary at an insurance firm here in Jacksonville, My business career thus far has been varied!)

A great delegation of '46-ers gathered recently in Amherst for Ann Hill's wedding. There were Ariana Jones, down from Princeton where she's working for the College Entrance Exam Board, Bea Dingwell, Bev Randolph, Peggy Todd, Helen Graeff, Catherine Smart, Betsy Gurley Hewson and Tommy.

Bets was the bride at the wedding rehearsal, and Bea sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Oh, Perfect Love," at the wedding. Anne is now Mrs. Griffin Edwards. Her husband is a son of Dr. Edwards, formerly head of the Physics Department at Sweet Briar.

Ariana tells me that she visited Georgianna Ellis in Baltimore where she is working in the tuberculosis clinic at Johns Hopkins. She loves her work. Lou Crawford was asked to teach a class in Freshman English at the University of South Carolina, where she is getting her Master's Degree. It seems that there are quite a few veterans in her class who are older than she is! Peggy Coffman is (to quote Ariana) "still working with statistics, etc., and is living at the Picadilly in New York."

Graeffie has been teaching music at four little country schools and leading the band in a high school. She's done so well that her band won a prize in a parade recently.

Jean Love paid a short visit to Sweet Briar recently, on her way to Washington. She plans to get a job there until the next term in art school starts.

Lil West is on tour again! She sailed at the end of March from New Orleans for a three weeks' cruise to the West Indies. She's a lucky girl to be sailing in those southern waters right now!

Jean Pollard Kline has just moved to Wilmington, North Carolina, where Bob is editing a paper. She says that Himmy Thompson, ex-'46, stopped in to see her recently on her way from Florida to Richmond.

More about our Alumnæ Overseas: Larry Lawrence is now on a city-by-city tour of Italy. She is returning to Nice at Eastertime in order to meet Rudy there, who is coming over from the University of Geneva. They are all leaving Southampton on July 25 to return to the United States. What a year it's been for Rudy, Larry, and Lou!

Margaret Swann is at home, Winter Haven, Florida, for spring vacation after completing two years of medical school in New York. She now has two and a half years to go!

Helen Murchison is in the throes of trying to organize a Sweet Briar Alumnæ Club in Jacksonville, Both she and I were just made provisional members of the Junior League, Mary Jane Lively was married February 15 to E. Leslie Hoffman, Jr., in Charleston, West Virginia. Betty Ann Bass was a bridesmaid. They went to New York on their wedding trip and will live in Charleston. Mary Jane is a child welfare worker with the West Virginia Department of Public Assistance. Leslie served in the European theatre with the air force for three years and now is finishing college; he holds a position on the advertising staff of the Charleston Gazette.

Marilyn Mandle is now Mrs. James Dick and is living in Lexington, Kentucky.

In parting, I hope you're all making serious plans for returning for our first year reunion. Time has flown by, and believe it or not, it's practically here—so perhaps we shall all be seeing each other in the not-too-distant future!

In the meantime, keep me posted on your many and exciting activities.

About the Alumnae Fund . . .

Between sessions of the Alumnae Council meetings two days before commencement, Gerry Mallory, '33, and Marian Shanley Jacobs, '44, spent a lot of time talking about the Alumnae Fund, of which Marian is to be chairman for 1947-'49.

Gerry, who has been chairman of the Fund for the past four years, was helping Marian get acquainted with the duties which she is about to assume.

While she was in college, Marian was chairman of the Student Funds Committee and set a high standard of efficiency, organizational ability, and downright hard work which has not been surpassed by any of her successors. She held the Manson Memorial Alumnae Scholarship during her senior year and she was graduated cum laude. Since her graduation, Marian has been Fund Agent for her class.

After she left college, Marian served for several months as a traveling secretary for the World Student Service Fund. In 1945 she was married to an Episcopal clergyman, the Rev. William L. Jacobs, and they have been making their home in Newport, Arkansas. Their daughter Elizabeth is almost a year old.

Thanks to You

class agents, sub-agents and 1260 contributors—the 1946 Alumnae Fund totaled $12,500 at commencement. This is an unrestricted gift to Sweet Briar.

SWELL BRIAR HOUSE

Miss Ruby Leaves the Book Shop

When Miss Ruby Walker closes the doors of the Book Shop this month it will mean the end of her career as manager which began twenty-six years ago, for she has resigned her post, effective July 1.

Long before she began working in the Book Shop, Miss Ruby had made a place for herself at Sweet Briar. As a member of the Walker family which came to Mount San Angelo in 1909, she watched the college grow up and it would be safe to say that there's not a student in all that period of years who doesn't know her and remember her with affection.

For one year Miss Ruby ran the Tea House, a year which she says was no picnic! There were always cakes to be baked and sandwiches to be made and "it got so that it was years before I ever wanted to bake anything again."

She began "running the Book Shop" in 1921, when it occupied a room in the basement of Randolph. Three years later Miss Ruby moved with the Book Shop from Randolph back to the cottage next to Sweet Briar House where it had already been lodged once before. The Book Shop had one room of the cottage and the Tea House had the other. She recalls the crowded opening days each fall in that one little room, when "we had to stop letting people in every now and then so as to make a passageway for the others to get out." After the Inn was built and the Tea House moved to its new location the Book Shop expanded into two rooms and offered many more items for sale, including stationery, pennants, seals and novelties of various kinds.

Undoubtedly the most exciting day in the history of the shop was the day Sweet Briar House burned. Miss Ruby says she was talking to a salesman when she noticed the smoke pouring out of the lattice-work. She "slammed shut the cash drawer and ran over to the tower room to tell the faculty member who lived there to get out as quickly as possible." Then she ran downstairs to the telephone in the hall and summoned aid. After that, she recalls, she went into the dining room and grabbed a big silver tray and made her way outdoors with it.

Mr. Dew thought the Book Shop was in no immediate danger and told Miss Ruby not to move out unless it became necessary. When one of the firemen was injured, Miss Ruby was asked to act as guide to get him to the infirmary. By the time she got back, she says, she found that "students had taken everything out of the Book Shop and dumped it on the lawn. The confusion was terrific! I didn't know how I was ever going to get everything back into the shop. I got up early next morning to begin the job of moving things back and when I got here I found that Ibby Luck and some of the other girls had gotten up even earlier and they had put everything back by the time I arrived. Of course things weren't in their proper places, but wasn't that a nice thing for those girls to do."

In 1930 the Book Shop moved into its present quarters, in its own building. Gifts were added to the stock and business in general kept on growing. The manager's duties grew in number, too, of course, but Miss Ruby doesn't talk about that.

She has watched fads blossom and fade, fads in stationery and room accessories in particular. "Girls nowadays don't buy many pennants and pillow tops, and they used to be all the rage." She shakes her head over the modern girl's predilection for stuffed animals, but she supplies her wants in this direction nevertheless.

A philosophy about fountain pens is another thing which Miss Ruby has acquired. "It really doesn't pay to keep expensive pens here and sell them to the girls, they go about losing them at such a great rate. Cheap pens are good enough for them" she affirms.

A few years ago word was sent out that Miss Ruby could no longer wrap packages as gifts because it took so much time which she needed for her increasing burden of ordering and recording. Nothing came of it, though, because Miss Ruby could never resist an appeal for assistance.

WALKERS ALL: Dr. Will, Miss Ruby, Miss Winnie, Mr. Ted.

Sunday, May 18—last month, that is—was Miss Ruby's day, as her brother, Ted Walker, remarked. She and Miss Winnie, who has assisted her in the Book Shop for several years, Dr. Will and Ted were the guests of the Faculty Committee on the Book Shop at dinner in the Refectory. Miss Ruby wore an orchid, sent to her by the students, and she was given a silver pin by the members of the committee. Later, on the lawn under the elm trees, many of her friends, students and faculty, came to greet her and to wish her well.

When next fall comes, Helen McMahon will be the new manager of the Book Shop. But Miss Ruby plans to be there, too, "helping Helen in any way I can." That's good news for all her friends now on campus, and for all the alumnae who count a visit with Miss Ruby as one of the joys of coming back to Sweet Briar. And that means all alumnae,

- The gathering of the clans. Beginning Saturday morning and continuing until the hour before the graduation exercises, alumnae kept arriving.
- The annual meeting of the Alumnae Association, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Scott read the president's report; Helen McMahon summarized the progress of the Association during the years there has been an executive secretary-treasurer; Miss Dee Long and Mrs. Bernice Lill spoke on Admission, its workings, its joys and its heartaches; Gerry Mallory, Alumnae Fund chairman since 1943, reported on the Fund's progress during the past four years.
- President Lucas' Garden Party in the Boxwood Circle. A chance to meet the new president, one's former classmates and former teachers.
- Alumnae Dinner. The Refectory was decorated most effectively with flowers and greens. Louise Hammond Skinner created a beautiful centerpiece for the head table. Dr. Harley sat with her class, 1932. Miss Ruby sat at the "high table" as the only member of the staff who is retiring this year. Miss Lucas spoke about the crisis in education, with ever increasing numbers of students, fewer teachers, the great need of giving more and more people, children and adults, the best possible kind of education. She pointed out how all this affects Sweet Briar, and then answered questions asked by alumnae. Douglas Woods Sprunt, '42, was toastmistress. Mrs. Scott formally inducted the Class of 1947 into the Association.
- Baccalaureate Service on Sunday morning in the newlydecorated chapel. The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, St. John's Church, Washington, preached on Holidays and Holy Days. The Choir and its director, G. Noble Gilpin, won great praise and contributed in large measure to the beauty of the service.
- Meeting of club presidents and representatives, Sunday afternoon. A most enthusiastic meeting, stimulating good discussions and bringing to light lots of good ideas to be put into effect at club meetings next year.
- Final step-singing in the Quadrangle. The seniors sang and sang, '42 contributed one of its favorites, and the alumnae song, as usual, brought down the house.
- Vespers in the West Dell. Miss Lucas' inspiring sermon and its application to Sweet Briar made this an unusually impressive event.
- Class Reunion Suppers. 1917 gathered at Bertha Pfister Wailes' home at Mount San Angelo. Prof. Ivan Mc-Dougle, now teaching at Goucher, came from Baltimore to spend the day with his class, 1922. They had supper at the Boat House; other groups picnicked in the Dell.
- Lantern Night. The moon was bright, the songs were appropriate and the alumnae enjoyed re-living their memories of other Lantern Nights at Sweet Briar.
- Commencement, Monday morning. Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, spoke on "Living in the New World". Miss Lucas' brief and telling message to the graduates closed the exercises.

Gifts to the College

Before reading the list of gifts presented to the college during the past year, President Lucas expressed thanks on behalf of Sweet Briar as follows:

"At this, the end of my first year's service at Sweet Briar College, I want to take occasion to express my personal gratitude and the indebtedness of this college to many people: to the members of our Board of Overseers for wise guidance and unselfish giving of their time to the business of this college; to the members of our Faculty and Staff for distinguished service to Education and for more than full measure of loyal and constructive support; to all of our students, freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors, for their thoughtfulness, good humor, and fine cooperation; to our many Sweet Briar alumnae for their generous and inspired response to our solicitation of their ideas and their support of our growing educational program; to Sweet Briar's many friends for faith in our ideals and encouragement of our efforts in their fulfillment; and finally to the parents of our students for the privilege and pride—and downright pleasure—of having their daughters with us at Sweet Briar."

Shortly after college closed, Margaret Munnerlyn, '47, and Maddin Lupton, '48, sailed for Europe, the former to attend special summer courses on European Civilization in the 20th Century at Oxford University for six weeks, and the latter to attend several student conferences in the Scandinavian countries. Maddin is representing Sweet Briar at the International Student Service Conference at Aarhus, Denmark, July 6-15 and then at the World Conference of Christian Youth in Oslo, Norway, July 22-30. She may also attend an international Y.W.C.A. meeting in Lundsberg, Sweden, the first week in August.

Six alumnae were present at Commencement to see their daughters get their degrees. They are (standing and seated) the following: Mary Frances Raiff Wood, '20, and Mary Frances Wood, '47; Isabel Wood Holt, '19, and Julia Holt, '47; Eugenia Griffin Burnett, '10, and Judith Cary Burnett, '47; Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, and Ann Marshall, '47; Mattie Hammond Smith, '21, and Martha Smith, '47; Cornelia Carroll Gardner, '18, and Frances Gardner, '47.

with the University of Delaware Foreign Study Group in Geneva during the coming year. A graduate of Lexington High School, Evelyn is majoring in economics and plans to devote her year of study in Geneva to economics and government. Three Sweet Briar juniors, French majors, who are in Geneva this year, will be back on campus in the fall, as will the three who are at St. Andrews this year.

Late this summer Sarah Porter Melcher, Philadelphia, and Martha Ann Query, Concord, N. C., will sail for England to enroll at St. Andrews. Three other juniors, Sarah Strickland, Cincinnati, Nancy Jones, Jackson, Ohio, and Joan McCarthy, Glencoe, Ill., will spend the coming year at the University of Mexico as members of the Smith College Croup there.

ANNE WEBB

In presenting the award, Miss Lucas read the following citation: "The strength and maturity of your purpose for service; your resourcefulness in finding ways to express that purpose and simplicity and joy; your quiet force and serenity have been an inspiration to this community in your four years here. Because we are all grateful for the quickening example which we find in you, I confer upon you the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award."

Miss Lucas' Message to the 1947 Graduates

I WANT to say a few words to the members of the Class of '47, upon whom I have just conferred the degree of Bachelor of Arts with all the rights and privileges appertaining thereto. What I have to say is not a flowery farewell to giddy girl graduates. I want to talk about those rights and privileges appertaining thereto.

In the first place, they have nothing at all to do with any right to demand anything from other people or the expectation of having the world treat you as a "privileged" person who has been "educated" and therefore is to receive honor and glory from that time forth! Education is a lifelong proceess, not a finished product trade-marked by the sign of the B.A. The liberal arts education can, at its best, only open for you the doors to the Realms of Gold. It is you who may now, of your own determination and self-discipline, enter in and share in the further great adventure of the mind. It is your life and your privilege to continue to educate yourselves the rest of your lives.

Of course, it is possible and disturbingly easy to close the door which has opened, to relax back into what Socrates called "the unexamined life," which he believed was not worth living. This we call mental vegetation. It sometimes has a gaudy, fragrant flower. But it withers early.

But there are other rights and privileges of which I must speak. There is the right to take one's place in the world as an adult, mature, responsible member of society, sharing the problems of other human beings and contributing to the solution of those problems to the best of your energy, training, and liberal-mindedness. There is, finally, the privilege of accepting the tremendous challenge of our Time, the greatest challenge which the people of any period in history have faced. It is your privilege now to ally yourselves with the enlightened leadership of the world, to determine through vision, devotion and hard work whether the Race of Man is to survive on Planet Earth.

As you set out now, endowed with these rights and privileges pertaining to the liberated mind, I wish for each of you success and joy. And may you have God's guidance and abiding presence every step of the way.

Honor Scholarship Winners

IN ADDITION to the academic honors claimed by graduates and the ranking members of the three lower classes, three special honors are annually announced at Commencement, the winners of the Manson and Benedict Scholarships and of the Sullivan Award.

Marion Bower, New York and formerly of Richmond, is to hold the Manson Memorial Alumnae Scholarship in 1947-48. Meon, as she is known to her fellow students, is president of the Stu-Government Association and has acted in that capacity since April. Editor of the Briar Patch this year, president of her freshman class, winner in swimming events, she is a member of Paint and Patches and of Tau Phi. On the academic side she was on the Freshman Honor list two years ago, she has been named on the Dean's List consistently, and she won the $100 Junior Honor Scholarship this June as the ranking member of her class. Meon's sister, Ann, is a 1945 graduate of Sweet Briar.

Isabel Dzung, Shanghai, China, has the honor of being the second holder of the Mary Kendrick Benedict Scholarship. Isabel entered Sweet Briar in February, 1946, after two years of study at the National Central University at Chungking. She soon began to take part in student activities, singing in the Glee Club and in the Choir. She has given several distinguished chapel talks, she writes for the Brambler and for the Sweet Briar News. Although she is majoring in English, art is one of her chief interests. During this year, Isabel has earned money for college expenses by lettering title cards for American movies that are to be sent to China. After she gets her Sweet Briar degree Isabel wants to study in Europe and then return to China to teach.

Two alumnae, Mary Moore Pancake, '32, and Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, '36, were among the speakers at two recent panel discussions concerning careers which were given under the auspices of the Personnel Committee. Mary Moore spoke on newspaper work and its possibilities and Flizabeth spoke on marriage. Earlier in the spring Harriet

President's Report to The Alumnae Association

YOUR Alumnae Council has met three times in 1947, in early November, late January, and in May—Thursday and Friday of this past week. In each case the larger part of two days has been devoted to work, discussion, and decision, in the Council as a whole, and in Committees appointed to do special tasks.

During the first meetings in November plans were made for Alumnae Discussion Groups to develop along lines suggested by Miss Benedict's article, "Wake Up, Alumnac!" Launched with an initial joint meeting of Faculty, and Alumnae Council here at Sweet Briar in midwinter, the program, under the fine leadership of Kitty Blount Andersen, '26, has been gaining momentum and providing opportunity for alumnae to become informed and to express themselves about matters of educational and administrative policy of the college. Plans are made for additional meetings next year, and it is to be hoped that these discussion groups will continue through coming years to be a mental stimulation for alumnae and a source of valuable information for both college and alumnae, and so fulfill the high hopes with which they were undertaken. The ALUMNAE NEWS will carry fuller reports of these discussion meetings as they are compiled.

The report of the Fund Chairman indicates what progress is being made in that vital part of our organization. The Association has been most fortunate in its retiring Fund Chairman, who through two terms of office has displayed loyalty, diligence, and devotion to her task. The results of her efforts can speak for her. It is our privilege to announce that Gerry Mallory's successor, who has been here this week making studies in preparation for taking over her duties on July 1, is to be Marian Shanley Jacobs, '44. It is the belief of those of us who have been working with her that she will fill her office to the satisfaction and approval of the Alumnae Association.

An immense amount of work has been done in organizing and revitalizing our Alumnae Clubs. Our vice president, Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, as Director of Clubs, has worked long and faithfully, and with encouraging results. Her report indicates that there are now approximately 35 clubs participating in alumnae activities. Twenty-five more clubs are in the process of being formed, and the list is growing. We have reports from 34 groups of meetings on Sweet Briar Day in which 468 alumnae participated. To simplify and expedite the work of the Director of Clubs, our Association has been divided into Regions, each of which is to have a Regional Director, who is prepared to give assistance to and keep informed about the activities of clubs in her region. It is the hope of the Alumnae Council that under this plan the value of our clubs to Alumnae and to the college will be immeasurably strengthened.

Following a recommendation made by the previous council in January, 1946, a committee was formed to study the complete revision of the Constitution and its By-Laws. This Committee, under the chairmanship of Grace Merrick Twohy, '24, has worked ever since, making careful investigations of the constitutions of similar associations, seeking advice from experts in the field, and it has presented to the Association proposals for a completely revised Constitution and By-Laws. Members of the Association have received copies of the proposals, together with a mail ballot, and the results of the balloting will be announced after the polls close at midnight tonight.

In connection with the Constitutional revision, the Council has made an effort to clarify procedure and duties for various functions of the Association. This has taken the form of Handbooks, which have been approved by the Council, and are ready to serve as guides for Clubs, Fund Chairmen, and Nominating Committees. They have been prepared with the greatest care, and it is our hope that they will simplify and facilitate the work of their departments in the future. They will be bound together with the Constitution, to serve as ready reference to anyone who needs them. It is probably not possible to realize at casual glance how much work it has taken to prepare all these papers, but the Association is most fortunate to have had the services of Grace Merrick Twohy, Edith Durrell Marshall, Gerry Mallory, and Sally Shallenberger Brown, who worked faithfully in their preparation.

Some of the Alumnae Council members who attended the final meetings of this year on May 29 and 30 are pictured in front of the gymnasium. The group includes Mary Huntington Harrison, '30; Sally Shallenberger Brown, '32; Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, '36; Amelia Hollis Scott, '29; Norvell Royer Orgain, '30; Louise Hammond Skinner, '19; Marian Shanley Jacobs, '44; Edith Durrell Marshall, '21; Gerry Mallory, '33; Lucy Lloyd, '41; Adeline Jones Vorhees, '46; Eugenia Griffin Burnett, '10; Helen McMahon, '23; Isabel Wood Holt, '19; and Grace Merrick Twohy, '24.

8 Alumnae News

The Council was pleased to learn that plans were being made in the college offices for a long-time plan for sending visitors to address alumnae clubs and groups, and to visit secondary schools. This has for a long time been desired, but was prevented by the war. Already this year some of us have seen the gratifying results of this plan.

Since 1938 our Alumnae Association has been most fortunate to have as its Executive-Secretary Helen McMahon, '23. Her services have been of inestimable value, in representing alumnae to the college and students, and the college and students to alumnae. She has worked modestly and quietly, with the greatest skill and loyalty, maintaining always the highest ideals for herself and for the Association. She has for several years been anxious to give up her work in the Alumnae Office as she felt that other obligations of hers conflicted too strongly with it. It was with real regret that her resignation was accepted to become effective on July 1, 1947. She leaves her office with the good wishes and deepest appreciation of all of us.

To fill the office of Executive-Secretary the college and Alumnae Association have secured an alumna to whom they look with confidence and expectation. Harriet Shaw, '37, has been on campus since May 1st, preparing to take over her duties on July 1. She has already shown herself interested and valuable, and she will take office with the good wishes and active support of the Alumnae Council and Association.

It would be impossible for the President to close her report without making public her appreciation of the services rendered to the Association by the Alumnae Council. Members of this body are put to considerable expense of time and money, which they give freely and gladly. It is true that service on the Council is rewarding in interest and stimulation, but this is a group which has worked hard and well, far beyond the everyday call of duty, and it is a privilege to serve with them.

Respectfully submitted, ELIZABETH Pinkerton Scott, '36,

Report of the Alumnae Secretary

POR most of us our Alumnae Association is only one of a number of interests outside family, home, and job. As undergraduates we were often reminded that the reason for spending four years at Sweet Briar was "not to learn how to make a living but to develop a sense of values and learn how to make a life"; to make it more meaningful for others as well as ourselves than it would have been had we never gone to college. This more meaningful life should and does include a rich variety of activities and interests among which rightfully belongs a deep concern for the progress of our own college.

The development of the Sweet Briar Alumnae Association has been slow but certain.

Someone once said that alumnae organizations go through a growing pains period, in most cases lasting for twenty-five years. Though our association was formed in 1910, it was not until 1926 when the first resident Alumnae Secretary was appointed that alumnae activities and plans gained cohesion and a continuing unity of purpose. In its usefulness to the college during these twenty-one years the development of the association has been a source of pride to those of us who have worked closely with its governing council.

The Association of Alumnae and Former Students of Sweet Briar College, formed in 1910, had four officers and an executive committee of four members, all elected at the annual meeting held at Sweet Briar in June. Active members paid dues of $1.00 annually and only one meeting was held, and that at Commencement.

The alumnae in the first years of their organization were largely concerned with increasing the endowment of the college by $10,000, and forming alumnae "chapters", and the reports baldly state that "only those chapters which raise money are considered organized". In 1915, the record reads, "and now we start the new year with $100 in our treasury and unbounded zeal in our hearts". The concern over funds, and ways and means is constant. In 1916 we find "one of the most important duties which devolve upon all alumnae is to interest other people in Sweet Briar. Many girls select a college at random. It is for us old girls to suggest Sweet Briar to these unsettled individuals". The establishment of the study plan for Alumnae Representatives on Admission coming at a much later date satisfies this early desire of the alumnae to see that their college becomes well and favorably known.

Prior to the establishment of an alumnae office with Katharyn Norris, '26, as resident Alumnae Secretary in September 1926, there were approximately only 200 duespaying members. In June 1929, the Treasurer's Report records 400 active members and 136 Life Members, a total of 536!

Today there are 1802 graduates, 2935 non-graduates and 926 Academy and special alumnae with 1395 active members, who were contributors to the Alumnae Fund in 1945-46

In 1923 the name of the association was changed to Sweet Briar Alnmnae Association in order to make no distinction between graduates and non-graduates. Until this time the constitution provided that "former students of the Academy are eligible to auxiliary membership in the Association and all the privileges pertaining thereto, except that of holding office." In 1938 this ruling had been changed and an Academy alumna has served on the Alumnae Council since that time.

Until 1920 officers were elected at each annual meeting for a term of one year and thereafter they were elected for two-year terms, with the privilege of re-election for a second term.

The constitution has undergone extensive revision several times. Provision for voting by mail was not made until 1933.

The most significant change, approved by the alumnae in 1940, provided for an enlarged Alumnae Council; from 4 officers, 5 members at large, 3 honorary members (8 voting members) to 4 officers, 16 members at large, 3 ex-officio members (19 voting members). The nominating committee, located in one designated city since 1936, sought to include representation from a wide geographic area and with a wide class distribution of candidates. Prior to this time the committee had geographic and class distribution which resulted in the chairman having to do all of the work, since the committee held no actual meetings but transacted business by mail.

A much-needed revision of the Constitution and By-Laws for the Alumnae Association has been approved this year.

The work of the Alumnae Association has centered largely around the activities discussed in topic form:

Alumnae Council

The Alumnae Council has held three meetings each year since 1932-33, except during the war years, 1942, 1943, 1944. An alumna who serves on the Council is urged to take the examination for Alumnae Representatives on Admission, and she concerns herself with college matters generally—the trends in other women's colleges as well as those at Sweet Briar.

She visits classes, talks with many students who are running affairs now, studies the catalogue, and is genuinely concerned with the problems and progress of the college. She knows too that she is involved in a costly contribution because she must pay her own traveling expenses and in many instances she must engage someone else to look after the children during her absence. It is most fortunate for us that our alumnae are willing to do this. In addition they support the annual Alumnae Fund in a liberal manner. They fully admit that they go home after three strenuous days "physically exhausted, but stimulated and refreshed in mind". There is every reason to be proud of this group of alumnae who count it an honor and a privilege to work hard in the interests of their college. I cannot adequately express my wholehearted admiration for them during my term in the Alumnae Office.

Alumnae Members of the Board of Overseers

In 1915, a small band of earnest alumnae saw no reason why the alumnae should not have representation on the governing board of the college, so a petition was sent to the Board of Directors. The Board did not have the right to enlarge its membership at that time, but did set up an Advisory Committee made up of "influential persons who might become interested in Sweet Briar", and asked some alumnae to serve on this committee.

In 1933 the Alumnae Council appealed a second time to the Board of Directors for alumnae representation on the Board of Overseers and the request was granted. In 1934, the first two alumnae representatives, Elizabeth Franke Balls, '13, and Martha Lee Williamson, '25, were nominated by the Alumnae Association and elected by the Board of Overseers for a six-year term.

Alumnae Clubs

In 1915 our enthusiastic alumnae proposed that 28 alumnae "chapters" be formed in the principal cities of this country. Their enthusiasm was dampened considerably when only 10 active groups could be listed in 1916. The ladies had stormy, disillusioning times for many years, and in 1924-25 only 7 "chapters" could honestly list live officers. These,—Cincinnati, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Richmond, and Washington, have persisted through the years, with one exception. New York alumnae have been alternately active and inactive.

There is constant repetition throughout the reports of the Alumnae Council, the annual meetings of the Alumnae Association, and the annual report of the Alumnae Secretary, that "something must be done to give purpose and life to our alumnae clubs."

All chapters (called clubs after 1923) were assessed $25.00 annually from June 1927, for the purpose at first of helping to pay the salary of the Alumnae Secretary; later this fund was credited to the Manson Memorial Scholarship. It was hoped that this assessment would encourage clubs to bestir themselves to work together on some project. A club page giving regular activity reports was included in the ALUMNAE News in 1932, though there are earlier reports of clubs.

Many groups began to entertain incoming freshmen at this time. In 1935 an extensive program instituted by the Registrar's Office encouraged club assistance in arranging exhibits of college literature, pictures, etc., in their local secondary schools in connection with visits by the Registrar, President, or Dean,

A Director of Alumnae Clubs seemed the answer to club woes, so in 1935 Mary Macdonald Reynolds, '30, was appointed to fill this demanding and important position, in which capacity she served for three years. Her correspondence with club presidents throughout the period, encouraging them to support the program of the Association, was undoubtedly very helpful. However, the weakness of this program was that the Club Director had no budget for promotion work, personal visits, etc.

The first Club Representatives' Meeting was held at Sweet Briar during Commencement in 1939 and each year thereafter until the war when reunions were discontinued. An exchange of ideas, encouragement in the similarity of their experiences, and a growing belief that the work of the alumnae clubs was of genuine value to the college made these meetings well worth-while. These meetings will be resumed this year.

In 1939-40 the emphasis was placed on: participation by alumnae clubs in community and cultural affairs; serious effort in getting information about Sweet Briar to good prospective students; upon alumnae becoming, individually, through their clubs, as well informed as possible about their college; the sponsoring of one large project of a superior type rather than a series of small affairs.

An Alumnae Club Handbook in tentative form, prepared by Polly Bissell Ridler and the Alumnae Secretary, was sent in November, 1941, to 41 club presidents and to Sweet Briar Day chairmen if there was a group large enough to form an active club. The handbook, adaptable for small or large clubs, set forth the definitions and objections of a club; organization, officers, standing committees, suggestions for program and money-making projects. This handbook in revised form will be sent to all Alumnae Clubs in the near future.

In 1941-42, Patch Snatches, a college news sheet, edited by Mary Marks, '35, during the year she served as Alumnae Fund Chairman on campus, was sent to all clubs in September, November, January, March, and May. This innovation was enthusiastically received by the clubs and should certainly be revived.

This year the alumnae clubs embarked on probably the most ambitious overall program yet attempted by Sweet Briar clubs, with meetings scheduled to take place in March and May in some 50 cities throughout the country. They met to discuss the material provided for them with the cooperation of the President, the Dean, and the Alumnae Secretary. This program has long been in making and it is most heartening to see it a reality. The generous assistance and encouragement of Miss Lucas, Mrs. Lyman, and members of the faculty, and the alumnae response to our suggestions will be among the most satisfying memories held by this Alumnae Secretary.

The calendar of events in connection with the program which Miss Lucas has said calls for "taking stock of oursclves and re-evaluating the ends and means of a liberal arts education" is listed.

Sweet Briar Day

First instituted by the Alumnae Association in 1922, Sweet Briar Day is celebrated on December 28 each year, unless that day falls on Sunday. It is similar to Founder's Day celebrations observed by other colleges and is believed to be unique in its universal observance on the same day by Sweet Briar alumnae and students.

The celebration takes the form of a luncheon or tea to which the students are invited to join with the alumnae and to bring them current college news. Members of the administration, faculty, and staff wherever they are at this time are always invited to join the group and often are asked to speak informally.

The day has been celebrated in as many as 75 cities in this country and in eight foreign countries, with a total attendance of as many as 1250 alumnae.

In recent years a student from each city where a celebration is to be held is asked by the Alumnae Secretary to give definite college news which has been assembled in mimeographed form.

Alumnae Reunions

Alumnae reunions are held at the college each year at Commencement for the first and every 5 years thereafter. The Dix system of reunions was tried for a brief period, but due to the small classes and small numbers returning, it was given up and the five-year plan resumed. Until 1946, the alumnae were guests of the college during Commencement, i.e., with no charge for their room and board. During the war years, 1943, '44, and '45, no reunions were held because of the government request that such meetings be omitted for the duration.

The numbers of returning alumnae have increased from a scant 20 recorded in 1923 to 163 in 1940. Since alumnae must be housed in the dormitories vacated by students, there can be no large increase over the number accommodated in 1940.

The shortened Commencement week-end allows time only for two special alumnae events, the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association on Saturday afternoon and the Alumnae Dinner for the seniors on Saturday night. Class reunion suppers or picnics are planned for Sunday evening.

Atumnae College

An Alumnae College after Commencement, considered and very much desired by the Alumnae Council, has never materialized, but the alumnae-sponsored lectures during this week (prior to 1942) have been well-received by alumnae and by parents here for their daughters' graduation. The speakers and their subjects are listed:

- 1937 Professor Lucy S. Crawford-A Philosophical Approach.
- 1938 Professor Ewing C. Scntt—New Chemicals in Modern Medicine.
- 1939 Alumnae play-Lote's Labour Lost.
- 1941 Dean Lyman-The Liberal Arts College and the Crisis.
- 1942 Margaret Grant, '15-Sweet Briar Through a Telescope.

Alumnae Publications

The first publication on record was Sweet Briar Topics, published in April, 1912, by the New York Chapter of Former Students of Sweet Briar College and distributed to alumnae in June 1913.

From 1913-16, a minute booklet, 23/4 x 51/2 inches, was published by the Association. It contained reports by the President, the Treasurer, an account of the annual meeting, ways and means of raising money for endowment, college news, local chapter notes, and a list of all students, former and current.

In 1917, an enlarged publication, 41/4 x 6 inches, was presented to dues-paying members. This form persisted until 1926, when an Alumnae Bulletin, printed under the college bulletin permit and paid for by the alumnae, was issued several times during the academic year.

Then in 1932 the format was changed with a distinctive black cover with the seal and new title Sweet Briar Alumnae News in green. Articles of general interest written by alumnae and faculty members, with additional material from other college writers and officers of the American Alumni Council, plus the ever-important class notes section made the Alumnae News a very creditable publication.

In June 1935, the Alumnae News was awarded a blue ribbon by the American Alumni Council for its "consistently large numbers of interesting feature stories dealing with the activities of Sweet Briar graduates and for the way in which the articles were presented and illustrated."

In 1941-42, just ten years after the first real magazine, a complete change of format took place, resulting in a large magazine, 81/2 x 11 inches, with pictorial covers printed in green ink. Campus scenes, buildings, and student pictures have been used for the covers. The larger magazine enabled us to introduce greater variety and to use more pictures for which cuts were already available. The Brian Patch and Brambler have been sources of interesting pictures from time to time.

New features are constantly being tried and two of the most successful have been the president's page, one of our most popular features contrary to the findings of other college magazines, and student edited issues in April 1943 and 1944. The editor of the Sweet Briar News worked closely with the Alumnae Secretary on these issues.

During the war, the names of all alumnae in the services were printed on the back cover of the News and articles and pictures concerning their work and experiences were used in at least two of the four issues each year.

Reunions on paper were a feature of the June 1943, '44, and '45 issues. These included fairly comprehensive reports of the entire membership of the reunion classes and some Excerpts from President Glass' annual report to the Board of Overseers were printed for the first time for the alumnae in June 1939.

A study of the complete file of the Table of Contents reveals a creditable variety and quality of news, in addition to reports of events of significance in Sweet Briar history, all printed in our constant efforts to "present the college as it is" to the alumnae and other readers.

The Alumnae Fund

"The Alumnae Fund," wrote the first publicity chairman for the Fund, in October '34, "was adopted in June 1933 to supersede the outworn system of dues as a means of giving to the college and supporting the Alumnae Association.

"Many colleges have turned to this method because in it they have found a means whereby alumni could more adequately express their loyalty to their college and their faith in its present as well as in its future, for the proceeds of each year's fund become the benefits of the future for successive generations of students."

In the first year of the Sweet Briar Fund, 16'? of the alumnae contributed—gave $1,387.25, an average gift of $3.00, an acknowledged triumph since alumnae dues had been $2.00.

The geographic area plan was tried for one year but was abandoned in favor of the class agent system. Class agents were secured for the classes 1910 through 1934 and for the ex-students of '35, '36 and '37. The end of the first trial year of the class agent system was completed with an increase of 156 gifts over the first year's total.

During 1937-38 and 1938-39 the alumnae had given over $9,000, designated for the Library.

In 1939-40 the Fund adopted a one-year plan of allowing contributions to be designated for one of 8 projects: scholarships, buildings and grounds, the library, faculty salaries, alumnae office, annuity plan for faculty, faculty leaves, an unrestricted gift to the college, with an overwhelming preference indicated for the unrestricted gift.

In 1941-42, the Fund Chairman directed the work from Sweet Briar as a member of the office staff, a most satisfactory arrangement. That year the Fund became more firmly established and better organized. There was possible for the first time a better understanding of college needs and an opportunity to interpret them intelligently to the Class Fund Agents.

In 1942-43 a $10.00 war stamp book with an especially designed cover was the form of alumnae appeal. The number of pledges to be paid by May 15 increased remarkably with the stamp book plan. The Fund was designated this year for Endowment.

In 1943-44 and 1944-45, the $18.75 war stamp books were used with an option given to alumnae of making a cash gift, war stamps, or bonds. Bonds were purchased for the Endowment Fund of the college and the cash gifts were an unrestricted gift.

There were several encouraging notes during this period; the number of contributions noticeably increased; the size of contributions increased even more noticeably. The average gift had increased from $2.90 in '33-'34 to $6.50 in 1943-44, with approximately 50 gifts of $18.75 (filled stamp books) and a number larger than this. In 1940-41, two-thirds of the gifts were under $5.00; in 1943-44, only one-quarter of the gifts were under $5.00.

In 1944-45, the Fund projects were two-fold, with the alumnae who were in college from 1906 through 1916 contributing to the Benedict Scholarship Fund to honor Sweet Briar's first president, Dr. Mary K. Benedict, and the classes of 1920-1944 making an unrestricted gift to the college.

The Benedict Scholarship Fund provides an endowed scholarship "for an upperclass student of high academic standing and personal integrity, who has shown in her college experience a purpose for service". This Fund is now $13,409, the gift of alumnae, faculty, and friends of Miss Benedict.

In addition the general fund was more successful than in any one year since its establishment in 1933; the final figure was $11,382.28. The total of alumnae giving in 1944-45, including both funds, was $23,847.28.

The 1945-46 Fund, a gift of $21,333.80 to the College Endowment Fund was made in honor of Miss Glass, who completed twenty-one years at Sweet Briar with the year of her retirement.

The Fund record of fourteen years, included in a number of reports on file in the office, deserves careful study which will reveal a number of interesting facts:

a) It has been customary to send at least 2 general Fund mailings each year from the office to all alumnae, with many pages devoted to the Fund in the magazine, Sweet Briar Day, and Commencement mailings. Personal acknowledgement of all gifts has been made by the Alumnae Secretary. When the budget allowed, an extra mailing has gone to non-contributors in April.

b) The Alumnae Fund Chairman serves without renumeration and often has paid all of her own expenses by contributing this amount to the Fund.

c) The Class Fund Agents, almost without exception, contribute the postage and other expenses involved in letters written to remind the class of the Fund, in addition to making a monetary gift.

A comparision of the first and last year's Fund figures is noted here:

1933-34 710 contributors gave $ 2,118.25 (including 120 Life members)

1945-46 1392 contributors gave $21,333.80

The report last year shows that 15 classes improved their contributor percentage and that more large gifts ($500 to $1,000) were received than in any previous year except the large gifts made to the Benedict Fund. It also shows that the bulk of the Fund is made up of a larger number of average gifts.

Alumnae-Student Relations

Alumnae-Student Relations, a most important part of every alumnae secretary's schedule of activities, have been most pleasant and rewarding.

The Sweet Briar News has had an alumnae column since 1933, its quality depending largely upon the amount of time given by someone in the Alumnae Office to making suggestions and assembling the material. In 1939-40 a series of articles prepared in the Alumnae Office presented the history of the Alumnae Association, its purpose, the governing council, the Alumnae Fund, the Manson Memorial Scholarship, the Alumnae Fund, the Manson of the records kept in the Alumnae Office, a series of questions on college history and traditions, and a comparison of the college careers of several alumnae mothers and daughters.

Many students come to the Alumnae Office for information, advice, and suggestions in regard to college customs and traditions.

The Alumnae Secretary has been invited to speak at convocation, and at senior class meetings. At these meetings there is opportunity for explaining how, after college, as new alumnae they may become actively identified with the alumnae clubs; their responsibilities as the representatives of Sweet Briar wherever they are in the world; their responsibility as returning alumnae visitors to the college, and a host of other things.

Meetings with the freshmen, sophomores, and juniors were held for several years and the Alumnae Secretary told them of the history and traditions of the college, the aims and purposes of the Alumnae Association, etc.

The presidents of student organizations and the executive committee of student government have been invited to dinner with the Alumnae Council once each year since 1940.

Several issues of the Alumnae News have been distributed freely to interested students each year.

I would make three wishes for Sweet Briar alumnae as I leave this office where I have served for nine years and have observed with mingled emotions your expressed devotion, affection, irritation, and concern for your college.

Be proud of your college and what it has stood for and what it has become in the educational world in its brief history.

Study, be intelligently informed about Sweet Briar, so that you will proudly defend the college rather than apologetically assume that the college has "let you down."

Consider giving to the Alumnae Fund, your annual gift to Sweet Briar, an opportunity—less a matter of money than of being aware of the part that we as alumnae are privileged to play in the support of the college.

The Alumnae Association is your organization, and it is perhaps presumptuous of me to thank you for your interest and concern and your support of your own organization.

However, during my years in the Alumnae Office, I have been increasingly impressed with the growing devotion of many alumnae to the college and your efforts to help make the Sweet Briar association an organization of educational importance.

Thank you every one, the Alumnae Council, class officers, fund agents, class secretaries—the list is too long to enumerate you singly—for your generous assistance, constant encouragement, and many thoughtful gestures. I know you will give my successor, Harriet Shaw, the same fine cooperation you have given me.

Respectfully submitted,

HELEN H. McMahon.

Commencement Vesper Service

By President Lucas

I have sometimes thought as I've walked in the hills overlooking our campus, of Spinoza's conception of the ultimate goal of human life: seeing all things "under a certain aspect of eternity." As we walk through the valleys, we can see ahead only as far as the next turn. To see what lies behind us we must turn our heads. What lies beyond the hills and past a clump of trees we cannot see at all but only guess. But imagine our vision elevated, so that we can get a bird's eye view of the surrounding landscape at a single glance. Now we can see past the next turn in the road, beyond the woods and over the hill. We can even see ourselves walking along the valley road.

In other words, we now have full vision of our surroundings in their entirety, in their true perspective—and of our relation to them. We have been partly freed from limitations of space and time and from the comparative blindness of our customary view of that small part of the world which lies immediately around us. We begin to see the things of this world, to put it into Spinoza's words, "under the aspect of eternity," or each thing in its proper place in the infinite being of God.

It would be Spinozistically symbolic if we had built our college at different elevations according to classes, with Freshmen in the valleys, Sophomores on the rolling uplands, Juniors perhaps on Paul's Mountain, and the august, all-seeing Seniors out on Kentucky Ridge. It is our earnest hope, however, that these Seniors who take their degrees at Sweet Briar tomorrow have escaped from the lowlands of prejudice and short-sightedness and gained the elevation of perspective and breadth of vision. This progress is the true test of liberal education.

Some students at Yale University recently made a significant comment to a visiting philosopher. The philosopher happened to be a young lady from France, Simone de Beauvoir, of the muchly-talked-of Existentialist coterie. She has been traveling around our country this year, speaking and observing much, as philosophers are wont to do. It is in her parting critique of America, of our life and thought and works, that Simone de Beauvoir quotes the Yale lads. They said to her:

"We want to go to Paris for a while so that we may see things from some perspective; we have not been able to decide what our problems are. All we know is that we have no solution for them."

As Simone de Beauvoir sees it, "the young American generally lacks a sense of personal accomplishment. He does not want to do great things because he is not aware that there are great things to be done. As a result of having failed to achieve a concrete bond with the world, most of them feel a great inner emptiness; they feel the abstractness of a contentless freedom: it makes them giddy; they look for a way out."

Now these are hard words. But is is good to see oursclves as others see us. Of course, it's true that Simone de Beauvoir has not visited Sweet Briar. She has not stood with all of us on our hills and looked out over the world. Still, I believe that her solution is as valid for us as for the rest of America. She concludes her critique of our country by saying that the hope of America lies not in the Atomic Bomb and not in the TVA—but in the uneasy hearts of the Ex-G.I.'s and in the hearts of thousands of young people. It lies in the consciousness of our youth suddenly become aware of what the Spanish philosopher Unamuno has called "the tragic sense of life,"—dedicating themselves to the service of humanity.

Now all of this is, to my way of thinking, very closely connected with religion. For it is religion which, I believe, must be the in-between step, the step up from the tragic sense of life to that of responsible determination to serve man's mind and man's freedom. It's a matter of historical fact that the significant developments in the religions of mankind have come in the times of tragedy, of national travail and personal anguish. In the records of our Hebrew Christian culture, we can trace the development of the concept of God from the earliest ideas of a jealous, angry, bribeable, tyrannical, tribal diety—on down the ages to the intuition of infinite and eternal Divine Reality of absolute justice and perfect love. The great seers of the Old Testament found God not in the hours of triumph but in the years of tragedy, of cruel wars and bitter exile. The birthplace of the Moral God was not in idyllic Gardens of Eden but in the dismal depths of human despair and suffering: in the "tragic sense of life", down through the ages. Not that God has changed with our changing ideas, but that we have changed as we have matured in insight and experience.

These are indeed desperate days in which we are living, days which should inspire all sensitive, intelligent human beings with this "tragic sense of life." There are great things which must be done if we as individuals and as a people are to serve the future of humanity. But what of that middle step: what God-idea, what great and abiding faith can give us the vision of what we must do and the strength and the determination to carry through?

Rabbi Joshua Liebman of Boston has given his answer to that question in his book, Peace of Mind, which has held first place on America's non-fiction reading list for sometime and which I suppose most of you have already read. Rabbi Liebman puts it this way:

"We must be brave enough to declare that every culture must understand God in its own terms rather than rely upon outworn tradition—The church—can help men everywhere to resist the economic and political slavery threatening to engulf human dignity and freedom, by teaching belief in a God who wants cooperation not submission, partnership not surrender.—We need to look upon God as the Power who needs our collaboration and who looks to man to be His mature partner in the developing evolution of a better world."

Liebman believes that this concept of God is the psychologically mature idea for our time, that only this concept can put an end to what he sees as the cultural and spiritual lag of our Age. Perhaps it is with such an idea of ourselves-as co-workers in very fact with an infinitely just and loving God-that we shall find the inspiration to dedicate our lives and work to the proposition that Mankind shall survive in a world of peace and goodwill. It is our hope that the years at Sweet Briar have brought at least partial understanding of what it means to see the world "under the aspect of eternity", and life in its "tragic sense." But we shall have failed in our larger purpose if we have not also awakened in our students a new and vital comprehension of the meaning of God in human life. Our true success depends upon their seeking to realize through their homes, churches, communities, and professional and business careers the vital partnership they share with God. PRAYER:

Father of all Mankind, we pray for all men everywhere today.

Teach us through Thy love to know Thy way. In this hour of crisis we humbly confess our sins: Our pride, our prejudice, our lazy ignorance which make us loath to see Thy kingdom come Or Thy will for earth be done.

Free our minds from servitude to sins of selfishness. Free our hearts from hate by filling us with love. Enter our minds, we pray, and set our hearts on fire. Give us, every one, the courage and the strength To share the building of a better world.

Infuse us with Thy love that, blindly finite as we are, We blind men of the world may share the light Which puts all barriers down—and

In Thine all-embracing love, find lasting peace.

BI NEDICTION:

May the Lord be with us and guide us, as we go our way, working with Him for a world of peace and good will among all mankind.

Reading List for Alumnae

Out of two group discussions held by alumnae clubs this spring—in Lynchburg and Boston—came specific requests for reading lists, similar to those which appeared in the Alumnae News several years ago. Alumnae wanted a representative listing of current books, chiefly those which would help them to gain further insight into contemporary problems in education as well as in other fields.

The following list, compiled from suggestions submitted by four members of the community who read widely, is presented in answer to these alumnae requests:

Club Representatives' Meeting

On Sunday afternoon, June 1, twenty-three representatives from nineteen cities met in Fletcher Auditorium for the first club representatives' meeting to be held since the beginning of the war. Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, President of the Alumnae Association, greeted the representatives and turned the meeting over to the Director of Alumnae Clubs.

She presented to them the newly organized Regional Plan for alumnae clubs which divides the country into nine regions, each with a chairman who is to promote the work of the Alumnae Association among the clubs assigned to her region and to act as a liaison between the clubs, the Executive Secretary, the Director of Clubs, and the Alumnae Council. The regional chairmen are members of the Alumnae Gouncil.

Those present were:

Region I-Mrs. Adrian Massie (Gertrude Dally), chairman.

New York City-Constance Van Ness

Westchester-Ruth Fiske Steegar

Northern New Jersey-Gerry Mallory

Region II—Mrs. John B. Orgain, Jr. (Norvell Royer), chairman

Charlottesville, Virginia—Frances Baldwin Whitaker and Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott.

Norfolk-Louise Hammond Skinner.

Richmond-Lucy Call Dabney.

Alexandria and Arlington, Virginia—Jacquelin Cochran Nicholson.

Washington, D. C .- Ellen Snodgrass Park.

Region III-Lucy Lloyd, chairman.

Wilmington, Delaware-Emily Jones Hodge.

Philadelphia—Ann Hauslein Potterfield.

Princeton, N. J.-Betty Braxton Preston.

Pittsburgh-Elizabeth Fohl Kerr.

Region IV-Chairman to be appointed.

Winston-Salem-Polly Lambeth Blackwell.

Region V—Mrs. H. L. Young, Jr. (Lida Voigt), chairman. No representatives present.

Region VI—Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown (Sally Shallenberger), chairman.

Cincinnati-Mary Huntington Harrison.

Charleston, West Virginia—Elizabeth Mathews Wallace.

Region VII—Mrs. E. Webster Harrison (Mary Huntington), chairman.

Toledo-Rachel Lloyd Holton and Ruth Geer Boice.

Region VIII—Mrs. Stephen Voorhees (Adeline Jones), chairman.

No representatives present.

Region IX—Mrs. Frederick Skinner (Louise Hammond), chairman.

Los Angeles-Lenore Hancel Sturdy.

San Francisco-Ruth Mcllravy Logan.

Dallas-Helen Sanford.

San Antonio-Flora Cameron.

The representatives were told how the regional chairmen can help their clubs by assisting them with suggestions for organization, program-building, raising the Manson Memorial Scholarship Fund, Sweet Briar Day, etc. Also the clubs are to write their regional chairmen for information and keep them informed of their club activities, membership lists, changes of address, and so forth.

A brief outline of the contents of the newly-revised Club Handbook was presented. The handbook was approved at the June meeting of the Alumnae Council, and will be mailed, together with the Nominating Committee and Alumnae Fund Handbooks, to all club presidents before fall. This should be of great value to groups of alumnae who have formed clubs or who are contemplating organization.

The discussion program of the Educational Policy Committee was next considered. Those who had participated in the two meetings held by the club this spring were enthusiastic. They said that the alumnae in their cities were deeply interested in continuing the program and hoped the committee would prepare additional papers for them to study for a long time to come. The program seems to answer a long-felt need of every group, a real purpose for meeting.

Various methods of handling the discussions were compared. The most interesting and-valuable conclusions have come from the groups whose members had read some of the background materials suggested in the bibliographies and had thoroughly studied the guiding articles before their meetings. Usually a few of the group volunteered to make this preliminary study.

The club representatives' meeting was informal. Many good ideas were brought out by comparing the activities of the various groups and it is the hope of the Club Director that those present took home with them renewed enthusiasm and inspiration.

Respectfully submitted, EDITH DURRELL MARSHALL Director of Alumnae Clubs

ACADEMY - SPECIAL

Ciass Secretary: Marion L. Peele, 602 Fair-fax Avenue, Apartment 1-C, Norfolk 7, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Margaret Potts (Mrs. Henry H. Williams), 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Only two items of interest have come my way since the last letters that you read in the April News,

A clipping has come to the Alomnae Office from Virginia Lazenby O'Hara, an interview printed in the Dallas News after Mr. and Mrs. O'Hara returned from Holland where they had gone to visit their son's grave. They found that only six other American civilians had visited the cemetery at Margraten before them, but there were many flowers on the graves. "We noticed villagers from near by laying flowers on graves. Each one—man, woman or child—would come to a grave, kneel and say a little prayer, then place the flowers on the grave. (22,000 Americans are buried there.)

"I learned that each grave—of Jew or Gentile, white or Negro, or an unknown soldier—has been 'adopted' by a family, which treats it as though it belonged to their own son. The Dutch people feel very keenly that the Americans who fell in Holland were fighting for their cause, and to a great extent belong to them."

Helen Duke, formerly of Charlottesville, is now living in Norfolk and is a member of the staff of the Norfolk Public Library. After leaving Sweet Briar, Helen took her degree at the University of Virginia and specialized in library work at Pratt Institute.

Marguerite Shafer Odom, also now lives in Norfolk. We had lunch together several days ago and she brought photographs to show me her "accomplishments" since leaving school; a fine family, three sons and a daughter, the latter has a daughter of her own just six weeks old. Marguerite has come to Norfolk to be near her daughter. Her eldest son is an engineer; the second son, just out of the Navy, is in his first year at Washington and Lee, and the youngest boy, 14, is still in high school.

Probably few of you would ever imagine there are approximately 850 members of the Academy-Special group. However, a recent listing by the Alumnae Office shows that number. Of these, quite a few seem to have lost touch with Sweet Briar and it has seemed to Margaret Potts Williams and to me that it would be a fine thing if we could trace all or some of these "lost" ones through our letter in the Alumnae News.

You will probably be seeing our "Lost Persons" column frequently, so please, each one of you who knows anything at all about those whom we are trying to trace, send us their address or any information you may have heard about them and how they can be reached. A card or letter to me at the address at the top of this column, or a message to the Alomnae Office will be sufficient. Please be sure to do this, and include some information about yourself as well, and help keep ours a live, interested, and up to the minute group.

Vivienne Barkalou Hornbeck and her husband, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, then Ambassador to Holland, were accompanied by Queen Wilhelmina's Commissioner when they placed a wreath on the grave of Bob O'Hara, the son of Virginia Lazenby O'Hara, in Margraten Cemetery, Holland, last January. Lieutenant O'Hara was graduated from the University of Texas in 1942, enlisted in the Air Corps and received his wings the following February. He joined the Eighth Air Force in September as a B-17 pilot and was decorated three times before he was shot down over Rotterdam on November 11 of that year.

We will soon be through with school in Spotsylvania so that I have listed my summer address above. Do send me any bits of news that come your way.

Sue Slaughter was recently elected president of the Norfolk Women's Council for Interracial Cooperation in May. The work of this volunteer service organization is publicity and education to promote intercultural understanding and good citizenship. They work with welfare and other social agencies and through the schools to try to bring about the best use of funds and existing institutions to take care of the needs of Norfolk.

Margaret Ribble's adopted daughter, Peggy, was married April 12 in the Church of the Transfiguration, New York City, to Dr. Charles Congdon of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Class Secretary: Marjorie French (Mrs. Charles L. Nevens), 1430 Bishop Road, Grosse Pointe, Michigan.

We have at last had word of Ellen Hayes after a silence of many years. "Jim" is a Major in the WAC and has been Billeting Officer, in charge of finding places to live for officers in Germany ever since the beginning of the occupation. Mr. Perry Laukhuff, formerly of the Sweet Briar faculty, now back in this country for a short time, reported seeing her in Germany. He said that her job is a demanding one, requiring much tact and that she has handled it admirably. Her address is: Major Ellen Hayes, c/o Billeting Office, OMGUS, A.P.O. 742 c/o Postmaster, New York, New York.

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania. Fund Agent: Lucy Lantz (Mrs. Harry Mc-Kinley), 263 Glenwood Avenne, Englewood, New Jersey.

I sent out 38 S.O.S. calls recently and how many answers do you think I received? Two! Bless you, Anne and Agnes for your letters.

Ann Schutte Nolt writes that she has finished up her Home Service work with the Red Cross and has saddled herself with another job. "The Lancaster Junior League opened a Hearing Conservation Center last fall and we are following up the audimeter tests given all school children and required by State law. I undertook to set up the case work for the Clinic and it means training case workers, traveling about the country to schools and homes, arranging for examinations at our clinic and follow-up work at the hospitals afterward.

"Hear from Marjorie Johnson Good often and have heard from Katherine Kunkle George who has a son down at Valley Forge."

Since receiving this letter from Anne I have had a telephone call from her and intend to drive up to Lancaster and stay overnight. I look forward to a good session of Sweet Briar talk.

The other letter was from Agnes Hood Gronemeyer, ex-'15. All three of her children have gone to Virginia schools. Her older daughter, now Mrs. J. P. Ast, III, a graduate of Mary Baldwin College, has two children, Philip age 6 and Susan age 2. Her second daughter graduated from Randolph-Macon and teaches English in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Her son John, aged 19, is now out of the Navy and a student at the University or Virginia. Agnes herself attended Sweet Briar and graduated from Goucher in 1916. Her husband is plant manager for du Pont at Meadowbrook, West Virginia.

The Philadelphia Chapter gave a delightful bridge party in April. Rebecca MacGeorge Bennett, ex-'18, poured tea and was one of the few people I saw who was at Sweet Briar during our time.

We had a most interesting meeting at Henrietta Washburn's, '14, earlier in April to discuss "Liberal Arts Education at Sweet Briar." Eugenia Griffin Burnett's ('10) attractive daughter, Eugenia Burnett Affel, '42, is president of the chapter and led the discussion.

I think the class of 1915 needs a new secretary (editor's note: The opinion herein is not that of the editor), one who can collect news from a different group. Who wants the job?

Class Secretary: WANTED!

Fund Agent: Louise Bennett (Mrs. Albert Lcrd), 182 Hillside Avenue, Englewood, New Jersey.

1917

Ridler) 608 Lindsay Road, Wilmington 20, Delaware.

1917 had a 50% reunion attendance with Henrietta Crump, Rachel Lloyd Holton, Ruth McIlravy Logan, Inez Skillern Reller, and Bertha Pfister Wailes. Skilly and Ruth, coming from Idaho and California, respectively, were among the guests listed in The News of Lynchburg as having traveled the greatest distance to their reunion. We missed the rest of you and wish that every single member of the class might have been here!

Carrie Sharpe Sanders and Ruth Geer Boice joined our table at the Alumnae Banquet. Class picnics were scheduled for Sanday night and ours was held at my house. Tea on Monday afternoon for those of us still on campus at Old Elkton Farm, Lucile Barrow Turner's lovely home near Forest, Virginia, and hearing her sing and play Negro folk songs, and her own compositions, we agreed later, was one of the never to be forgotten highlights of this Commencement.

All nice things unfortunately come to an end; so, on Tuesday, I took Ruth and Skilly, the only ones left, by way of Lexington to Charlottesville to catch buses. Skilly had never seen Washington and Lee University, and Ruth remembered vividly her earlier trips to dances there, by train to Lynchburg with another change at Balcony Falls. This time the trip by car over a beautiful mountain road took an hour. Ruth was planning to have dinner with Harriet Evans Wyckoff in Washington and go on to New York to join her husband later. Skilly went to Richmond to stay with Henrietta for a few days. She planned to visit Williamsburg and Jamestown during her stay, and, like Ruth, return home via New York City.

Rachel had news of her daughters: Martha has an impressive-sounding job and Mary Lou is still at school in Switzerland. Skilly showed us pictures of her attractive 15-yearold Sarah Ann, a prospective Sweet Briarite, we hope,

Polly thought until the last minute that she might be able to come. She and Carrie Sharpe Sanders had just returned from a 6 weeks trip to Texas and the West Coast. They attended the A.A.U.W. convention in Dallas where they saw Miss Glass.

We are very sorry to hear that Genie Steele Hardy lost a son last September in an airplane crash in the Mediterranean, and extend to her our sincerest sympathy. Both of her boys graduated from Annapolis and served in the Pacific area during the war; Jack, the elder, in the Marine Corps, and Sanford on a heavy cruiser. Genie herself had a serious operation in September also. Her danghter, Margaret, was with her from November until after Christmas. Margaret's daughter was born December 13. Genie expected to drive to the West Coast with her husband in June, "the only thing I know of which might keep me from going to Sweet Briar." She must have gone on that trip.

Martha Darden Ziesing says that for the past two years her activities have been confined to being a wife and mother, but that her other interests are antiques, music, and reading. She has been active in Junior League, Red Cross, hospital service, and Women's Exchaoge.

Mary Whitehead Van Hyning is in the process of moving her family to New York City where her husband has accepted the post of Assistant Commissioner of Public Welfare. I predict that Mary too, will soon be engaged again in some professional service, now that she has returned to her old haunts.

Jane Henderson continues her interesting work at St. Christopher's School for Boys in Richmond.

Dorothy Grammer Croyder has two freshman sons at Washington and Lee and a daughter who will be ready for Sweet Briar in a few years.

Elsie Palmer Parkhurst's daughter also is a 15-year-old prospect. In addition she has 1 married daughter and 2 sons, Frank E., ¹I. age 23, and John who is 19.

Charlotte Jenkins, we regret to hear, is in a hospital. We all join in wishing her a speedy recovery.

Faye Abraham Pethick has two married alumnae daughters. Her mother's illness took her to Southern Pines twice this spring and we were sorry that she was unable to comouth again for the reunion. She looks forward to spending a day soon with Margarat Grant at Lake Success.

Jane Tyler Griffith, besides looking after a husband and an 18 year old son, is interested in many church and welfare activities in Wellesley Hills.

You may be interested in the following summary of information concerning the class of 1917. We would like to have as complete records of our non-graduate members as we have of the graduates, but unfortunately many of their questionnaires were not returned.

There were 11 graduates and 42 "exes," Of the graduates 10 are living today; nine are married and have 15 children. One acquired a ready-made family of husband and three children. 1917 has had 3 daughters of graduates also receive their degrees at Sweet Briar, and one graduate daughter of a non-graduate. We claim an indefinite number of nieces and cousins among students past and present.

One of us is a teacher and principal of a private boys' school; another is private secretary to an eminent author and publisher and does newspaper work besides.

Two combine marriage with a profession. Mary Whitehead Van Hyning, a graduate of the New York School of Social Work has done social service work and college teaching before and since her marriage in addition to looking after a husband, 2 daughters, and a young son. I, as you know, teach Sociology here at Sweet Briar, and live quite uneventfully on a neighboring dairy farm with my husband.

The other class husbands are business men; one an engineer, a sales-manager, a manufacturer, an advertising manager, a planter and banker, and an importer,

While six of the graduates and several exes report themselves as holding no position (except that of wife and mother) we recognize theirs as a full time essential service, one they seem to have managed well with a great many community services sandwiched in. These interests and activities are broad and varied. They include church, hospital, Red Cross work and Occupational therapy; club activities of many kinds—Junior League, A.A.U.W., art, and community concert associations, League of Women Voters, and many others.

Reunions really are lots of fun. Let's begin right now to plan for our 35th!

Class Secretary: Cornella Carroll (Mrs. K. N. Gardner), 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Louisi Case (Mrs. C. F. Mc-Guire, Jr.), 3310 Warrington Road, Shaker Heights, Ohio.

Charlotte Seater Kelsey has a new daughterin-law this year, a graduate of Vassar, class of '45. Her three older sons were in the war but now are home safe and sound. The youngest was too young to go. Charlotte celebrated the hoys' return with a trip to Mexico which all enjoyed very much.

Elanette Sollitt Marks wrote from Phoenix, Arizona, that she had spent the winter and spring out there and was soon expecting to return to Chicago. She was renewing an old hobby, painting, in the wonderful sunshine. She says her paths rarely cross those of her classmates and she hopes we will look her up it we are ever near. A year ago she saw Bobby Knapp Ballou, Hildegrade Flanner Monhoff, and Mary Jones Nelson in California; though they were not classmates, they were in school at the same time we were and she says she had lots of fun visiting with them.

Cilla Guggenheimer Nushaum is happy to have her boys home again. One has graduated from the Merchant Marine Academy and the other is at the University of Virginia. This spring her husband had a very severe illness but I am glad to say he has now completely recovered.

I look back now with pleasure on Commencement. We had hoped to take Marianne Martin with us but she found she could not go. Louise Hammond Skinner and Grace Merrick Twohy left a few days ahead of us in order to attend the Council meetings. Cilla plans to go to our reunion next year. My mother came from Miami to go along with us to Frances' graduation—must see that the second generation keeps in step!!

I have very little news to report as I have received only one letter. Carrie Sharpe Sanders writes that her news is either a year old or hasn't happened yet. Her year old news was a trip to Mexico and she says she won't be happy until she can go back and stay longer. Last month she went with Polly Bissell Ridler to the A.A.U.W. convention in Dallas, Texas, and on to Oregon to visit her brother. She promises to send in a detailed account of her trip for the fall issue of the magazine.

I hope some of the rest of you will be moved to do the same—1 will send post cards to remind you.

Our 25th reunion has been and gone and we lucky eight want you to know that we missed you stay at homes, We had three glorious days-the weather was perfect and Sweet Briar never looked handsomer. It was a real thrill to be here again and after the first few uncertain moments we felt ourselves completely at home. Elizabeth Huber Welch, Julia Benner Moss, and I drove down together. Gert Dally Massie and Beulah Norris were here to greet us. Trot Walker Neidlinger had motored down with Gert and we were all saddened to learn that she had been called home almost immediately by the death of her mother. Lillie Maddox Whitner came early Saturday afternoon and Elizabeth Fobl Kerr arrived Sunday morning, Margaretta Carper MacLeod came out from Lynchburg twice to swell our ranks, Ruth Ulland Todd was here for a few hours and Isabelle Frank Sutherland came for the graduation exercises. Florence Woelfel, '21, who missed her 25th last year because of a grounded plane joined us and was a most entertaining addition to

The big thrill of the reunion was Dr. Mc-

"Trot" Walker Neidlinger Gert Dally Massie

Dougle coming down from Baltimore for our class pienic Sunday. After all these years, very busy ones for him-Johns Hopkins, lecture trips, Goucher, radio work, etc .- he remembered us all and was good enough to come way from Baltimore just for the day. We were so pleased and so flattered and he is just as much fun as ever and full of good stories, both long and short! We voted him the youngest looking member of our class. He asked about you all and his memory of people and their home towns was amazing! He and Mrs. McDougle were most cordial and asked all of us who were returning via Baltimore to stop and visit. Their memories of Sweet Briar are very happy ones.

What an impressive collection of statistics I have gathered from the 23 replies I received. Forty-nine offspring-though I must admit Minnie Long gets the gold star with eight. Emily Moon Spilman and Margaretta Carper McLeod come second with six each. Emily has three grandchildren and Margaret Marston Tillar has one. Trot Walker Neidlinger and Margaretta have twins. We have two professors-are we proud!-Alice Earley Clendenning teaches graduate medical social work in Minnesota and Mary Munson, who admits she struggled with psychology at Sweet Briar, is head of the psychology department at the Illinois State Hospital. We have a teacher, a secretary, and several part-time workers, but the biggest job to all is that of housewife, The extra-curricular activities show that our gals are taking an important place in their respective communities-politics, church, Red Cross, Y.W.C.A., P.T.A., Women's clubs, Junior League, hospital, are a few of our activities. For relaxation gardening and music rate high, with sports rather far behind. Gert Dally Massie still is our ace athlete. How does slie do it? She not only runs her house and family but works hard for Sweet Briar and her church, with music and hospital work thrown in.

Elizabeth Huber Welch lives in a suburb of Philadelphia with her husband and two sons, 16 and 21. She looks younger and prettier than ever. Lillie Maddox Whitner las three children. Her married daughter was here for Commencement also and she is most attractive. Lillie received our vote as the best-dressed member of our group. She looked like a million dollars at every gathering. She is active in Junior League work in Charlotte and in her church and the Red Cross. Julia Benner Moss who was returning to Sweet Briar for the first time in 25 years was most impressed by all the improvements. She lives in a Philadelphia suburb also and has a daughter, 22, who was a TWA air hostess. Julia too is active in hospital work and the Red Cross and she has so much pep we could barely restrain her from walking to Amherst. Ruth Ulland Todd came on from Cincinnati to take her freshman daughter home. She has two sons also. Ruth had to rush home before our picnic as she had taken on a new office in the woman's club and had to be there for her induction. Beulah Norris, except for her additional 20 pounds, is just the same and kept us in a constant nproar. After doing very strenuous war work as an inspector on a shell line she is taking life easy and keeps busy exercising her dog and gardening. Biz Fohl has two sons, one cf whom has just won the Western Pennsylvania Junior Tennis Championship. The other is entering the University of Virginia this fall. Biz received our vote as the one with the fewest wrinkles. Isabelle Frank is president of the Marion, Ohio, Association of University Women and also president of the Marion County Federation of Women's Clubs. We were sorry she couldn't stay with us longer.

Liz, Julia, and I were so entranced with Sweet Briar that we stayed in this area an extra day. We visited Lynchburg and saw some old friends as well as the well-remembered landmarks such as Millner's, The Virginian, etc. We made the trip to the Monument, called on Mrs. Wills, and as we leave we wish we could meet you all here every year.

There is lots more news from the absentees which will have to be held over for Fall. Be sure not to miss the next chapter.

Class Secretary: WANTED.

Fund Agent: Jane Guignard (Mrs. Broadus Thompson), P. O. Box 480, Columbia, South Carolina.

Word has been received of the death on March 9 of Katherine Roberts Jennings. We all wish to send our sympathy to her husband, Mr. Comer Jennings, and their family.

Class Secretary: KATHRYN KLUMPH (Mrs. Frederick T. McGnire, Jr.), 2597 Derbyshire Road, Cleveland, Ohio.

Fund Agent: FLORENCE BODINE (Mrs. Frank P. Mountcastle), 51 Haywood Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

News has been scarce this year, but what can I do when you don't answer my billetdoux? How about turning over a new leaf next year?

I know you will be as shocked as I was to learn of the death of Florence Westgate Kraffert's son, Dick, 19. He was a student at Cornell and had a sudden heart attack during his sleep. I know you all join me in sending our love and sympathy to Flo and her family. Florence Bodine and Frank Mountcastle and their daughter Anne went down to Southern Pines for Easter to be with the Krafferts.

Byrd Fiery Bomar was in Cleveland for Christmas. She tells me her daughter, Nancy, hopes to go to Sweet Briar in the near future. Byrd's niece, Anne Fiery, is a sophomore there now.

Elizabeth Pape Mercur writes that life is still a bit thick with a small child and no help. She promises to come for a visit when they get a new car.

Lydia Kimball Maxam says that a year ago they joined the nation-wide scramble for a house and came out the bewildered possessors of a Victorian model with antique plumbing, in Bryn Mawr. Her daughter, Lydia, graduated from Shipley last year and is now attending the University of Pennsylvania.

Elsie Wood Von Maur's daughter, Alice, is at Pine Manor this year, and El Harned Arp's Mary is at Chevy Chase. She and her husband went to visit Mary in April and had a wonderful time with Bee Hulburd Waln and family. I don't know whether you saw the pictures in the paper recently of a huge truck sitting in the middle of a living-room in Alexandria. The name under the picture was wrong in most of the papers and the living-room was the Waln's! She writes it was lucky as it happened at 2:00 A.M. so all were upstairs in bed, but the furniture was of course ruined. To do things up brown, Bee had house guests arriving the next day for a wedding.

Last August I had the fun of taking our 10-year-old daughter along on one of Fritz's business trips. We "did" Seattle and Victoria, on down to San Francisco. It was thrilling for all of us. Fritz and I were in San Francisco again in November and I telephoned Freddy Bernhard in Berkeley for a wonderful gab fest. She and a friend were evicted with 30 days notice from the house in which they had lived for 5 years. While they were making arrangements to buy another, the only sure way of keeping a roof over their heads, they moved in with their grocery lady in lien of the starry skies.

Grace Merrick Twohy is rejoicing in the return of her son, John, who served as an ensign in the Navy and was in the Bikini operation.

Fritz and I are goi- out to the West Coast again in June and on the way are going to spend a day with Marion Swannell Wright in El Paso. Marion's daughter, Sue, is a Junior Honor Society Chairman in her school, but I can give you a complete report on the Wrights after our visit.

My daughter was in her first "grown-up" play this spring here at Western Reserve University. My nephew Tom, the son of Mary Klumph Watson, ex-'22, was also in it. Mary's daughter Katie graduated cum laude from Radeliffe last February. Katie has been a student at the Cleveland Playhouse this spring and this summer she and her mother are to be on the staff of the Little Theatre in Dorset, Vermont. Aren't we getting to be a theatrical family!

Eleanor Sikes Peters is treading the boards in solo drama, where she acts all the parts; quite a challenge! She appeared in Pekin, Illinois, in January with her latest repertoire. Now please let me hear from some of you folks who shrink from all limelight!

The stock market is going down and so are the number of cards coming in.

My good friend Edua Lee Cox sent me news unsolicited, "Ellen Neuell Bryan was in Washington for a few days. Peggy Malone Mc-Clements, husband and two daughters spent a week sight-seeing in the nation's capital.' Edna reporting on her activities said that she had been running the Cox clinic since November featuring measles, chicken pox, virus pneumonia and flu. I trust that the clinic is permanently closed.

Betty Holtzman Sellman writes that she is kept busy running her home. She sees Dottie Ham Davis quite often and says Dottie always looks very stunning, Kav Norris Kelley sent me a card announcing a change of address for the Kelley family. They are now living in Wellesley Hills. The card had a picture of their attractive home, also a map which showed the road and railtoad that would take you directly to Carrisbrooke Road, Having Louise Fuller Freeman's card was almost as good as seeing her. Louise has two boys, age five and seven, P.T.A., Red Cross and Community Chest keep her busy outside of household duties. Louise said she avidly reads our class news; it makes her feel 20 years younger! The Freemans spend their summers on Pelican Lake, Minnesota (anyone going by please stop).

Frances McCamish McNeel's 18-year-old son is completing his second year at Texas A. & M. Frances thinks he is a potential lawyer. There also is a daughter, 14, and Frances hopes she will come to Sweet Brian when the day comes for her to attend college. The youngest McNeel is 10 and a husky rough neck whose ambition is to be an all star football player and a bus driver. Frances might send him to live with the Harris' football player and bus driver, Frances is kept busy feeding her broad along with outside activities such as P.T.A. and church

Helen Jung Pfister wrote that many memories came with my card. Helen's son, Wally, Jr., graduates from high school and plans to study journalism at Northwestern next fall. Jenny Anne will be a junior next year. Helen and Jenny visited Sweet Briar in April and Jenny likes it very much. Alice, the youngest, will be in the sixth grade; she is interested in drama. I heard by the grapevine that Helen and her father had been at Pinehurst for a vacation.

This is my swan song, gals, I am sure someone else must be auxious to write these compositions for the issues of the magazine next year.

You all have a delightful summer, hear! As for Mrs. Harris, she will take her charming family and tour to Lake Superior for the month of August.

Class Secretary: MARGARLT CRAMER (Mrs. W. B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: CLAIRE HANNER (Mrs. W'vlie H. Arnold) 2410 Vernon Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Greetings to those who returned for their 20th and greetings and deepest sympathy to you who didn't. We missed you and thought about each of you and tried to glean what news we could of you from those present with charity toward all and malice toward none," in case you worried,

To those returned veterans we want each of you to know that it wouldn't have been nearly as much fun if you, particularly you reading this, had not been there. You added immeasurably to the pleasure and gaiety of the rest of us. Didn't we have a good time!

We all felt as Lib Matheus Wallace expressed it, "like a dropped kitten" when we first set foot on the campus, but in less time than it takes to tell, we were back in the swing and had even more in common with one another than we had 20 years ago! Repartee and wit were rampant! Needless to say there was never a dull moment. Our only regret was that we didn't see Dan as much as we would have liked to, for she was involved with the business of her job a great deal of the time.

I had driven from Connecticut to New York and there picked up Connie Van Ness. who lives there, and Gretchen Orr Swift, who had come down from Boston. Then we went to Wilmington for Emily Jones Hodge and so to Sweet Briar.

We were the first to arrive, Lib Mathews Wallace coming shortly afterwards. Harry had driven her over with the three children in tow, Willy, Wally, and Dolly, We found our rooms on the third floor in Randolph. Emily, Connie, and I had been assigned the suite there which became the official headquarters for '27. Jane Gilmer Guthery and Alice Warren Fielder were already established at the other end of the third floor so they promptly moved their belongings to the room opposite the suite. Soon afterwards we found Bebe Gilchrist Barnes who had been on campus several days attending meetings, Camilla Alsop Hyde, Lib Wood McMullan, and Jane Riddle Thornton drove over from Richmond on Sunday, as did Helen Goffigan Wills from Lynchburg. After the first shock of what the ravages of time had done to the pretty faces of 20 years ago, everyone looked exactly the same, as if a magic wand had been waved.

Camilla Alsop Hyde was without a question of doubt our May Queen of '47, looking unbelievably young and beautiful in her yellow suit. We all traveled in a body for sightseeing or the doings at hand. Our extra curriculum included a party at Miss Rogers' and Miss Crawford's home after the banquet and another at Dan's on Sunday evening with all of our activities climaxed by a midnight show at '27 headquarters given by Lib Wallace in 1926 May Day dress and Gretchen Swift in a fashionable dress of that era, both with large '27s in lipstick on their foreheads.

For two beautiful days we chattered and laughed 'til our ears rang and all vowed we wouldn't have missed being there for the world and will make the next reunion or bust!

Greatest changes we noticed were the recreation rooms in the dormitories, including the parlor in Randolph and another in the basement. Also the practice rooms in Grammer have been made into cozy nooks and the old gym now has murals on the walls, card tables, etc. All have comfortable chairs, curtains and rugs-we could hardly believe our eyes at sights of such luxury! The only thing that gave us a pang was the hot dog, etc., stand at Rhea's, deserted and long since forgotten. The tree we planted by the cupola is now huge and spreading.

Emily Hodge is compiling our reuning book which will include your questionnaires. It will be kept as a permanent record in the Alumnae Office for you to browse through the next time you are on campus.

For those of you interested in statistics: Of 76 graduates, 4 are deceased, Jane Warfield Saunders, Nancy Sherrill Moses, Bobby Rich Miller, and Elizabeth Clement: 2 lost on the records, Janet MacKain Allen and Ruth Whelan Horan. These statistics then include 70 graduates and 21 exes. Of these, 76 are married, 15 single. The honors for the largest families (4 children) go to Elise Morley Fink, Jo Snowdon Durham, Elizabeth Turner Baker, and Betty Williams Simons. Those with three children are 12, two children, 37, one child, 10, and none, 8. The average child's age is 10. We have 2 widows and three among cur number are now married for the second time.

A word about the insurance which 52 nf the class took out in 1927. Two of these policies were in force in June 1947, both being fully paid. They were taken out by Elise Morley Fink and Evelyn Anderson Tull, Cash value of 49 policies lapsed-$3,576.27, Amount received as beneficiary, $1,064.43. Total placed in endowment by our class, $4,640.70,

Evelyn Anderson Tull's insurance which she took out when she graduated from Sweet Briar, will eventually amount to $1,000. It is to be given to Sweet Briar as a memorial to her father, John Anderson, The insurance is paid up and entitles Evelyn to a Life Membership in the Sweet Briar Alumnae Associa-

The one received as beneficiary was taken out by Sarah Von Schilling on Jane Warfield Saunders.

Even though most of us fell by the wayside, I believe we may be justly proud of the sum the class of '27 added to the endowment of Sweet Briar. To my knowledge we are the only class that ever thought of giving money to Sweet Briar in this way.

Recent news gleaned from the reports and cards and the hardy reunioners is as follows:

Babe Albers Foltz is still living in Lns Angeles. She is a seasoned tnurist guide after showing Ibby Luck Hammond the sights, Babe wants you to look her up if you come out her way. She still does not know how long they will be there. Incidentally, her husband has James Roosevelt among his patients.

Camilla Alsop Hyde has been active in her community. Chairman of Richmond Red Cross Staff Assistance Corps for six years; Treasurer of Junior League, two years; Vice-President of University League, one year; and Vice-President of Belle Bryan Day Nursery, four years.

Martha Ambrose Nunnally has been on Laura Boynton Rawlings moved to Flint, Michigan, last August and is active in civic affairs there. Between 1931 and '42 she did various volunteer jobs in El Paso with the Junior League as City Editor, Corresponding Secretary, Vice-President and President. From 1942-5 she was on the board of the Association of Junior Leagues of America, serving two years as regional director and one year as Vice-President. During this time she was chairman of a committee of the Texas Welfare Association which interviewed prospective program workers for the Army-Navy Y.M.C.A.

Madeline Brown Wood was just as disappointed as we were not to be at reunion. Just couldn't be, with Mac, Jr., graduating from High School. He, incidentally, won honorable mention in the Sixth Annual Westinghouse Science Talent Research and as a result has been asked to present his paper to the Louisiana Junior Academy of Science at Louisiana State University. The title of the paper is "The Relation of Sunspots to Short Wave Radio Reception." Madeline loo's fine. She is one of the few who is slimmer than she was when she graduated. Her children as well as the Captain are handsome. Madeline loves to see people from S.B. so do look her up if you go to New Orleans.

Daphne Bunting Blair sent some pictures of her boys, one is nearly nine and the other is almost five. She is living in Worcester, Massachusetts, where her husband is a personnel manager. She is active in club work of all sorts, and had a trip to Toronto recently to see her sister, Dorothy, '28.

Marian Chaffee is private secretary to the Managing Director of Delaware Blue Cross Plan. She has an apartment in Wilmington, but goes to Swarthmore for week-ends.

Elizabeth Cox has a job as Executive Secretary of the Junior League of Louisville. She has been president of the Junior League twice and is secretary to the Board of the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children.

Alice Eskesen Ganzel is active in the United Nations Study Group and is on the Board of the League of Women Voters in Darien, Connecticut.

Margaret Green Runyon's interests are, according to her, "anything and everything." She is Head of the American Home Department for Women's Clubs, has a real estate business, and has been auctioneer three times for various organizations.

Dorothy Garland Weeks sent a note from Garden City to let us know that she is still about. She hasn't seen any Sweet Briar people since Greeno's dinner party last winter. She sent a handsome snapshot of herself.

Jane Gilmer Guthery was a fine addition to our reunion group. She had planned to bring Claire Hanner Arnold, Sally Jamison and Nar Warren back with her, but they dropped out at the last minute.

Elsetta Gilchrist Barnes, besides taking care of her young son, born August 1946, is a Landscape Architect in private practice since 1932. She is a Director of the Garden Center of Cleveland; Chairman of the Crile General Hospital Planting Committee; Alumnae member of the Board of Overseers at S.B. We all met her brother, Joc, who now has the job of Superintendent of the Sweet Brian Farm.

Emilie Halsell Marston expects to spend the summer on the Severn River. She sees Dottie Hamilton Davis occasionally.

Wilburn Hampton Roger's son is entering medical school in September and hopes to finish at the University of Virginia.

Claire Hanner Arnold, besides being our class Fund Agent, is interested in the Girl Scouts and Hospital work. She was Assistant Treasurer of the Junior League (Scarsdale) and is on the Girl Scout Council. This spring, Claire bumped into Audrey Graves at Vero Beach, Florida, where she now lives.

Hilda Harpster expects to be in Toledo most of the summer after her strenuous winter at the University of North Carolina.

Sarah Jamison is a decorator at the Shaw Manufacturing Co., in Charlotte.

Emily Jones Hodge still blushes when she laughs, so her face was rosy during most of the reunion. She is active in the Sweet Briar club in Wilmington.

Ruth Lowrance Street is very busy in Chattanouga, President of Junior League 1945-6; Board member, Family Service Agency and member of Executive Committee for that Board member Tuberculosis Assoagency; ciation; Zone Chairman, Community Chest, being some of her interests. She is keenly interested in the Sweet Briar Club there and is doing a great deal on the Educational Policy Program.

Margaret Leigh Hodges longed to come to reunion to see her many friends, but her little girl graduated from the New Canaan Country Day School on June 1st and Maggie just couldn't let her down!

Margaret Lovett is taking additional flight training on the G.I. Bill of Rights and as she says, "with luck and hard work may get her commercial license next fall." She claims she has no particular aim but wanted to continue to fly for pleasure.

Elizabeth Luck Hammond leads a busy life. She was Secretary then President of the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland; Treasurer of Hammond-Harwood House Association and Garden Chairman Women's Civic League of Baltimore. She tells us that Miss McLaws came out to tea on a recent visit to Baltimore. She and Hall are going to Asheville in June. They hope to see "Tabo" and others.

Elizabeth Mathews Wallace answers the question, "Do you have a job?" with a Yes! Homemaker and chauffeur." Her interests in addition to her family are Junior League Children's Theatre, Visiting Nurse, and Garden Club. She has been president of the Junior League in Binghamton, and Charleston, and president of the Children's Theatre.

Rebecca Manning Cutler and her husband are taking the children, aged 31/2 and 9 months, to South Carolina for two weeks, leaving the day we begin our reunion.

"Tootie" Maybank Williams visited Billy Quisenberry Marks last spring. She tells of the successful tea the Atlanta Alumnae had for Miss Lucas.

Bettie Miller Allan vacationed in Florida this winter and is spending the months of May and June with her father in Newport, Kentucky, while her husband is on an extensive business trip.

We wish to express our sympathy to Mary Montague Harrison who lost her husband very suddenly last August. She and her two children now live with her father.

Elise Morley Fink and her family have a permanent summer address: Grand Bend, Ontario, Canada. Elise is on the Board and Secretary of Cottage Hospital, Grosse Pointe. Activities of all the children made it impossible for Elise to come to reunion. It is too bad that she had to break her record because she managed to make our fifth, tenth and fifteenth year meetings.

Gretchen Orr Swift has a job doing psychiatric work with the Veterans Administration and is getting her M.A. at Boston University in psychiatric work. While living in San Antonio she was on the board of the Planned Parenthood Clinic and also modelled clothes for various charitable organizations.

Anna Patton Thrasher sent a fine snap shot of herself and her husband. Right now they are in the midst of moving to Montgome y, Alabama. Her husband will be rector of the Church of the Ascension.

Pauline Payne Bachus is Spanish instructor at the University of Toledo, and Adjustment Advisor at De Vilbus High School. Her spare moments, of which she has few, are spent gardening.

Elva Quisenberry Marks has her hands full with her two men of 91/2 and 51/2. She is new recovering from an operation and expects to feel better than she has for years.

Julia Reynolds Dreisbach is busy at this time with her daughter, Georgia's graduation, and getting both daughters ready for camp where Georgia is Water Front Assistant.

Jane Riddle Thornton is active in the church, the Girls School and camp. It was a treat to see her again and I do mean treat. She has two daughters, Mimi and Tab.

Florence Shorteau Poland sent pictures of her beautiful baby.

Virginia Stevenson returned from an extensive trip on May 12th. She drove her Mother and Father over 4000 miles, including Berea, Charlotte, Sweet Briar, Richmond, Williamsburg, Washington, Cleveland and Chicago! She spent a few days with Peg Williams Bayne and saw Kitty Wilson Tyler and of course Dan Boone when she was at Sweet Briar.

Marjorie Stone Neighbors and Madeline Brown Wood carry on an active correspondence and hope to meet in Texas in the near.

Josephine Snowden Durham with four fine children writes "don't have much time but for gardening and the usual civic stuff." However, she has been on the Boards of Civic Music, Junior League, P.T.A. and Community Chest. She just got back from a three week jaunt in the East. She ran across Elise Morley Fink at Hot Springs and Maggie Leigh Hobbs in Darien, Conn.

Kelly Vizard Kelly's son is graduating from Andover this June. I should have said one of Kelly's sons, she has two others.

Nar Warren Taylor keeps herself very busy as Headmistress of Charlotte Country Day School where we hear she is doing a superior job.

Sarah Von Schilling Stanley expects to go with her family to the mountains in June and the shore in July and August. Sounds ideal, doesn't it?

Connie Van Ness enjoyed a glorious week in New Orleans with Madeline Brown Wood, She flew down and back.

Virginia Wilson Robbins sends her regrets but tells us to hold on till our 25th and she'll be there for sure!

Kitty Wilson Tyler has been a three day a week substitute teacher in the Senior High in Norfolk for 16 years. She is also a counseior at Camp Alleghany in the summers. She has been president and on the Board of the Kings Daughters, president and secretary of P.T.A. and president of Sweet Briar Alumnae Club.

Flizabeth Wood McMullan, as true as Pm sitting here, looks just the way she did 20 years ago and all of us agreed. We want to know her secret.

A happy summer to each of you and in the future never miss a reunion if you can help it. Only prerequisite needed is plenty of sleep.

When next you hear from me we will be on the 1947-8 season and you'll be getting out your woolies!

There are times when I can heartily recommend this job to you, not that it is insuring me a good living or bringing national acclaim but it improves my health. Every time some one whom I have not heard of for 18 years or so pops up with a note saying, "Of course, I remember you very well..." my joints uncreak, I gain a pound, and my blood pressure rises giddily to normal!

Had a real spring tonic last Sunday when I talked on the phone in Chattanooga to Mary Macdonald Reynolds. If I had not heard the off-stage heckling of her nine-year-old son I would have sworn she was on the other side of Bus Rhea's shack, putting on the verboten weed, as she talked to me. Her warm, responsive chuckle that makes you think you are so terribily amusing is still there, along with that deep interest and concern for everyone she has known. I found myself telling her all I knew about you rather than gleaning news she might have. She is still working hard for the Insurance Company, she says, but finds time to write columns for the Look-In, a local gossip and news sheet, We made a deal that she would send her contribution to the Alumnae Fund if I would subscribe to the Look-In and so far I am way ahead on the bargain. Her articles are marvelous and I wish you all could read them, Some recent titles are "Would I Were a Ward Heeler", "My Memoirs", and "The Children's Hour." Am sure you would appreciate the latter, being a discourse on the daily deses of crime by radio for the little ones. Among the copies I saw a handsome picture of our friend and can see she hasn't changed, grayed or aged a bit!

Eleanor Clark Frost, that gay creature we called Kelly in our freshman days, wrote me the disconcerting news that she still has a picture of me taken one bygone day on a spree in Lynchborg. Thus it is we never know who can blackmail us! She appeared out of Brooklyn with a husband and two daughters, Nancy, aged 16 and Virginia, aged 14. Says she is just a housewife and mother, with the usual outside interests. She has kept in touch with Nancy Gaines Jaeger and Katherine Marr White, but offered no news of either.

Found a grand long letter on my return from Florida recently from Emilie Jasperson Bayha. She is back in Toledo after a hectic career as Navy wife since 1942. In January of '43 she packed up and took her three children to Norman, Oklahoma, where she stayed until May of '45. The hoose they had there was sold and they had to return to Toledo. Then her husband was sent overseas and was in Japan until '46. While in Norman she enjoyed being with Babe Albers Foltz (will you ever forget those first names in the class of '27 we had to memorize? Albers, Alsop, Anderson, Anspaugh , . . or something like that!) Emilie's oldest boy, Bill, is 14 years old, a freshman in high school; David is 13; and Judy is 7. She says they are fun but tax her sense of humor when they complain about their parents being unreasonable and old-fashioned!

Emilie had heard from Alice Leigh Caples, who lives in Princeton Junction, New Jersey, and says her hosband, after returning from two years in the Navy, was in an accident and injured seriously. He is improving now, but has been in a hospital since last May. They have two daughters. I shall try to get some news from Alice soon.

Good summer to you all. See you in October.

During my spring vacation, one of the many advantages of being a school teacher, I visited in Norfolk and Richmond. While in Norfolk, I made the acquaintance of Kin Carr Baldwin's little girl and was disappointed to learn that her son preferred baseball to the ladies' company. Logan Phinizy Johns is living in Richmond with her doctor husband and three children. Jackie Moore Hoofnagle and her son are Logan's near neighbors.

I hope most of you have escaped the mumps and vaccination seige. Those of us in this north country have had our troubles. A wire from Nancy Parsons Jones informed me that these maladies (her two little girls are suffering from both) will prevent her accompanying her husband to New York where he will lecture on journalism at Columbia. Nancy, however, was able to go to Washington. While there she saw Capel Grimes Gerlach and her two little girls, Russell (4) and Lucia (1½). Capel cooks, irons, and washes but is furtunate enough to have Thursday off.

Nothing spectacular has happened to our New York classmates. Alma Martin Rotnem has recovered from the mumps, first on one side then the other. George Ann Jackson Slocum was in New York recently vigorously maid hunting. (P. S. She settled fur a dish washing machine instead.) We had a gay lunch with Muggy Gregory Cukor. Grissv Deringer Plater enjoyed 16 days of "relaxation and good times" in Bermuda.

I hope to find the time to write many of you before the next issue. But, please don't wait for my S.O.S. postals, Write me as I shall be busily going in circles from now on. I plan to begin my Master's Degree at Columbia in Administration this summer with the hope it will help me in my new duties, as of September, 1947, as principal of The Day School in New York, Class Secretary: (for this issue) HARRIET SHAW, Sweet Briar, Virginia.

That is the news till now. I will be so glad to see any of you who can come to Sweet Briar. I am to have Miss Long's apartment overlooking the lake and mountains next door to the Inn. I know you will be delighted at the greatly increased beauty of the campus and at the spirit of vitality and serious purpose that our magnetic new president has instilled here. Highlights of the reunion were the garden party at Sweet Briar House, the alumnae banquet, a party for us at Red Top, and our class picnic in the dell.

There are many classmates who were not mentioned here and it is only because we have not heard from them. You can remedy this deplorable situation by writing me at Sweet Briar. A new class secretary will take over in the fall. (We "elected" her at the picnic but think we should ask her too!)

Class Secretary: Dolly Nicholson (Mrs. John A. Tate, Jr.), 212 Middleton Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Fund Agent: JANET MacFartan (Mrs. Charles Bergmann), 244 Ackerman Avenue, Hohokus, New Jersey.

I don't know how you all expect me to carry on a column all alone, but this is one time I'll have to. No news from any of you prevents my passing news along to you, so perhaps you'll realize my predicament and during the next few months give me something to write about. Of course, I don't want you to rush right out with hatchet in hand and murder the very next person you see just for the sake of the Alumnar News, nor would I want you to produce quadrupletsto outdo Becky-and hit the front page. On the other hand, please don't send me a card saying "I haven't a bit of news." At least you can impart your newest recipe or latest hairdo-or tell us what movie is best. There's always something to write about even if you have to scrape the bottom of the barrel.

Most of you undoubtedly have plans for the summer, so I shall count on your dropping me a line periodically.

Next week we Charlotte Briarites are having a luncheon get together and hear a paper by Dean Lyman, to be read by Sarah Exercts

Janice Wiley Adams has a new address—Rioja 2640, Olivos F.C.C.A., Argentina, South America. Her name is Mrs. George E. Adams.

Don't forget. Keep me posted. I have to have a letter in the Alumnae Office by the 20th of September, January, March and May, so I'll he looking forward to hearing from each of you much earlier than those dates.

Class Secretary: Bitsy Campbell (Mrs. Robert S. Gawthrop, Jr.), 326 West Miner Street, West Chester, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Yvonni Leggitt (Mrs. D. L. Dyer), Alger Court, Apartment 5-G, Rivermere, Bronxville, New York,

You all made a sad response this time, girls—and what you give, you get, so here you are.

Peggy Roper Willis totors no more, for with Caroline, 3½, and Rogers, 10 months, hig house, garden and two dogs, her time is slightly needed at home. Rogers is a red head with curls, a shock and a joy to them all. They are moving to Denver as soon as they find a house. George left April 15. He's with Builders Bureau Service there. Peg sees Lu Martin at Junior League meetings every month, and Ann Parks occasionally.

Gracey Luckett Stoddard's son was born the last part of May. She looked pert and pretty as anything when I saw her shortly thereafter on a trip to Louisville, Little Gracey hardly realized she had a brother, but big Gracey foresaw complications what with changes of schedule, etc. She says that Jean McKenney Stoddard loves Peru as ever.

A pretty penny posteard went winging its way to Mrs. Joseph Sherer, c/o Miss Ann Parks, Lynnhaven, Virginia. From said Ann to sender came an interoffice memo, subject "your postcard" Question, "Who the H is Mrs. J. Sherer?" Better luck next time, Mrs. Sherer. Mrs. Sherer, Miss Parks, is your former President of Student Government, Mary Mackintosh, now the wife of a physician recently stationed near Norfolk.

Boot Vanderbilt Brown and husband were here last week-end, and gave glowing reports of Jonnie and Junnie. Boot has been busy organizing the alumnae of Dwight School. Had dinner not so long ago with Helen Cary Stewart. She is with Johnnie in Hohokus, and is of course busy with the two children.

Harrie and Henriette Minor Hart have proudly announced the arrival of Harrie, Jr., horn May 9.

Such a nice letter came from Mary Treadulary Downs. She and Fritz are living in a three-room apartment over her dad's garage. Fritz and her father fixed it up last summer when rents were high and carpenters unavailable, transforming a storage room into a delightful abode. Betsy is justly proud of their labors, as well as the three coats of paint applied by her and Fritz. Jane Parker Washburn and Roddy are nearby and they see each other often. She sees Yvonne occasionally for lunch in New York. She says Mary Mackintosh Sherer saw Kay Porter Booker in Hampton, Virginia, where she is now working. Kay has a five-year-old son.

Fifteen of us in West Chester are adopting one war child for Foster Parents organization. Means just $1 each a month, but with so many backing you really have something. Just a suggestion for your community, perhaps, With all the intellectuals prophesying a new low in civilization, such dribbles may belo.

And so farewell. Let's start making tenth reunion plans now.

Fund Agent: MARGARET WOODS (Mrs. Louis C. Gillette), R.F.D. No. 1, Norwalk, Connecticut.

My efforts to engage a "guest writer" for the last ALUMNAL NEWS were not successful. I'm sorry that I had to let you down, but since Helen Mac explained about our new male child, I'm sure that you understood the situation. He is really remarkable. At the moment, he is putting on one of his better symphonics, so this will probably be more garbled than usual.

Janes Runkle Wells has a little boy, Robert Runkle, who was born on April 21. A son, their second, was born to Dr. and Mrs. James Davis (Margaret Royall) on May 3 in New York. The child is named Kenneth Royall. Beth Thomas Mason has added a boy to her family group. Frances Moses Turner's phone has been bosy for two days, so I can't tell you Beth's baby's name or any of the details. Mose did say that she was expecting a visit from the Masons very soon, All of the mamas with sons should make their reservations early to take out Miss Elizabeth Gordon Burke, Right now, her mother, Agnes Spencer Burke, claims that she looks like Edward G. Robinson. Well, maybe she will be smart anyway! My apologies to Connie Chalkley Kittler for not reporting the arrival of her Andrew way back in October of '45. Connie says that he is tremendous and has blond curls, His sister, Winkie, who is three and a half, goes to Nursery School and according to Connie she is absorbed by her own "gang," the bubble gom set. Connie has moved from Alexandria, Virginia, to Port Washington, New York, where her husband is stationed at the Brooklyn Navy yard. The Kittlers are looking forward to doing a lot of sailing this summer.

Phoopy Burroughs Livingston and Parge Woods Gillette are about to live in the same general locality. Parge is going to move from Connecticut to Massachusetts. They will be there for a year or two and then will go to Loo's home town of Detroit. Parge's year-old daughter "now walks with a firm foot and has a determined but jovial nature." Phoopy tells me that she has a neighbor in Greenfield, Massachusetts, who until recently lived in Poland. The neighbor told Phoopy that she couldn't "spek" English so good. Phoopy, the ever tactful soul, replied, "That makes two of us, dearie, because my southern accent is so bad that nobody can understand me in these parts."

There should be another Southern accent looking for company in Stamford, Connecticut, Cynthia Noland Young, husband Karl, Bill and little Ann Carter have just moved into their new house. Karl spent several months in Europe recently on business.

Both Kay Hodge and Mildred Moon Montague gave glowing reports about Nancy Haskins Elliott's return to Chattanooga from India. Apparently, there were many celebrations in honor of David and Nancy. Everybody that saw Nancy thought that she looked extremely well and they all enjoyed her accounts of her experiences in India. Kay Hodge has been visiting various places and attended a wedding in Dalton, Georgia. She is troop leader for a teen-age group of Girl Scouts in Henderson and is active in several civic organizations too.

Ann Adamson Taylor said that it was wonderful to see Marion Phinizy Jones when she came from her home in San Francisco to visit her sister in Richmond. Ann has been traveling almost constantly back and forth to Baltimore to see her hosband, Bob. He has been in the hospital since November, but Ann says that he is getting along splendidly now and hopes to be home soon. Polly Boze Glascock went to Dallas as a Richmond representative to the A.A.U.W. meeting, Mary Johnston Bedell is now officially a Richmond housewife since she and Wood have moved into an attractive house of their own. It was a great shock to hear about the death of Mary's mother in March and I know you all join me in sending her our sympathy,

Jane Bush Long visited Mariana Bush King in Florida. The Bush sisters with their two sons and two daughters, respectively, had a marvelous time together. Jackie Sexton Daley had a well deserved rest in Florida this winter. She had an operation in Miami, but most be entirely recovered at the present time as she writes of managing large church suppers and making eighty rolls for the affair. Jackie's husband's church is in Baldwinsville, New York. Besides her interest and activity in the church, Jackie takes care of her lively red-haired sons. Mike is four and a half and Chris is two and a half.

Well, my doves, this is the end of my prattle until next fall, at which time you shall receive more frantic postcards. It might not be a bad idea to put your children to work this summer. You could set them up a streamlined lemonade stand and send the profits to Sweet Briar! Seriously though, keep a little something aside for your September contribution.

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.), 670 June Street, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: Patricia Dowling (Mrs. Alfred von Wellsheim) 17 Higby Road, Utica 3, New York,

Six years ago we were all chanting "Let's get away from it all" and looking forward to a summer not to be followed by classes. Let's see what is with us now.

There are some more young citizens making their appearances. Dabney Lancaster Washburn is the addition to the household of William and Libby as of January 28. Lou Lembeck Reydel wrote of the arrival of a new son, Jimmy, born February 27. Betty Blount Kempson had a girl, Mary Deborah, born March 13.

Charlie Davenport was married to Mr. John Tyler Tuttle, May 24, in Pittsfield, Massachusetts. He is a graduate of Williams College and served with the British Army in the Sixtieth Rifles and Long Range Desert Group in the war.

Priscilla White is now Mrs. James Ashton Graham and is living in Chicago. Frances Watkins was married to William D. Centilli and is living on a stock ranch outside of San Antonio, Texas.

Caroline des Granges has been Mrs. J. Herbert Wallis since May 17. Until they find a house they are staying with her family in Hanover.

Jeanne Posselt has announced her engagenient, with plans for a summer wedding, to Albert F. Clear, Jr., of Fairfield, Connecticut. He was overseas with the Ninth Air Force for 3 years as a captain and is now attending Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

There was one reunion this June. Shirl Devine and Franny Baldwin Whitaker went to graduation and stopped in Lynchburg to see Peg Tomlin Graves. Shirl went on from there to Louisville to see Mimi and I hope will come through Cincinnati on her way home. Franny writes of the new Sweet Briar club formed in Charlottesville with Ruth Hensley Camblos as president and herself as secretary. The discussions are going well she says, but they are still trying to stir up some of the inactive alumnae.

Betty Doucett Neill writes that she was surprised one day by a visit from Betty Jo McNarney Williams and Charlie, back from a year of living in Berlin. They are at home in Garden City. Douce really steps around and had just spent a grand afternoon with Barb Holman Whitcomb at Meach's in Hudson, Massachusetts. To quote, "Meach and Gay have a darling old home, which they have fixed beautifully and her two sons are adorable,"

Do Huner is librarian for the Research and Development Division of Merck and Company and is studying for her master's at Columbia. Was glad also to locate Louise Hatbaway Doelker. Husband Phil, daughter Stephanie, and Louise are living in Flushing.

Louise Kirk Headley denies being cut out for the life of a club woman but she's in a whirl of garden club and church work in Tallahassee. She and Bull entertain lavishly and Louise has even taken to getting up at 5:30 to try to get everything accomplished.

Pi Douling von Wellsheim reports that Al has a new job as assistant to the manager of the Luxuray Company in Fort Plain, New York, and says it is a wonderful experience for them. They have been hunting and furniture-buying. Though she claims Ft. Plain is 50 miles from Utica and her old circles, she does see Edge Cardamone O'Donnell over the bridge table when the club meets and says she's thin but very happy in her pretty new house.

Jean Nehring has been appointed secretary to Corporation Council John H. Galloway, Jr., in Yonkers, New York, Jean went on to graduate also from Katharine Gibbs Business School in 1942.

I know you will all be saddened as I was to learn of the death of John and Edna Schomaker Packard's youngest son, David, this April, and you will want to join me in extending sympathy to Butch Gurney Betz in the death of her father this spring.

Another to be tracked down is Decca Gilmer Frackelton. She, husband, and son, Nicky, are living in Fredericksburg, Virginia. John and I have finally found ourselves the long-awaited apartment, and have been in it for several weeks. In moments of deep appreciation we refer to it reverently as the Spring House and nothing could be more appropriate; its location being the corner of May and June Streets!

Class Secretary: CATHERINE COLEMAN, St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Ann Hauslein (Mrs. Thomas G. Potterfield), 262 Kent Road, Wynnewood, Pennsylvania.

Each time a deadline rolls around, I say with confidence that the next issue will contain a lot of news, and then—no answers to the few postals which I do manage to send out. However, next fall in the October issue of the News I promise the Reunion report with the results of a thorough culling of your filled-in questionnaires and Margie Troutman Harbin's beautiful 1942 scrapbook.

Shirley Hauseman's engagement to Daniel C. Lewis, Jr., of Washington, was announced in April and they were married June 2. He was at Washington and Lee when we were at Sweet Briar and that is how they met! He spent 52 months in the navy and was released a lieutenant. He is now attending the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Jean Hedley was married on May 3 in Bronxville to James H. Currie; and Margaret Booth Gwyn became Mrs. H. Kenneth V. Tompkins II, on December 14 in Alvin, Texas.

I had a letter from Si Walke Rogers telling me that Polly Peyton and Carol Turner had left Williamsburg. Si's Deborah is 2 and on May 22, little sister Elizabeth Agnew was born.

Douggie Woods Spront was toastmistress at the A.A.U.W. in Philipsburg, New Jersey and the Alumnae Banquet during Commencement. Worth was discharged from the navy only a few days before and they hope to go to Mexico and South America this summer.

Eugie Burnett Affel expected to be at the reunion but her husband had an emergency appendectomy the day before she was to leave so she stayed in Philadelphia to be near him.

Margaret Halsey Gearing, one of our exes, is engaged to Henry Taylor Wickham of Richmond. Margaret was in Europe for a year with the Red Cross. Mr. Wickham was graduated from the University of Virginia and its Law School and during the war served as a lieutenant in the navy. They will be married in the fall.

I promise to do much better by you all in October.

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govan P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: KAREN KNISKERN (Mrs. Robert White), 988 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

On this my first anniversary of being railroaded into this secretary job, I am forced to let you down with a big thod, being practically devoid of news.

I was delighted to finally track down Posy Hazard Danforth Potter. I just received a nice note from her saying that she and Shell have moved to Alexandria where they have bought a wonderful little house. She expects to visit Marjorie Shugart Dennehy in Norfolk soon and also take in Sweet Briar College graduation if possible.

A card from Byrd Smith Hunter says that she was at Sweet Briar for May Day. This was the end of a vacation from housekeeping which took her to Charlotte and Atlanta. She saw Caroline Miller and Gales McClintock who have an adorable little boy, "Buck," and in Atlanta visited Mary Carter Richardson in her new home.

Page Ruth Foster has been vacationing tooa week at Sea Island before Jim's graduation. She is now the president of the Sweet Briar Club in Alexandria, and so like me has been working on this Educational Policy Program. We were fortunate to have President Lucas at the last Baltimore meeting, and believe me, all those superlatives you hear about her are true! Maggie Baker Kahin was at the meeting by the way. She is living in Baltimore now while her husband does graduate work at Johns Hopkins University. But I seem to have digressed, so back to Page-she ran into Didi Christian in Washington. Didi is working for Woodward and Lothrop's dress department while awaiting an assignment with the State Department-same kind of work she did during the war.

On April 27, Elsie Jackson Hamner Kelly presented her young son and daughter a new playmate named Walter Kelly, IV.

Harriet Pullen Phillips is still at her twoday-a-week nursing job, and Ilffie Siegling Bowers has just moved into her home in Columbus, Georgia, which they have finally finished remodelling in spite of difficulties with the "odius plumbers." Page also heard from Scottie Simmons McConnell who says that Angela Marston is busy working at checking salesmen's reports for some large concern.

Poor Frances Gregg Petersmeyer certainly has my sympathy. As if the New York housing problem wasn't enough to contend with, Wrede developed an acute appendix which went into all sorts of terrific and frightening complications, so he was really quite sick, and on top of that their little baby, Susan, had the flu at the same time. However Gregg says everything-except the housing situation has straightened out now. She saw Bride "Beanie" shortly after she got back from her honeymoon. Also Muie talked to Bean on the phone and told me disgustedly that she had never thought she would see the day when Bean would rave ecstatically over marital bliss in typical bridal fashion. Ah, love! and we will probably see that day for Mu sometime too, I 'spose, As for the wedding I told you all I knew last time except that Janie Findlay was there. Jane is working in New York now.

And here's an up to date flash, three years ago Virginia Knowlton married Mr. Robert Fite. There has hardly been time for any details to reach me yet except that they are living in Columbus, Ohio.

Camille Guyton Guething is back in Detroit after a stay in Florida this winter. She often sees Betty Laurie Kimbrough, and wrote me that Betty and Dick had recently been flooded out of their new house. No details on this story either.

That is about all except for my personal run-ins with fellow classmates, and even those have not been as numerous as usual. Mary Lan Taylor was in Baltimore for a visit and I had a nice long chat with her while her daughter, Gwendolyn, performed her parlor tricks for me. Mary is thinking of taking a correspondence course as she finds country life, household chores, and baby tending a bit confining and mentally stagnating. Logan Shearer was here for the Maryland Hunt Cup and was literally pining away 'Snookie" and his new daughter who are still in Kentucky because there is no place for them to live in Philadelphia. Muie Grymes was also up for the race, looking very tan and healthy after her Florida trip.

A letter to Miss Beard from Deborah Douglas contained the information that she had returned to Haverford College last year and had received her M.A. While at Haverford Debbie took a course at Bryn Mawr in Community Organization and did some field work at the Delaware County Welfare Council. Since June 1946 she was been a Field Representative of the Georgia Citizens Council and she says, "I love my work, despite the political turmoil here . . . or because of it . . . The Georgia Citizens Council is a State agency which grew out of the Volunteer War Services Council, and was established by the 1945 legislature as a permianent agency to 'enlist and coordinate the volunteer efforts of all State-wide civic and other organizations in programs to improve the human resources of the State."

I have just received a last minute postcard from Elizabeth Munce. Life finds her well settled in the middle west. She has be-n working since September at the telephone company as a service representative. She has seen Sterling Nettles Murray, '44, and says Berghaus has been visiting out that way.

Keep me posted on your activities over the summer, and do be active; one can't make spicy reading without spicy material.

Class Secretary: Connie Sue Budlong, Occupational Therapy Department, Box 181, Kennedy Veterans Hospital, Memphis 15, Ten-

Fund Agent: MARIAN SHANLEY (Mrs. William L. Jacobs), Box 41, Newport, Arkansas.

Eleanor Goodspeed has announced her engagement to Lawrence Abbott, with plans for a fall wedding. Eleanor is a member of the Montclair Junior League and she served as a Red Cross Nurse's Aide during the war. Mr. Abbott is an alumnus of the Peddie School in Hightstown and Lehigh University. Since his return from four years of service in the Army he is an engineer with Western Electric.

Elizabeth Maury became Mrs. Granville G. Valentine, Jr., with a big wedding in Richmond.

Mary Coleman White was married on Ap 26 in Suffolk, Virginia, to L. Preston Hollander, Jr., who was decorated overseas for his service with the 84th Division. Lulu Sadowsky was her maid of honor. Mary 15 now living in New York City.

Shirley Ann Coombs, ex '44, who graduated from the University of Missouri, was married June 3 to Bart Joseph Ramsour. He is a graduate of Notre Dame and veteran of more than 3 years in the Navy.

Franny Pettit is engaged to Frank O'Halloran, Jr., of Cordell, Oklahoma. He attended the University of Oklahoma, served in the Army overseas, and since his return has studied at the University of Wisconsin and is now attending Northwestern University's Dental School.

CLASS SECRETARY: Wanted!

Fund Agent: MARY HASKINS (Mrs. Jetton S. King) 901 Oak Street, Chattanooga 3, Ten-

Mary Haskins was married in March to Jetton S. King, as scheduled. It was a big affair and one of the highlights was the presence of Mary's sister Nancy home from India for the wedding.

Wyline Chapman was married to Major Henry Benton Sayler, Jr. on March 22. Major Sayler is in the U. S. Army Air Forces. Ann Tyler Parsons of Louisville, ex '45, is engaged tn John J. Davis, Jr.

Betty Rupert Cocke has a position which sounds quite fascinating. She is Associate Director of Adult Education at Southwestern University, Memphis, Tennessee. Her work includes both traveling and office organization.

A big job has been accepted by Audrey Teal Betts who is the President of the recently re-organized New York City Sweet Briar Club. She describes her initial task, that of verifying who is and who is not living in New York City, as just one confusion following upon another. Audrey expects to be at Sweet Briar for a few days in mid-July on a visit to Red-Top.

In March the Personnel Committee of S.B.C. presented, as one of a series of career panels, a discussion of the teaching profession. Lovah Willcox spoke about the nursery school where she and Perk Traugott teach in Norfolk. She said they were lured by the prospect of "short hours and no home-work" and prefer not to call it work-it is a pleasant way ro pass their time; However, they have been inspired to take a course in child psychology, which they heartily recommend for anyone working with children.

We are sadly in need of a class secretary. This pathetic little patch of information was thrown together in the alumnae office and we send it to you apologetically. We know that things are happening to all of you but to which ones and when we can only guess. S) please someone volunteer to keep the class of '45 informed!

Class Secretary: DOROTHY CORCORAN, 4545 Ortega Boulevard, Jacksonville, Florida.

Fund Agent: DOROTHY S. CALDWELL, 4707 Bayshore Boulevard, Tampa, Florida.

With great sympathy we report the sudden death of Dorothy Corcoran's father on May 10. The class letter will be just a few notices that have come to us in the alumnae office.

Ellen Thackray stopped to see us early in May. She was visiting Wistar Watts. Ellen has had a long struggle with mononucleosis, an obscure blood disease, so that she has spent the past year partly in the hospital and partly convalescing.

We have finally succeeded in tracing Carlene Watter who left the class to accelerate at Barnard College. She graduated there in 1945 and was married the same year. Her husband is in the U. S. Diplomatic Service. Her present address is-Mrs. A. E. Stoll, c o Major A. E. Stoll, Office of Military Attache, American Embassy, Via Vittorio Veneto-121 Rome, Italy, Another ex '46 alumna, Phyllis Exall, was married May 17 in Dallas to Alexander W. Galbraith, district manager for the Babcock & Wilson Tube Company in Houston. Phyllis is a graduate of the University of Arizona and Mr. Galbraith studied at Cornell University.

The engagement of Lucy Charles Jones was announced May 3. Her fiance is Robert Paschal Hendall, Jr., of Danville, Virginia, who attended Hampden-Sydney College and served 3 years in the U.S. Army Air Forces.

The first reunion of the class was a very small one. Adie Jones Vorhees was back for Alumnae Council meeting and she was joined by Flo Cameron. Helen Graeff came to stay with Anne Hill Edwards in Amherst and they attended the banquet. However, there is a scrapbook started with the questionnaires returned to Helen Graeff. These are not complete but should make interesting reading (illustrated too!) for all of you when you next return to campus.

ALUMNAE NEWS

October, 1947

We Alumnae Can Help - - -

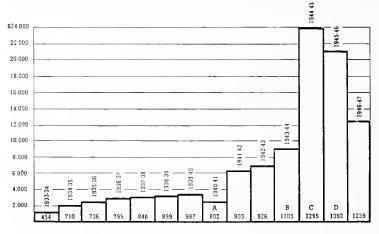

Sweet Briar to maintain a faculty of high calibre by giving to THE 1947-48 ALUMNAE FUND FOR FACULTY SALARIES.

Now in 1947 - - -

There is a serious crisis in education. If the private college is to survive it must compete for faculty members with state-supported institutions; it is losing teachers to industry, which offers greater recompense.

The liberal arts college is integral to democracy and to self government by an enlightened citizenship.

SWEET BRIAR IS PROUD of the Past Record of the Alumnae Fund

Number within column indicates number of contributors. The correct number of 1946-47 contributors is 1349 instead of 1239 as shown in above chart.

- A—This does not include the many Alumnae contributions made to the Endowment and Building Campaign.
- B-This does not include 3 Alamnae gifts totalling $6,050.00 made directly to the College.
- C—This includes 212 Alumnae gifts totalling $12,000.00 to the Mary K. Benedict Scholarship and 49 Alumnae gifts totalling $405.00 for a green-house honoring Miss Ames.
- D-The Meta Glass Fund for Endowment.

From 1933-34 Fund through 1946-47 Fund, the Alumnae have contributed over $100,000 to the Alumnae Fund.

EMILY HELEN DUTTON

September 29, 1869 — June 18, 1947

Emily Helen Dutton ranks high in the list of the people who have given devoted service to Sweet Briar, and the service was not only devoted, but gladly and proudly given. Sweet Briar made a deep appeal to her and seemed a fine tool for the education of America's young women.

She came as Dean just before President McVea was ill. Before she had been there a year she was fulfilling that most difficult task of having the responsibility for the administration without the authority on which the administration rests. After Miss McVea's resignation, she stepped into the more restricted post to which she had been appointed with grace and apparent happiness. Beyond that she gave unstintingly of herself to help a raw new president do her work, which would have been more inadequate than it was without her guidance and efforts.

Among the qualities that her friends must always admire in her was a sweetness of spirit in the face of such difficult and unkind attitudes as all persons in a long life of work with people encounter. That rare and enviable tribute contained in the sentence "She is a Christian and a Lady" fits her as if made for her.

Emily Helen Antton

DEAN EMERITUS

By MARY J. PEARL, Professor of Greek and Latin

THE DEATH of Dean Emeritus Emily Helen Dutton, on June 18 of this year, brings a sense of real loss to every Sweet Briar alumna who was privileged to know her, and to the faculty members who were associated with her.

Emily Helen Dutton was born September 29, 1869, in Shirley, Mass., the daughter of the Reverend Albert Ira and Helen Abby Dutton. Her father was proficient in several ancient languages, having mastered Latin, Greek, Hebrew and Sanskrit. This taste and aptitude was shared by his daughter. She attended Monson Academy, one of the old New England private schools, of which her father was a trustee. She then went to Mount Holyoke Seminary, which became Mount Holyoke College while she was a student there, and she graduated in one of the first classes accorded the full A.B. degree. Later she received a master's degree from Radcliffe College, and obtained a doctorate of philosophy at the University of Chicago, where she was Fellow in Latin from 1906 to 1909.

Her earliest teaching was in secondary schools in Utah and Minnesota, and then in the Girl's High School in Brooklyn. For eight years she was a member of the Latin department of Vassar College. It was during this period that she spent two years studying in Germany, and had the privilege of attending lectures by some of the most distinguished German classical scholars, among them Wilamowitz.

In 1909 Miss Dutton went to Tennessee College in Murfreesboro as Professor of Greek and Latin, and subsequently she became dean of the college. She left Tennessee College in 1923 to come to Sweet Briar as Dean and Professor of Greek and Latin. Here she remained until her retirement in 1940, when she became Dean Emeritus. From 1942 until her death she resided in Lynchburg and was a frequent and welcome visitor at Sweet Briar.

Under Dean Dutton's name in Who's Who there is an imposing list of the organizations in which she took active part. Her beloved classics were a sort of leaven in her life, and from the humanities her interests extended into many lines. She was actively interested in education in general, and in educational standards, particularly in women's colleges. In this connection she did valuable and constructive work on the national committee on standards of colleges in the American Association of Universty Women from 1921 to 1933, acting as chairman for the last eight years of this time. She was always intensely concerned over national and world affairs, and her broad interests were demonstrated by her reading and her activities.

The influence of her childhood training and her parentage was reflected clearly in her character. Her surviving brother, Mr. Albert I. Dutton, has written me as follows: "From the strict but kindly and religious atmosphere of a minister's parsonage we children must have absorbed a lasting background of high principles, and an understanding of the things in fife that are worth while. All this and more were continuously taught us by precept and example. I think that Emily, most of all was receptive to these home influences. She was always industrious, always ambitious, always kind and generous and faithful. The two qualities which stand out strongest in my memory are her sense of duty and her generosity." We who knew her in her later years will, I think, agree with this portrayal as true of her throughout her life. In 1933 Sweet Briar recognized the influence of her character by conferring upon her the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award at Founder's Day.

Dean Dutton loved to teach. Those of you who were in her classes will remember her keen enjoyment of Horace, her deep appreciation of the philosophical writings of Lucretius and Cicero, and best of all, her delight when she initiated someone into the joys of Greek. For her, Socrates was a living inspiration and example, and Homer opened the door of fairyland. When a student in her classes caught the spark of her enthusiasm, she knew the true joy of the teacher.

Not all of her teaching was done in the classroom. A delightful story from her youth has come to me from her brother, who writes: "One little incident of her teaching experience may amuse you. I was attending Worcester Academy, and for some forgotten reason suddenly conceived a wish to acquire enough Greek to join the class which had already absorbed a year of it. So, in the summer vacation, Emily offered to teach me. There was a beautiful tree-shaded lake near our home in Framingham, and there I had a fine canoe equipped with carpets, cushions, backrests and the like. Emily liked canoeing and loved teaching. So the lake and the canoe became our schoolroom; quite successfully indeed, for back at the Academy in the fall I passed the examination without trouble, and somewhat to my surprise."

To Dean Dutton, each student was an individual, not just another student, and so their successes and failures were cause for affectionate pride or sorrow, and she did not forget them when they left college. I often heard her express her pleasures as having seen or heard from an alumna, and she followed with keen interest and appreciation the successes of alumnae in careers and in homemaking, which was in her opinion one of the most important careers.

Wherever she was Miss Dutton was interested in the people and things about her. While she was on sabbatical leave in 1931, she had the misfortune to break an ankle, and consequently spent ten weeks in the Red Cross Hospital near Mount Hymettus outside of Athens. I chanced to be in Athens during part of the time, and went to see her frequently. There was no complaints over the upsetting

President Martha B. Lucas has designated Founders' Day as a memorial to Miss Dutton. Dr. Grace Warren Landrum, a lifelong friend of Miss Dutton's and a person whose work and interests have been markedly similar, will come to Sweet Briar to deliver the address. Miss Landrum retired this year after 20 years of active service at William and Mary where she was both dean of women and professor of English. Although she has published articles covering a range from Middle English to American Literature, she is especially noted as a Spenserian scholar.

Like Miss Dutton, Dean Landrum is a clergyman's daughter, and studied as Miss Dutton did at Radcliffe and the University of Chicago, after which she also taught at Tennessee College. Miss Landrum was an associate professor of English at Westhampton College before going to William and Mary. Her span of interests include the A. A. U. W., Phi Beta Kappa affairs, and other societies particularly concerned with educational standards, just as Miss Dutton's did.

Next spring it will be time to vote for new officers of the Alumnae Association and sixteen new members of the Alumnae Council. In order that this long ballot may list a group of nominees widely representative of geographical regions as well as of class groups the Nominating Committee has a great deal of work to do.

The Alumnae Council last spring designated the Washinton, D. C. area as the center for the 1947-48 Nominating Committee and Edna Lee Cox, '26, accepted the chairmanship. Mrs. Cox has twice been President of the Alumnae Association and she recently completed a sixyear term as a member of the Board of Overseers. She is one of three alumnae appointed last spring to the board's committee on Endowment. Those serving on the nominating committee are: Harriet Evans Wyckoff, '15, Cornelia Wailes Wailes, '27, Elizabeth Valentine Goodwyn, '29, Lisa Guigon Shinberger, '29, Jean Sprague, '34, Helen Schneider, '35, Ellen Snodgrass Park, '37, Jane Collins Corwin, '37, Rose Hyde Fales, '38, Page Ruth Foster, '43, and Antoinette LeBris Maynard, '45.

The committee has already begun its work. Names of possible candidates will be welcomed, especially if they are accompanied by some listing of qualifications, activities, positions held, and so forth. Send your suggestions as soon as possible to Mrs. Joseph W. Cox, Jr., 3407 Woodley Road, NW, Washington 16, D. C.

Council members are expected to attend the three regular meetings each year at Sweet Briar for the determination of association policy, the transaction of alumnae business, and to gain a greater understanding of the college, its progress, and its problems. There are no funds available for travel expenses of Council members but they stay at Sweet Briar as guests of the college for the meetings.

of all her plans. Instead she had much to tell about the nurses, many of whom were refugees from the Turks in Asia Minor. They responded to her sympathetic interest, and she was a great favorite with them all. Her room in the hospital looked towards Mount Hymettus, and recently she told me that she thought she knew every fold of the mountain in all its different aspects as the light and shadow changed.

In the years that Miss Dutton was at Sweet Briar, the college grew in size and reputation. Not a little of this was due to her high standards of scholarship and her able but sympathetic administration of her duties as dean. Her energy was indefatigable, and she devoted it wholeheartedly to the service of the college. Miss Glass once said that all who have given something of themselves to the growth of the college must be regarded as founders. In a very real sense this is true of Dean Dutton, and we will remember her among the founders of Sweet Briar.

The A B C's of Admissions Today

BERNICE DRAKE LILL, Director of Admission

This is the third article in the current educational policy series and is meant as a basis for October discussion.

My thanks to you, alumnae, who have sent word about what you wish to know about admission, both through your club reports and through kindly advice. "Keep it simple" and "Tell us the reasons for the changes" are the recurrent words which will guide me in this third paper for your discussions.

Nineteen years ago when I first came to Sweet Briar the Committee on Admission was the hard-working, devoted group which it has continued to be through these years which have witnessed changes in the committee's personnel but constancy in its spirit of service. Back in 1929 we chose applicants on certificates-school records and principal's recommendations—selecting the new freshman class from the students who were first in presenting satisfactory rccords. When the vacancies were filled we opened a waiting list and chose from it as changes made more acceptances possible. The weaknesses of this system are evident; late applicants might be stronger students than some already accepted, but the places were filled; we had to judge ability by performance in secondary schools, and some schools were much more liberal than others in the giving of high grades and glowing recommendations. We did not know the applicant's rank in her class, whether an all 'A' record represented a top-flight student or a generous-minded school. We admitted some mighty fine students, but too many who found Sweet Briar's standards difficult. So we started our file of schools, now running over a thousand in number, where we recorded school grades side by side with freshman grades, subject by subject. In 1931 we began requiring a psychological examination designed to test linguistic and mathematical ability. We requested the schools to report rank in class, size of class. From the applicant herself we wished word about her enthusiasms (in and out of school), her reading habits, her reason for wanting a liberal arts education and for wanting it at Sweet Briar; so we began asking each applicant to write us about these things. And how we have enjoyed this direct contact with our applicants!

The aptitude test proved very helpful, and for some fifteen years we sent out the American Council Psychological Examination to schools, which administered the test and returned it to us for scoring. An increasing number of applicants (see No. 4 in appended statistics) were offering the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Board, even though this test was not required by Sweet Briar. This, also, is a test of verbal and mathematical ability, carefully supervised at the hundreds of centers where it is offered four or five times a year. Our confidence in this test grew with its continued use, and, as you know from the announcement in the April, 1947, Alumnae News, the faculty voted to require the so-called S.A.T. of all applicants beginning with entrance in 1947. This move we took with increased confidence because of the larger number of students taking the test each year, some 39,000 having taken it in the school year 1945-1946.

Now you have a picture of the papers the College requires for admission: school record, including rank in class and principal's recommendation of personality and school citizenship; Scholastic Aptitude Test; a letter from the applicant. Beyond these we ask some applicants to take three achievement tests of the College Board, usually in April of the senior year in school. The applicant who has not struck her stride until the later years of her course, whose record does not look too strong but who has had solid work, or whose school is not accredited by its regional association—these may win places by showing on three one-hour tests that their achievement in school is really adequate.

And this explains why many Sweet Briar applicants, like those of many other women's colleges, do not receive word of their acceptance until May of their senior year. We review the school records at the close of the first senior term, getting most of the papers in hand by early March; and on this basis we advise the taking of the April achievement tests. Of course many students are already planning to take the April tests—those who are scholarship applicants, those attending preparatory schools which require the tests, those applying also at colleges which require them of all applicants. This accounts for a large number; but there are others, mostly from high schools not familiar with the tests, who are disappointed not to receive definite word at an earlier date.

The selection is made, then, by the Committee on Admission in a series of spring meetings. But all through the year we are counselling and guiding students, some of whom are still in the earlier years of their courses. We encourage students, parents, and schools to write us all along the way and to send us preliminary records even for those who have not filed formal applications. We are glad to advise about courses of study and we occasionally guide students toward other plans in the hope of avoiding late disappointment here. As I write this, we have recently reviewed the preliminary records of some 250 applicants for 1948. Many of these have taken the S.A.T., gaining valuable experience even though they may not have made the scores approved for junior applicants.

No longer do we "require" certain subjects for admission; we "recommend" that students offer four years of English, five years of foreign language (or four years of Latin), three years of mathematics and one of history. We favor sequential study, subjects carried for three or more years, as against single-year subjects. We have approved such varied entrance units as dramatics, sociology, fundamentals of music, history of art. We ask schools to send us descriptions of such courses, which are reviewed by our professors; and we encourage schools to let us know about the new and different courses they are introducing. This makes for a lively contact with schools which are imaginative in their curriculum-planning.

Because we wish to attract students of ability, who have zeal for a liberal education and who give promise of becoming the sort of citizen the world gravely needs, the Committee on Admission has wished that competition for admission be quite free. For this reason it has never set quotas, geographical, religious or by type of school. Our wide geographical spread, thirty-odd states and several foreign countries each year, gives Sweet Briar a national and even an international character. (See No. I in appended statistics.) Last year students from the southern states comprised just half our registration, which looks a bit too well-balanced to have just happened that way, but nevertheless it did.

With increased expenses the College has raised the amount of the twelve competitive scholarships to cover the higher cost of tuition. And in 1946 the first full-expense scholarship was offered on a competitive basis, to a student who would be unable to attend Sweet Briar without this aid. The first award went to a student from the Durham (North Carolina) High School, and this year it goes to a applicant from the Highland Park (Illinois) High School.

Looking back I can recall the exciting time when we admitted our first alumna daughter; I can recall the affection and pride with which we followed her progress, our joy when she received her degree. At Commencement last June six alumnae saw their daughters receive their degrees, and I wish you could all have been here to share in that experience. We welcome alumnae daughters with a special warmth because they revive happy memories and strengthen proven loyalties. But—and here we approach a very sensitive question—we want them to win their entrance on the same basis as other applicants. When the choice lies between applicants whose credentials are equally satisfactory we favor the daughter of an alumna.

It goes without saying that every year we make some mistakes. Some freshmen do not fulfill the high hopes we held for them, and it is the difficult task of the Dean to drop them or give them special guidance. In general these are the students who offered the less strong entrance papers, but not always. So unpredictable is human nature! Each year we follow with warm interest the statistics which reflect the success of the chosen group; and we are assured that we are on the right path by finding that the grade average of the freshmen is rising from year to year. Cheered by freshman successes and chastened by their failures, the Committee on Admission painstakingly considers the schools, the aptitude scores, the records and the recommendations of those who do not meet the academic standards. As every member of the Committee on Admission is an adviser with her own group to counsel, and as the majority of the committee teach freshmen, our continuing interest and self-criticism are assured. In these days of unprecedented pressure for college admission everywhere, it follows naturally that a larger number of applicants must be disappointed about admission, which has not failed to reach alumnae ears.

Don't you alumnae want to work with the Committee on Admission? There are so many ways you could help us. Different colleges have found different plans; and we would gladly share with you information about some of these. Once we tried the Alumnae Representative plan, and our catalogue lists the names of alumnae who have served with generosity and skill by attending organized college conferences, by interviewing applicants who sought this informal contact, by calling our scholarships to the attention of outstanding students, by recommending (often with discrimination) students from their communities, by entertaining accepted students and making them feel happy anticipation in joining the alumnae group. Perhaps from these discussions there may develop a "committee on admission" in each center where you are meeting. If some such plan were to evolve it could be a continuing service to Sweet Briar which you might find exciting and rewarding, and which would surely enrich your college.

Here are a few statistics which answer some pertinent alumnae questions:

Current Reading in the Field of Education

Many alumnae have told us that they did not see Mrs. Lyman's bibliography, intended for use as background material for discussion programs. We list below the books and articles that are still in print and available. The comments are not Mrs. Lyman's.

"REQUIRED" READING

- 1. EDUCATION AT SWEET BRIAR, published by Sweet Briar College
- THE LIBERAL ARTS COLLEGE IN AN EXPANDING WORLD, address of Professor Brand Blanshard of Yale University, in The Inauguration of Martha Lucas as President of Sweet Briar College, published by Sweet Briar College
- 3. INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF MARTHA LUCAS; same as above
- General Education in a Free Society, Harvard Press, 1945

An overall discussion of educational theory and conflict, inquired into by a committee of faculty members at Harvard. It encompasses the general educational problems in both secondary schools and colleges and points out the inadequacies of the pre-college training and consequential deficiencies of the first two college years. The book is basically liberal and might be termed "in line" with the democratic spirit.

"OPTIONAL" READING

 The Coming Revolution in Adult Education, by Mark Starr; Saturday Review of Literature, February 8, 1947

This article is out of print but may be found in the periodical file of almost any public library. Our Louisville club thought this worthy of being read at Convocation to all students at Sweet Briar!

2. LIBERAL EDUCATION RE-EXAMINED—ITS ROLE IN A DEMOCRACY, by Theodore M. Greene and others, Harpers, 1943

Another result of committee study, in this case by members appointed by the American Council of Learned Societies. It is an inquiry into the place of the humanities in education. It evaluates the present situation and considers our ultimate objectives in the field of the liberal arts.

 DEMOCRATIC EDUCATION, by Benjamin Fine, Thomas Y. Crowell Company, 1945 (Out of print but available in some libraries, especially state libraries)

Mr. Fine, Educational Editor of the New York Times, pelled 5,000 veterans returning to college, high school students, and parents, in order to determine their educational wants and aims. He points up the current crisis in regard to the liberal arts by enumerating the weaknesses of classic, "aristocratic" education, the need for a broader social base for education, and suggests placing emphasis on social studies, economics, psychology, history, and technology.

 On Education, by Sir Richard Livingstone, Macmillan, 1944

This single volume is the combined text of two English best sellers, The Future for Education, and Education for a World Adrift, and it contains a forward by Virginia Gildersleeve, former Dean of Barnard College. The author believes in education for "every" man and for the "whole" man; and he is a firm believer in a purposeful education.

Re: Educational Discussion Program

DEAR ALUMNAE:

It was just a year ago that Miss Benedict's article, "Wake Up, Alumnae!" appeared in our magazine, and its effect in waking us up can be judged from the following summary of our discussions held last spring. We, at Sweet Briar, are not alone in questioning our curriculum, as those of you know who have read of Vassar's new plans, many of which are echoed in suggestions made by our own alumnae. Now that we have done some thinking on the subject, I would ask you all to re-read Miss Benedict's article, which holds even more meaning for us this year than last.

Our committee planned the first discussion so that old and new alumnae, alike, should have the same "core" of knowledge about Sweet Briar but very soon the clubs should be "on their own", doing their own study and thinking about education with increasing maturity and independence. The reports from our discussions show, that while our alumnae have intelligent perception and wisdom to offer the college, many of us are "behind the times" on Sweet Briar at present, and some of our criticisms reflect lack of knowledge of what is being done now. We have many ideas about courses that would be valuable for effective living, but we have not yet defined our goals. What do we conceive to be the task of education in a democracy and what means must be used to accomplish this task?

It might be well for us to examine the plans of other women's colleges of various types. Have they any suggestions we can use, especially have they the art of teaching students to apply in practice what they have learned in theory?

Let us keep on with our thinking and talking and we should continue to find that we have ourselves enjoyed and profited from good thought and talk together. Let us become more informed about what is being done at Sweet Briar. Use all the information you can get from books, from people and from other colleges. Then let your discussions carry you in any direction you choose. Let your conclusions be conservative or revolutionary. We've just begun to scratch the surface. Lets keep on thinking and telling Sweet Briar what we've thought and talked about.

Our aim in the words of the Vassar statement, is "To develop students who can live in a modern world as women and citizens with a sustaining philosophy, a disciplined intelligence, and an active sense of their obligation, as educated citizens, to bring their learning to bear on problems of their own lives and of the collective life of society. We need to do much more thinking about this "aim" and how it can be realized.

ELIZABETH Pinkerton Scott, '36 President, Alumnae Association

SPEAKING FOR OURSELVES

BY SUE SLAUGHTER, '13

After graduating from Sweet Briar Miss Slaughter taught school for a year and then went on to receive her diploma from the New York School of Social Work. She has practiced social work in New York, Baltimore, Louisville, and finally in Norfolk, her home, where she was for many years Director of the Family Welfare Association. This report of last spring's alumnae discussion was prepared at the request of the Alumnae Council. (Italics are quotations from club reports.)

It was with no little trepidation that members of twenty-three Sweet Briar clubs last spring approached the question of "Education at Sweet Briar". Not being educators themselves, they felt it presumptuous to suggest any changes and their humility was heightened by the sense of guilt haunting each one—guilt at opportunities missed, snap courses taken and all the many learned facts since forgotten. But, as one club phrased it, "No one can accuse us, after our very timid approach to the curriculum, of not coming up with some rather startling suggestions."

No club sent answers to all the questions propounded and only two clubs and one individual reply attempted to say "what makes a well-educated woman" but, by implication, if not in formal words, all alumnae thought was focused on the good mother and the good citizen and their convictions that women should be educated toward these two goals. It is likely that home makers were a majority of the alumnae discussants which might, of course, color the reports.

The sexes equally need training in ability to think effectively, to communicate, to make relevant judgments and to discriminate among values; equally they need the same factual education for the professions but, since most women are home makers above all else, there was almost universal agreement that they should be educated to fill this, their essential role.

MARRIAGE, A "CAREER"

Gratitude was expressed by all for what they had learned; they "would choose a liberal arts course if they had their college years to go over again". "It taught us how to live well and happily during our leisure hours", but repeatedly, from clubs and from individuals, came the ery, "Why can't we have an education both practical and theoretical? Wrote one young mother, "Sweet Briar gave me a most liberal education in the appreciation and evaluation of the Arts but most of us are occupied with another art that is not an avocation but a vocation—that of bousekeeping. Most of us have had to learn it the hard way-after marriage. Perhaps ten years ago that wouldn't have made much difference but today, when a full-time 'cook' is almost an impossibility (and I think she will continue to be!) a great many of us are baving to learn her duties and manage as best we can-not very artfully, either! Wouldn't it have been much simpler and wiser if we had been able to learn it—as an ART, in college—though, perhaps not 'for credit'?"

There was no agreement on whether training for marriage and home making should be taught in college (the time for laboratory work being a stumbling block here) or high school or in summer school, but there were a number of suggestions. One was that two years of cooking plus one year of high school chemistry should be accepted as part of the college entrance requirements and that, lacking this, a summer course in cooking (credit being given) should be required before graduation. A post-graduate professional course in domestic science was not at all what was wanted.

The needs of home makers were not alone in cooking, budgeting, and management but also in interior decorating, furniture, plumbing, and gardening. These last subjects, may I hasten to add, were not to be given "for credit". The Delaware plan, for teaching broader understanding of people, and the course on marriage given at the University of California, were cited as helpful examples. One stronglyfelt need was for scientific knowledge of the psychology of the normal child (treated as simply as in Government bulletins). "This cannot be successfully acquired after parenthood," says Louisville, "when the impersonal approach is infinitely more difficult to achieve." Courses now given at Sweet Briar on topics related to children and the family were not considered a substitute for what is the felt need, i.e. for enough efficiency in homemaking to leave time for community service. "The woman today who is a leader in her community can only assume outside responsibility if she has been able to manage her home efficiently. She can no longer delegate this matter to servants. The Home is the laboratory wherein the new generation is nurtured. Let us think without prejudice whether we need 'lab periods' as preparation for the work of this most important of all laboratories." The proper course on The Family and the Home, taught in college, would not be elementary. "The only thing elementary about it is the need for it."

WOMEN AS CITIZENS

If, as one club declared, "The end product of the Liberal Arts Education today is the responsible citizen", then, how well have Sweet Briar women prepared for the "inescapable obligation in a Democracy"? Unconsciously, students at Sweet Briar are conditioned for later community responsibility. "The closely integrated student and community life is an experience in cooperation, open-mindedness, and purposefulness" which is, of course, basic to good citizenship. Alumnae felt that on the other hand it would be possible for a girl to go through the four years at Sweet Briar without taking a single course which was a formal preparation for citizenship. Suggestions are legion: "American history should be required unless the student has had two years of it in preparatory school." A course in government, "not just American government but world government", should be recommended to all students. "We need to know more about man's struggle against tyranny so we may prize our freedom and gnard it." There should be a citizenship course, teaching the how and why of voting as well as "how to formulate opinions and what to do about them"; a Current Events course required of all classes every year and teaching "how to read a newspaper, listen to a broadcast, recognize bias". "A core course on the economic world, beginning with the Industrial Revolution, continuing with Britian in the 19th century and our present world"; a course on "Women as Citizens in American Democracy", a course on public speaking, given in the freshman year and practiced in classes thereafter.

Geography and geo-politics should be taught "in this world of global thinking". But there should be a foundation of history in order that students may understand problems of modern democracy and international relations. Outside speakers on current topics and debates on domestic and international issues (debates would supplement classroom work and stimulate interest) were other suggestions. On the practical side, an active League for Young Voters might be started on campus for students about to attain their majority. If possible, some way should be devised to help students realize that "Life doesn't always go by the book".

OTHER CURRICULUM SUGGESTIONS

Several clubs had the same general idea when they recommended courses (similar to the ones now given on Classical Civilization and the French Revolutionary Period) covering the Medieval World, China and Oriental Culture, Africa, Modern Europe, Latin America, and Russia. "The present courses are not adequate for the world now before us. We need and want to know more about the peoples of the world."

A core course based on history and relating all other courses, taught by a group of professors and extending, perhaps, through the whole four years, was another suggestion. Work in dynamic psychology with emphasis on human relations was wanted as well as a basic course on religion—"We have such childish religious ideas when we graduate". To make room for the new required courses it was suggested that less emphasis be put on foreign languages. But for Language Majors, a much greater speaking knowledge (perhaps living on "language corridors") was stressed. Music appreciation and art appreciation were praised for their post-graduate usefulness and a new Art Major should be offered which would permit students to combine a liberal arts course with more technical skills. A number of clubs advised that students be given an opportunity ("probably not for credit") to learn business skills needed by the "working girl" or by the woman managing her own finances. One club suggested summer courses for adults (with a camp for their children). Except for a survey course in Science (without lab) there was no request for different courses in Science, Latin, Greek or Mathematics. In spite of the wealth of curriculum suggestions, alumnae were, of course, aware that "a student should not be taught more than he can think

Without a precise knowledge of what a "core course" actually is, the clubs dared not risk a reply to Mrs. Lyman's second question. Several thought that Sweet Briar's balance between required and elective courses is satisfactory but they seemed inclined to define more narrowly the courses that should be required. With one or two exceptions, the alumnae favored a range of subjects rather than intensive specialization. Barring a very few courses needed by women and citizens, a "democracy of choice" in the elective system was favored, but the choice of possible courses should be limited by the general pattern that has been agreed upon for women and citizens. Recent graduates believed Sweet Briar's curriculum plan is an "organic wbole"; old graduates had to take their word for it.

TEACHING METHODS

How subjects should be taught came in for many suggestions.

Discussions were considered far superior to lectures and quizzes. Every class should have a question period. There should be more emphasis on critical thinking and reasoned conclusions and less on memorizing. Trends and general movements are more important than a mass of detail. "In every field and in every course, the professors should place more emphasis on the relationship of past and present as they go along. We need a background of the past but we need to be shown how to use it in our consideration of present day problems". Emphasis should be put on the inter-relationship of knowledge. One club suggested an orientation class for freshmen—possibly six weeks long and conducted by heads of departments. Such a course would bridge the gap between school and college, give freshmen a better idea of the correlation of subjects, the meaning of a liberal arts education, the vocational possibilities in the various fields and, most important, acquaint them with different professors, too many of whom they may otherwise never know. "Freshmen might have more initiative and intellectual curiosity if they could choose more of their courses and spread out the requirements over all four years." Instead of day by day assignments, students would learn more if they worked independently, coming together periodically for discussions and guidance. Since classes are small, there might be more stimulating discussion if all majors in each field met together occasionally. For the sake of pulling the subject matter together, comprehensive exams should be given all seniors without, however, letting resulting grades affect graduation. At the end of every year it might be well to have each student make a written evaluation of what she has gained from each course.

Majors should be given practical field work. For instance, "internships" away from college, could be arranged in teaching, in welfare organizations, in nursery schools, the college being responsible for adequate professional supervision of students and giving credit for their work. History students could make trips for research, art majors could visit galleries and museums. But methods are only a means to an end; the inspiration of the teacher is more important than his methods. Several people believed their most valuable college experience was association with faculty members.

Alumnae found no dissonance between freedom of thought and "conveying of given ideals". As one group said, "No teacher can teach well or intelligently without having his own convictions well formulated and without their being a basic part of his method and view-point of his subject. Indoctrination in an individual subject is not to be avoided. A variety of view-points and ideals will be presented by a variety of professors in a variety of courses. Therein your freedom to choose your own philosophy is insured. A college education is teaching you how to think and, in order to do so, it must have a specific point of alproach. A vague mass of information from which no conclusions are drawn does little to teach us how to draw conclusions."

OUR WEAKNESS

Lack of "guidance" and of a strong advisory system appeared to be Sweet Briar's chief weakness in the opinion of most clubs. Granted that high school is the proper place for vocational guidance, many girls enter college with little or no idea of what they want to do or what they can do best. They should be promptly assigned to a member of the faculty who can help them think through their reasons for coming to college—what they hope to get out of the experience and what they are willing to put into it. So far as possible, freshmen should be assigned to their advisors on the basis of what their personnel records reveal about their interests and aptitudes. Students should be encouraged to see their advisors whenever they wish rather than having only a few formal interviews which they sometimes feel are in the nature of "check-ups". It should be possible to change advisors "for cause". During their sophomore year students should have a series of aptitude tests to help them in choosing their "field of concentration". A consultant on religion was suggested. "A person always on campus with whom students could discuss problems made by the contrast between their Sunday School instruction and their intellectual awakening at college." It was realized by alumnae that faculty members, at present, are often too busy to give the young student the help and supervision she needs and that, also, advisors themselves may need training on how to give advice and have it followed. To be effective, an advisory system must be seen by the student as of vital service to her. A full-time supervisor of vocational and academic guidance and personnel is desirable but, until that is financially possible at Sweet Briar, might we share a personnel director with another college and/or make use of the State Board of Education's vocational counseling service? Insight into vocational possibilities of each major might be achieved through a series of convocations given by members of the various departments (as suggested above for a long orientation class). Possibly the Alumnac Office might undertake an active placement service for graduates and be assisted by Sweet Briar clubs wherever they exist. Better personnel records should be kept by the college so that fuller and more accurate reports can be given inquiring employers. But, as one club refreshingly observed, "We placed great faith in the magical powers of aptitude tests and in the person of a full-time employee who would automatically make the perfect schedule for every student!"

BEGINNING WITH THE FEBRUARY ISSUE: a series of articles on the curriculum and educational methods at Sweet Briar today.

OUR STRENGTH

The beauty of Sweet Briar's setting, the charm of the intimate four years, the small classes and the pastoral quality of life were unanimously praised. "The community was small enough that each person felt herself an integral part and knew fairly well a large proportion of its dwellers." This sense of being "an integral part" gave one alumna, at least, her "greatest benefit"-"A feeling of not only being able to take responsibility but that I should take responsibility. Even though there is too little contact between faculty and students, Sweet Briar's size makes possible much more than is found in larger colleges, while its isolation means it has a unique education to offer in that most campus activities originate from among students rather than being dependent on cities." There was fear, on the other hand, that students become so content with their idyllic existence that they neither know nor care what happens in the outside world.

Finally, alumnae agreed that Sweet Briar women "seem especially well-balanced and mature, possessing many and varied activities and interests."

OUR STUDENTS

Girls come to Sweet Briar for no very definite reasons, it seems. One club even suggested that people seeking a liberal arts education haven't anything really definite in mind! Discipline at Sweet Briar, either individual or group, came in for very little discussion.

Homogeneity was admitted by all and defended by most because the college is small and a homogeneous group can more readily decide upon its objectives and work toward their accomplishment. To import a different type girl deliberately, would seem rather artificial and would probably result in unhappiness and a sense of not belonging, though more foreign students were wanted because they bring about understanding of other cultures and of other national problems. If Sweet Briar girls "take their college education for granted", the example of foreign students, who have made a tremendous struggle for theirs, will provide the impetus needed—as well as the intellectual competition. Some alumnae thought there wasn't much homogeneity after all. In a large college the student body tends to break up into small groups which may, actually, be more alike than at Sweet Briar where girls "know everybody in the community". Moreover "there is enough contrast in students' minds to provoke stimulating discussion". Within the student body, it was agreed, there was democracy. Regardless of financial background, a girl "who could discern the finer things of life was a real member of the group." Alumnae thought a constant effort should be made to give students a breadth of sympathy and understanding both through the teaching of the humanities and through the use of visiting lecturers.

High intellectual ability, fine character and outstanding personality are the qualities wanted of entering students but some clubs feared too much stress is being laid on the first attribute. They would rather have emphasis put on choosing the girl who is "well-rounded". They wonder, too, whether too many freshmen are coming from private preparatory schools and whether enough effort has been spent on interesting the outstanding graduates of public high schools. A change in entrance requirements and a few curricular changes (accepting and teaching some "practical" work) might mean more interest on the part of high school students. The Boston Club thinks, "After students have met basic pre-requisites, they should be chosen from as widely varying backgrounds as possible varying in economic and social position, public and private schooling, and, particularly, geographic locale." One club thought important a personal interview with the applicant for admission and would be willing to help in this way.

The college must have high academic standing to attract "ontstandingly able students" but students must, in many cases, have more than tuition by way of a scholarship, so several clubs recommended increasing grants where appropriate. More and better general publicity would bring Sweet Briar to the attention of girls who otherwise might not think of it. If money is still available from scholarship funds it should be used to (a) provide foreign study for Sweet Briar juniors, (b) bring foreign students and professors to Sweet Briar, and (c) finance new educational plans such as field work with supervision and personal counseling.

ALUMNAE OPPORTUNITIES

Alumnae groups should be eager to welcome new members and might appoint a committee on "community orientation" to help them, but the friendly services that can be rendered a newcomer would probably be largely on an individual basis. This subject needs more study and, possibly the creation of an alumnae committee similar to the present Committee on Educational Policy. There was general agreement that on the whole alumnae have not taken the interest they should in their local schools. Being parents, their responsibility is the greater. Clubs in the South felt a particular responsibility for the improvement of Negro schools. There was some feeling that alumnae should not work as a unit for education but should join larger groups such as the A.A.U.W. If eligible, alumnae should join the P.T.A. and find out what is really happening in the schools their children attend. All of us should work to get the best possible people on school boards. Other things needing to be done are to examine educational methods in both primary and secondary schools; are they interesting? Do they have libraries, recreation, special activities? Are schools open for programs after hours, on Saturdays, during vacations? Is the need of the individual student being met by "educational diagnosis and prescription for each student"? Are text books modern and stimulating? Do they promote loyalty and democracy? (text book reading committees of laymen are used by many communities) What are schools doing to promote intergroup and intercultural education? Alumnae should investigate current school problems, such as teachers' salaries. They should back bond issues for better schools and discuss state appropriations with their representatives, keeping informed about educational legislation and the record and attitude of public officials. This last might be done by appointing one member of the club to keep it informed on local, state, and federal legislation that would effect education and schools.

AND, FINALLY

Alumnae realize that college students are, necessarily, immature and that a four year course, however cleverly devised, cannot turn out a finished product at 22 years of age. The value of a liberal arts education becomes more and more apparent as we live with it. From the perspective of forty years we can send one club's encouragement to students who feel they are "not being taught how to live." "No student in college has been at it long enough to be in any position to know bow to live, nor is any college course or experience going to tell her how. She will keep on learning small parts of the answer to put together, by trial and error, all the years of her life. What we would want her to realize is that her four years at college are her best and possibly last chance to be theoretical. It is unlikely that ever again will she have the leisure and the stimulation to study intensively and to theorize at length. Getting bold of as many ideas as possible is ber job. This short session of not baving to concern oneself with "bow to live" is a constant encouragement later when the practical business of living must occupy almost all one's time.

For individual alumna comment see "Letters to the Editor" page 32.

STUDENT FEES

The Board of Overseers on June 3 1947, increased the over-all fee from $1,250 to $1,350 beginning with the academic year 1947-48. Art studio, science laboratory, and graduation fees have been eliminated.

Dean Lyman Answers Some Alumnae Questions

Dear Alumnae:

Terry Shaw has let me read Sue Slaughter's excellent report "Speaking for Ourselves" and it has given me real encouragement as I am beginning a new year of work, with a new Freshman class just on the point of coming to Sweet Briar for the big adventure of a college course. I want personally to thank you for entering into our problems and for thinking with us on the big questions of policy that face all educators today. As we work at these questions here at Sweet Briar we are grateful that you have read and thought and discussed, and that we can have the benefit of your judgment and experience.

In connection with your discussions a question has been handed to me about the meaning of the term: "corecourses." Let me explain my use of the term in my article.

The term "core-courses" has been applied to courses offered to all students with the purpose of conveying a common heritage of thought. They are designed to survey the different fields of knowledge and to convey to students the heritage of thought and experience which are the background for modern democracy. Our nearest approach to such courses are Social Studies 1-2 and Classical Civilization 191-192. They differ from most of the introductory courses in our present group plan at Sweet Briar in two vital respects: 1) They are designed to introduce the students not to a specific subject, but to a larger field of integrated study such as the field of physical science, of social science, or of the humanities; 2) In their concern for heritage and for unity, they are designed to be experienced by all the students in a given college; our groupplan provides for a choice of subjects and no student will necessarily duplicate exactly the introductory courses taken by another.

The discussion of "Heritage and Change" in the Harvard Report "General Education in a Free Society" Chapter II is helpful reading to clarify this point.

I cannot refrain from making one further suggestion of reading. In the Summer number (1947) of the Journal of the American Association of University Women there is grist for your mill in the fine article by Professor Susan B. Riley of George Peabody College for Teachers, called Education the Tool of Society. It was an address given by Professor Riley at the Dallas convention of the A.A.U.W. in April.

My hearty good wishes for your future discussions. Let us have the result. We appreciate them.

Faithfully yours,

MARY ELY LYMAN.

Dean Lyman answers below some specific questions asked by alumnae regarding foreign study, scholarships and self help at Sweet Briar. They may well tie in with your fall discussion program on Admissions.

1) How are foreign students selected?

Usually the credentials of these students come to us through the Institute of International Education in New York City. The papers are examined by our Faculty Committee on Scholarships and the Committee on Admission, and the selection is made in consultation between the two committees.

2) Do foreign students pay part of their expenses, or how are they financed?

Some of the foreign students have had all their expenses paid for them, tuition being given by the College as a scholarship, and other expenses by the student body. Often the student has carried a self-help job to make a contribution herself. This last year there was considerable discussion of how opportunities for self-help could be increased for foreign students. Dining room service is the best paying of our self-help jobs and if health and facility with English are adequate for it, we shall encourage it hereafter for our foreign students.

3) When juniors are sent to St. Andrews or other schools abroad, does the college bear the whole expense (except travel) or what part of it? If there are different financial arrangements for different forcign study please explain. Are these students chosen purely on their ability (mental) or is the opportunity for foreign study dependent on financial ability?

The college does not give financial aid for students studying abroad.

Students are accepted for the Junior year abroad on the basis of both their academic qualifications and their responsibility in citizenship.

The financial question is not as weighty as one might think because the fees are lower in the foreign universities than in America, and hence even with the expense of passage across the ocean the total cost of the Junior year abroad is not seriously heavier than that of a year at an American college of Sweet Briar type.

4) How many scholarships are granted at Sweet Brian and in what amounts?

In the year 1946-1947, 34 scholarships were granted at Sweet Briar. The number does not remain constant because the number of applications varies from year to year. The Sweet Briar Catalogue for 1947-1948 lists our scholarships on pages 137-140. On page 138 the paragraph on "General College Scholarships" announces a number of scholarships which are awarded on a basis of merit and need. The number of these scholarships from general funds varies from year to year according to the number and size of the applications made.

5) Do holders of scholarships do any work in Book Shop, Alumnae Office, etc., in partial payment for scholarship? Or are they paid?

Holders of scholarships are expected to render service to the college to the extent of six hours per week in return for their scholarship aid. (See the current catalogue, page 137).

The services most commonly given by these students are in the Administrative offices: Dean's Office, Public Relations, Alumnae, etc.

6) What self-help opportunities are offered and are they offered only to holders of scholarships?

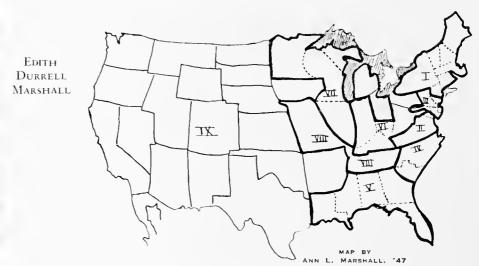

Opportunities for students to earn money, which are quite independent of scholarships, exist in the library, the Book Shop and in the dining rooms. Some students also earn money by carrying agencies for Lynchburg firms, such as cleaners, florists, shoe-repairers, etc.

Council Elects New Member

Marjorie Burford Crenshaw, '33 (Mrs. Ollinger Crenshaw) was elected a member of the Alumnae Council at its June meeting, to fill one of the unexpired terms created by the resignations of Margaret Thomas Kreusi, ex-'12, and Anne McJunkin Briber, '43. She lives in Lexington, Virginia, with her husband and young son, Albert. Mr. Crenshaw is on the faculty of Washington and Lee University. A philosophy major and President of Student Government here, Marjoric continued her studies in the field of Political Science at Columbia University for two years. Her especial community interest in Lexington is the Children's Clinic, of which she is Secretary.

Various departments of the college frequently receive notices regarding interesting positions available and open to college trained women. Often the Alumnae Office is asked to suggest possible candidates. If you would like to hear of openings as they occur, send your name and a listing of professional and volunteer experience to the Alumnae Office.

Regional Plan for Clubs

By Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, Director of Clubs

IN JANUARY, 1947, the Alumnae Council, aware that a more modern method of contact was needed between the Council, the Alumnae Office, and the growing number of clubs, organized and put into operation during the spring the Regional Plan for Clubs.

As Sweet Briar alumnae live in every state of the Union, the country was divided into nine regions, each with a chairman who is to promote the work of the Alumnae Association among the clubs assigned to her, and to act as a liaison between the clubs, the Executive Secretary, the Director of Clubs, and the Alumnae Council. These Regional Chairmen are elected members of the Alumnae Council and were appointed to their positions this year by the Association President. It is hoped that in the near future plans will be perfected for each to be elected by the membership in her own region.

Together with the Director of Clubs the Regional Chairmen comprise the Regional Committee. They are to carry on all correspondence with the Clubs except in cases of emergency, thus relieving the pressure on the Alumnae Office which heretofore has borne the brunt of all inquiries and club problems. When a Regional Chairman is a resident in her region, it is possible that she will visit the clubs in her area, thus bringing to them news of the campus and of the Alumnae Council.

As the clubs grow in number, regional meetings may be held for exchange of ideas, news of Sweet Briar, and discussions pertinent to the educational field.

The clubs are now divided into the regions listed below with the Regional Chairman. No. 1—Mrs. Adrian Massie (Gertrude Dally, '22), Purchase Street, Rye, New York—Manhattan, Long Island, Westchester, Northern New Jersey, and Boston, active clubs, and Albany-Schenectady, Rochester, Buffalo, and New Haven, organizing groups; No. 2—Mrs. John B. Orgain, Jr. (Norvell Royer, '30)

2013 Park Avenue, Richmond 20, Virginia—Amherst, Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Norfolk, Richmond, Roanoke, Alexandria-Arlington, and Washington, D. C., active clubs; No. 3-Miss Lucy Lloyd, '41, Valley Brook Farm, Downingtown, Pennsylvania - Baltimore, Wilmington, Philadelphia, Princeton, and Pittsburgh, active clubs, and Annapolis, organizing group; No. 4—Chairman to be appointed—Charlotte and Winston-Salem, active clubs, and Asheville, Durham-Chapel Hill, Greensboro, and Columbia, Georgia, organizing groups; No. 5-Mrs. Henry L. Young, Jr. (Lida Voigt, '35) 2924 Nancy Creek Road, NW, Atlanta, Georgia-Jacksonville and Atlanta, active clubs, and Birmingham, Montgomery, Tampa, New Orleans, Augusta, Columbus, and Savannah, organizing groups; No. 6-Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown (Sally Shallenberger, '32) Ashbourne, Harrods Creek, Kentucky-Louisville, Lexington, and Cincinnati, active clubs, and Columbus, Ohio, Indianapolis, Charleston, West Virginia, and Huntington, organizing groups; No. 7-Mrs. E. Webster Harrison (Mary Huntington, '30) Box 54 M, Drake Road, Cincinnati 27, Ohio-Chicago, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Toledo, and Cleveland, active clubs, and Detroit, Birmingham, Michigan, and Milwaukee, organizing groups; No. 8-Mrs. Stephen C. Voorhees (Adeline Jones, '46) Windy Hill Farm, Bedminster, New Jersey-Memphis and St. Louis, and Chattanooga, active clubs, Knoxville, Nashville, and Kansas City, organizing groups; No. 9—Mrs. Frederick H. Skinner (Louise Hammond, '19) North Shore Road, Algonquin Park, Norfolk, Virginia-San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Denver, Davenport, Dallas, Austin, Houston, and Little Rock, organizing groups.

Many other colleges use a regional system for Clubs and it is the hope of our Regional Committee that Sweet Briar Alumnae Clubs will wholeheartedly cooperate in making the same plan a great success in our own Association.

Glimpses of Europe—Summer, 1947

By B. MADDIN LUPTON, '48

Maddin Lupton, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, spent this summer in Europe as delegate to two youth conferences. She recorded her preliminary observations for us and promises to make valuable contributions to campus discussions this year. Maddin is Editor-in-Chief of the Succt Briar News and has served as: sophomore house president, member of Q.V. and French Club, vice-president of International Relations Club, treasurer of the Y.W.C.A., and co-head of the 1946 Christmas Bazaar.

CLUTCHING my passport, three boxes of assorted chocolates, a wilted orchid, and my travelers cheques, I gingerly walked up the gang plank of the SS Marine Tiger docked in New York. On this momentous day in my life, June 24, 1947, I was to sail for Europe where I was to attend two student conferences and see as many sights as possible in two months.

Fortunately, Sweet Briar had another of its daughters on board, Margaret Munnerlyn, who was going to England to attend a summer seminar at Oxford University, so I had someone to keep me company at the rail. Munn and I shared a cabin with a young star of the Ballet Russe, her mother, and a would-be Communist.

The first conference I was to attend was in Aarhus, Denmark, held by the International Student Service. I was one of ten delegates representing the World Student Service Fund. We had daily shipboard meetings to discuss policies and plans. In these meetings I learned that Sweet Briar with its 450 students raised almost two thousand dollars for the WSSF, while the University of Texas with its 17,000 students raised just the same amount. I discovered that the delegate from Rockford College in Illinois and I were representing the smallest American colleges or universities at the conference, and that the delegate from Fiske in Tennessee and I were from the only two southern colleges at the conference.

We all recovered from our seasickness and became so attached to our "floating university," the Marine Tiger, that we were reluctant to leave her. About half of the 750 students on board landed in Plymouth, while the rest went on to Le Havre, where we landed on the fourth of July.

The thirty members of the ISS group had to spend an unexpected three days in Paris while we waited for our military permits to go through the British zone of Germany. In these three days we walked a million miles, took as many pictures, and ate as many pastries as we could afford. We stayed in dark little hotels in the Latin Quarter near the Boulevard de Saint Michel where we had no hot water and limited electricity which suddenly turned off on us halfway up the musty stairways. One very interesting afternoon of our Paris visit we went to UNESCO House for tea and tours. The rest of the time we strolled along the Champs Elysees, browsed among the book stalls on the Seine, and marvelled at the fact that we were actually in Paris.

The next lap of our journey to Denmark was perhaps the most interesting, for we spent some thirty hours on a train with no diner, pullman, or even drinking fountains. This trip went through the part of Germany which was most destroyed, for we went through Cologne, Essen, Dusseldorf, and Hamburg before we crossed the Danish border. The bleakness and desolation of the countryside had a sobering effect on our American group and caused most of us to do some serious thinking on wars and their consequences.

The conference in Aarhus was attended by about 150 delegates from all parts of the world—from China and Burma to Nigeria, Poland, and Czechoslovakia. We discussed problems of student relief and student cooperation all over the world. This is the same kind of conference that Eleanor Bosworth attended last summer in Cambridge, England.

After the Aarhus conference was over I spent a few delightful days seeing the sights of Copenhagen, from the Round Tower in which Czar Peter the Great rode his horse, to the fish market where picturesque old women sell fresh eels by the dozen.

I left Denmark by train, bound for Norway via Sweden. After a wonderful trip by train and ferry I arrived in Oslo, the lovely capital city of Norway. I was a delegate to the Second World Conference of Christian Youth, a gathering of 1500 young Christians from 71 countries. The YWCA's, YMCA's and the World Council of Churches had sent delegates to this meeting. I believe this conference was a thrilling and inspiring experience for all who attended, for we were able to hear and meet such people as Pastor Martin Niemoller, Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr, Dr. Kirkley Mather, D. T. Niles of Ceylon, Bishop Berggrav of Norway, and Madeleine Barot of France.

The theme of the conference was Jesus Christ Is Lord. We discussed how to apply this idea to all forms of daily living. I was most impressed with the seriousness and sincerity of the foreign students as they talked and argued about the place of the young person in the church and in the world.

While in Oslo I ran into Ann Eustis as she was catching the underground into town from her dormitory at the University of Oslo where a group of Americans are attending summer school.

Flying from Oslo to London over the Norwegian mountains, the North Sea, and the English countryside, was one of the best parts of my summer. I went from London to Oxford where I visited Margaret Munnerlyn for ten days. I stayed right in Lady Margaret Hall with the summer seminar students. After seeing Romeo and Juliet at Stratford, being run over by an English bicyclist in Canterbury, and hearing Winston Churchill at Blenheim, I sailed for home on the Marine Jumper on August 11.

Faculty and Staff-Fall, 1947

NEW ADDITIONS to the faculty and staff are bringing fresh thinking to many departments at Sweet Briar this fall. Faculty members have come from widespread universities in Europe and Latin America, as well as from varied universities and colleges here in the states. Changes are listed departmentally, so pick the field of your particular interest and see what's going on!

FACULTY

THE DEAN'S OFFICE—Dr. Lysbeth Muncy, also recently advanced to the rank of assistant professor of history, has been named assistant dean, a new position. Miss Muncy is a Vassar graduate, studied at the University of Berlin, and received her doctor's degree from Brown University in 1943 just before coming to Sweet Briar. She has served on the faculty-student College Council, as advisor to the International Relations Club, and as a member of the honors and library committees.

Miss Anne Hopkins, formerly assistant to the dean, is now Mrs. Quincy Ayres of Ames, Iowa. Her successor is Miss Dorothy Jester, graduate of Agnes Scott, who has held a similar position at Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

BIOLOGY—Miss Evelyn DeWitt, graduate of Acadia University in Nova Scotia, is the new assistant in botany. She succeeds Miss Lena Annis who has accepted a position with the state conservation department of Nova Scotia.

He is now making his home in Lynchburg.

Salaries and Students Fees Raised

Salary increases which became effective July 1, 1947, were voted by the Board of Overseers at their Spring meeting for both the faculty and administrative staff of the college. These adjustments, ranging from 25% for instructors to 10% for most of the staff, necessitated raising student fees.

In a letter to parents of students giving the reason for the increase, President Lucas explained that the "inevitable outcome" of the existing shortage of competent teachers "has been to raise teachers' salaries to a point more nearly commensurate with their service to society. The statesupported institutions have already moved noticeably ahead of the private colleges in salary adjustments and have consequently been able to increase their own teaching staffs by drawing from the faculties of private colleges." She further stated that "Sweet Briar will be able to maintain its high educational standards only by adjusting salaries to a point which will enable us to attract and hold teachers of the first rank."

It was emphasized that the college will continue its policy of aiding any deserving student for whom this rise constitutes serious hardship "because we feel strongly that evidence of intellectual ability and promise, in addition to fine character, must continue to be the basis for student selection at Sweet Briar."

Among the other women's colleges to raise salaries and fees recently are Bryn Mawr, Mt. Holyoke, Vassar, and Wellesley.

New Students at Sweet Briar

One hundred and fifty-seven new students arrived at Sweet Briar on Monday, September 15, to begin the five-day orientation program, which ended with registration for classes. The formal opening of the college's forty-second academic session took place on Friday evening, September 19, and classes began the following morning.

Of the entering students, 150 are freshmen and seven have had at least one year of college before coming to Sweet Briar, according to statistics from the office of the Director of Admission, Mrs. Bernice D. Lill. They come from 29 states, the District of Columbia, and 4 foreign countries. The largest number, 21, come from New York state. In addition to 12 from Virginia, 9 come from Pennsylvania and the same number from North Carolina; 8 each from Illinois and Ohio; Kentucky and Missouri, 7; Alabama, District of Columbia, Maryland, New Jersey, and Texas, 6 each; Connecticut, Georgia, and Tennessee, 5.

A student of political and social science and sociology, Miss Tammia comes to this country through the Institute of International Education. Following the completion of her studies, she expects to work in her country's foreign service.

she spent the early years of her life in China. She enters Sweet Briar after a year at Berea College, Kentucky.

Fourteen daughters of alumnae are listed among those who are entering Sweet Briar this fall, and eight are sisters of present or former students. A number of others claim cousins or aunts who have also attended Sweet Briar, making a total of 37 in the group who are related to alumnae.

Included in the group of alumnae daughters are: Mary Hodson Bardin, Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Marguerite Drew; Nancy Ellen Brumback, Van Wert, Ohio, daughter of Gladys Gilliland; Jane Judith Clippinger, Cincinnati, daughter of Jane Becker; Margery Davidson, Hinsdale, Ill., daughter of Helen Fossum and niece of Muriel Fossum Pesek; Georgia Dreisbach, Ft. In addition, she has been chairman of the Committee on Lectures and Concerts for many years.

Sabbatical Leaves

Granted to Five

ABBATICAL leaves have been granted to five members of the faculty during 1947-48, three for the entire year and two for the second semester only, in continuance of the prewar policy resumed last year by the college. Three professors who were absent on sabbatical leaves last year returned to their posts in September.

Providing opportunities for special research projects or for continued study, sabbatical leaves are held by the college administration to be of great importance in relation to the quality of teaching which it wishes to maintain. For that reason every effort has been made, both last year and this, to secure supply teachers in order to grant sabbatical leaves to members who are eligible for them.

Miss M. Dee Long, professor of English, left for Cambridge, Mass., early in September to begin her year of independent study at the Widener Library at Harvard. Beyond that, her plans for the year are still indefinite.

Plans for work during her year's leave on a source book for the history of Christianity have been made by Dr. Marion B. Rollins, professor of religion. In collaboration with her husband, Dr. Wallace E. Rollins, Professor Rollins began work on her project this summer. They are spending part of their time at Sweet Briar and part of the time engaged in research in various libraries.

In the Division of Social Studies, Miss Jessie M. Fraser, associate professor of history, will be absent on sabbatical leave throughout the year. According to Miss Fraser, her plans are still indefinite but they do involve research and writing in her special field, American History. Miss Fraser has been collecting the letters and papers of Arthur Lee for many years and, among other things, she will continue this study.

During the second semester of next year, Dr. Laura Buckham, associate professor of Romance languages, will go to France to carry on research in poetry of the Resistance movement, and Dr. Gertrude Malz, associate professor of Greek and Latin, will continue her researches on papyri begun several years ago.

Sweet Briar welcomed back in September Dr. Dora Neill Raymond, professor of history, Dr. Gladys Boone, professor of economics, and Dr. Carol M. Rice, college physician and professor of hygiene, all three of whom have been absent on sabbatical leaves this past year. Professor Raymond went to Bermuda in February, to write on a book for which she has done research over a period of several years. Professor Boone, who went to England in March, worked there and on the continent on labor's policy in connection with international trade. She spent some time in Geneva, Switzerland, this summer, attending the second conference of the International Trade Organizations, as set up under the United Nations.

Fund Agent: MARGARET POTTS (Mrs. Henry H. Williams), 120 East 75th Street, New York 21, New York.

Many of you in the Academy-Special group who shared so generously in the raising of the Benedict Scholarship Fund will be interested to know that a scrapbook was prepared (by Martha von Briesen '31) of all the highlights of that very stirring project and presented to Miss Benedict late in June 1947. A good many of you are represented in the book by your warm notes of appreciation that came with your gifts and other responses, together with those from members of the college and many other friends. You will feel, too, a special share in Miss Benedict's happiness to receive these expressions from so many who belonged to those earlier years. In part, she wrote: "This book is a picture of what you all did-it shows your thoughts and feelings at work, and the response came for the continuation of the Sweet Briar that was ours. It came across space from so many distant places, as well as across time . . . I am delighted to have the picture, a speaking picture, telling a beautiful story, and how delighted I am I can never fully tell you." She said, too, "Isn't it a thrill to read the June Alumnae Magazine and see the pictures of Anne Webb and Isabel Dzung, our Benedict scholars, and realize that the girls at Sweet Briar in our days are going along with these girls into the future where they are going to make real contributions?"

The Lost Persons column is continued in the October magazine as all alumnae receive a copy of this issue. Only one item, giving the present address of one of our group, was received in response to our column in the June number, and that came from a member of the class of 1946, giving us information about her husband's aunt who had attended the Academy. We have hopes that many of you will read these names and, if you know or have any means of finding out about these members of the old Academy, that you will be sure to let us know.

With the opening of the college year, make up your mind NOW to be on the active list or alumnae and send in early your contribution to the Alumnae Fund to make certain

My only news this time is the announcement of the marriage of my daughter which may interest some of Sweet Briar's "Pioneer Girls" for she has had many pleasant visits at the homes of my college friends.

Mary Miller Joslin was married on May 24 to William A. Wirene of Schenectady, who is manager of the Industrial Materials Division of the General Electric Co. They are residing in Schenectady which is only twenty-eight miles from Johnstown, a very pleasing fact to the mother of an only child tor I can see her often.

Please, you girls of 1911, write me something about yourselves and your families the next issue will have a good showing.

Class Secretary: WANTED!

1915

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

After my letter left for the June News two more answers to my post cards arrived, which gave me a start on this letter.

Rosalia Feder Sarbey, ex 15, wrote from Wickenburg, Arizona, where she and her two daughters spent the winter in the "crossroads of the West." She expected to spend the sumer in their cottage on the cliffs of Lake Erie but added, "Tell any S.B.C. girls out this way to look me up in the fall."

Margaret Grant, '15, received my card just as she was going up to Rochester to give a talk on the United Nations to the Student Association of the Eastman School of Music. I hope we will be able to have Margaret speak to our Philadelphia Alumnae Club this winter.

Margaret is still secretary of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation which awards grants to composers each year. Her daughter, Leslie, and her husband are living in Boston while he is finishing up his Ph.D. at Harvard. Young Margaret is beginning her junior year at Barnard and Harold is a senior at the Lenox School, Lenox, Mass.

The Philadelphia Bulletin of June 26 had a very nice article about Margaret, who is included in the sixteen highest paid women with the United Nations. It said, "Mrs. Grant went from Sweet Briar to Columbia University where she took her Ph.D. in Sociology and Economics. Her first job was editing documents for the American Commission to Negotiate Peace, after the last war. (Meaning World War 1). She has done research for the Rockefeller Foundation, helped direct a national symphony survey, was statistical director of the U.S.O. during the war and has turned out half a dozen books on old age security, big business and the like."

It is with sorrow that I have to report the death of Edward Hall Faile, husband of Dorys McConnell Faile, ex '16, in February 1947.

Since this issue of the Alumnae News reaches all of you I do wish you would take to heart my appeal for news. It is a much more interesting letter if it contains names and news of the girls you knew most intimately and the only way you can be sure of hearing about them and of them hearing about you is by sending in as much news as you can. The only way you will be able to read any of the other three issues of the Alumnae News during the rest of the year is by contributing to the Alumnae Fund. So—send in your contribution to the Alumnae Office right away and at the same time please sit down and write me a letter of news about yourself, your family and your Sweet Briar Friends.

First of all I want to urge you to contribute as soon as possible to the Alumnae Fund. It's the only way we can show our appreciation to Sweet Briar and as a contributor you can keep in touch with the doings of our classmates via the four issues of the ALUMNAE NEWS

May I give my heartfelt thanks to the five of you who answered in reply to the fifty notes I sent out this summer—and likewise to the few faithfuls who sent me bits of news unsolicited.

It's been a long time since I caught up with Augusta Gee Loggins (Mrs. Ed.) who is now living at 1240 Perry Street, Helena, Arkansas.

When she was married two years ago her husband had just returned from 31 months in Africa and Italy where he was transportation officer with the A.T.C. He is now managing a Goodrich Store. Her daughter, Augusta Crump, who attended Goucher College for two years, married Sam Adams, Jr., in September 1945, He was a West Point graduate from Greenwood, Mississippi. They have been in Germany for more than a year where he is with the Judge Advocates General section. Before the war Augusta was active in the P.T.A., Garden Club, Federated Woman's Club, and Division Third Vice-President of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. During the war she worked in the personnel department of a war plant and then ran a small branch bank in Carrolton for a year and a half. Congratulations Augusta, on being the first banker in our class!

Phyllis Millinger Camp has also acquired a singular distinction. She has been running the church school in Leechburg and is the Treasurer of the Guild. Her husband is a vestryman. Last year when they had no rector Phyllis prepared the candidates and presented them for confirmation. The Bishop said it was the first time, to his knowledge, that a woman had presented candidates. Phyllis has two daughters—Audrey 10 and Avery 7—the former has been on the honor roll all year at school. They visited relatives this summer who own the Bashford Manor Stud Farm (famous for race horses) in Kentucky, and her father in Chicago.

Elizabeth Pope Mercer with her family vacationed at Split Rocks Lodge in the Poconos. Shiney Bodine Mountcastle with her family had a cottage at Madison, Conn., this summer—they both sounded as if they had heavenly times. Shiney's daughter entered Sweet Briar this fall.

Willetta Dolle Murrin writes that her daughter, Jane, is just entering high school and may go to Sweet Briar.

Helen Gaus, '23, is one of the few S.B. girls Willetta ever sees in Columbus.

Bernice Hulburd Waln tells me that her oldest son, Bud, is entering the University of Virginia this fall and Hugh is going to Episcopal High.

Marie Brede Brown's daughter, Fran, is a junior this year at Sweet Briar. Marie and her attorney husband are planning to visit her this October. Her son, Larry, is entering Adrian College and his one interest and goal is the University of Michigan football team.

Genevieve Elviun Moodey wrote from their summer home on Klinger Lake, White Pigeon, Michigan. Her husband is rector of Grace Episcopal Church in Muncie, Indiana, so naturally she is husy with guilds, Sunday School and during the war, Red Cross and Hospital Auxiliary work. She has four daughters; Christine at Ball College in Muncie, Genevive at Indiana University, Mary in high school, and Sally, 7½, in the grades. She tries to play a little bridge and do some scrious reading so she doesn't get too much of "three meals a day," and that's all she has time for.

Fritz and I went out to the coast again for the fourth trip this last year. On the way out we spent a wonderful day with Marion Swannell Wright, and her husband. We had a nice visit with the children and Marion's mother. They took us over to Juarez, Mexico, for lunch and supervised my shopping tour. We went then to St. Clements Fpiscopal Church, of which Bill is the rightfully proud rector. Finished the day with big thick steaks in their cunning little adobe house out in the country. Sue, aged 14, is a real beauty and impressed us no end with her art work. The Wrights took their vacation at Grand Canyon this summer. Unfortunately, on their return, young Dan, 11, fell from the top of a truck-load of hay and broke his arm.

I'm closing with two reminders, the Alumnae Fund and write your Secretary—please.

Class Secretary: Frances Burnett (Mrs. Louis Mellen), 22325 Calverton Road, Shaker Heights, Ohio.

1926

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA TAYLOR (Mrs George Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montclair, New Jersey.

1927

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. W. B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: Josephine Snowden (Mrs. Kenneth Durham), 2515 Forest Drive, Des Moines 12, Iowa.

Thank you for your loyal support of the Alumnae Fund for 1946-47. The number of contributors of the class of '27 has greatly increased the last few years. We hope your generosity will continue to grow so that our record for 1947-48 will be even nearer to the 100% goal.

The next three issues of the ALUMNAE NEWS, February, April, and June, will be sent only to contributors for the 1947-48 season.

We went overboard with news in the 20th reunion letter of last June so I'm giving you a breathing spell in hope that the next time I send you a card you will return one to me crammed with news.

This summer 1 saw Camilla Alsop Hyde and met her attractive husband. She was in New York for a while recovering from an ear operation.

Emily Jones Hodge and her family stopped overnight on their way to New England. Sara, age 10, exhibited cartwheels indefatigably while Bob, age 14, erected his pup tent in the yard and insisted upon spending the night there.

Rebecca Manning Cutler and family rented a house in Stamford for the summer. Earlier they had visited in Spartanburg and thought Sea Isle would be their goal in October. It was grand to get acquainted with her family.

Connie Van Ness spent an afternoon with us. It turned into a party when we discovered it was her birthday and hastily stood candles in the ice cream.

Maggie Leigh Hobbs and I had a grand time with Virginia Wilson Robbins at her home in Szarsdale. At the time, early summer, they vowed they hadn't had the pleasure of being really hot since they left Virginia. Did anyone hear from them during the August heat wave?

At this moment on September 2 it seems unbelievable that wishing you a Merry Christmas could be appropriate, but this is the only issue of the NEWS until February so—greetings to each of you and good health to you and your families.

P.S. Never forget that Samford 4-2569 is my telephone number. I'm only 45 minutes from New York and think it a great treat to come in to see you when you are in the city. In the meantime send your dollars to Sweet Briar and encourage me to get more news for more people.

Fund Agent: BETTY PRESCOTT (Mrs. R. H. Balch), 1202 Parkway East, Utica 2, N. Y.

Jean Williamson Bridges died suddenly May 31. We all are sorry and remember her as one of the loveliest girls in the class. Her father visited the campus in August in remembrance of Jean's great devotion to Sweet Briar. Jean's two sons, one daughter and her husband survive her. She had led an active life, full of community interests.

Katherine Brightbill Biltz's husband died most unexpectedly on August 30. We all join her in her sorrow. She has two little girls.

Having just taken over the secretaryship, I sat down and wrote letters to each of you, hoping to have some news for the October number—and it seems to me no wonder that there is never any news of '28. Out of 119 letters I wrote, I got exactly four replies. All honour and glory to those four, and here is the news they sent me—

Sarah Exerett Toy writes that her son Bill Lee, enters Princeton in September. Her second sun, John Lee, enters Woodberry Forest, her daughter, Sarah Dallam Toy, aged 9 months, is beginning to crawl! Can you imagine anything more delightful than a progressive family? You'd just have to stay young to keep up with that.

Louise Conklin Knowles writes that she and her husband, Anne aged 14 and Bobby aged 8 spent a week this summer at Grafton, Vermont, with Lib Crane Hall and her husband, on their farm—Lib's daughter is 14 and her son 10, so everything was congenial. Conky went to the Sweet Briar Northern New Jersey Alumnae meeting at Eleanor Branch Cornell's house in Montclair in the spring—a most interesting meeting and a delightful party.

Connie Furman Westbrook writes that she stays busy bringing up a four-year-old daughter and taking care of "a harassed automobile dealer"—but she underrates herself. Besides this full-time job she finds time for Garden Club, other organizations, and a social life! At the tea for Miss Lucas in the spring the Atlanta chapter of the Alumnae Association organized a discussion group which Connie is planning to attend along with everything else—so I think she is really contributing something to the good way of life. She sees Charlotte Conway Curran and Frances Coyner Huffard—Charlotte and Frank are moving from New York to Charlottes-ville soon.

Marion Jayne Berguido has moved to Haverford from Wynnewood-is kept busy with her five daughters, ranging from 15 to 21/2 -named Jayne, Joan, June, Joy and Jill. She and Betty Moore Schilling, Mary Nelms Locke and Betty's sister (who realizes she should have been a Sweet Briarite) have a bridge foursome and see each other often, Betty has three sons, aged 15, 7 and 21/2-Mary two daughters, 15 and 10-the five Berguidos and two Lockes are entered for Sweet Briar. Marion says she hopes to see Marguerite Hodnett McDaniel soon-she and her husband are coming to New York to attend a convention of surgeons and will spend a week-endthey have two girls and two boys. Libby Jones Shand and her husband are stationed in Honolulu-he is now a Captain in the Navv.

Margaret McWilliams Walsh writes that she and her husband have just made a trip to the Canadian Rockies—had a wonderful time buying antique English silver and seeds at Butchards.

As for your secretary—I left Venezuela a year-and-a-half ago and am now thoroughly settled as a New Yorker, having been fortunate enough to acquire a minute apartment—but it has a garden. Right in the middle of New York I can get out and dig. When not doing that I work for the Veterans Center and for Knickerbocker Hospital and other things.

I do hope to hear from a lot more of you so that I will have a good lot of news for the next summer. Just a post-card would be much appreciated, and of course a nice long chatty letter would be the very best!

Class Secretary: POLLY McDIARMID (Mrs. V. Pierre Serodino), Route 2, Box 70A, Ashland, Kentucky.

James V. Eppes), 33 Linnaean Street, Cambridge 38, Massachusetts.

As you can see by the above, we are still vagabonds, having moved this summer from Chattanooga to Ashland, Kentucky. We were very fortunate to find a precious house and already love the town. We were homeless for a month between buying and gaining possession. Peter was in camp and I had a wonderful time "visiting around," which included a week on the Ruth Ferguson Smythe family at Torch Lake, Michigan. Vacationing there at the same time were Sally Callison Jamison and Jane Callison Smith with their assorted children. It was such fun and Sally and cause as ever.

We wanted to get over to nearby Boyne City, Michigan, to see Hallie Gubelman Knowles but one week is not long enough. Hallie and Bill planned to drive with their wee one to Arizona for the winter. They expected a grand reunion in August with Hallie's sister, Marge Gubelman Hastert, '33, who returned from Hawaii for the first time since Pearl Harbor.

Jane Wilkinson Banyard's husband is out of the Canadian Navy and they have left Nova Scotia where they resided for seven years. They spent his terminal leave in Bermuda where they had a pleasant visit with Mrs. Raymond. Jane's husband is to be captain of Queen of Bermuda when she goes out again, and all travelers please note! Jane hopes all Sweet Briar girls traveling on the ship will introduce themselves and have a "dish of tea" with the captain. Sounds super to me! Jane says she has had enough of shoveling coal and snow and hopes to settle herself and the boys in Bermuda.

We should all be real proud of Lee Sidman Smith who is running for the School Board of Radnor Township in Wayne, Pennsylvania. She has three children, aged 12, 10, and 7. Good luck, Lee, we know you would make a good member.

Mary Archer Bean Eppes had a narrow escape this summer when she and her family were on their way to Nova Scotia. A car ran into them head on, but they all miraculously escaped being hurt. The car was wrecked so they changed their plans to a hiking and camping trip through the Adirondacks.

Jo Tatman Mace's daughter was confined in a Hartford, Connecticut, hospital most of the summer. They are back in Aurora, Illinois, now and Joanie improves steadily.

Katy Coe and her sister vacationed at Chatham this summer and were so sorry to miss Bonnie Wood Stookey who had just left. Katy is back in New York now, and I still say she gives much better service than the catalogue.

Baird and Lisa Guigon Shinberger and their two children vacationed at Virginia Beach this summer. Lisa is Vice-President and helping to organize a new alumnae club in Alexandria. Baird has finished one of his three years of studying for the ministry and is acting rector of a nearby church.

Marie Bemis Hoar has just become the mother of her second daughter. I'm sorry not to know the newcomer's name or birthday. Maria also has one son.

Anne Gochnauer had a grand visit with Nora Lee Antrim at Squaw Lake, New Hampshire, this summer. Anne and her mother have an antique shop in Upperville, Virginia. (Shopping tip!)

Peg Harding Kelly has two girls, aged 11 and 5. Her husband is with DuPont and they now live in Birmingham. Wish I'd known that when I was there this summer!

Jo Kluttz Ruffin lives in Durham where she has been terrifically active with the Junior League for two years.

Sue Tucker Yates says having four children is loads of fun. The whole family thoroughly enjoys Johnny, who will be a year old in October.

Lois Mellroy Cooper has been in Colorado since 1945 when George returned from overseas. He is practicing law now. They have one son, Langdon, aged 6. Lois says she would love to see any alumnae who might come to Fort Morean.

Don't forget, the ALUMNAE NEWS for the rest of this year goes only to those who have contributed to the Alumnae Fund—so get out your checkbooks! You wouldn't want to miss these fascinating columns, would you?

Class Secretary: Sally Reahard, 5525 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis 8, Indiana.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George Writer, Jr.), 21 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York.

The drought has been hard on our crop of news items! At the deadline I find the harvest is no more than four postal cards, from a heavy planting earlier in the season. However, this is a gratifying return since they are from some of our long, long lost!

Elizabeth Thomason Griffin appeared from Chicago (South Chicago, that is) with the report that her daughter, Libby, is 12 and her son, Emory, is 10. Tommy must still be going strong; she is now President of P.T.A. among other things.

I wrote to Lisle Turner in Lakeland, Florida, but in her answer she says that "Sewanee, Tennessee," is still the best address to reach her. Says she does a lot of skipping around but they have her forwarding address. She was there last year, teaching Chemistry in the University. At the moment she is in Nashville and claims to have no definite plans for the immediate future. Emilie has been traveling with her husband, but has not seen any other S.B. gals. I think you all ought to know that Lisle is busy in her spare time knitting sweaters, sox, mittens and caps to send to European children. Says she uses all the wool she can get her hands on, so let's see what we can dig out for her.

I guess Dorothy Zartman Zaenglein is forever doomed to ride the caboose of all mailing lists! I am glad to say that we did find her there bobbing along with an annex behind carrying her three offsprings, Helen Rae, aged 13, Joanne, aged 11, and David, aged 6. When she wrote they were planning a month's vacation at Sea Island, Georgia.

Eunice Watters Coolbangh wrote from her home in Fayetteville, New York, stating that she and her family were going to take a trip through the New England states this summer. Her little girl Sara Ann is 3½, and her boy not quite 2, so I imagine mama had her hands full on the excursion. For fun, Eunice says she likes bridge, golf and swimming, when she can sneak in same.

I am just back from a month in Leland, Michigan, and haven't gotten my wits together for city life. Spent those lazy days doing very little but visiting my old friends and lying on the beach. Painted a few water-colors for the Village Shop there which has foisted them upon the summer trade for several years.

See you in December, with more news, I hope. Allow me to remind you that any size contribution to the Alumnae Fund will bring you this publication four times a year. Only the October issue is sent to the complete Alumnae list.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA COOKE (Mrs. Frederick W. Rea) 650 Bexley Avenue, Marion, Ohio.

My apologies for missing my report the last two quarters but a lot of sickness plus the no-help situation cut into my already tull routine. However, things are looking up now and I'm grateful for the prompt reply that many of you made to my belated cards.

A note from Nancy Worthington included the following interesting news from her camp season "entering the last week of camp—with play on Tuesday, horseshow and operatta Wednesday, final camp fire Thursday, banquet Friday and 300 people and baggage out on Saturday—thus ending a fine camp season." What a project Nancy has undertaken; but from all outside reports—a most successful one.

Marjorie Webb Maryanov has taken up golf again. She finds she is using up lots of energy and getting slow results. Sounds like myself when 1 try and beat my children at Ping Pong.

Helen Sims Mellen has been vacationing at Sea Girt, New Jersey. She and son Johnny met Ginny Quintard Bond and two sons in New York for lunch one day and later they took in the Statue of Liberty. A card from Ginny agrees with Helen—that it was strenuous but well worth it—except for the climb to the crown—which is where the elevator leaves off.

Last spring Helen had lunch with Natalie Roberts Foster and husband and later "Split" Clark paid her a brief visit.

I learned from a friend here that Natalie and Walter are back in Ohio—living in Wilmington, which is near Wright Field, where Walter is no doubt continuing his experiments for the army. My friend had run into Natalie in Springfield, Ohio, where both were attending a Girl Scout Training Course.

Polly Swift Calhonn keeps busy with her four children but still manages to find time to grow her own fruits and vegetables for freezing purposes. Lucky girl—with rising food prices—but limited experience tells me that it takes more than luck to accomplish such things.

Peronne Whittaker Scott writes that her family is thriving and so happy to be united again. However, since Bob was still travelling last winter, Perry took up shorthand in order to fill her free hours. At present she helps teach it at the local business night school and finds the job most interesting.

Josephine Gibbs DuBois' baby, whose arrival I reported in a recent issue, is now 17 months old and with the two older boys makes quite a perfect family. Jo and her busband bought an old stone house in a little town, Monacasy Station, located 20 miles from Reading. They love their farm and Joncer tires of the view from her windows which consists of rolling farm land and mountains.

Living in the same vicinity is Jane Bikle Lane, who has recently moved from Rittenhouse Square, Philadelphia, to Germantown. She and John own their home and are located across from the Germantown Cricket Club, where they can keep active in sports when inclined.

Living quite close to Jane is Katherine Knerr Angell's mother, who gives Jane frequent news of Kitty. At present Kitty lives in Ardmore and has three children.

Last February Jane ran into Helen Lawrence Vander Horst at the alumnae tea; and they discovered that their homes were just a few blocks apart. According to Jane, Helen looks wonderful, has stayed slim and three children have made no dent in her energy.

Jean Countryman Presba writes that all is well with her family after a hectic spring. She and Bill and daughter, Paula, enjoyed a vacation in Northern Minnesota this summer and it proved a particularly good rest for Jean as it was her first time away from her 15 months old child, who now weighs 26½ pounds and is wonderfully healthy and strengous.

Virginia Quintard Bond sent me a card from Dennisport on Cape Cod, where she and Ed have been summering with the two boys. Ted will be in the third grade this year and Whit in the first, and Ginny has involved herself in three new projects, all with the title Education Committee—one with the Community Fund, another the League of Women's Voters and thirdly, the Junior League.

Ellen Eskridge Sanders spent five weeks this summer with her family in Amherst, Virginia, while her husband attended the International Trade Conference at Geneva, Switzerland. Ellen could have accompanied, had it not meant taking her 7-year-old out of school. She and Polly Cary Deu Woodson enjoyed taking their children to the Sweet Briar lake—where Ellen's son learned to swim.

Saw quite a bit of Mary Stewart Kelso Clegg early in the summer. She had just gotten a new Ford station wagon and she and her mother and Carolyn were planning to spend July and August in Boyview, Michigan. It Joe could get a few weeks off, he and Stewart were going to Canada and the Clegg's summer place at Black Island. Since Joe is travelling most of the time and only temporarily settled in Baltimore, Stewart has decided to make Ohio headquarters and is considering remodeling a lovely old farm house on one of the Kelso farms near Xenia. Carolyn will attend the Grier School, near Pbiladelphia, again this year.

Mary Shelton Clark, '29, and George paid us a "flying visit" in their er-coupe last spring. They were here less than 24 hours but we managed to do a lot in that time, Mary enjoyed seeing Charlotte Coles Friedman (ex-'30) and her husband and daughter, Toni, who live out from Troy in a charming farm house which Charlotte and her father remodeled several years ago.

I have had a pleasant summer—Shep and Skippy went to Wisconsin for two weeks fishing in July and my mother came up from Chattanooga and stayed with Jane and myself. Later, Shep and I went to a near-by lake for a week while Jane was in camp and Skippy was with his grandparents.

Originally, we had hoped to go to Maine on our vacation and I had had some extensive correspondence with Milo Bates Crawford ('27) whose lodge at Boothbay, Maine, sounded most attractive. Due to having vacation time cut short we had to find a place nearer home—but I am still looking forward to including Lake-View Lodge in my itinerary next summer. The high spot of my summer was a recent visit from Agnes Cleucland Sandifer and Polly Woodward Hill. Aggie had brought her children out to Frankfort, Kentucky, to visit Bill's family and she managed to get to Cincinnati for a few days and she and Polly spent a day and night with me, We nearly wore ourselves out catching up on the news since the three of us had not been to either since our senior year.

Aggie had visited Martha McCowan Burnett, ex-'31, in Greensboro last spring. Martha has three children and lives near Mary Lynn Carlson King. They had luncheon there one day and Aggie was most attracted to the Swedish murals in Mary Lynn's hall. These were authentic copies of scenes from the Swedish village in which Dr. Carlson was born. Aggie also saw Cynthia Vaughan, who formerly held a job with Prince Matchabelli Cosmetics in New York. Aggie spent a day with Hazel Stamps, '32, at Hendersonville, North Carolina, Later, she took her daughter, Prudence, and Martha Burnett's little girl to Sea Island, Georgia, for a ten-day vacation.

Polly sees Jane Muhlberg Halverstadt and Mary Huntington Harrison, '30, in Cincinnati occasionally. In fact, Jane was meeting Polly and Aggie for luncheon the day they left here. I would like to have been in on that session, but circumstances prevented my leaving home.

I know all of you join me in extending our sympathy to Martha McCouan Burnett, whose father died quite suddenly in Macon, Georgia, this summer.

A card from Margaret Ferguson Bennett written March 9th, mentioned that she is still Secretary to the Dean of Olivet College on a part-time basis, also that the college had had a visit from Archibald MacLeish.

A card from Toole Rotter Mullikin written last February told me of her many activities. First Vice President and Publicity Chairman of Garden Club of Winter Haven, Florida, also Co-Director of District 5 of the Florida Federated Garden Club, President of Church Guild, and most active in tennis. She and her husband enjoyed two weeks vacation east last summer and fall, the latter trip occurring in October when Marshall was an usher in a wedding in Williamsburg, Virginia—at old Bruton Parish Church.

A card in April from Naomi Doty Stead announced the arrival of Janet Merry Stead an March 18, weighing in at five pounds fourteen ounces. They have a boy eight years old.

Class Sceretary: WANTED!

Fund Agent: ALICE WEYMOUTH (Mrs. Frank McCord) 147-37 Beech Avenue, Flushing, New York.

1933

Class Secretary: Anne Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

The class will be distressed to hear of the death of Enna Frances Brown Batsell last June. At that time I wrote her husband expressing our sympathy at his double loss—the death of his beloved wife Enna and his baby daughter. Enna Frances will be greatly missed by all who had the privilege of knowing her.

Jo Rucker Powell's third daughter, Mary Lewis, was born July 1. She is angelic and the Powells wouldn't trade her for all the boys in the world. Lewis and Jo are still looking for a satisfactory house but are fortunate enough to be living with Jo's parents at the present time.

Mary Lankford lives in Washington and has been working in the law business for six years. Helen Martin works in the laboratory of an industrial plant 23 miles from her home. Sounds like a lot of commuting. Helen had a letter from Jacqueline Billard who is teaching in the Friends School in Baltimore, and she has also heard from Marcelle Dominique Perrot.

Barbara Cawley Wilson, an ex-'33, sends us news for the first time and we are delighted to hear from her. After leaving college she went to art school for 2½ years and then was married. Barbara is busy with her family of two red-haired children and her husband. Her son is 14 and her daughter 9. It was grand to hear from her at last.

Elizabeth Gray sent me a newsy card about herself and other exes. She is still assistant secretary of the Chesapeake Corporation of Virginia, where she has been ever since school. Inky Olsson divides her time between West Point, New York City, and Virginia. Elizabeth's cousin, Marietta Derby Garst and her family moved back to New York after about 10 years in Buenos Aires. Elizabeth saw Mary Spalding Osterman not so long ago en route to their cottage at Clay Bank in Gloucester from their home ir. Richmond.

Virginia Alford Johnston and her family (four children) have just moved from Glendale, Ohio, to Louisville, Kentucky.

Betty Burgess Poppell writes that her daughter Patty is far enough in school to be planning her courses to fit the Sweet Briar entrance requirements.

Marjorie Burford Crenshaw has been elected by the Alumnae Council to fill one of its vacancies of two unexpired terms. She will serve through June 1948.

Gerry Mallory has breathed a sigh of relief after her four years of generous service as Alumnae Fund Chairman. The task of organizing class agents and keeping records of all contributions to the Alumnae Fund is not a small one and Gerry has given tirelessly of her time and strength. She played tennis through July and August, the Jersey and Long Island circuit, and had fun traveling about and staying with friends. She officiated at the Wightman Cup Matches and the Nationals at Forest Hills, Mary Buick has been home in Birmingham, Michigau since Easter. She landed in San Francisco the last day of March after long service overseas in the American Red Cross. She talked to Elizabeth Giesen Lindsay on the phone while in San Francisco. Since Mary's return to the states she has taken a trip to Canada and planted a good size vegetable garden.

Nothing startling happens to me. This summer Mother and I took a delightful three-week trip north, including a week on our beloved Upper Saranac in the Adirondacks. Saw Gerry Mallory and Hetty Wells Finn. Hetty, her husband, son James, and daughter Binie had just returned from a paleontological expedition near Hudson, New York. They found, I believe, about 2,000 fossils. James is deeply interested in fossils and keeps Hetty and Mac busy studying geology to try to keep up with him. Hetty and the boys visited at Sweet Briar earlier in the summer.

These classmates are still lost and we should appreciate any clues about their present addresses:

Alice Martin (Mrs. Thomas R. Cooper); Elizabeth Selden (Mrs. Edward Stainbrook); Mary Rose Taylor (Mrs. Severt A. Anderson, Jr.); Ethel M. Cameron (Mrs. Allen C. Smith, Jr.); Kathlean Carmichael (Mrs. George R. Mather); Mary Alice Durham (Mrs. William Ellis); Ruth Einhart; Annette Enderly (Mrs. Henry T. Birgel); Jeanne Harmon (Mrs. Lloyd Weisberger); Mabel Hickman (Mrs. John M. Flaitz); Eleanor Hottenstein (Mrs. Richard B. Foster); Catherine Kells (Mrs. R. O. Furlong); Janet McGregor (Mrs. Talbot Curtin); Eleanor Niggli (Mrs. F. A. Tyler); Martha North (Mrs. John V. Pollitt); Mildred Rahm (Mrs. Frederick MacDonald); Isabel Scott (Mrs. Claude L. Bowen, Jr.); Dora Tracy (Mrs. A. G. Ridgely); Virginia Vogler; Mary Jane Walne (Mrs. Whitfield H. Marshall); Sarah Zoller; Patricia Ireland (Mrs. Robert F. Hall, Jr.); Alice E. Smith (Mrs. Barney T. Class Secretary: MARJORIE LASAR (Mrs. E. R. Hurd, Jr), 425 North Hanley Road, St. Louis 5, Missouri.

Fund Agent: JEAN SPRAGUE, 1910 Kalorama Road NW, Washington 9, D. C.

Starting east and working due west, Lib Scheuer Maxwell writes of spending an evening last spring with Ruth Myers Pleasants and her husband in New York. Ruth's trip to Bermuda this summer was cancelled when they had a chance to move to a larger apartment. Lib keeps busy taking care of young John and Liza and working in the Children's Chest Clinic at Bellevue Hospital. Boonie Wood Stookey vacationed like mad; took her boys to Hinsdale, Illinois, and Spring Lake, New Jersey, and then she and Don went alone to Chatham on Cape Cod for two weeks. Mrs. Raymond visited her in September.

A card from Mitzi last May reports that she was at Ann Robinson's Sunshine Terrace, Croton-on-Hudson, New York.

Martha Lou and family spent the summer in Princeton, thusly: "I have engaged in Operations House-Guest . . . to lure people into coming and getting acquainted with my husband and daughter. Julie is a sophisticated lady of four months who is full of blandishments. Makes us laugh at how little social contribution we expected from her until she could talk. Our feeling now is that four months is probably the prime of life and the rest of the life span is a gentle decline from there."

Julie Sadler deColigny writes from Ben Air that she and Calvert have bought a cottage and she functions constantly as cook and bottle-washer. Julie did a bang-up job as Fund Agent and I know you join me in wanting to give her another merit badge to add to her large collection for good works.

Jackie went home to Alabama in September with her brood, her first visit in two years. She wrote of going out to school to picnic and swim and of visits with Sue Johnston Simpson and the Watts sisters when they were in Lynchburg.

Bonny McDonald Hatch writes of peace and quiet in Muncie since the Army turned them loose. Eleanor Alcott Bromley went to Canada in August and is in the throes of getting small Anne ready for her debut into the educational world. Helen Hanson Bamford gave me the good news that son Bobby's eye is better.

Tacky Williams McCollum and family bought a house in Springfield last January where they are happily settled. Betty Carter Clark in Pasadena has moved again and seems pleased with the present. She sees Eleanor Cooke Esterly from time to time and was visited last winter by Mary Nelson Becker. Cookie spent the summer in San Marino with side trips to Lake Arrowhead and Sequoia National Park. The Esterlys plan to go to a medical meeting in Chicago in October and then to visit her family in Topeka.

Rhea went to the west coast on business for the mouth of August and the children and I made our annual jaunt to the country complete with dog, cat, and bicycles. We looked a bit like Okies when packed but managed to make it there and back. I hear the school bells ringing with something akin to joy or am I being a very unnatural mother? We all keep well and hope you all do the same.

Many thanks to those of you who answered my postals. Remember this is the only issue you will receive unless you contribute to the Alumnae Fund! So, back up our Alumnae Fund and give generously to our college.

Chicky Gregory was fortunate enough to acquire a summer sublet in Cambridge, Mass. She is just a step from the library, an essential, as she is "struggling" with her thesis for her Doctor's Degree. Chicky adds,

"You know Lucille Scott Knoke has another child—three boys and one girl now!"

Katic Niles Parker writes most enthusiastically about her wonderful family. Her youngest, John Wells, is almost a year old. Katie's theory is "that he is so constantly impressed by what the other three children are doing, that it's going to take some time for him to get around to doing anything bimself." She plans to take her diughter, Anne, on a trip to Sweet Briar this fall for her seventh birthday and adds, "I can't think of anything else to give her that I would enjoy as much. Besides she still goes half-fare!"

Dodie Burrill Walker, who is living in New York, visited the Parkers. "My children seemed instinctively to know her almost as well as I do and we sandwiched a good deal of conversation in amongst other less interesting domestic activities."

Katie sees Margaret Robertson Densmore whose husband teaches at Belmont Hill School.

La Donobne McCormack and Katie have a somewhat "sporadic" correspondence checking upon each other's methods for managing a lot of children. The McCormacks spent the summer at their cottage at Elkhart Lake, Wisconsin, Jimmy, the oldest, has learned to swim and dive, the other three paddle around.

Mary Knauff Ghesquiere is now in Pensacola with her aviator husband, a Lieutenant Commander in the Navy. She says, "We don't know where we will be sent from here—could be anywhere from Atlantic City to the Philippines." The Ghesquieres have a daughter, Mary, one year old.

Nancy Brasuell Holderness has a new daughter, Nancy Duval, making two of each in the Holderness family, Congratulitions! Maybe it would be a good idea, Nancy, to start a four way correspondence with Scotty, Katie and La! I know you will all be sorry to learn that Nancy's mother was killed in an automobile accident in March.

Congratulations are in order for Abigail levnick Liebowitz whose son, Bruce Elliott, was born in August, Abby's other son, Stevie, is three. Abby and her family are living in Brooklyn in a large apartment which they were fortunate enough to acquire recently.

Peggy Huvley Range is now living in Tryon, N. C. "My activities, at the moment, are almost entirely centered around the running of a large servantless house and taking care of my two daughters, Cartoll (8) and Harriet (6)." Peggy recently drove to Greenville, Tenn., to see Arnold Suseng Jones who has two sons, John IV (5) and Alex (1 month).

Cabby Mitchell Ravenscroft proves my point. If one is sufficiently persistent with penny postals, eventually one receives a reply. Thanks, Cabby! She has two children, Sparky (7½) and Lucille (3½). Cabby and Kent spent two weeks this summer in Denver and vicinity. They rode the ski tov (longest in the world) in Aspen, Col. Cabby states, "it was wonderful and really just 25 much fun as in the winter."

Mary Virginia Camp Smith wants to know how I have the patience to manage a whole bunch of children when "my one little girl wears me to a frazzle." 'Tis simple enough, Mary Virginia, when they are not enly not yours but you only have to cope a few hours each day. Mary Virginia adds, "To get down to vital statistics: one husband and one daughter, Mary Lindsay, who will be 2 in September."

Mary Virginia, while in Norfolk, saw Marjorie Wing Todd who has a little giri (4). Yvonne Decker Boomsliter, who was married a year ago, is at Cornell where hel husband is teaching in the English Department and Callie Furmss Wolfe is now in Atlanta

Syd Millar Baker wrote from Philadelphia. She has two girls, Judith (4) and Deborah (10months) who "seem to be able to keep me busy." Syd sees Betsy High Gregg who had her second boy in May.

Martha Anne Hartey Gwinn took me literally about answering a la postal and wrote three. Many thanks! The Gwinns spent three weeks at Cape May with their three offspring. "I know that the hotel was glad when the three weeks were up since, during the course of our stay, we collected two turtles and one hop toad. We finally persuaded the boys to part with the turtles which were returned to their natural habitat but the toad is still lost in the precincts of the Chalfonte."

Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott was at Bay Head, N. J., during September with her three boys. Pinkie writes, "I've had my nose to the grindstone hanging wall paper and painting and fighting weeds in the garden. . . . 1 had a grand visit to college over commencement. It is so much fun to go back when we have work to do. The Barkers are in France. . . . Lillian Cabell Gay came out to our farm to see us. She is back at the Mayo Clinic working in the office there while lier husband is a resident."

Alva Root Bound and her three were at Fishers Island for the summer. Alva says, "It is a real children's paradise."

Alma Martin Rotnem spent the summer at Madison, Connecticut, where she took care of a friend's child as well as her son, Ricky.

Phoebe Pierson Dunn has recently had her third, Tristam Dunn XI! The Dunns have bought a house in New Canaan, Conn.

Dody Risk Curwen is living in Brevard, N. C. Her son, James Endicott, is four. Dody occasionally sees Marion Taylor Brawley who is living in Greenville, S. C.

After a summer at Teachers College, Columbia University (1 now have 9 credits toward a master's degree but have 'til 1957 to acquire the other 23) I'm looking forward to being at the day school.

As I will be fully occupied, few postals will be forthcoming so I'm depending on you all to write me while the children are sleeping or at school. If I remember correctly, Mrs, Wailes taught us in sociology that the college graduate averaged ½ a child. Congratulations class of '36! You've certainly upset that apple cart!

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 804 Osage Avenue, Bartlesville, Oklahoma,

You will all have to bear with me, for this first letter at least, as being the "newsgatherer" of '37 is quite a responsibility. It's tun though to hear from you—and will be even more so if you all cooperate and answer the cards. I tried this time to send them to everyone for whom I have an address, but henceforward I'll write you in cross-sections, trying over a year to contact everyone. But please if you have news, volunteer it—don't wait for a push!

From all the cool vacations enjoyed this summer, you must be ready for a strenuous winter! Nancy Nalle Lea and family were in Maine during August, after spending July in Charlotte where she saw all the local Briarites, their homes and their offspring. Ellie Snodgrass Park and son, Houston, were also in Maine for several weeks. She sees a lot of Jane Collins Corwin, who has taken up golf in a big way, and Jackie Cochran Nicholson. Jackie and Chink planned to vacation at Virginia Beach.

Terry Shaw housepartied in Roaring Gap with Polly Lambeth Blackwell and planned trips to the North Carolina shore and to New York. Incidentally, aren't we '37's puffed up tu be able to claim the Alumnae Secretary! Polly has seen Barbara Fish Schiebel, '38, and reports that Durothy Thomas Upton, ex '38, is planning to build a home across the road from her in Winston. Polly's older daughter, by the way, starts school this Fall. Make you feel old?

Marie Walker Gregory admits to the hoary-headed sensations; she's to be matron of honor for her cousin Anne Walker, '45, when not so long ago she was flower girl in Anne's mother's wedding! Marie has seen Mary Petty Johnston Bedell '40 and Kitty Lorraine Hyde, ex '36.

May Weston Thompson had a wonderful but strenuous six weeks at Cape Cod with Sid Gort Herpers and their two sons each.

From all reports Peter Dyer Sorenson and Sev had a wonderful European trip, visiting London, Paris, Denmark, Stockholm and with a week in Norway, Sev's native land. Peg Cruiksbank Dyer is in her own home at last, in Atlantic Highlands, and from the list of her activities she's the same Peggy—lots of guests, sailing, swimming, tennis, and horse races! Dorothy Prout Gorsuch reports much the same kind of summer, plus canning and organizing a community supper for 150 on her lawn. Such ambition!

Molly Gruber Stoddart vacationed in Vermont and New Jersey. Her broken leg—husband Jack inadvertently backed the car into her!—has recovered enough for golf but "still doesn't match." She says that Biddy Sicard Locke spent the summer in Massachusetts.

Becky Donglass Mapp had a week-end in New Jersey in June but is pretty confined with her daughters, 5 and 2.

Frances Johnson Finley is another enthusiastic golfer—self-defense against being a golf widow! She says her mother sees a lot of Jessie Rose Harvin at the dock where Mr. Johnson and Mr. Rose keep their boats.

Anne Lauman Bussey drove to California for a visit while Don took a course for Reserve Officers at Fort Sill. Her new home and yard keep her busy. And speaking of new houses, Isabel Olmstead Haynes reports they have the land and a well toward same. Who knows—she may someday have the house too! Her boys are flourishing. Nat Hopkins Griggs says her two daughters keep her "rooted in domesticity."

It was grand to hear from Marion Leggett Currie after so long a time. Her sister Yvonne had seen Dina Newby Adams and Martha Hardesty O'Shea on a recent Denver jaunt and reported them both fine. Marion's little boy, who was 2 in September, has been in the hospital since May. We all hope he is completely well by now.

Sue Mattheu's Powell is highly elated because she and Wally have at last found a place to live in Dallas, a new house not yet completed. She hopes to be in it by October and unpack all those wedding presents she hasn't seen in ages! Vera Searcy McGonigle hasn't been so lucky. Mac, with the Humble Oil Company, has been transferred to Dallas, but with no house yet found, Vera remains in San Antonio with their daughter. I'm hoping these two get settled p.d.q. so Charles and I can go down for a week-end. It isn't too far from Bartlesville and I'm pining tor some S.B. chatter. Heaven help the husbands when we do get together!

Jean Gilbert Moister is busy raising three children, a daughter 7½ and boys, aged 1½ and 2½—a full-time job. She also does Junior League and church work.

I have nothing personal to report beyond a visit from my family in July and a hot (typical Oklahoma) summer spent in front of a fan. I hope soon to be able to get down to some concentrated sewing, knitting, and house-cleaning.

Remember, this is the only issue of the Alumnae New's you receive unless you give to the Alumnae Fund. The New's is a wonderful way to keep up with what your classmates are doing—provided, of course, you let me know so I can report on it—hint! So please, all of you, contribute to the Fund immediately.

I sent out an urgent SOS to each of you for news, but so far only 21 of 78 have replied. That's not such a good percentage, would you say, considering that all you had to do was rip off the perforated post card, write a few sentences and drop it in the nearest box. I was particularly anxious to send you a stimulating letter for this year is the year—our 10th reunion year! Be sure to get your ducks in a row and plan to be on hand this next June for a rooting-tooting get-together! We promise you a wonderful time.

To those of you who were good enough to reply—my everlasting thanks. You can't imagine how I love being the middleman, so here goes with the latest news:

Dot Thomas Upton writes from Winston-Saiem that she, Luther, and little Bette had a good time at Virginia Beach where they saw Lottie Lewis and Gurley Carter Davis. Lottie is working in New York, and Gurley lives with her Naval husband and three lovely children on Porter Road at Annapolis. Dot and Luther have bought a lot across from Polly Lambeth Blackwell and family, where they hope to build in a few months.

A card from Barbara Fish Schiebel tells me of two new babies. Jane ("Shanghai") Gregory Marrow had a boy in July. Nancy McCandlish Prichard and Ed have a daughter, Helen, and are living at Charlottesville where Ed is finishing law school and Nancy teaching girls' tennis. Their address is St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Barbara and Max spent July at Roaring Gap, N. C., a lovely mountain retreat, where they have a home.

I know that all of you will be deeply shocked and saddened to hear the news which has just reached me—of Marion Brown Zaiser's husband's tragic death last February. He was a colonel in the Air Force, had just returned from overseas and, after six weeks of perfect leave with Brownie and their two sons at the beach, was killed instantly when his plane exploded on a routine flight. Our thoughts and sympathy go out to you, Brownie, in your sorrow.

Kay Hoyt writes that she has taken "time out" from her job in New York for a much-needed rest. Louise Bailey McDermott is substituting till Kay's return.

From Washington comes a grand letter from Betty Dail Wilson. She is at last beginning to feel at home there—it looks like a permanent residence—but she did enjoy going home to Cincy in August. She had a grand reunion with Dotty Sclbert Smith, who has two sons and is in the process of building a home. Betty also saw Dotty Mather Goyert who has three children, and she and husband Jack are in the process of fixing up a semi-farm which they just bought.

Ruth Inge Swihart and Betty bumped into each other recently in Washington. Ruth lives there also and has three children.

Dot Evans Haveron writes of her new son, Billie, born January 4. That makes a girl and two boys for the Haverons. She spends her time trying to keep them and the house in order.

M. J. Miller Hein agreed with me that the last newsletter was a sorry one—so hastens to tell me her bit. They are still living in Bayside, Long Island, and longing for the wide open spaces. In the meantime, they're a happy bunch, John four and Judith one. M. J. is playing tennis now that she has more leisure and "before she gets too old to enjoy it."

A card from Billy Herzer Elickenlooper tells me she and Bo spent two weeks at Myrtle Beach and then to Michigan. Her days are full with three tots and fall looming heavily in view! She saw Lloyd Lanier Elliott recently.

Latest bride is Lucile Sergeant who married Earl Arthur Leonard of Woodward, Oklahoma, on May 31, at a lovely noon wedding in Boston Corners, the home of her parents. "Toto" sent me an account of the wedding accompanied by a grand letter. She and Earl have an apartment at 400 Broadway, in Paterson, N. J., and now that she's not working at Wright Aeronautical Corporation, she's mighty anxious to see her old Briarite friends. Give her a ring, gals!

Another bride, but of what date I don't know, is Betty Bowley who is now Mrs. Frank Phillips. She and her husband who manages the new airport, are living nine miles out of Quincy, Illinois. She and Kitty Gardiner Stephenson ran into each other at the beauty parlor, and "recognized each other even with our hair up."

From the ranks of the long-unheard-frombut-not-forgotten group came a letter from Florence Caven Crosnoe. She and Ralph are back in Texarkana, Texas, from Terrell, Texas, where he was stationed during the war. Ralph is in the flying business, and does crop-dusting, and though they haven't had a real vacation she is able to take off with her husband for whatever place his duty calls. They go to Dallas quite often and have seen opera and operettas there. After leaving Sweet Briar Florence studied music, organ and piano for several years but since they moved during the war she was unable to keep it up. It was grand hearing from you, chum, so please do it again!

Another "flying wife" is Mary Jemison Cobb Hulse. I'm hoping to see them pop up in Charlotte some time soon. Connie McDuffie Turner goes from Mobile to Birmingham to see Cobbie, and vice versa. Mary Thomson Ball, I understand, has returned from Europe, but when did she go and why? Cobbie says "hello" to everyone.

Mrs. Hastorf answered my card to Hope (thank you, Ma'am) with the report that the latter is still in Red Cross Overseas Service, now in Tokyo at the 49th General Hospital, mostly doing social service. She had been in southern Japan six months and hopes to be home early in 1948.

This from the Griffith Dodsons—"If you've read about neglected, dependent and delinquent children—that's ours. We've just survived our first political campaign. Thanks to luck, circumstances, breaks, and plenty of hard working friends, Grif was elected one of two Roanoke representatives to the Virginia House of Delegates. The radio coach was Martha Rector ('40), fresh out of radio school and full of good ideas." Congratulations and loads of luck, Molly T.

I'm like Babbie Derr Chenoweth—what has happened to Genie Whiteside Winton? Will somebody tell us? Babbie tells me she lost her mother last January and I'm sure you all join me in sending sympathy. She and Arthur love Birmingham where he is practicing medicine and she's housekeeping and nursing the children. They recently visited Arthur's family in Highlands, North Carolina. Last December she saw Jessie Silvers Bennett in Louisville, where the latter has bought a house. What address?

Vesta and children (Edward and Min Murray) spent the month of June at Ocean Drive Beach, where we just missed connections much to my disappointment. After that they went to Westhampton Beach for two weeks to visit her parents. She and Eddie have bought a house in Columbia.

Jo Happ Willingham and two sons were in the mountains of Georgia during August where Spain joined them on week-ends. In July she saw Virginia Cheatham Newton at Sea Island, also Mary Elizabeth Barge Schroeder. She recently received an announcement of Margaret Weimer Shepherd's son's arrival, but the birthday and details I don't know.

The class of 1968 looks pretty meager, what with all the little men arriving. Adele Leteber Harvey and Jon have announced the birth of their third son, David Westlake, on July 8. His brothers are Jonathan, Jr., four years old, and Stephen 212. Of course she's up to her neck in domestic duties.

Sarah Tomlinson Foscue, husband and 3-year-old son went to Ocean Drive Beach in South Carolina for a week, and spent another at Morchead City, North Carolina. Other than that she's been surviving the summer out at her apartment in High Point and looking forward not too eagerly to many community activities this Fall.

Howell Lykes Colton and family have meved again, this time to Wynnewood, Pennsylvania, address 829 Bowman Avenue. She fortunately found a grand house and has been getting settled in her new home and Richie (6) settled in school.

Lucy Taliaferro Nickerson as usual accommodated me with a note, some news of which I've already given you. Of herself, she says she and Charley have become very rural, living in the country, gardening, canning, insulating ,etc. Sounds mighty fine.

Of the Charlotte gang, consisting of Rilma Wilson Allen and myself, there's little news. Rilma and Bob have at last found a very nice apartment, the Monticello, on East Morehead Street, and will move in soon. They're quite thrilled, for since their wedding last December they've been with her family and naturally are looking forward to housekeeping on their own. Bob travels a lot for the electric company for which he works, and Rilma accompanies him frequently.

The Tates have no news, other than a week at the beach and a week in the mountains between Blowing Rock and Linville, North Carolina. Our family suits us perfectly, Caroline quite a lovely little lady, and John, a lazy, but wonderful baby. In other words we're mighty happy. Soon I assume a few winter duties to which I look forward with some trepidation, but that's good for one, I suppose.

Don't make me beg so hard for news after this. You see what I've done with a few cards, so why don't you all drop me a line soon! Best wishes to each of you. Make your plans now for our Tenth Reunion in June!

Class Secretary: BETSY CAMPBELL (Mrs. Robert S. Gawthrop, Jr.), R.D. No. 4, West Chester, Pennsylvania.

The summer has fairly ripped by and the thought of school and accompanying mental discipline makes me itch. My life seems to grow steadily more physical. One rushes from the dishes to the babe, garden vegetables to what - shall - we - have - for - dessert - tonight, and though it's all fun the liberal arts and educational panorama often looms only as an ideal one once chanced to meet. But did you see the results of a questionnaire on the sexes that were in the New York Times in mid-August? Women prevailed in every field. Then in the August 18 issue of Life, Geoffrey Gorer devoted much space in an article on the American Character, further proclaiming the woman's role in the U. S. today.

Janet Trosch has moved from her New York City address and left no forwarding address. Come across, Janet.

Diantha Clements died suddenly at her home in Boston June 3. She was assistant to Little Brown Co.'s publicity director. She started working for them in 1945, after holding a war job with the Polaroid Corporation, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Before that she was for three years women's assistant in the editorial department of the Schenectady Union-Star. Such news is startling and shocking, and I know you join me in extending our sincere sympathy to her family.

Harrie E. Hart, Jr., was born to Henriette Minor Hart May 9. James Wathen 3rd was born May 17 to Viola James Wathen.

Postal from Betty Frazier Rinehart, vacationing at her dad's camp in Canada, while Ted worked in the city. Everything generally honky dory.

Yvonne wrote you about Jean McKenney Stoddard in her June letter, but I'll brief you a little on daughter Anne's arrival. Born Thanksgiving Day in New York City. Johnny flew up for Christmas, and they all flew back together when their Nina was nine weeks old. She raves about their house and garden and the plentiful servants. John is Regional Traffic Manager for Ecuador and Colombia, and unfortunately seems to have to be both places at once. Life in Quito is extremely gay, and the pig-tailed Indians pattering along on the cobblestone streets in their bare feet are colorful and picturesque. Their house is a bit out of the center of the city, in a grove of eucalyptus trees, opposite a great snow-capped mountain. They're right on the equator, but at 10,000 feet up, so the weather is always perfect. They have a jeep to bounce over the Andes in, and take wonderful trips to Indian villages on market-days, Yvonne had added Diana Woodruff on August 21-8 pounds 11 ounces.

Additional news from Kay Richards De Lancey. She became the mother of Leora June 24, and has moved to a new home in Kcene, New Hampshire. New baby, new state, new house, and Bob is planning to have a new business. He is going to open his own men's clothing store in September and is madly busy with architects and contractors and rush trips to New York and Boston.

Attended a lovely announcement party of Virginia Wellford. He is Harold Sumner Farwell, and the wedding was scheduled for September 6.

Such a nice letter from Jane Parker Washburn. Her time is tremendously absorbed by the capers of Linda—isn't that a cute name?—two years old. They are in their own home in Plainville where Roddy's business is located. They're acquiring furniture, electrical equipment and all domestic paraphernalia by degrees, for they started from scratch. They were about to set forth for the shore with the Downs (Tready) to indulge in some lobster eating.

This is my farèwell letter. I think I've become increasingly dull, and I think everyone should have a crack at this job anyway. 'Twould facilitate the contact of more groups, and it's lots of fun revivifying relationships. I've loved hearing from you and hope that all communications don't cease and desist from this day forward. I'll be thinking of you before and after that moon comes over the mountain, and my sincere best wishes to you all. Can't tell you how I've enjoyed news garnering, and my tremendous thanks for your wonderful cooperation.

First on the list this time is a report on the reunion. Penny Lewis, Toppin Wheat, and I managed to drive over for Baccalaureate Sunday. We saw Ann Hauslein Potterfeld, Helen Sanford, Betsy Gilmer Tremain, Jean Buzby, Polly Peyton Turner, Pat Brightbill, Doris Ogden Mount, Mary Stone Moore Rutherford, Gigi Moomaw, Lucy Call Dabney, Laura Graves Powell, Betsy Chamberlain Burchard, Margaret Becker Schiltges, and various members of the faculty, staff, and other classes. Wish all of you had been there to join us.

Shirley Hauseman reports visits with Alice King and Betsy Park, who is now with the State Department.

More recent news included a communication from Frannie Boynton Drake, who rushed to answer my plea for aid. The Drake family have moved to Wilmette, Illinois, for an indefinite period. Carl is in the Chicago office of the same company. Frannie reports that both Sandy, 4, and Lee, 1½, are full of cnough mischief to keep their mother busy. From Frannie also came the news that Betty and Mary Brown both married St. Paul men and are living there, as is Alice Sweney. More news of Swede is lacking at present. Frannie saw Dobbie Wood Davis and her small daughter, "who is very winning," in New York.

Annie Hanslein Potterfield and her husband are just beginning his two-year stint in the army. At present they are in San Antonio, after which they depart for Washington to learn Tom's new station. Naturally their plans are quite indefinite at present.

From "Slug" Sanford, I hear that Elsie Diggs and Sam Orr, together with Marshall, 4, and Peter, 1½, have an apartment in what used to be an old mansion in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Sam is with the Duke Power Company, and Elsie "does a lot of Junior League work and other charitable work in addition to raising those two extremely charming children," says Slug.

Slug also reports that Sudie Clark Hanger, Bill, Libba, almost 4, Billy, 2½, and Johnny, 8 months, have the top half of a duplex in suburban Atlanta, where Bill is in the textile business. Sudie is another Junior Leaguer, and "she finds time to do more things in one day than any other three people could do in twice that time." She and the children went up to Greensboro and Morehead City for part of the summer and were delayed in Greensboro long enough to get Libba and Billy through the measles.

Martha Buchanan Wadsworth, Joe and their two little girls, Martha and Mary, have an apartment at the corner of 81st and Lexington in New York City. Joe is an eye surgeon as you may remember.

Betty Hanger is now living with her family in St. Louis and has been attending business school; she spent some time in Morehead City this summer.

Gigi Moomaw has relinquished her social service job of last spring and is now occupying a secretarial position with the Gulf Oil Corporation in Roanoke.

"Becky" Schiltges, Bill, and Beth are all very happy in an apartment in Indianapolis. They left the baby with Becky's parents when they came down for Reunion and the experiment was so successful that they are contemplating doing it again.

Jean Hedley Currie and her newly acquired husband, Jim, are now living in Southport, Connecticut, where Jim is in business with his brother.

Slug saw Dot Myers Morehead and husband Moose while she was in Winston-Salem there. She also saw Dot Malone Yates and Margie Troutman Harbin in Atlanta. Margie had just put her husband on the train for a Medical Convention, but Slug did meet Charlie Yates. Unfortunately she did not have a chance to meet Dot's little girl nor Margie's two sons.

After having expected to move to Philadelphia, Polly Peyton and Carol Turner are most pleased to find that they are staying in Norfolk, as Carol has just joined a new giant cruiser. They are particularly happy, as who would not be, at having a new apartment and a new car. Polly reports that Jeanne Sau yer Faggi is reportedly moving to Norfolk where her husband is to be connected with the William and Mary extension. I know that you will all be as sorry as I was to hear that Si Walke Rogers and her two daughters have had a long spell of illness this summer and will be glad to hear that all three are now much better.

From Phyl Sherman comes the news that she is now assistant buyer in the Fine Jewelry Department at Altman's—it's on the first floor so do drop in to see her. She says that Edith Syska has been working this summer and fall at a summer hotel in South Lee, Massachusetts, a job which she loves. She keeps books, etc.

I am back in Charlottesville getting ready to start another year at St. Anne's. This year I have graduated from a minute room which I had while the new wing was being built, to a beautiful room complete with fireplace in the Junior Dormitory, so drop in sometime; I'll even take yon for a ride in my new Crosley Convertible. Do write and help me out, and don't forget the Fund; let's have '42's name lead all the rest!

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govan P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland.

I am just back from the wilds of Nova Scotia and caught by an earlier-than-expected deadline—no time to send out P.C.'s this trip. I am especially sorry not to have all the scoops this particular time as this is the only issue which all of you receive, but go ahead, be a sport, gee-whiz; send in your contributions and take a chance on my digging up something later on.

I got a letter from nurse Brooks Barnes recently saying she was finishing work at the hospital in Honolulu towards the end of July. She planned to live at Waikiki and play around for about six weeks-seeing the other islands and doing things she hasn't been able to do because of the work. She expected to get home in the middle of September after a 10 day airplane trip via Los Angeles, Mexico City, Guatemala, Yucatan, Havana and Miami. And by the way, Brooks was still in Hawaii when Bob, young Terry, and "Tookie" Kniskern White arrived. Bob is from Honolulu so they have gone back there to live now that he is finished at Harvard Business School, Brooks said that Bob's father had got them a house and that no one should in any way feel the least bit sorry for Tookie. All in all I should say our old Fire Chief is completely sold on Hawaii!

When Brooks gets back to Boston she will find Fay Martin Chandler and Nancy Pingree Drake still there. Fay spent a good deal of the summer with the Chandlers in Nantucket where her little daughter has been recuperating from a seige of influenza menengitis. She was quite sick in the hospital early this summer, but is coming along nicely now, Fay says. "Ping" and Em took their vacation in St. Paul where they saw Franny Boynton Drake, Alice Sweeney, and Phoebe Succeey Woolley. This vacationing with the in-laws must be the thing to do among young marrieds—I also heard from Anne McJunkin Briber that she and Frank had gone to Charleston for their big 9 days.

The stork has revisited both Beth Dichman Smith and Camille Guyton Guething. The former's bundle from heaven is another boy, Ralph Grattan, born May 23, while Camille got a bit more variety with a girl this time. Her name, Avery Ann; born June 6. Camille and "Ouija" Adams Bush saw quite a bit of each other this summer in Blowing Rock where they were both vacationing.

1 received a letter from Frances Taylor Trigg who is still in Richmond where Locke will be going to school until January. She says Kitty Doar Jones and her husband are in Richmond now too. Also Anne Noyes very thoughtfully sent me several newspaper clippings on some ex '43s. They were about the birth of Anne Tweedy Ardery's third son, Joseph Lord Tweedy Ardery on July 11; the marriage of Louise Peak; and the engagement of Jane Norton. Louise was married on April 26 in Hawaii to Kenneth F. Spring of Newark, Ohio. He is being transferred to Guam so they will live there. Janie's wedding day is October 4 and her husband-to-be is Major Herbert Duncan, Jr., of Winchester, Ky. Jane has been working with the Carnegie Institution of Washington in D. C., and the Major is assigned to the Office of the Quartermaster in Washington. Anne also has unearthed Nancy McVay Marsteller who is now living in Richmond, Ky.

The rest of my news is completely New Yorky as I stopped there for a week on my way home. I stayed several days with Jane Findlay who is a supervisor in the bedspread and mattress (I think) department at Macy's. They seem to work her awfully hard, but she says at least it is never dull, as I can well imagine! Libby Corddry Jones had just moved back in town after summering it in cooler Morristown. Sally Bryan stopped by with her for a few days so we had a grand reunion what with Janie and Nancy Bean White along too. Sally has been working backstage with a summer theatre in New England, while Beanie, in her customary style, lias been promoted again—this time to Head of Foreign News Research for Life. Libby and I also by sheer chance bumped into Dodi Cheatham James. Neither one of us know it but she has been living there right around the corner from Libby since June. Frances Gregg Petersmeyer will be a New Yorker for a while too. She had expected to move to San Francisco, but Wrede changed jobs. He is now with I. H. Whitney & Co. They have bought a house in Bronxville, and after two trips to Memphis to get Frances' sister married off and her daughter christened they seem ready to really settle down at last. I learned that Muie Grymes is thinking of taking a job in Oregon, and that Annabelle Forsch is still doing free lance art work in N. Y. C. And that's about the extent of it. Keep me posted-and be newsworthy (which ain't hard, obviously. Just have a baby, be bubble gum queen or brush your hair and I'll devote at least a paragraph to you.)

Class Secretary: Connie Sui Budiono, Occupational Therapy Department, Box 181, Kennedy Veterans Hospital, Memphis 15, Tennessee.

Fund Agent: ELLEN B. DUVAL, 3211 Grove Avenue, Richmond 21, Virginia.

You'd think that deadlines would no longer bother me, but they still darken my life. Have much news, some old and some so new that it hasn't even happened!

Many of my gleanings are from Jane Rice McPherson who with husband Tom have been visiting Tom's parents here in Memphis. Made me feel years younger and nearly as light-hearted as in September, 1940, to see Jane. She is exactly as always. We sat on the McPherson's terrace, sweltered, and had a most satisfying gabfest, Alice Johnson Fessenden and Bill, with young daughter, Faith, will soon fly to Venezuela for a two-year stay in Caracas. Tee Tift Porter had a supper party for Jane and Tommy in Atlanta and Jane reports that Tee's small daughter is the image of her daddy and as winsome as they come. Mary Jane Brock is still in Switzerland, and Betty Haterty Smith in Athens, Georgia, while Alex finishes school. Betty Farinbolt Cockrill is in Florida. Elly LaMotte has kept so busy handling a thriving export business for her father's chemical company that we have had no news from her in three years, Sally Hollerith is with Gleno L. Martin in Baltimore and Anne Moore is still being a financial wizard at her Philly bank, Libby Vaughan in San Antonio will welcome Jane and Tommy at the beginning of their life there with USAMD this fall. When last heard of Sloan Hawkins was in Washington. Nancy Eagles O'Bannon is busy keeping Louisville on its social ear after a trip to Havana and a quiet summer vacation in Owensboro. She expects Bill and Millie Ltttleford Camm for a State Fair visit, and Bob and Ouija Adams Bush in November, Bob and Ouija stopped by Sweet Briar on a southern trek in August. Millie writes from Fort Thomas that their house has at last been completed and is such fun to live in. I'm dying to try their guest room. She and Bill vocationed in Chattanooga, Asheville, and at Pauly's Island.

Had a grand letter from Pat Whitaker Waters early this summer, telling all about their new white-washed brick home in Lutherville, her bouncing son, Johnny, and their latest pride and joy—a power lawnmower! Pat says that Jinny Griffith Morton's baby, Virginia Lee, II, is as dainty and ladylike and sweet as her mother.

We are rife with matrimony, recent and future. I keep hoping that our statistical allowance of married '44's won't fill up too soon. I am beginning to feel like part of a minority group though! On August 30 Dorothy Jean DeVore was married to Henry Thomas Platt, Jr., at the Riverside Presbyterian Church in Jacksonville. Virginia Curtis Hall was married to Carl Clement Teipel, Jr., at Christ Church in Glen Ridge on September 6. Eleanor Goodspeed's wedding to Lawronce Abbott is set for late September. I plan to take this in on a quick trip to New York and will report in full next time.

Treat of the century was a fat letter from Peg Gordon in Savannah. She is teaching freshman English and being Dean of Women at the branch of the University there at Hunter Field. Susan Somervell Griswold and John stopped in Savannah to see Anita Lippett and Peg. The three ex-WACs had great fun comparing respective Army careers. The Griswolds will settle in New York. Nita had a lovely home wedding in June to Thomas C. Clay, Lieutenant Commander, U.S.N. Peg and Ginny Hall were bridesmaids and the groom is Peg's first cousin, Nita and Tom are in Newport now where he is going to Line School. Peg says Nita is adding Navy terms to her Army doubletalk. Paulett Long and Guoner Taggert are back in Boston and Peg will probably see them on her early September pilgrimage to New York, Am so sorry our visits won't overlap.

Sally Skinner Behnke had a long holiday on her own this summer while Bob was in Alaska and young Carl with his grandma. She taught riding at a girls' camp (Shining Mountain) at Marion, Montana.

Our latest beau-to-be is John Milton Cutler, III, son of Jack and Helen Crump Cutler. Helen is in Macon at present. Toni Hart Moore has a little boy, age and name unknown to me. And Dotty Benttell Smith and Cal have a second son. By very roundabout paths comes news of progeny for Hazel Fellner Tuttle and Martha Falk Vallery—will these silent matrons send the vital statistics pronto. After all!

Have been hoping to see Marian Shanley Jacobs on one of her shopping trips in Memphis from Newport. We have had a phone call and several hasty notes but no meeting in the flesh. She attended her first Alumnae Council meeting in June and became well caught on all details there. She is the new Chairman of the Alumnae Fund and we all are proud.

Millie Brenizer Lucas was at Sweet Briar, too, for sister Irving's graduation. She and Shanley mostly exchanged details on infant care.

Have an old but meaty letter from Lulu Sadowsky that I still feel free to quote from since we both missed the June deadline. Much of Lulu's news was about Mary White Coleman Hollander's wedding. Lulu was bridesmaid. In and about Norfolk Lulu ran into Murrell Rickards, Rosie Ashby, and Mildred Faulconer, who is teaching down there. Anne Bowen, according to our New York reporter, is working like a fiend in the field of social work by day and night-clubbing it like a deb by night-and apparently not suffering from it at all. From my cloistered corner l sigh with envy, but don't think I could take it. At this point it wears me out just to read about it. Lulu herself still holds forth ir the magazine illustrating field-guided by the typical Luluvian motto-"Always put off till Monday what you could do on Saturday."

Another old and newsy letter is from Spookie Woods Williamson. Spookie too has come to the conclasion that "little did we know how peaceful were the college days, etc." in a most philosophical vein. She is fighting to retain the sight of her eye and putting up a brave and determined battle. Good wishes on this from all of us, Snookie. Snookie has also taken over the job of secretary of the Chicago area Alumnae Club. She works with this philosophy: "We are busily trying to draw out the alumnae—like teeth, and with the same amount of pain."

Second hand I learned that Barbara Duncombe had been to Chattanooga for Jane Williams' wedding. Sorry I don't have her married name! Dunc had a visit in Rome, Georgia, with Martha Lindsay.

There were two weddings of interest in the Chicago neck of the woods this summer. Louise Konsberg married William F. Noll in Jone. He was graduated from Washington and Lee June 6 after having spent three years in the Army, most of it in the CBI theatre. They went to the Poconos on their honeymoon. Franny Pettit also was married but as yet no details have come our way. Both were well attended by the Sweet Briar legion.

Goess that just about winds it up this time. I spent part of June in Iowa and Nebraska and have been steaming in Memphis ever since. While I have no personal housing problem, the Kennedy O.T. shop is crawling with plumbers, painters, electricians, carpenters, and a strange, nameless group of men who do things with slide rules and light meters. My part of the shop has retired with dignity to a small ex-kitchen and I limp on.

Please do contribute to the 1947-48 Alumnae Fund so you can hear more of all about everybody. Coming attraction: complete coverage of New York events!

Class Secretary: Martha Holton, 2318 Densmore Drive, Toledo, Ohio.

Fund Agent: AUDREY BETTS, 888 Park Avenue, New York 21, New York.

The activities of our class seem to be as widely spread as possible, with the lady of leisure, the careerist, and the housewife each having her share.

Our new class Fund Agent, Audrey Betts, is not exactly a lady of leisure but as yet isn't either of the other two. She is busy as cook and maid at home in New York. This fall she hopes to spend some time at Memorial Hospital where the work "fascinates" her. Just what kind of work does the fascinating will have to wait till Audrey writes again—no details!

Harriet Willcox and Perk Traugott climaxing a trip to Canada, were in New York City with me to welcome home the Queen Elizabeth in July. Perk's sister Patty, and my sister Mary Lou, were returning from a year of studying in Scotland and Switzerland respectively. Anne Dickson, recently back from studying in Paris, was among those at a party given by Marjorie Christian Schley for all the old group in New York that night.

At present Betty Gray is enjoying her first "real vacation" in years. She is now able to add O.T.R. to her signature as she received her diploma from the Philadelphia School of Occupational Therapy in June. She hopes to be able to use her knowledge in rehabilitation work this fall, but had no immediate plans. In August Betty took advantage of her vacation by taking a trip in New England with her family.

Dolores Fagg finally got her graduation present—a blue Buick convertible. Worth waiting for!

Louise "Petie" Cross works half days in a stock-broker's office. In May she took time off to visit Doe for a few days and Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill joined them for a day with her daughter, Kathryn.

Eugenia "Red" Etheridge stopped in Toledo for a few days on her way back to Long Island University. During the summer she externed in a hospital and loved it. Red said her first stitch put everybody else in stitches. This fall she begins her junior year at Long Island College of Medicine where she will "bring babies and all sorts of fascinating things."

Betty Grayson Geer and her husband, Bill, are living in Chapel Hill this year while he teaches there. Huldah Eden Jackson and Haller are back in Lexington after a visit to Shreveport this summer. Wodie Coleman Monaghan and her husband are now in Birmingham. Jean Ridler had a trip to Texas this summer and is back on the job in Bound Brook. Frances Bickers Pinnell keeps busy caring for her little girl, Anne, cocker spaniel Toby, and husband Buck who is still in law school. She spent part of August at the beach. Jane Thompson Sherrill has a little boy now and her husband, a dentist in the Navy, recently returned from overseas.

Jean Frances Portmann is to be married September 22 to David B. Allen in Cincinnati. Jean, one of our exes, holds degrees from the University of Cincinnati and Smith College. Mr. Allen served three years in the A.A.F. and graduated in June from Amherst College.

Peggy Jones was married in August to Malcolm R. J. Wyllie. She met him at Johns Hopkins while she was working on her master's degree and he was doing research. Mr. Wyllie graduated from South African College School in Capetown, S. A., and was a Rhodes School at Magdalen College of Oxford University where he received his Ph.D. During the war he was stationed in India with the rank of Lieutenant Commander in the Royal Navy. They went to England for their honeynoon and will live in Pittsburgh on their return. Carol Cox was one of Peggy's two attendants.

Antoinette LeBris Maynard went to France this summer for a two months vacation and visit with her family.

Franny Estes was married to "Buzz" Seibels. His sister, Tish, was May Queen at Sweet Briar in 1941. Petie Cross was an attendant at the wedding—Petie's sixth this year!

That's the extent of my news for now. I'll try to reach more of you by the time the next letter is due. Be sure to contribute to the Alumnae Fund so that you receive the next three issues of the Alumnae News.

1946

1947

Ciass Secretary: Sallie Bailey, 430 North Blount Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. Fund Agent: Frances Gardner, 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

All of you can envy me because I had all this news first, but I am dying to tell all!

Liz Abbot writes that she, Martha Smith, and Margy Redfern visited in Erie, Pa. Martha went on to camp and Liz and Margy to New York. Liz also went to Connecticut and Washington and she states that all this traveling was a continuation of her education as well as for pleasure. In September Liz began teaching fifth grade in the county school near Lynchburg.

Cynthia Bemiss spent the summer as a "Loafer—3/c," taking pleasure trips to New Haven, Virginia Beach, Greenwich, and Maine. Now she is "ready for anything"—specifically, secretarial school. Janet Amilon Wagner visited Cynthia on her honeymoon trip to Virginia Beach and Williamsburg.

Anne Beth Beard was married June 24 to Harry T. Eubank, Jr. They went south for their honeymoon.

When Eleanor Bosworth wrote she was being visited by Sarah Bryan and Meredith Slane. Sara writes that they had a royal and wonderful time. September 23 will see Bozzie at Cornell where she will study American Government and Diplomacy and skiing.

Anne Brinson was married June 21 and went to Canada on her wedding trip. Since July she and Jim have been settled in Greenville, S. C. She says the domestic life suits her to a T and she is doing volunteer social work for the Child Welfare Division of the Department of Public Welfare.

Sara Bryan sent lots of news. She was to be maid-of-honor in Katy Street's wedding September 6. Katy's engagement was announced in June and by now she should be Mrs. Alfred D. Sharp, Jr. Mr. Sharp is a student at Vanderbilt University. Sara said she was going up for Gene Ray's wedding on September 13 too, along with Stu McGuire, Ginna Walker, and Peggy Robertson. Gene married John Bolling Minor.

Judy Burnett took a few trips this summer, was in a swimming meet and planned to start work September 8 as a technical librarian for "Experiment, Inc." Bizzy Caldwell loafed blissfully through the summer and plans to do graduate work this fall.

On September 13 in Norfolk, Nancy Cofer is to become Mrs. William Stacey.

Barbara Golden divided her summer between art school in North Carolina and a sojourn on the coast of Rhode Island. This fall she began teaching in a private art school.

Maria Gregory has been traveling and visiting, mostly in North Carolina. She is to be one of Anne Jackson's attendants when Anne marries on December 22. Anne's engagement was announced August 1 and she is to marry Stuart Ragland, Jr., also of Richmond. Mr. Ragland attended V. M. I., served as a second lieutenant during the war, and is now a student at the Medical College of the University of Virginia.

Anne Kleeman was married June 25 to John Sikes. They honeymooned in Colorado Springs and Yellowstone Park and are living in Clarksville, Tennessee. Anne is housekeeping and cooking in their five-room apartment. Betty Hoehn was her maid-of-honor.

Becky Knapp writes plaintively that she wants everyone who failed to turn in her hood after graduation please to send them to her. The firm which supplied them is holding Becky responsible so please have a hear, and send them to her p.d.q. Becky played all summer, saw Suzette Morton, and now plans to start work in foster placement of children.

Ann Marshall spent the summer in northern Michigan at camp and studied six weeks at a near-by art colony run by Michigan State College. She earned five credits towards her master's degree! This fall she intends to continue her study of art at the Cincinnati Art Academy. She has had six paintings on exhibition in Lansing, Michigan, and hopes to exhibit this winter in Cincinnati. She also writes that she visited Alex Marcoglou in New York and expects to have Jo McMillan as her guest soon. Alex spent most of her summer at Sea Island, Georgia.

Stu McGnire reported that Kay Fitzgerald and Ernie Banker were at Radcliffe studying publishing and journalism. Stu also informed me that Alice Reese was to be married September 6 and Nan Hart on September 2. Stu spent July at Virginia Beach and at this writing was hunting a job.

Betsy Mullen summered in New York and went to Nan Steptoe's houseparty in West Virginia.

Jean Old and Shirley Levis spent the summer camp-counselling in Little Switzerland, N. C. They attended Martha Camblos's, Fuzzy Brinson's and Jacky Murray's weddings. They spent the night of August 29 with me in Raleigh and gave me a detailed report of Jacky's beautiful wedding. They saw Ginger Barron who spent the summer in Nassau. Jean and Shirley travelled so much this summer that they plan to settle down to a wirter of playing! Shirl has chosen Florida for her playground.

Liz Ripley and Ann Colston took sewing lessons this summer. Having had a liberal arts education they figured a little domestic science would be the "finishing touch."

I visited Anne Seibels in Birmingham in June and had the best time ever. She spent the rest of her summer at Daytona Beach and camping in Canada where rugged canoe trips thrilled her.

I have worked on a swimming pool here in Raleigh this summer and have very vague plans for the future. I have enjoyed your replies tremendously and want you all to know that I am to be envied for the scads of interesting mail you all have sent me.

As a farewell note I want to remind you all to contribute to the Alumnae Fund. The other three issues of the Alumnae News go only to those who contribute.

Letters to the Editor

That your discussion programs have brought forth provocative thinking is evident from the many comments by individual alumnae, some of which we print below. Why not take your pen in hand, and let this "letters to the Editors" column he a real medium for exchange of thought. Also we would sincerely welcome suggestions for bettering the magazine. We aim to please, so let us know what you would like to find within these pages.

I am convinced that a Liberal Arts education does stimulate you after graduation to further education. I do feel most strongly that every student should be thoroughly grounded by a faculty advisor on what the college offers. This should be more than an exposure, if possible. You are too young when you go, to know what to expect and want.

Mary Elisabeth Clemons Porzelius, '33.

As we all know, the teacher of a course is most important. His personality, his ability to present the material, etc. I think some way should be found for the professors to be presented before the student body . . . possibly each one to take a turn at the orientation course we just discussed . . . the choice of subject might be affected. Many of the most interesting professors I have only come to know since graduation. I missed them entirely while I was in school, as I just didn't bappen to be in their class, and consequently knew them not at all.

Polly McDiarmid Serodino, '29.

Having four daughters, I am interested in Sweet Briar as a Liberal Arts College, because some of them may want to go there. But also, I want our girls to be prepared to earn a living upon graduation. Since I went to Sweet Briar only one and a half years, the course I took which meant the most to me was the now extinct Home Economics course. I admit a Liberal Arts course is something you'll never get any other time, but couldn't it be made more practical?

Mary Sanford Patten, ex '30.

It is true that Liberal Arts education does not train for an obvious job or position. However, this is not the purpose. A study of the arts, music, and literature should be continued, but the Social Sciences, such as Government and Economics, should be emphasized more than they are, to open the graduate's mind to civic responsibility.

Betty Carbaugh Mann, '45.

When I try to set down my somewhat random thoughts upon the curriculum of a liberal arts college, I find myself arguing on both sides of the question or going around in a circle. For it is difficult to judge the value of that which you possess, even though you possess it in a small amount or in an imperfect degree.

In my own case, the circumstances of my life have been such that no academic course has been a waste. Even Latin, which was a great affliction to me in college, would have helped me if I had taken more of it or if I had worked harder at it when I was a reluctant laborer in Latin prose composition.

In any technical training, of course, it is necessary to attend specialized courses, but even so, a liberal arts training is an advantage.

I have often wished I had taken secretarial training in my younger years because, at every turn it has been urgent for me to type (without knowing how). On reflection, however, I realize that any young energetic woman can artend night school and get enough short-hand and typing to serve her purpose, whatever it may be. She will be prepared, then, for an entrance into fields which the girl who has only a business school training isn't likely to achieve.

As for preparation for marriage, I do not know that a cellege is able to offer much preparation. I do think that every woman should have the opportunity to acquire some housewifely skills because many marriages reach the breaking point because of the inexperience of the wife in the arts in which any high school girl who has had Home Economics can excel. This is not a question of money alone, because one of the wealthiest girls I knew made the greatest failure of her household management.

It is evident, though, that the liberal arts college cannot give a complete course of this kind. It does not have the facilities for a major in this field. This leaves the place for domestic arts to the high school curriculum. The girl who is taking the college preparatory course will be guided away from courses of this type. She will have to take them as a 5th subject. From my own observation, I think there are too many study periods in the secondary school and that some of these could be very well employed for the practical arts, which are mostly laboratory work and would be welcome to active children who soon tire of sedentary courses. There is too little activity in high school courses and they are poorly adapted to growing adolescents who crave the opportunity to do things, not just sit and read about things.

I'd like to write this as a serial if I may and enter, in my next, upon an examination of the courses actually given in college at the time I attended and discuss what changes, if any, I would make in the light of latter-day experience.

NEW

PLATE

by

Wedgwood

Here it is,

. . . the design for the new Sweet Briar plate, the result of lots of time, thought, discussion and correspondence over a period of two years. A sample plate has at last arrived, but we are still awaiting the date when the first deliveries of plates from the Wedgwood potteries may be expected. The plates will be made in mulberry and blue, Wedgwood shades which are almost duplicates of the former china made by Cauldon, and in a new soft sage green.

The drawing was made from many photographs, by an artist employed by Jones, McDuffee and Stratton, distributors of the china. Look closely at the border and see that it is as distinctly Sweet Briar's own as is the center design . . . the flowers are sweet briar roses, magnolia and mountain laurel.

You will receive notice when the time comes for orders. Please be patient a bit longer! We hope to send order blanks within the next month or two.

THE MARY HARLEY INFIRMARY

In honor of Dr. Mary Harley, first physician at Sweet Briar, the infirmary for which she was instrumental in raising funds and to which she also contributed generously, will henceforth be designated as the Mary Harley Infirmary. This designation was approved by the Board of Overseers at the request of alumnae and other friends of the former college physician.

Dr. Harley, who was a member of the first faculty at Sweet Briar, came when the college opened in 1906 and remained until her retirement in 1936. A graduate of the Women's Medical College of the New York Infirmary, Dr. Harley had been on the staff at Vassar College before coming to Sweet Briar.

When Dr. Harley came to Sweet Briar, she set up her office and a small infirmary in Sweet Briar House, which in the early years of the college served as the administration building as well as the presidence, infirmary and post office.

Several years later the infirmary was moved to another building which formerly housed the plantation office and still later it was established in Randolph Hall.

That Dr. Harley is still keenly interested in the infirmary was evidenced during a visit she made to Sweet Briar in 1945, when she made the infirmary her first stop, and told Dr. Carol Rice what changes she thought might be made in the structure to meet present needs.

Since her retirement from Sweet Briar in 1936, Dr. Harley has pursued her study of anthropology in Hawaii, South Africa, at the Museum of Natural History in New York, and at the University of Virginia. Now that she has reached the age of 82, her interest in this field of study is undiminished. Several months ago she went through Sweet Briar en route to South Africa, by freighter and plane, for further study.

JUNIOR YEAR IN FRANCE SPONSORED BY SWEET BRIAR

by Martha von Briesen

Sponsorship of a foreign study plan, operative at the University of Paris, for both men and women students from accredited colleges and universities in this country has just been adopted by Sweet Briar.

The plan, as approved by the Advisory Committee on the Junior Year in France of the Institute of International Education in New York, provides for a year of supervised study at the Sorbonne with full credit toward the A.B. degree in the students' own colleges.

The Junior Year in France is substantially the same as that carried out by the University of Delaware since 1923 but which is being suspended by that University in July, 1948. Membership in the Sweet Briar foreign study program will be open, in addition to those whose major field of study is French, to other students with a basic knowledge of French who wish to take advantage of a year of supervised study in Paris.

In announcing Sweet Briar's new plan, President Lucas spoke of the long-time and ever-increasing interest of Sweet Briar students and faculty in promoting world understanding through foreign study. She cited the Sweet Briar provision for junior year study at St. Andrews University in Scotland, where since 1932 a small group of Sweet Briar students have spent the junior year. Sweet Briar students have also participated in the Delaware forcign study plan since 1930, and prior to the war 17 had spent their junior year studying at the Sorbonne. In the last two years six Sweet Briar students have studied under the Delaware Plan in Geneva.

"Sweet Briar," said President Lucas, "is increasingly world-minded. We have 17 nationalities represented in our faculty and student body and many of us who teach at Sweet Briar have taken our graduate degrees in European universities. We seem to be of quite a common mind here at Sweet Briar," she concluded, "that the colleges have an essential and all important role to play in bringing the people of the world together in mutual understanding and lasting peace."

Director of the Sweet Briar plan is Dr. Joseph E. Barker, chairman of the Romance languages department, a member of the Advisory Committee on the Junior Year in France of the Institute of International Education, who has been closely affiliated with the Delaware plan for many years. Dr. and Mrs. Barker were in charge of the Delaware plan for many years and were directly responsible for the Delaware foreign study group in France in 1934-35. He has spent the past two summers in France, making a careful study of conditions under which American students can now be accommodated at the University of Paris.

Dr. Barker and Group of Students

Students will be enrolled in the "Cours de Civilisation" at the Sorbonne, including courses in literature, history, philosophy, art and international affairs. Individual conferences with French tutors will supplement the lecture courses. In addition the plan includes attendance at the theater, concerts, opera, art exhibits, and supervised travel during vacations to points of historical and cultural interest in France and other countries.

According to Dr. Barker, the headquarters of the Sweet Briar group for the coming year will be Reid Hall, for 10 years prior to the war a residence for American women students in Paris. The majority of students next year will probably live in Reid Hall, but as soon as possible all students will live with French families in order to gain the additional advantage of this experience in international understanding.

In a recent letter from Miss Dorothy Leet, president of Reid Hall to Dr. Barker, Miss Leet comments that the seventy American girls now living there "are seeing a whole new world and will understand much more about the problems of Europe. This should be a very important contribution upon their return to the United States." Fuel for the residence as well as much of the food provided for the students in Reid Hall is obtained from the United States, she added.

Inquiries about the Sweet Briar plan for the junior year in France have already been received from a number of students, according to Dr. Barker, who adds that interested students from other colleges and universities are invited to address their inquiries to him at Sweet Briar. Further details about the plan will be announced later.

The Study of Latin American Civilization

by Gerhard Masur, visiting professor of History

Dr. Masur has been at Sweet Briar since February, 1947. For ten years before coming to this country he lived and taught in Bogota, Columbia, and prior to 1945 he taught Medieval and Modern Furopean History at the University of Berlin. It immediately became clear to our college community that his reputation as a brilliant lecturer and a clear thinker was well founded. Immensely popular with the students, Dr. Masur was initiated this fall as a member of Tau Pi.

Dr. Masur is the author of a biography of Simon Bolivar, which is being published by the University of New Mexico Press. A German edition of the work will also be issued by Sudverlag—publishing firm in Konstanz, Germany.

Dr. Masur's course here is entitled "The Nations of Latin America."

HEN, some time ago, the writer entered the United States, his credentials bore the appellation, "Citizen of the Western Hemisphere." I had never before heard that such a phrase was in use as a political term appearing on papers as important as passports. However, it seems to me that such an expression as "Citizens of the Western Hemisphere" admirably defines both a fact and an exigency; that is to say, it expresses the fact that our western world is bound by a common destiny which elevates all its inhabitants to membership in one great whole, and by the same token demands that they be conscious of such a destiny, since the role of citizenship means not merely a passive existence in the community, but also full participation in its development.

If we accept these two premises as valid, the common destiny of the western world in the twentieth century and our moral and intellectual obligation to be conscious of it, there can be no discussion about the desirability of including a study of the Latin American world in the curriculum of all institutions of higher learning.

A vast majority of the colleges and universities of the United States has acknowledged the necessity of meeting this demand. In perusing the catalogues of about one hundred of the outstanding colleges and graduate schools of this country, we find offerings that vary from survey courses on Latin American nations or Latin American civilization to highly specialized studies of certain problems in this great field. It goes without saying that colleges and universities located in areas where Hispanic and Anglo-Saxon cultural trends are closely intertwined, such as Louisiana, New Mexico, Texas and California, feel a more direct incentive to foster this kind of teaching and research than others.

However widespread the interest in Latin American civilization may be at the present moment, however much we may and actually do welcome such an enlargement of our conventional historical outlook, the mere existence of such courses in our colleges and universities does not prove that they are presented in the most advantageous manner, nor that they always fulfill the educational or scholarly functions for which they have been included among the subjects of general cultural interest to the twentieth century.

If the writer is not mistaken, the recent enthusiasm for Latin American civilization has two main sources: first, the increase in human, commercial, and industrial relations between the northern and southern parts of the western hemisphere during the five decades of our century, and second, the political and military solidarity of the western world during World War II, a solidarity that remained unshaken from 1939 to 1945, despite the capricious behaviour of the Argentine republic.

Both currents are of primary importance to our time. They do not, however, furnish more than a starting point or a jumping board for the study of Latin American civilization. On the other hand, if we enter this field provided only with a contemporary outlook, and a selfish one at that, we are in danger of obtaining a biased picture of this distant and alien world, a picture doomed to reflect exclusively our own wishes and prejudices, rather than the civilization we pretend to understand.

Unfortunately, a considerable number of books, attempting to describe the Indo-American world either as a whole or in part, based only on a cruise around the southern part of the American continent, or a jeep tour, or simply an airplane trip, are turned out week after week. Where their authors get the "dope" to go home and write the inside story of a country which they have scarcely seen and certainly not understood, remains a mystery to all but themselves. Every serious and intellectually honest attempt to understand the Hispanic American world will, of course, refrain from cheap generalizations in the tourist fashion, or from patronizing South America merely as a field for economic expansion or exploitation.

Latin America is a world of its own. However closely connected it may be to its great sister republic north of the Rio Grande, it is still a unique civilization, and its special problems, its virtues, its qualities, and even its shortcomings demand explanation from within and not from without; that is to say, it must first be understood in the light of its own standards before it can be related to or measured by a foreign criterion.

to or measured by a foreign criterion.

If we are willing to grant South America the privilege that every historical subject may claim, that is the right to be considered as an individuality, we will more easily escape the temptation of misjudging it haughtily or glorifying it romantically. Such an approach, which we may call the historical sociological approach, will lay stress on a number of facts that make the study of South America far more important to our present world.

To begin at the beginning, we may find that the oldest centers of civilization in the new world were established in Central and South America. The study of the Maya, Aztec, and Inca cultures, the architecture, sculpture, pottery, silverware, and other applied arts of these early groups, give testimony to the age and history of mankind in this hemisphere, and lead to some of the most intriguing questions concerning the origin of man in America and his cultural achievements.

Advancing from this basic study, the conquest of the country between Tierra del Fuego and Mexico will provide amply opportunity to compare the Iberic type of colonization with the Anglo-Saxon type of the Thirteen Colonies in the north. The student will learn to understand how South American agriculture developed under the "encommienda-system" into what is today called the "hacienda system," how Indian and Negro labor was used and abused, and, to apply a famous expression, how "Latin America came to be a beggar sitting on a sack of gold."

The treasures of Latin American baroque will certainly not be neglected, nor will the production of colonial literature be forgotten. Under both aspects students whose major field may be either art or romance languages, will be encouraged to do inter-departmental work that in the long run is bound to enlarge their more specific assignments.

The discussion of the South American war for independence will reveal to the student a picture of heroism and cruelty, abnegation and bitter hatred, in many ways unique in world history. Such a study will place the heroes of this long and bloody struggle—Hidalgo, Bolivar, Sucre and San Martin—among the great fighters for continental freedom and national independence.

A study of the formation of the Congress of Panama of 1826, will allow the student to penetrate into the origin of pan-Americanism and to learn how it emerged from its first experimental stage at the beginning of the nineteenth century and finally acquired the institutional character it now has in the conferences of Mexico City and Petropolis.

Based on a solid background of historical knowledge, the student will at length take up the analysis of South American life in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Such a study will be concentrated around the great centers of the south, the so-called A B C states of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, Peru, Columbia, and Venezuela will not be neglected and as a matter of course, Mexico will occupy an important place in these more advanced investigations.

Subjects to be analyzed are: South American psychology, political and social life in Latin America, democracy and dictatorship, capital and labor, handicraft and mass production, modern art and literature, to mention only a few.

It seems evident that such a knowledge will prove to be extremely useful to the college student, whether or not she lives in Latin America. If occasion leads her to make her home in one of the southern countries, either because of her own profession or as the wife of a man with interests in South America, she will be psychologically and intellectually prepared to take an active participation in the life of her new environment; she will not be obliged to remain an idle onlooker, but will be able to assist in the establishment of a deeper understanding between the two parts of the hemisphere. If she remains in the United States, she will accompany with sympathy and good will the continuous efforts being made to fuse the twenty-one republics of the western world into a union whose foundation stones are solidarity, cooperation, and international amity.

South America, to quote its liberator, is a macrocosm of the human race. "We are," said Bolivar in 1815, "a world apart, confined within two oceans, young in art and science, but old as human society." It is thus that we should look upon our South American brothers, or cousins, if one prefers.

It goes without saying that neither the teaching of Latin American civilization nor its comprehension is an easy task. These activities demand an open mind, information in many and diversified fields, knowledge of languages, comparative studies in government, history, sociology, economics, art and literature. However, the rewards of making such an effort are also considerable.

The study of Latin American civilization will certainly help to overcome racial prejudices; it will forment international understandings; it will not only bridge the gaps between states and nations, but between entire civilizations. It will stimulate the learning of languages such as Spanish and Portuguese, and will, moreover, familiarize the student with South American literature and folklore, its craftsmanship and artistic genius, outstanding in the contemporary world.

I have tried to answer two common questions: how should Latin American civilization be studied and why should it be studied. In our shrinking world we can no longer go on limiting ourselves to an understanding of the spirit of European culture, or submerging ourselves exclusively in the details of national history. Other civilizations, distant only yesterday, have come within our reach and crowd the horizon with their enigmatic and bewildering profiles. If the college should neglect to prepare its students to deal with the problems that arise daily from the global conditions of our contemporary life, it would fail to meet its obligations.

MANUSCRIPT GIVEN TO THE COLLEGE

THE DOWDEYS AT WORK

On view in the lobby of the Mary Helen Cochran Library at Sweet Briar College this fall has been a recent acquisition, the author's copy of the manuscript for Experiment in Rebellion, a gift to Sweet Briar from the author, Clifford S. Dowdey of Richmond. Mrs. Dowdey was Frances Wilson, '41, and she helped her husand with research, map work and bibliography.

Experiment in Rebellion, a history of the fall of the Confederacy, begins just before Secession and traces events of the war up to the fall of Richmond. Chosen as the first book selection of the new History Book Club in May of last year, Experiment in Rebellion received many favorable critical notices at the time of its publication. The book was published by Doubleday Doran in November 1946.

Consisting of more than 600 pages of typescript, the gift is of special interest because it shows the author's penciled corrections, additions, and other revisions in the complete text of the book. According to Miss Tyler Gemmell, librarian, the manuscript is a valuable addition to the library's collection of similar items.

Among his earlier books Mr. Dowdey numbers several novels, Bugles Blow No More, Gamble's Hundred, Sing for a Penny, Tidewater, and Where My Love Sleeps. In addition to these books, Mr. Dowdey's stories have been published in the Atlantic Monthly, American Mercury, Saturday Evening Post, Colliers and other magazines. The most recent one appeared in McCall's magazine for September.

Alumna Publishes "The Insect World"

A recent gift to the Library at Sweet Briar is the volume entitled The Insect World, written and presented by Hilda T. Harpster, 1927, who is professor of b.ology at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Written in a style which is easily understood by the layman, the book deals with many different classes of insects, telling how they eat, breathe, grow, build their homes, scavenge, and protect themselves. It is generously illustrated by Zhenya Gay. Published in September by the Viking Press, New York, The Insect World appeared simultaneously in Canada as a publication of the Macmillan Company of Canada, Limited.

Miss Harpster, after her graduation from Sweet Briar, received her master's and doctor's degrees from the University of Michigan. From 1929 to 1936 she was instructor in biology at Sweet Briar, and after she had completed her doctorate in entomology she taught at Michigan State Normal. In 1944 she accepted the position she now holds at the Woman's College at Greensboro.

Faculty Members Take Sabbatical Leaves

Two members of the faculty will be on sabbatical leave during the second semester, which begins January 30. They are Dr. Laura Buckham and Dr. Gertrude Malz. Miss Buckham is going to France to continue research on poetry of the French resistance, and Miss Malz will continue her work on papyri, begun several years ago.

Miss Camilla Hoy will serve during Miss Buckham's absence as an instructor in the department of Romance languages. She is a South Carolinian, and a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of South Carolina. In 1944 she received her master's degree from the University of South Carolina, and taught there during a summer session. Miss Hoy has been a resident fellow at Bryn Mawr, and this past year was spent studying in France.

Miss Helen Lanneau will supply in the department of Greek and Latin during Miss Malz's absence. She comes from Natchez, Mississippi, and is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of North Carolina. Miss Lanneau has only one year's work to complete to qualify for her Ph. D. at the University of North Carolina. She comes to Sweet Briar from the University where she has been serving also as a graduate teaching assistant.

On Chinese Landscape Painting and Poetry

by Jeanne Adelaide Harris, '40

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jeanne became interested in the Orient while at Sweet Briar, her roommate having been reared in China. From 1942 to 1947 she worked at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, and now holds a Chinese Cultural Fellowship at Columbia University, where she is a candidate for her master's degree this June.

A^S Eric Sevareid travelled over China in a plane in 1946, he saw the good earth from above, in the manner of many Chinese artists, from medieval times until today.

He says in Not So Wild a Dream "We broke through the clouds and circled to land at Kweilin. The landscape was something beyond all reference; we seemed to be landing among the mountains of the moon. Tall, straight spires of green mountains jutted up from the plain like rows of immense Gothic spires, each one quite separate from the next, spiking the sky as far as the eye could see. On the ground the air was cool, heavy, and liquid. Everything was green with the consistency of wet moss, and one seemed to be walking on the bottom of a translucent pond. I had never seen anything like this in my life, and yet it was faintly familiar. This was the mystical Chinese landscaping I had seen since childhood on a thousand silk scrolls and water colors. This was the enchanted temple where sky and seabottom came together, to which centuries of Chinese artists and poets made pilgrimage in their hearts."

The steep cliffs, the deep ravines, and the jagged rocks one sees over and over again in landscape paintings of the Sung dynasty (960-1280 A.D.) really do exist. They are not figments of the imagination, even though high mountains rising from vales of mists create an air of fantasy which seems to belong to another world beyond the horizon of this earth.

These landscape paintings are a part of Chinese life and thought. The constant theme of poets and artists is love of nature—admiration for its beauty and respect for its power. The Chinese poet always longed to get away from the world of men who live in cities amid hypocrisy and hatred. Often he was in exile, for the Chinese system of government with its own political corruption and its constant invasions by foreigners from the north, kept the people who held official positions now in favor, now in exile.

The aesthetic mind of the Chinese has always loved the beauty of water and mountain, the pleasure of lone-liness found in solitary contemplation of landscape. The Chinese characters for landscape mean mountain and water; and to the Chinese, there can be no landscape without mountain and water. Artists create it with brush, poets describe it in lyric phrases, philosophers seek in it that solitude which inspires them to feel at one with the creative genius. Both the poet's and the painter's observation of nature rises from the desire to bring all things into a single plane of observation, neglecting distance. It has been said by ancients that "poetry is a picture without form, and painting is a poem with form."

Li Po (699-762 A.D.), the gifted poet of China and of the world, has written many lines whose rhythm captures the mood of landscape in words. Exhilarated by the beauty of nature, he finds pleasure in its solitude.

Here I may taste the bliss of solitude . . . Ah, what tranquility reigns over this ground!

What isolation from all things of the world! Sometimes he is impressed by the stark danger and harsh power of the landscape.

Such travelling is harder than scaling the blue sky. Even to hear it turns the cheek pale,

With the highest crag barely a foot below heaven. Dry pines hang, head down, from the face of the cliffs.

And a thousand plunging cataracts outroar one another

And send through ten thousand valleys a thunder of spinning water.

Yet he recognizes in nature the only eternal creation in the world.

Long I lift my gaze—, Oh, prodigious force! How majestic the creation of gods! . . . O mountains of renown that I adore, You fill my heart with deep repose . . . Let me be with the things I love, And leave the world of man forever.

Alumnae News

Loftiness and simplicity, with a deep feeling for solitary places, are Chinese characteristics revealed in landscape painting. Though austere, with a sense of desolation in the bare peaks and twisted pines, the mood is still one of silent and serene joy. In the technique of painting with ink on silk, each stroke is done so quickly that no alteration is possible. It requires a psychological and technical training, since the brush strokes become a reflection from the mind transmitted by the skill of the hand. As Laurence Binyon explains so well in his Painting of the Far East, this is the spirit, or reverberation of the universal mind, listened to in the innermost consciousness as well as in every phenomenon of nature.

The Chinese artist has been trained according to treatises on style so detailed as to leave no room for personality. Yet spontaneity is perfectly attained. It must raise our estimation of the artists' talents when we see that so many of them were able to capture this indefinable spirit when they were expected to follow a rigid code for style and technique. Kuo Hsi's famous Essay on Landscape Painting is filled with definite instructions for painting rocks, trees, streams, and mountains; according to the aspect of the subject, the distance from the artist, the time of day, and the season of the year. The great artist is expected to master the style and technique of all schools, before he is considered ready to develop his own personal style.

Two of China's greatest landscape painters, Ma Yuan and his contemporary Hsia Kuei, lived during the difficult days after the fall of the northern Sung empire in 1125. Both were members of the Han Lin Academy which gave men of talent the opportunity to carry on their creative work without having to worry about making a living.

The painting styles of these two artists are entirely different. Ma Yuan is elegant, delicate, precise. Hsia Kuei is exuberant, strong, and impressionistic. One feels that Ma Yuan is a scholarly gentleman of the court who would never set out to travel in the country without his boys to set up his table and his chair, and to prepare his meals. Hsia Kuei impresses one as the type of exuberant personality who would dash off to seek adventure whenever the spirit moved him, without making any preparations in advance, or taking along any comfortable equipment.

A man under a pine gazing at the moon is one of Ma Yuan's most popular themes. One wonders if it is because he loved the solitude and beauty of the mountain scenery, or if the opportunity for majestic compositions continually drew him back to this subject. There is always the poetphilosopher seated or standing in rapt attention, looking off at a tiny moon. Within calling distance, but far enough away to leave the scholar in respectful solitude, is the boy attendant, who may be looking in another direction or who may have already begun to walk off at a little distance from his master. There are always rocks in the foreground, mist leading the eye back into the far distance, and mountains off toward the horizon. Growing up from one side of the picture is the aged, twisted pine, turning its branches backward into the foreground. The mist which obscures the view seems almost personal, for it keeps us from seeing what the figure in the painting sees. It stirs the imagination, for it draws one into the picture, where one creates fantasies of beauty, or mystery, or eternity, or a little of all three mingled together inexplicably to tantalize the finite mind.

In Hsia Kuei's paintings, one comes in contact with a style and personality that is entirely different from Ma Yuan. Instead of the precise strokes of the elegant scholar, one feels the sweep and power of a strong personality. Ma Yuan's careful delineation has been replaced by thick, short strokes filled with movement.

Hsia Kuei is gifted in both the rapid, strong sketch, and the tranquil, delicate style. "Landscape in Wind and Rain," done chiefly in heavy ink contours and masses, leaves the wind and the rain to the imagination. One cannot see it, but one feels its strong force. The wind sweeps in from out of nowhere. We feel its might emphasized by the power of the overhanging cliff and the swirling leaves of the sturdy trees which grow diagonally out of its surface. Beneath the trees is the dubious shelter of an open pavilion, built on a high platform above the shore line. Approaching it is the typical bridge, across whose rickety beams a lone traveller is fighting his way against the gale, with his umbrella pulled down low over his head, as he struggles forward. Above the trees mist envelops a majestic mountain, its height exaggerated by all that is hidden from us. Only its topmost peak with a few windswept trees towers over us. The effect of mist, created by leaving the silk untouched by the brush, is a suggestion created by literally nothing. Behind the mountains is nothing, is everything, but we have seen much farther into the mists of creation than the little traveller crossing the bridge can ever climb. Yet he is part of it too, a most significant part, for it is he who has led us into this picture which is more than a creation by an artist's gifted brush. It is a bit of poetry, or a profound thought: perhaps a glimpse into the inexplicable realms of the created and the uncreated.

The Sung dynasty, though politically disturbed, was an age of reflective thinking. In landscape painting of the period it is tempting to make comparisons between the thoughts in men's minds and the images from their brushes. Tempting and dangerous, since it is presumptuous, and therefore apt to be wrong. However, there seems to be a great deal of philosophy revealed in Chinese landscape painting. The Chinese have always been great lovers of beauty which can be seen or heard through the senses. What more ideal way to express the inexpressible power of creation than through anything beautiful which is a part of that creative impulse? No one can explain a pine tree, a stream, a mountain, or a human being. Yet how beautifully the Chinese express their idea of all that exists by painting with ink and brush.

The Lee Grogan Music Scholarship

by Lucile Umbreit, Assistant Professor of Music

Due to the very generous gift of $5,000.00 from Dr. and Mrs. Roy L. Grogan of Fort Worth, Texas, a new scholarship, the Lee Grogan Scholarship in Piano is now available.

Lee Grogan, Sweet Briar '47, was a music major with a definite talent for piano. Her senior year she gave a recital at the college with two of her classmates, Suzanne Fitzgerald and Marguerite de Lustrac. That year she was also one of the students invited to play at Lynchburg College. It was in appreciation of her progress and accomplishment at Sweet Briar that her parents gave this scholarship.

This year Lee is continuing her study of music, with emphasis on piano, in New York City, and played in a recital at Steinway Hall in December. She is also studying music at Columbia University.

At Sweet Briar Lee did not confine her activities to music but was head of the Social Committee and of Choreography, as well as being a member of Tau Phi, the German and the Music Clubs.

The Music Club has invited Lee and Suzanne Fitzgerald, who is also continuing her study of piano in New York this year, to give a recital at Sweet Briar this spring and they have accepted. This delights all of us and will be a real stimulus.

New Reunion Plan

At the October, 1947, meeting of the Alumnae Council a modification of the Dix System of Reunions was adopted. It was felt that when alumnae return to college they would enjoy meeting with friends who were in college at the same time they were, as well as with their own classmates. By a process of rotation through a period of twenty years, each class will have the opportunity of seeing again the members of the six other classes with which it was associated in college.

However, since the traditional method of holding reunions of classes in multiples of five years after graduation had been in effect at Sweet Briar and many were anticipating returning at Commencement time, the quincentennial system was superimposed over the Dix System by Miss Helen Pollock, acting head of the mathematics department. The Alumnae Council feels that the Sweet Briar plan should now be called the "Pollock Plan" as it is an original system involving rather complex computation.

In June 1948 the following classes are scheduled for reunion; 1943, 1942, 1941, 1940, 1939, 1938, 1933, 1928, 1923, 1921, 1920, 1918, and 1913. In June 1949 these are the reunion classes: 1944, 1939, 1938, 1937, 1936, 1935, 1934, 1929, 1924, 1919, 1918, 1917, 1916, and 1914.

You may note that in some instances a class is scheduled for reunion two years in succession. Individual members of such classes are asked to get in touch with their own particular groups of friends and arrange to return to campus at the same time.

STUDENTS CONDUCT SUCCESSFUL RELIEF CAMPAIGN

A gift of $113 from the senior class put the sixth annual campus drive for relief funds over the top of its $6,000 goal, according to Elma Lile, Seattle, student chairman of the Relief Committee. A total of $5,887.60 was raised during the drive this fall, and the seniors contributed the remainder out of proceeds of the senior show. The final figure represents an increase of $1,000 over last year's total.

Approval was voted, following Miss Lile's report, of the Relief Committee's allotment of the funds as follows: World Student Service Fund, $2,000; Save the Children Federation, for continuing sponsorship of the school in Paris which was adopted by Sweet Briar last year, $1,300; for the support of two foreign students now at Sweet Briar as holders of tuition scholarships, $1,500; Ginling College, Nanking, one of the few Christian colleges for women in China, $500; American Friends Service Committee and the Near East Foundation, $200 each; for CARE packages to be sent to students in several European colleges and schools, $300.

In addition to setting a new record for the amount collected at Sweet Briar, this drive also set a high mark for the number of contributors. A total of 437, or 97% of the student body, contributed $4,435 to the drive, and 60% of the non-student members of the community gave $1,178. Several student clubs, as well as the senior class, gave sums to swell the total, and additional money was raised through various special efforts.

Among these the most successful was the Chung Mung auction, which netted $163 from the sale of items contributed by individuals. Most in demand were cakes and cookies made by faculty members. Savings of $90, resulting from the "European students'" luncheon served in the dining halls one day during the campaign week, were contributed by the Refectory management, and more than $130 was collected in the dining halls that same evening when students were given an opportunity to "buy a dinner" for a foreign student. Several students pledged a month's allowance to the drive, and one who is earning her own expenses gave a month's pay.

Ruth Street, Charlotte, chairman of the Student Funds Committee, directed the student solicitors, who were members of the Funds Committee assisted by members of Chung Mung.

ALUMNAE DISCUSSION No. 4

THE ADVISORY SYSTEM AT SWEET BRIAR

by Dr. Lysbeth W. Muncy, Assistant Dean and Associate Professor of History and Government

EDITOR'S NOTE: Miss Muncy, despite her busy life as dean and teacher, has been watching your discussion programs with a very real interest. This paper is meant as a basis for your February talks on Educational policy at Sweet Briar.

THE advisory system of a college can and should be one of the most important keys to an effective liberal arts education. Because of this conviction I welcome an opportunity to tell you something about the advising of freshmen and sophomores at Sweet Briar, not as a Dean's Office expert, since I have had only five months of experience there, but just as one of the many faculty advisers of freshmen and sophomores. I hope that my account and the questions that it raises will bring back questions, observations and criticisms from you because they will be most helpful to us in our constant rethinking, reworking and, we hope, improvement of our advisory system.

Members of the faculty are invited to be advisers by the Dean and they form a group which meets from time to time to study common problems. At the opening of school in September a special meeting with the Dean and her staff, the Recorder and the Director of Admission is held to "brief" the advisers for the coming year. Incoming freshmen have already been assigned to the advisers on the basis of what we hope will be mutual interests, congeniality and the best understanding of the individual student. Advisers are usually responsible for six to eight freshmen and four to six sophomores. During orientation week each freshman has a conference with her adviser and together they work out her schedule of courses for the year. The adviser is guided by the interests of the student, the group requirements and other degree requirments, and a projected plan of study for the four years at Sweet Briar so that the student will look ahead at the outset and have some thought for the ultimate goal of her undergraduate studies and the ways and means of attaining it. The adviser is also careful to see that the schedule of classes is well-balanced, i.e., that the student does not have more than three classes on the same day, and, if possible, that she has solid blocks of time for study. Often the adviser works out a study plan with the student to start her on her way with efficient study habits.

The election of courses is never a simple matter and often there are as many good reasons for selecting one course as another. In this quandary adviser and student have finally to make a more or less arbitrary choice and hope for the best. Occasionally, of course, they find that they have made the wrong choice. Sometimes student and adviser disagree on the best choice of courses and in that case the adviser bears in mind that his office entitles him only to give advice and that he is in a position to recommend strongly but not to insist unless the wishes of the student run counter to college regulations. It may happen that a student refuses advice, elects a course contrary to the recommendation of the adviser and has to suffer the consequences of a wrong choice but this unhappy experience, too, is part of her development into a mature and responsible individual.

With the election of her courses completed the freshman is launched on her academic work and she may not see her adviser again until the middle of the semester except for a party or two to get acquainted, to have a good time and to find out that faculty members are really human—and not bad cooks, either! If during this interval, however, either the adviser or the student or any of her instructors have reason to feel that she is not getting on as well as she should, then student and adviser confer as much as is necessary to iron out the difficulty.

At the end of the first six weeks all instructors file in the Office of the Dean reports on their students who are doing unsatisfactory work or exceptionally good work. The advisers take great pains to study these reports and with this information about the academic achievement and difficulties of their advisees they have conferences with them, discuss their problems with great care, often conferring with their instructors as well, and advise them how to meet their shortcomings and improve their work generally. At this time especially, the students have an opportunity to examine themselves and their courses and to see their own achievement, their opportunities and their objectives in perspective. These talks offer a wonderful occasion to discuss the fundamental question—"What did I come to college for?" After these conferences advisers report to the Dean's Office on advice given and solutions worked out for special problems. If the adviser so requests, the Dean or Assistant Dean confers with a student, explores her problems and reenforces the recommendations of the adviser. Should there be a difference of opinion between the Dean or Assistant Dean and the adviser, they consult and reach an agreement on steps to be taken to help the student.

Similar progress reports and conferences take place at the end of the first semester and in the middle of the second semester. In April the adviser maps out with the student the plan of courses for the sophomore year and takes care to see that she will be ready to go on to her major field of study at the end of her second year. During the sophomore year the advisee has similar periodic conferences with her adviser about her academic work and in the spring of her second year she moves on to her major professor who acts as her adviser until she graduates.

This serious business of academic advising is usually interpersed with tea or coffee hours for sociability and with informal and quite spontaneous chats about mutual hobbies, the purpose of life, the Russians, the U. N. and the like. Indeed, adviser and advisee may establish a close friendship and one that lasts long after graduation but this happy experience can be only the accidental product of the adviser-advisee relationship since the Dean and her advisers in making assignments cannot know the alchemy of congeniality in each case, especially when the freshmen are still personally unknown to us.

Whatever the personal overtones of the relationship the student will find in her adviser an interested, understanding and conscientious counsellor who is always standing by, ready to talk over with her any problems, academic or personal, which she cares to bring. It is our hope that the student will gain security and assurance from the knowledge that there is someone older and more experienced than herself who is especially interested in her and will welcome her and her special concerns at any time. Through the adviser the student has a natural channel of communication with the faculty and an opportunity for that exchange of views so necessary to the co-operation of faculty and students-a great factor in this business of education. But I would be wiser to leave to Fan and Sue the student's evaluation of our advisory system and tell you rather how the advisers welcome the opportunity to become acquainted with the students. Through advising they learn to know them in a different and at once a more general and a more intimate way than in the classroom. Through their advisees they have an especially good opportunity to learn and understand what the students are thinking about college and to bring some other viewpoints to them. Advising, moreover, gives faculty members an occasion to become better acquainted with their colleagues, the courses that they offer and the objectives and methods which they stress in teaching. In short, advising is an open door to a fuller acquaintance with students and faculty and with the whole purpose and functioning of the college. It is an educational experience for adviser and advisee alike.

But the greatest advantage of the advisory system, to my mind, is that it offers a reasonable and flexible solution to that whole vexed question of free electives versus required general courses which the academic world is debating so fiercely today. A thoughtful adviser, working with a group system such as we have at Sweet Briar, can steer a student away from the cafeteria fare of the free electives and see that he gets the well-balanced diet of a liberal arts education without forcing him into the strict regimen of required courses. In this way the educational program of each student can be broad yet well integrated and meaningful as a whole. It can be suited to the individual and liberal not only in scope but also in freedom of choice under wise guidance, in the selection of subjects for study.

Ideally the advisory system can be the solution to the problem of intelligent planning of the four years of a liberal arts education but obviously it places a very heavy burden of responsibility and effort on the adviser. At Sweet Briar advisers are teaching full time or doing other work which takes most of their attention. Consequently they frequently feel obliged to neglect their advisees to attend to their teaching or vice versa. As a result students may hesitate to interrupt their busy advisers by intruding themselves and their problems. On the other hand there is the criticism that if the adviser gives much time and attention to the student he is coddling and babying her and retarding the development of her self reliance and her ability to handle her own problems in a mature way. There is always the temptation to give more attention to the weak student who is floundering and baffled than to the superior student who is making good progress. The result is that students are apt to look on the adviser as a stern and reproving bearer of bad tidings whom they have to consult if they get into difficulties and whom they therefore hope to see as seldom as possible. It may also mean a failure to draw out and develop the unusual capacities of the good student who could be stimulated and encouraged by her adviser's insight and suggestions.

Surely the advisory system gives the student an opportunity to receive wise and mature guidance enriched by a variety of views. It also provides a fine means—and perhaps the best outside of teaching itself—for the forming of strong and often long-lived bonds of understanding and friendship between faculty and students. The problems raised in this discussion pertain not to the merits of the system itself but to matters of its scope and techniques. I should like to pose some of these questions for your consideration. Please let us know your response.

- Do you think that Sweet Briar should have an advisory system substantially like the one now in effect here?
- Should advisors give more time and attention to advisees?
- 3. If so, how can their work be lightened in other areas to give them more time for this?
- 4. Should there be more provision for counselling on personal problems? If so, how should this be done?
- 5. Should more time be given to good students? Even if this means less time for weak students?
- 6. Should we spend less time and effort counselling students, thereby forcing them to develop their own resources of judgment and self-reliance?
- 7. Do you have any further suggestions as to how advising may be improved at Sweet Briar?

The Sophomores Evaluate The Advisory System

by Fanchon Lewis

EDITOR's NOTE: Fan is the first holder of the all-expense scholarship. As house president of Manson, she is a member of the Executive Committee of Student Government. One afternoon a week she brings her able mind and cheery presence to the Alumnae Office.

(Note: Several weeks before Christmas a questionnaire was sent to members of the sophomore class concerning the advisory system at Sweet Briar. A fifth of the blanks were returned. This lack of response, no doubt due in part to the Christmas rush, may serve also as an indication that students in general are content with the present advisory system or at least do not consider their complaints serious enough to voice. Though the following questions were not answered by the class as a whole, they do show the opinion of those interested in this matter and I feel free to quote them as the student point of view.)

 Is there a need for more, or less faculty advising at Sweet Briar?

Unanimously it was agreed that there is not too much faculty advising. In reply to the argument that it is "babying" college students to give them much counseling, one student pointed out that advising does not hinder the process of maturing because learning to accept and weigh advice is a step toward maturity. Some feel that students are receiving enough advice under the present system whereas others would like more. In dealing with so many individual cases, all of which are different, it is impossible to arrive at a definite answer as to how much advising is desirable. One girl made a statement, however, which applies to many cases, "There is more need, not so much for more faculty advising, but for a greater desire on the part of the student to take advantage of the opportunity of faculty advice." If Sweet Briar students develop this attitude of really asking for faculty help, the determination of quantity will be solved.

2-A. Should faculty advising be confined to academic fields?

I believe that faculty advising should definitely not be confined to academic fields. The system would be more effective if both students and faculty felt that their contact was not purely academic. Many students probably feel that their advisors advise them about their studies because it is their routine duty and that the advisors likewise feel that advisees come to them because they have to have the advisor's signature! When students and faculty feel free to discuss non-academic matters there is more mutual interest in getting together. I think academic advising is first in importance, but discussion of other matters would enable the advisor to know her student and be able then to help her to a greater extent.

2-B. List other matters about which you feel students would welcome advice.

The answers given here proved to me that some students are really interested in talking with their advisors about non-academic matters. One student thought the advisor had an excellent chance to help freshmen, particularly those who did not attend boarding school, to adjust to college life. Freshmen also would welcome advice on extracurricular activities. Often students want to participate in non-scholastic projects but are at a loss how best to use their particular talents. Students expressed a desire to consult their advisor on family and personal problems.

3. What do you think are the best ways for advisors and advisees to get together?

Most advisors and advisees meet at office appointments and at informal parties at the advisor's home. I believe these two must be combined if the advisor and advisee are to know each other well. It is best for the advisor to become acquainted with her girls at individual conferences and then to meet with small groups in her home to help them know each other better. One student suggested that the advisor call on each student sometime to help with the hostess arrangements for these "get-togethers." The feeling throughout was that knowing each other socially would help the advisor to make wise suggestions and help the advisee to trust her judgment.

 List other suggestions for helping faculty to serve better in their capacity as advisors and for improving the system.

One student felt that faculty advisors could be of great aid to students in helping them to become interested in a course because the advisor has the composite picture of a liberal arts education and could show the student the place the course has in a well-rounded curriculum and how it will help her in later life. Another student felt that advisors should discuss "majors" with the advisees even as early as the freshman year, so that freshmen can see the importance of careful planning of courses.

One advisee said that advisors tended to give too much stereotyped advice and that they should try to give more individual attention to students. It was further suggested that all advisees (not just those who have received commendations or warnings) should meet with advisors at the end of the first six weeks. This would help to eliminate the feeling among students that faculty advisors are interested only in their grades.

My purpose has been to give the opinion of the lowerclassman on the advisory system which she has seen in operation for a year and a half. Most of us feel that the advisory system is very essential and we do not think there is need for any change in the actual set-up of the system. We do think it will be more effective if it is regarded as a system of cooperation between individuals rather than a compulsory faculty-student relation. One girl said, "I sincerely hope there will be some improvement in the system. I would jump at any chance to know my advisor and my teachers better, although I don't feel I can barge in on their office hours 'just to chat' as I have no pressing problem to discuss At boarding school where there were several teachers on each hall you got to know them better and felt free to drop in at any time with or without a problem." It is the responsibility of students and faculty to do their part by really desiring to make more effective use of the present arrangement and to cooperate toward this end.

A Senior's Point of View

By SUZANNE HARDY

Sue has served as a reporter on another News, the student publication, for several years, and she is President of the International Relations Club this year.

Faced with the prospect of life in the "working world," seniors feel strongly their need for vocational guidance, as well as for general advising. Though the Personnel Committee is functioning more and more effectively to help them find the fields and positions best suited to their abilities and interests, it cannot give them full attention. Moreover, most of them realize that they should have had a four-year plan or at least a two-year plan to give direction to their courses other than the fulfillment of the requirements for a degree. In line with this, is the criticism that the advisory system at present furnishes only piecemeal or semester-by-semester advice.

Aptitude tests in the sophomore and senior years are recommended. A full-time vocational advisor as well as an academic one is a real need. However, until that is possible, a few key changes in the present system could render it much more effective in serving the needs of the students and in helping them find their place in the community—at Sweet Briar and in the outside world.

Since the success or failure of the advisory system depends largely upon the personal relationship of each advisor and advisee, the student should be allowed to change her advisor during her sophomore year. It should also be possible for a student at the end of her sophomore year to choose her advisor for the next two years among the instructors within her major department.

This may seem to be a difficult or unnecessary change, but it would eliminate the possibility of the situation where the student and faculty member seem to avoid seeing each other. Occasionally a student decides against a major for such a reason. This solution would reduce the criticisms that the advisor is "too busy to worry about my problems" or "not interested in me as an individual." Students have been known to take courses they neither needed or wanted for fear of offending an advisor with whom they did not have a close or even frank relationship. With a "friend" for an advisor, students could much more effectively plan their courses and careets, would much more readily discuss their other-than-academic problems. This, in turn, would help to reduce the need for a consultant on religion, though it would certainly not eliminate the need. The designation of one of the religion instructors as a consultant on religion would help, for then all students, even those who did not know her personally, would feel there was someone they were free to consult.

On the other side of the picture, wouldn't a faculty member be able to advise more adequately and frankly knowing that he not only enjoyed the confidence and respect of his advisee, but that they had a personal interest in each other as well?

FROM A B C'S TO F AND G OR FORWARD-GOING

by BERNICE DRAKE LILL

Mrs. Lill went through your discussion reports of her paper on Admission, printed in the October Alumnae News, in order to answer some of the questions asked most frequently.

THERE is a glow in many of your reports of alumnae discussion of admission that shines out as a signal of forward-going. For anyone who needed proof here is a plenty of it showing conclusively how keen is the interest of alumnae in admission and how generous and eager is the desire to cooperate with the College in a continuing plan. Especially was I impressed by this forward-looking quality in the reports from Cincinnati, Louisville, Philadelphia, Richmond and Winston-Salem. Doubtless the same spirit and interest pervade most of your clubs, and secretary's reports may have emphasized the problems discussed and taken for granted the zeal and enthusiasm which shone in the reports from these clubs.

What can the alumnae do to assist in admissions? is the most oft-repeated question. Good and plenty; the alumnae can serve as a vital and growing force in admission. Your Alumnae Council has this very near to its heart and has already asked Terry Shaw and the Committee on Admission to present a concrete plan to the Council at its February meeting. We have some excellent material generously shared by other colleges which have functioning plans which are doing sound work in acquainting communities. schools and students with the character and offerings of their colleges. Using our experience with our own Alumnae Representative Plan we can draft for your consideration a working scheme which should begin to get under way just as soon as your clubs give the "go" signal.

Why have alumnae interviews been abandoned? is your second most-asked question. In truth, they never have been abandoned, only allowed to go un-nurtured during the war years when our staff was depleted and we could not get to the representatives the current information vital to most effective work. Perhaps this suggests a weakness in our plan—too much centralization. If the plan were sponsored by the clubs and the responsibility for its continuation lay there, rather than with individual alumnae, it would continue under club impetus and have more vitaity. This, I believe, will be the fundamental difference between the idea we shall propose to you and our alumnae representative plan.

Not that alumnae representatives have not been doing a splendid job, even without receiving the sustaining support of new material annually from the College. Here is a list of the "College Day" programs which alumnae representatives have most generously and effectively supported this fail: Mamaroneck High School (New York), New Trier High School (Illinois), Princeton High School (New Jersey), and the Washington-Lee High School in Arlington, Virginia. Applicants have asked for interviews with Alumnae Representatives whose names are listed in the catalogue (pages 144 and 145). Alumnae have done valiant work this fall in co-operating with Mrs. Munger and me in plans for school visits. They have advised us about the schools to include in our lists as we planned our trips, have arranged for the visits, made our speaking engagements, accompanied us to schools, and some are even now continuing these contacts with schools.

All this work is really part of wholesome public relations. And we at the College are planning to do a better job of cordinating our own efforts in visiting, speaking and sending out materials. President Lucas is calling together for this purpose the Dean, the Treasurer, and Alumnae Secretary, the Director of Public Relations and the Director of Admissions several times a year so we may be aware of the many-sidedness of public relations when we plan for our individual offices. For instance, when the President attends an educational meeting we may try to stretch her time a bit here and there to include an alumnae club or a school which has urged us to visit. Our discussions are sometimes quite merry as we come finally to accept the limitations of time and space! But the working together is fun, and soon we want you alumnae through your clubs to be sharing this adventure with us. Right here I might add that Martha von Briesen is planning some attractive new materials for your use.

Your third most important question is Why are the applicants not advised before May about their acceptance? Perhaps you all hear only about those who receive word in May, whereas a goodly number of applicants are advised in March. It is true, however, that the large majority are notified in May. One reason last year was that seventy-eight per cent of the entering freshmen took the three achievement tests of the College Board as well as the Scholastic Aptitude Test. Most schools prefer the April achievement tests, the northeastern women's colleges require them and all scholarship applicants must take them. It seems likely, for these reasons, that most applicants will be taking the April achievement tests and thus receiving word in May.

We do, however, review credentials just as soon as they are complete; this usually means late February and early March, as we must await receipt of school records through the first senior semester, the principal's recommendation (which comes on this school record), the applicant's own letter, and the Scholastic Aptitude Test score. Comparing these papers, we make three categories: 1. the obviously superior who are accepted (provided the final school record is satisfactory); 2. those whose papers compare unfavorably with those of other applicants and who are advised quite promptly to pursue other plans; 3. those whose papers are promising but about whom we need more information. We ask the last group to take the April achievement tests. Most of this group follow our advice; some prefer to turn their eyes to other colleges. Some decide to continue their applications at Sweet Brian without taking the suggested tests, which does not debar them from full consideration later. From this you will see that hundreds of letters of advice go from the College in late February and early March, yet the large number of final decisions can not be made until May when the achievement scores on the April tests are received and added to the other records for review.

Your fourth and last question is How much emphasis is placed on the S. A. T. score, or how much emphasis is placed on the principal's recommendation or school second? "How much" raises a quantitative question, and such an answer is not possible. The amount of weight given to the various parts of the credentials depends upon our experience with the school concerned, the standard of its grading, the reliability of previous recommendations. In cases where we are considering our first applicant from a school we turn with confidence to the reports of the National Registration Office*; but even these excellent reports do not meet all our needs. In such cases we rely more upon test scores than we do when we are considering applicants from schools with which we have had a long and satisfactory experience.

These are the four questions posed by more than one group. Let me know if my answers do not meet your point or if I can amplify these replies. There are, of course, a lot more questions; but all of these seem to be confined to only one group. Sue Slaughter has given prompt and helpful replies to some of them; and I shall carry on with individual answers to others.

Your good reports on your discussion of admission give vigorous answers to Miss Benedict's challenge to "Wake Up, Alumnae!" You have passed beyond the A B C's and are now ready to plunge into more mature undertakings. Now is the time to implement your interest and zeal, to mould an effective plan which will develop your clubs into effective groups for interpreting Sweet Briar to your communities. In doing this I believe you will find a rich reward in continuing contacts with Sweet Briar and with the schools and young people of your communities. You will be a part of Sweet Briar's public relations, which really is Sweet Briar's prestige or reputation.

^{*}The National Registration Office for independent schools has now published its third confidential report comparing school and college freshman grades. In the 1947 report 105 independent schools are represented. According to the foreword in this report: "It presents simply and authoritatively the information which independent schools and college admission officers generally regard as the one best basis for evaluating the college entrance records of candidates—a comparison of the school and college grades of preceding graduates."

February, 1948

Go Choose the East, Go Choose the West

Sue Slaughter again summarizes your discussion reports, this one on admissions.

"Go choose the one who'll do the best," was the theme song for our fall meetings. How Sweet Briar chooses "the one who'll do the best" was described by Mrs. Lill in the October 1947 Alumnae News, and she furnished supplemental details to discussion leaders. The intricacies of making a choice were a revelation to many alumnae, most of whom soon realized their abysmal ignorance of present-day procedures in all colleges. Members of clubs who were fortunate enough to have Mrs. Lill meet with them gained a great respect and admiration for the work of the Committee on Admission.

Perhaps 650 girls apply for admission to Sweet Briar and there are less than 150 vacancies. How would you decide? Take those with the highest scholastic aptitude ratings? Some of them may be "smart" but ruthless in the pursuit of their own interests regardless of the rights of others. Take all alumnae daughters? Some of them may have every lovable characteristic but be totally unable to digest strong academic fare. Take only applicants with glowing recommendations? Then you might pass over girls who are late in showing their mettle but who have unusual potentialities. To choose, then, girls with ability and "who give promise of becoming the sort of citizen the world gravely needs," to quote Mrs. Lill's "A B C's of Admission," is a task that requires knowledge, common sense and a very high degree of sensitivity. It is a task in which alumnae want to share.

HOW CAN WE HELP?

Six clubs discussed this question especially. They see their service as a two-way proposition—explaining Sweet Briar to prospective students and interpreting applicants to the college. A clearer understanding of admission requirements, their philosophy and their greater fairness to applicants are the first step, of course. Many alumnae are willing to act as local representatives, increasing their specific knowledge to fit them for the work. All alumnae are "representatives," whether consciously or not, and need enough accurate knowledge of admissions and curriculum to answer casual questions or correct current misunderstanding. Parents or students may never seek help from designated representatives or from the college itself unless encouraged by information they get informally from the "average" alumna.

Various devices such as teas, the showing of campus movies, participation in "college days" were suggested. Alumnae offer to interview applicants, "Often a personality," says Philadelphia, "emerges strongly in face to face contact which paper records may fail to catch." A very wide geographical distribution in the student body was approved and alumnae perceived their unique responsibility in achieving it, disapproving any use of quota systems for this or other purposes. They urge greater speed in notifying applicants regarding admissions, more inclusive printed material furnished them, more cordial reception provided visitors to campus, warmer letters to applicants who are rejected. Sweet Briar clubs will cooperate in any general plan of alumnae participation in recruitment and admissions which the college may propose.

ALUMNAE DAUGHTERS

Universal concern was expressed on this subject and, while no one, of course, believed that a girl, no matter how poor a student, had a vested right in her mother's college, still opinions ranged from the 20% who thought preference in admissions should be shown daughters of alumnae "even if they must be flunked at the end of the freshman year" to the 40% who declared that alumnae daughters should offer exactly equal qualifications and stand on their own feet without regard to family tradition. Many clubs were not completely unanimous within themselves. Some alumnae were concerned at the ill feeling that too often arises when an applicant, who has looked forward always to attending her mother's alma mater, is not accepted because her credentials do not compare favorably with those of many other applicants. "Young colleges need the loyalty, enthusiasm and support of all alumnae."

A majority of clubs felt that "S. A. T." was "fair," "a fine idea," or even, "excellent." Some voted unanimously to stand behind the college Admissions Committee in its decision to admit only girls of superior potentialities. To choose high standards and cleave to our choice is nothing new at Sweet Briar. The oldest alumnae remember the criticisms heard in the nineteen hundreds because the Board of Directors built a liberal arts college instead of a vocational school for mountain children. Ill will due to disappointment or misunderstanding is unfortuate but is less damaging than low standards. Of course, there was unanimous approval of giving admission preference to alumnae daughters whose qualifications were, in every respect, equal to other applicants.

One club made an interesting suggestion. Although the majority believe that alumnae daughters should have no preference shown either in admissions or later, it was proposed that an experiment in modification be tried. Admit an alumna daughter whose grades have averaged C plus in all secondary school work, whose scholastic aptitude is good (if not outstanding) by S A T and who fulfills all other requirements. Tho' she may fail in her freshman year and her coveted place in the college be left vacant, this club thinks more good will is apt to accrue to Sweet Briar because she was given a special chance. Many must have thought of it, but no club reported any expressed concern as to whether C plus students could keep pace with the A and B students or whether "flunking out" in the freshman year wasn't a damaging experience particularly to an alumnae daughter, as well as an expense to the college. On the whole majority opinion favors the use of S A T as one, but only one, important determinant in admission but alumnae would like to know the practice of Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Bryn Mawr and Radcliffe in regard to admission of alumnae daughters.

Although discussion leaders had been furnished additional information about the various tests offered by the College Entrance Examination Board, members of some clubs seem not to have understood that a practice booklet with sample questions is sent to all students applying for the Scholastic Aptitude Test. This reduces, for the student who "goes to pieces in exams," the element of surprise or the probability of misunderstanding directions due to excitement. Moreover, most alumnae do not realize that "objective" rather than "essay" tests are now in such common use that children from the first grade up are thoroughly at home with them. The chief objection to S. A. T. would probably have vanished had these facts been understood, though there is another fear that haunts many alumnae—Just how much emphasis is given S.A.T.? Are we in danger of choosing only bookworms instead of our ideal "well rounded" student? Are brains alone the primary requisite for the girl who is to become "the citizen the world gravely needs?" Might we put more emphasis on the use our applicants expect to make of their education? Westchester County suggests, for instance, that community participation be stressed in the letter applicants write the college describing their individual interests.

"HOW DID WE GET IN?"

"And how on earth did we stay in!" was asked by Chattanooga alumnae. Joking aside, alumnae want to know how effective, in terms of academic success, is the fine screening done with applicants. Are there fewer failures in college, especially among freshmen? If not, is it fair to let a brilliant but lazy student take the place of a more conscientious girl who will work hard throughout the whole four years? Should disciplinary measures be taken to keep work up to standard or should the "independent" college student be left to recognize and repair her deficiencies with no limiting of the non-academic activities which leave her too little time for study? Unfortunately, no one seems yet to have devised a set of questions which will test character and by which future moral behavior can be unerringly predicted! Winston-Salem summed up the matter of admissions by listing five qualities to require: High scholastic rating (based on both grades and aptitute tests), good character, emotional maturity, good health, social consciousness. "These qualities," they say, "will make the entering student a very good prospect for a graduate and a student body made up of such girls will give the college the opportunity of doing its most effective teaching." And that, I submit, is the object of our Admissions Committee.

ALUMNAE CLUB ACTIVITIES

Because of fast increasing interest among alumnae groups to organize into active clubs we will have as a regular feature this Alumnae Club page. It has been a true eye-opener to a new Alumnae Secretary to see the varied activities and the original ideas that are reported to the office.

Newest clubs to voluntarily join the re-organization ranks are Tampa, Florida, Montgomery, Alabama, Columbus, Ohio, and Savannah, Georgia. All will hold discussion meetings this winter.

A very real step in the direction of practical application of our educational discussion series was taken by Lynchburg alumnae this fall, when, in addition to their regular meeting to talk about Mrs. Lill's article on Admission, they met to discuss means by which college graduates can aid in college preparatory education in the community, and the ways in which the liberal arts college prepared graduates for work in educational fields. The principal of a local junior high school and Miss Lucy Crawford of Sweet Briar directed the panel.

During February a number of clubs will meet with Miss Lucas. Now that travel conditions are possible it is expected that more visits to alumnae groups by college personnel will be possible.

IN THE BRIGHT IDEA DEPARTMENT WE REPORT THAT:

Manhattan Club President Audrey Betts, prepares an informal news bulletin, mimeographed and mailed by the Alumnae Office, for its members following each meeting so that they can be kept abreast of activities. The Alumnae Office would be glad to perform this service for other groups wishing it.

The Philadelphia chapter mails a new address list of its membership to all alumnae in the area each fall, with a schedule of club activities for the coming year. With advance notice, again the office volunteers!

The Pittsburgh Sweet Briar Club, besides holding regular alumnae meetings and sponsoring an annual benefit for the Manson Memorial Scholarship, have had for several years a work project, Heart House. The Pittsburgh club supplies records for the convalescent home's school and recreation program.

Wilmington alumnae continue to meet regularly to make the Daisy Dolls, a few of which are now on hand in the Alumnae Office.

Among the benefits planned for this year which have been reported to the Alumnae Office are:

Boston—an evening concert of the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Washington, Arlington, Alexandria — Sweet Briar-Princeton Glee Club.

Richmond—Marionette show of Olga and Marten Stevens "The Passion Play."

Lynchburg alumnae raised money for the Manson Scholarship by selling food at the Christmas Bazaar on campus.

Portrait of Carter Glass Presented to College

A portrait of the late Senator Carter Glass, the gift of Carter Glass, Jr., and Mrs. John Boatwright, son and daughter of the Senator, was formally presented to Sweet Briar College on January 8, 1948. It is the work of the late Stanley Grant Middleton, and was painted in 1929.

Russell C. Leffingwell, Carter Glass, Jr., Miss Martha B. Lucas and Mrs. John Boatwright

Members of the family, including Miss Meta Glass, President Emeritus, attended the presentation program in Manson Hall.

Russell C. Leffingwell, chairman of the Executive Committee of J. P. Morgan and Company, formerly Assistant Secretary to the Treasurer under Mr. Glass and for many years a close friend of his, gave a tribute to Scnator Glass at the presentation program. He told of Carter Glass's boyhood in Lynchburg, his rapid rise from reporter on the paper his father edited to owner of the newspaper and a power in Virginia politics, his career as a statesman of Virginia and of the nation, and his devotion to home and country.

Mrs. Dora Neill Raymond, Professor of History and Chairman of the Department of Social Studies, spoke on Senator Glass's relationships with the college, and the endowment of the Carter Glass Chair of Government.

"Meet the World in College Chapel"

by Elizabeth Van Aken

THE present series of Sweet Briar chapel programs, entitled "Meet the World in College Chapel" is an attempt to interpret the problems confronting all peoples today to the college student along with suggestions on how she may help solve them. This departure from the traditional service of worship, inspiration, and meditation proceeded from the premise that in essence the aim of world brotherhood and world peace are religious concepts.

The basic theme of the series has been the keynote of several other sequences presented in the chapel period during the past few years. This theme is that in knowledge is understanding, the understanding required for humane living today. The previous titles have been as follows: "My Philosophy of Life," talks by members of the faculty and staff; "The Three Faiths," student representatives of the religions most common in our country describing high points of their beliefs; "The Relation of Religion to Various Other Fields in the Liberal Arts," faculty members showing the correlation between their secular work and the religious aspect underlying all; "Americans All," descriptions of the situations of minority groups.

The present series consists of descriptions of some of the chaotic conditions in the contemporary world and the beliefs for which the conflicting forces stand. A list of the programs follows:

November 18. Introduction. Miss Martha B. Lucas, President of Sweet Briar College. On UNESCO Day, the series was dedicated to the aim of world understanding as fostered by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

November 25. Am I My Brother's Keeper? Mr. R. M. Iwanowski, Instructor of Mathematics at Sweet Briar. A native of Poland, he was a "displaced person" and has the war experience close behind him.

December 2. Chinese and Americans; Alike or Different? Miss Isabel Dzung, student, from Shanghai, China, she has been a student in this country for about two years.

December 9. Europe in the Summer of 1947. Mr. A. J. Muste, Director and Secretary of "The Fellowship of Reconciliation." A recent trip abroad intensified his interest in the international situation and a possible policy of reconciliation.

December 16. Dawn of Freedom in India. Miss Eva Shipstone, graduate student at Vanderbilt University. A third generation Indian Christian, she has taught in Lucknow, India, for the past seven years.

January 6. Religious Freedom Behind the Iron Curtain. Mr. Lubomir Mirejovsky, attending Theological Seminary in Richmond on a scholarship of the "Christian World Service." He spoke on the spiritual situation in Russia and the countries under her influence. 18 Alumnae News

January 13. The Saint as a Political Leader. Mr. Shiv K. Shastri, Hindu Information Service. Of the Lahore, Punjab, he was able to describe Hindu feeling about Mahatma Gandhi.

February 3. Gods of Nippon. Mr. Samuel Ishikawa, eastern representative of the Japanese-American Citizen's League. His work has been with the problems of the displaced in the United States during the war.

February 10. Czechoslovakia, a Bridge Between the West and the East. Mr. Milan E. Hapala, Instructor in Government at Sweet Briar. An American since 1938, he spent the past summer in the land of his birth.

February 17. The Homeless Seek a Homeland. Mrs. Margaret Liebersen, on staff of Jewish Agency for Palestine. She returned in November from a visit to Palestine.

February 24. This Land is Ours. Dr. A. W. Dejany, representative of the Arab Office in Washington, D. C. He is a Moslem Arab and will give the other point of view on the conflict in the Holy Land.

The second part of the series is an attempt to evaluate the things being done by the United States to help solve the problems of a chaotic world, and to show how the individual can be of aid.

March 9. Liberty Turns Her Back. Rabbi Lewis J. Cashdan, of Charleston, West Virginia. He is interested in immigration and will speak on the immigration laws of the United States.

March 16. Behind the Bars of Vengeance. Mr. Alfred Hassler, editor of "The Fellowship of Reconcilation." A conscientious objector, he spent much of the last war in prison and worked on prison conditions.

March 30. Reclaiming Society's Misfits. Miss Elizabeth Kates, superintendent of Virginia's state prison for women. She is concerned with preparing the prisoner to resume life "outside" and the difficulty of finding competent personnel to carry this out.

April 6. The Union of the Dispossessed. Mr. George L. P. Weaver, director of the Anti-Discrimination Committee of the C.I.O. A Negro, he will describe the problems of the sharecropper, tenant farmer, migrant, and others.

April 13. The Pathology of Anti-Semitism. Dr. Allan Tarshish, sponsored by the Jewish Chataugua Society. He is the speaker for "Message of Israel," a national weekly radio program.

April 20. Insights from Oslo. Miss Maddin Lupton, student. She was Sweet Briar's delegate to the second World Conference of Christian Youth at Oslo, Norway, this past summer.

April 27. Topic to be announced. Father Hammond, of the Holy Cross Catholic Church in Lynchburg, Virginia. He will speak on some of the means by which Roman Catholicism is promoting a better world.

May 4. With All Privileges and Responsibilities Pertaining Thereto. Miss Patricia Cansler, student. She studied at St. Andrews University in Scotland last year and will discuss concrete ways by which an American student can help to make this divided world into a whole.

Dr. Irene Huber, Chairman of the Church and Chapel Committee, labored unstintingly, as did the entire committee, to make these chapel programs possible. She gratefully acknowledges the assistance of The Fellowship of Reconciliation, the Government of India Information Service, the Japanese-American Citizens' League, the Jewish Agency for Palestine, the Arab Office, the Anti-Discrimination Committee of the CIO, the Jewish Chatauqua Society, and that of interested individuals, without whom a voluntary series of this sort could not have been

by Dr. Laura Buckham and Elizabeth Van Aken

Miss Buckham is a constant and interested visitor to the Alumnae Office. We shall miss her constructive ideas next semester when she takes sabattical leave.

HAT is the practical benefit of a Liberal Arts Education? This is one of the questions that many of the alumnae raised last year in their discussion groups and one that is often considered by faculty and students here at Sweet Briar.

It is a healthy sign that students are questioning the value of their education and are beginning to realize that they will soon have to face some of the most complicated problems that young people have ever tried to meet. Of course they are asking "Is a Liberal Arts program practical?" Naturally, too, the faculty are asking that terms be defined: "What do you mean by practical?" "Practical for what type of girl?" "Practical for what career?"

We must remember that the average Sweet Briar girl, when she comes to college rarely knows what she will be doing four years later. She may be married right after Commencement, or ten years later. She may do graduate study, she may teach or do library work; she may be a stewardess on an air line; she may enter government service or go into a business career. A "practical" curriculum therefore must include a varied as well as a sound background of knowledge. It must include methods of approach to problems; it must stimulate interests; it must develop appreciations and standards of judgment; it must encourage open-mindedness and tolerance; it must strengthen social consciousness and responsibility. Finally, it must furnish working tools that will carry over into any situation in which the graduate may find herself.

In a recent discussion on education here at the college, Mr. William Averitt of the New York Herald Tribune suggested as the best preparation for a career in journalism as wide a background as possible in art, music, literature, the sciences, psychology and the social sciences. It was upon this same philosophy of liberal education that the Group Plan of Study was adopted at Sweet Briar in 1932. By this plan each student is assured an acquaintanceship with the various fields of culture, while the "major" in the last two years enables her to specialize in her field of greatest interest. A Sweet Briar student, then, is offered a truly liberal education which should prove practical to her as she applies her knowledge, her skills and her experience to the problems of daily living.

Here are a few questions taken from Sweet Briar examinations of recent years which, perhaps, will illustrate how questions answered in blue-books may also prove applicable to daily problems and interests after graduation. Those of you who enjoy doing the brain-teasers in the American Magazine, The Saturday Review, and other periodicals, or who like to answer the questions of "Information Please" might try your wits on these:

Are you trying to make ends meet?

"A druggist sells a certain kind of powder in a rectangular box 4 inches by 2½ inches by 1¼ inches for 25 cents, and in a cylindrical can 21/2 inches high and 21/2 in diameter for 10 cents. Which is more economical to buy?"

-Solid Geometry

Have you a little money to invest?

"Compare the yields of:

"A 5% bond of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company selling at $120 and a share of common stock of the General Electric Company selling at $80 which paid $3 dividend in 1944.

As an investor buying securities, what other points would you consider in addition to yield?"—May 1945 Economics

Have you a young son who constantly asks, "But why, Mother?"

"Why is the sky blue? Why do clouds look white?"-General Physics "Explain why birds can fly whereas humans cannot."—Ornithology

Do you wonder why Junior acts so?

"Describe in detail the psychological (mental and behavioral) status of a normal child of three years."

-Genetic Psychology

Are you interested in discussing with your friends the arts and their relations to other fields?

"Art is a personal matter; but its forms vary from generation to generation, in response to changing social needs and requirements. Discuss quite fully, and with specific references, how and in what way the various musical forms were responses to social changes."—Form and Analysis—Music Theory

Do you wish to subscribe to a French newspaper so that you can get direct information on what is going on in Paris? "Using the newspaper which will be given you, translate one article, summarize one, and criticize one. Compare the paper as to contents, set-up, and 'color' with others with which you are familiar. Find the subscription rates and write a letter in French to the proper office ordering the paper for one year."—Business and Newspaper French

Are you trying to be a responsible citizen?

"Describe the good citizen as implied by Socrates' arguments in the Apology and the Crito, and indicate which of the qualities here included are desirable in a citizen today."-Greek

"What conditions are necessary to make world government a success for all? What has been accomplished thus far? What remains to be done?" -Introduction to International Politics

"The biology student, particularly the evolution student, is in posssesion of some knowledge having a direct bearing on present-day social problems, and owing to this knowledge has an obligation to society. What knowledge do you have which would eliminate 'racial' prejudice, and what could you, yourself, do toward this end?" - Evolution

"What elements in Greek and Roman civilization might serve as a guide or a warning to the delegates of the San Francisco conference."—May 1945 Classical Civilization

Will you all try to answer these?

"What are the criteria of emotional maturity? By what means may an undergraduate college assist students in achieving emotional maturity?"-Social Psychology

"Evaluate your education in relation to its modification or expansion of your 'needs.' Consider also in this connection whether it seems to have given or to have failed to give you anything toward your education as an adult." -Educational Psychology

Alumnae Council Elects New Member

Eleanor Miller Patterson, '20 (Mrs. W. Brown Patterson) was elected a member of the Alumnae Council last Fall, to fill an unexpired term. She lives in Greensboro, North Carolina, and has two children, Brown, Jr., 16, and Eleanor 13. While at Sweet Briar Eleanor served as head of tennis, and was class president her senior year. A variety of community interests bespeak Eleanor's energy and capabilities. She has served as president of the Greensboro Garden Club, as secretary of the local A. A. U. W., and is an active worker in the P.T.A., Red Cross, Community Chest, Junior League, and Charity League. The Alumnae Council appointed her chairman of clubs in Region 4, which includes all North Carolina groups plus Columbus, Georgia.

1913 Reunion Year

Class Secretary: FLIZABETH GRAMMER (Mrs. Donald F. Torrey) Alden Park Manor, Philadelphia 44, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Sue Hardii (Mrs. William T. Bell) 40 Sherman Avenue, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

First of all, I want to thank heartily those of you who replied to my letter sent out in November. I hope the rest of you will write me in February, so I may have news for the April letter.

Eugenia Buffington Walcott writes that she spent two days in Washington in September when she took daughter Betsy to start her third year at Holton Arms School. Her son, John, is about 10 aod is in public school at Tryon, North Carolina. Eugenia keeps very busy with household and farm chores and stays close to home. She wrote of enjoying a visit from Helen McMahon and Jeanette Boone in the summer when they drove down from their girls camp at Little Switzerland.

Florence Coffin Gillem says she is busy with club work and her home and that two of her great interests are her grandsons, aged 16 months and 2 months. Their mother, Florence Gillem, graduated from Sweet Briar in 1942 and Florence, Sr., enjoyed going back for her graduation. Florence's husband served as a Lieutenant Colonel in the Air Force during the war and while he was on Leyte, Florence visited Henrianne Early in Washington.

Margaret Dalton Kirk writes that her life is much the same and she has 3 darling grand-children. I saw Margaret's pretty daughter, Louise, at Sweet Briar in June 1938, when Margaret and I had a grand visit together. Margaret reports that her brother, Joe, who was at V.M.I. when we were in college, heretired from the Army after 31 years of service.

Sue Hardie Bell spends her "free" time in civic, church, and club work. She has a n.arried daughter, a married son, and an unmarried son who lives at home. She, too, has 3 grandchildren. During the war her sons and son-in-law were overseas and the wives and grandchildren lived with the Bells. Sue sees Eva Horner Butterworth occasionally and went to her son's wedding in Montelair, N. J., lest summer. She kept in touch with Miss Ruth Howland while she was at New York University and was sorry to see her go so far away as California.

Lucille Marshall Boethelt has 2 daughters.

Betty woo the Two Year Regional Award at Radeliffe where she is now a senior. The younger daughter, Margie, is a freshmao at the National College of Education in Evanston, Illinois. Lucille is interested in herbs and gardens and organized the Western Reserve Herb Society. She gives talks on "Herbs and Spice and Everything Nice" in old-fashioned costume and travels quite a bit to talk to garden groups in other states. Last spring she made a tour to Natchez, New Orleans, and Gulfport, Mississippi. If you know of a group who might be interested in this subject I pass on the information that her fee is modest.

Frances Richardson Pitcher wrote me a full account of the wedding of her daughter, Alice Dennis, last summer near Londonderry, Vermont. Alice left Vassar to marry, is now living in New York City, and finishing her college course at Barnard, combining house-keeping and academic pursuits. Frances and her husband, with their son, Jack, who is studying law at Columbia University, are in New York for the winter, though their real home is now in Vermont, where they spend as much time as possible. She makes many trips to Charleston, West Virginia, to see her mother, who is 90.

I have not heard from Mayo Tbach Tarpley but she spends her summers in Vermoot where Frances sees her. Her daughter, Trista, lives in New Haven, while her husband is doing graduate work at Yale. She is the mother of Mayo's first grandchild. Mayo's son, whom we called "Dodi," is in the movies. His stage name is Frank Latimore. He was in a number of productions, including "Three Little Girls in Blue," and "The Razor's Edge." Mayo lives in Darien, Connecticut, and when I saw her there in 1945 she was handsome and blooming and becomingly plump.

Sue Slaughter leads a busy life. Besides making a home for her mother and herself, she does church work and is president of an interracial group of white and negro women. This means 2 formal meetings a She says, month, plus innumerable committees, contacts with various officials, letters and representation, ad infinitum. I find myself creeping sleepy-eyed into the cold grey dawn to represent the Inter-Racial Council at an early morning radio clinic, or again, listening to Child Labor and Mental Hygiene talks as a representative, or helping plan for the visit of the Freedom Train. I think that the interracial work is vital and that we are accomplishing a little bit, but it's slow." In October she visited Sweet Briar as a guest of the Alumnae Council and says that fine weather, several delightful parties, and hard work made it a memorable occasion for her. She is writing summaries of the reports that come from the Alumnae Clubs on the discussion meetings. I went to the Philadelphia meeting in October and found it interesting and was impressed by the admission standards at Sweet Briar today.

A note has just come from Mary Clifton Tabb George, who tells me she has just been writing a paper for her club. She doesn't specify the subject so I can't tell you whether she is interested in Ancient Egypt or the Economics of Shrimp Fishing. She has 3 children who are married, and a 2 year old grandson in New Orleans who is her joy.

Arthritis has incapacitated your secretary for almost the entire year, ending in September. I speot 3 months in the hospital last winter, 3 months before that bed-ridden at home, and 6 months in convalescence. The doctors have done so much for me that now I am really better than I have been for years. I have 2 sons. The elder, Doo, Jr., is married and lives in Cleveland. His daughter, Ellen Lea, is 2, a perfect love of a granddaughter and my only grandchild. My younger son, Carl Grammer, ("Buzz"), is at Yale where he will graduate in June. He spent 3 years in the Army Air Force and was overseas for a year as a supply officer in Germany, but after V-E Day.

If anyone knows what has happened to Hazel Myers or Jean Staples please let me know. They are the "missing persons" of the class of 1913.

Please let me have some more letters before March 1, and do plan to be back for our 35th Reunion in June. I will give you more particulars about it in the next issue.

As I am finishing the writing of this letter on January 1, 1948, I want to wish you all a Happy New Year!

1918 Reunion Year

Class Secretary: Cornella Carroll (Mrs. K. N. Gardner), 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ESTHER TURK (Mrs. Harry H. Hemmings) 230 West 79th Street, New York 24, New York.

I haven't heard from any of 1918 except Turk and really didn't bother with cards because I feel we will all see one another in June at our 30th reupion.

Our Norfolk Sweet Briar Day luncheon was a big success, Cilla Guggenheimer Nusbaum and I were the 18ers. Miss Morenus attended! She was visiting Frances Murrell Rickards for the holidays. She is now a Visiting Professor of Mathematics at Connecticut College for Women and likes that much better than "just being retired." She looks fine and not a day older than when we struggled with Freshman Math under her guidance!

I saw Gwen Barrett Simmons for the first time since we left school. Jane Tyler Moss was there, as well as Mattie Hammond Smith, Mary McCaa Deal, Sue Slaughter, Helen Hobbs Duval, Marjorie Conper Prince, Louise Hooper Ewell, all from around our time, plus 24 others from later classes. Our new president is Martha Darden's younger sister, Frances Darden Musick and Mattie Hammond's daughter, Martha, '47, is our vice-president.

I spoke of the letter from Esther Turk Hemmings which I was delighted to receive. In it she enclosed a darling picture of her grand-daughter, Joan, her son, and herself. She looks just the same—don't see how she manages it! She also tells of her 5 year old daughter, Pamela, who is already thinking of Sweet Briar. That's the old school spirit!

Do write in news of your activities and I will pass them along. Best of luck in '48!

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: WANTED!

192

Class Secretary: EDITH DURRELL (Mrs. Edward C. Marshall), 6326 Ridge Avenue, Cincinnati 13, Ohio.

(A combination of circumstances caused the 1921 class letter to be omitted from the October issue of the News. With apologies to Mrs. Marshall and to the class we have consolidated the two into this one column.—B. V. A.)

Four of our class were back for Commencement, Ruth Geer Boice, Mattie Hammond Smith, Florence Woelfel, and myself. Florence was grounded in Chicago in 1946 and did not make it for our 25th reunion so came last year instead. She is the same old Flo, slim and svelte, and very much the successful business woman, with the Dana Perfume Company in Chicago (Chen Yu and Tabu). She is as witty and clever as always and we had a grand time.

Last summer I had a letter from Dorothy Job Robinson. She and her daughter Alice were in the States from England until Octobe visiting her mother in Ashland, Kentucky. Dotty is teaching at a private girls school, Heathfield, in Ascot Berks, England.

You may be interested to know that our former Sociology Professor, Dr. Ivan Mc-Dougle took time off from his duties as head of the Sociology Department at Goucher to reune with the class of '22, of which he is an honorary member. The years have definitely been kind to him, he is as peppery as ever and quite the life of the party! His daughter is married (the one in the baby buggy when we were on campus!) and Mrs. McDougle is quite active in club work in Baltimore. He has written a number of books in his field and one of especial interest to us is about the mission people, whom he calls the Whins, (Whites-Indians-Negroes).

After Commencement, with daughter Ann all graduated, the Marshall family headed for Michigan where we just built a summer home on Lake Leelanau, 20 miles north of Traverse City. If any of you come our way in summers to come, drop in to see us. It is levely lake country and I have been spending parts of summers there since I was a child.

Christmas as usual, brought greetings from a number of you. Betty Cole is still at her job with Calco in Bound Brook, N. J. Shelley Rouse Aagesen has a hard time keeping up with little Alice. Gertrude Anderson spent Christmas with her brother Harry in Connecticut. Kitty Davis Baynum always has a clever card, telling in picture form the latest news of her family. This year she announces the engagement of her daughter, Mary, tells about Bob's being at Lehigh, and Grier, Jr., at home in the 8th grade. She sees Ophelia Short Seward now and then when she drives up from Virginia to see her daughter, a senior at Kent Place School near Maplewood, N. J. Marg Abraham Meyer has a busy schedule, for her husband is a pediatrician in Birmingham. Io Ahara MacMillan's card was very unusual as was Flo Woelfel's. Jo's daughter and my Ann were supposed to meet for luncheon in New York during Christmas week, but the date set was during the big blizzard so they never did get together. Flo was slated to be in N. Y. too, during the holidays but have not heard how she managed the snow drifts. Mildred Featherston out in Los Angeles, writes that she often sees Peg Malone Slaton (ex '23). Mildred had an operation last fall but is quite fit again. Gert Pauly Crawford phoned me a few weeks ago on her way through Cincinnati. She and Bob and her brother, John, were on their way home from a trip east and had stopped to see her daughter, Mary, a senior at Western College, Oxford, Ohio.

This fall I had a glimpse of Dr. Leonora Neuffer (now Mrs. Bilger) who was here for a short visit. Remember? She was our chemistry professor freshman year. She looks much as she did then and is as full of pep as ever. She is Dean of Women at the University of Honolulu and head of the Chemistry Department. Her husband is also a member of the department. They both were on sabbatical leave and spending their time touring the United States looking at chemistry buildings. The government has made appropriations for a rew chemical engineering building at their university and they are planning its construction.

I myself am on the usual merry-go-round of family, Alumnae Council, Girl Scouts, Women's Club, church, and assorted way points! My next jaunt is to Sweet Briar for Alumnae Council meeting in February. It seems strange to go back and not see my child there but it is grand to have her home again. She is busy going to the Cincinnati Art Academy from dawn to dark; Ed., Jr., is a sophomore at Sewanee.

Fund Agent: BEULAH NORRIS, 130 Hazel-croft Avenue, New Castle, Pennsylvania.

(This is the letter written for the October issue of the News. An early deadline, personnel problems, and the illness of the class notes editor conspired to cause the unavoidable omission of several class letters. We are scrty!—B. V. A.)

My intentions were so good, but here the summer is all gone. I had intended writing to each of you who were good enough to answer niy note, but the weather was perfect in Maine and the water and golf course were irresistible. Julia Benner Moss and her husband spent a week with us and we talked over all the fun we had at Commencement. The rest of you missed a lot.

Alice Babcock Simons wrote that she was busy with gardening and a son, 10, and twin sens, 7. Mary Earl Slocum has 2 boys, 17 and 15, and is very active in political affairs in Minneapolis.

Alice Earley Clendenning, who taught graduate courses in Medicine at the University of Minnesota for 5 years, expected to have a job in the east this year so I hope I shall see her. Her daughter is 21.

Mary Klumph Watson has a son, '23, who was in the Army 3 years, also a daughter 21, who was graduated cum laude from Radcliffe in June. Both are interested in dramatics. Mary was sorry not to be able to get back and she says she has seen many campuses these past years but none as beautiful as Sweet Briar. Mary saw Mary Munson 2 years ago, says our May Queen is as pretty as ever.

Virginia Little is a church secretary and so busy that we New Yorkers seldom see her. And Minnie Long Wilson, whom we expected to see in June, never appeared at reunion. Between her 8 children and a job it could be she wasn't able to find the time. Margaret Marston Tillar has a baby granddaughter so her absence was easily explainable. Margaret saw Ophelia Short Seward who had been at Sweet Briar for May Day. If any of you plutocrats go to Florida on Route 301 Margaret says to stop off in Emporia, Virginia; she'd love to see you.

Emily Moon Spilman I could write reams about. She has 6 children and 3 grand-children. They are a musical family. Emily does a great deal of parent-teacher work, holds regional offices and goes to conventions. She also helps her husband in his newspaper work. He was at Bikini for the atomic bomb test. More about these busy people anon.

Betty Murray Widau lives in Winnetka in a lovely stone house. Anyone visiting there please call her! Her main interests are her garden and her 2 daughters, aged 15 and 17. Joan, the older, is a freshman at Sweet Briar.

Kay Shenehon Child has a son, 9, and a daughter, 4. Kay is very active in the Minneapolis Art Institute as well as the League of Women Voters. Her letter told of Clarita Norris Blocker, who lives in Sao Paulo, Brazil, and has 5 chlidren and of Betty Schnorbach Tackett's moving from Mexico to California. Clare Shenchon, Academy, and her husband, Fiske Boyd (my cousin) are both artists and gave a lecture at Sweet Briar in 1940. Their daughter is a promising artist and is studying at the Art Students League in New York.

Grizzelle Thompson, whom we surely thought would come up from Norfolk for Commencement, evidently took off for the mountains as soon as her job as mathematics teacher in the junior high was over. We missed you, Grizzelle.

But then, you all were missed, so start planning now for the 30th. You gals who didn't answer my note please write now for the next issue.

We all join in sending sympathy to Margaret Laidley Smith who lost her husband in May. She is planning to go to Florida for the winter. Her ward, Dorcas, has married a man in the consular service and is living in Bombay!

Saw Dorothy Keller Iliff at several of Denver's Christmas parties. She is enthusiastic about moving into their new home at Beau Mar, one of our new suburban districts. Greetings to all of you! Please '27ers take a bow while I say thank you for the help you have given me in writing this column and in making the job a real pleasure to me.

Laura Boynton Rawlings is active in the Education Committee of the Girl Scouts and on the P.T.A. board in Flint, Michigan. Madeline Brown Wood and Caroline Compton had a reunion in the fall. Mac, Jr., is attending Tulane University. Bonnie Mathews Wisdom, '28, and her husband bought a beautiful old home in New Orleans, asked the Woods over for tea, and the house turned out to be one owned by Mac's great grandfather before the Civil War.

Daphne Bunting Blair several times a year visits her sister, Dorothy '28, in Toronto.

Elizabeth Cates Wall was in New York for several days around Thanksgiving. I was in Wilkes-Barre so missed seeing her, but did see Betty Cobb Sutherland, '26 and her husband in Pennsylvania.

"Louisvillian is Honored in Chicago" reads the headline of a clipping before me. Elizabeth Cox has been elected a trustee-at-large of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults. She was the only woman of the 18 new trustees elected. Elizabeth is also a vice-Regent for the Kenmore Association (the old Washington-Lewis home in Fredericksburg, Va.)

Alice Eskesen Ganzel's brother was recently made president of General Electric of South America.

Lots of the girls wanted me to send their greetings to all of you. Among them are: Esther Dickinson Robbins; Bebe Gilchrist Barnes, who sent a picture of sturdy browneyed son, Dan, aged 1½; Jane Gilmer Guthery, whose oldest son began his studies at Davison College this fall; Margaret Green Runyon, whose card had pictures of cach member of the family, the dog and cat, their home and yacht; Sally Jamison; Rebecca Manning Cutler, who sent a picture of their 2 handsome children for the '27 treasure chest; Florence Shortau Poland; Marjorie Stone Neighbors; Elsie Morley Fink, whose oldest son, Peter, is attending Taft School.

Emilie Halsell Marston's husband is recovering from a serious illness. Their daughter Nancy finishes at Potter School, Tucson, in May. Claire Hancr Arnold and her family spent Thanksgiving in Atlanta with the Tootie Maybank Williams. The Arnolds have a "lendlease" son, 8, who is to stay with them through the winter.

Emily Jones Hodge tells about the Wilmington alumnae who meet from 11:30 to 3:00 with a pause for lunch, in order to sew the Daisy dolls which are sold at Sweet Briar and at the Wilmington Flower Market in May; receipts going to the Alumnae Fund.

Margaret Lovett has completed her training and now has a commercial flying license. Ruth Lourance Street and her family were in their new home in time for Christmas dinner. "Liɔ' Matheus Wallace sends the news that "Babe" Albers Foltz is back in Fort Smith, Arkansas. Betty Miller Allan and Russ spent the holidays with her father in Covington, Ky.

Gretchen Orr Swift's twins, Julie and Adele Staples, are attending Finch in New York. Connie Van Ness and I enjoyed lunch with the 3 of them recently. They are truly beautiful blonde girls, with the added ingredients of wholesomeness and "plenty on the ball." They were presented at the Assembly Ball in New Bedford, Mass., on December 26.

Pauline Payne Bachus sends a clipping, "Toledo Woman Writes Book on Insect World." The title of the book by our own Hilda Harpster is The Insect World. Besid:s her degree from Sweet Briar, Hilda holds a Ph. D. from the University of Michigan and is a professor of biology at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina.

"Billy" Quisenberry Marks went to Birmingham to see the Tech-Alabama game with Tootic and her husband. Jane Riddle Thornton had a reunion on the Wilmer's boat last summer (Lydia Purcell Wilmer, '23).

An excellent picture of Julia Reynolds Dreisbach's family enhances our scrap-book. The girls are dark like their mother and you would recognize them immediately. Georgie is a freshman at Sweet Briar and loves it Jerry Lou went down to visit her this fall an looks forward to 1951 when she will be old enough.

The picture of Jo Snowden Durham's 2 youngest, twins, is a real tribute to Jo a Ken. Jo hopes to come east for a visit soon. Had a grand letter from Sara Von Schilling Stanley with snapshots of her beautiful home and children. She tells of a surprise party given for the Hydes (Camilla Alsop) in their new home.

Alice Warren Fielder says she'll be back any time we have a reunion and those of us together last June agree 100%.

Beth Williams Cadigan stays busy with her children, Jeanne, 17, Judy, 14, and Dick, 10. She also participates in the extensive social service work of her husband's parish of 800.

Kitty Wilson Garnett's son, "The, Jr." is on the Junior Varsity at Norfolk Academy and Feg Williams Bayne's Charles is on the Varsity, so Kitty and Peg get together at all games. Kitty is still a counselor at Alleghany; the "The's," senior and junior, go to Camp Greenbriar, of which Kitty's husband is now part owner.

Most pleasantly surprised at the New York Sweet Briar Day luncheon to see Lisa Guigon Shinberger, '29. Those of us who braved the snow were glad we had made the effort; '27 was represented by Virginia Wilson Robbins, Alice Eskesen Ganzel, and Margaret Cramer Crane.

Thanks again for the pictures, clippings, and news of you. They are enjoyed and appreciated.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: BARBARA LEWIS (Mrs. De-Zouche Lewis Maxwell), 337 East 30th Street, New York 16, New York.

Since my last pathetic (editorial comment —??) effort to corral a bit of news about the class of '28 I have had several good letters, and will give you the news therein contained. I only hope more and more of you will take time to send me something, if only a post-card.

Katherine Leadbeater Bloomer writes that she and her husband spend as much time in the country as possible. Brad farms as an avocation and to get away from the daily grind of newspaper work; he is editor and publisher of a weekly in Arlington, Virginia. Kitty raises narcissi as well as a couple of boys. Remembering her capabilities in our Sweet Briar days I am sure she does as well with the boys as with the narcissi, which have won the Sweepstakes Prize at the Virginia State Garden Club Narcissi Show.

Katherine Brightbill Biltz, who lost her husband so suddenly and tragically in August, is doing just what you would expect—carrying on in Langhorne in the same house and trying to give her two little girls the same home life. She is trying to get something to do to keep lier occupied and I am sure will fare well at whatever she decides is best.

Alice Harrold Morgan is hoping to make our 20th reunion next year, which I hope we all are. Alice has lived all her life in Americus, Georgia, and celebrated her 10th wedding anniversary in November. She and Howard have 3 children, Frank, 8, Alice, 4, and Allene, 2. Of course the two girls are potential Sweet Briarites, as Alice is another of us who will never forget our time at Sweet Briar and feels it contributed tremendously to our outlook on life.

Virginia Van Winkle Morlidge, who was Class Secretary at one time herself and fully understands how welcome it would be, wrote a lovely long letter. She had seen Betty Harms Slaughter and husband and two daughters and they are planning to attend our next reunion. She also reported Katherine Phillips Pope and Isabelle McPheeters Stone to be even more attractive than when we were in college. Phil has 2 sons and Torchy a son and daughter, Linda, who made great friends with Virginia's Nell Lewis. Ann Beth Price Clark liad stopped by on her way to San Antonio with her son, Billy. Her doctor still advises her to go south in the winter and her husband spends as much time in Texas as his duties with Columbia and the Sloan Foundation will permit. Virginia frequently sees Betty Whitebouse Hagin, who is fine and has 3 lovely children. Betty reports that Jane Poindexter Steward lost her husband last spring; we join her in her sorrow.

Anne Lane Newell Whatley writes from Presque Isle, Maine; she still lives "north of north, and south of the border," and it is a far cry from Georgia. Her husband is out of the Army. She would love company, too, in her rambling old house if anyone ever gets to the Gaspe or Quebec. They have a camp on an island in Big Fish Lake and a little Aeronca to get in and out—sounds wonderful! I hope I can make it one of these days. Anne Lane saw Marguerite Hodnett MacDaniel on a visit to Alabama for the Tech-Alabama game.

Betty Prescott Balch writes that she thinks everyone knows there are 6 of them; Betty and Richard, Cynthia, Jimmy, Barbara, and Richard, Jr. Cynthia, 17, hopes to enter Sweet Briar next year. Betty has seen Squeak Harned several times in Chicago. Betty, along with Anne Lane, and Marguerite, is another who wants to reune, so a big gathering seems in order.

Your secretary, not content with biting off more than she could chew with this job, also is secretary-treasurer of the Manhattan Alumnae Club, and I seem to spend my life at the type-writer. It is all fun and I am glad to be able to do it. However, due to a recalcitrant interior, I had to miss the Sweet Briar Day luncheon, which was a great success. Miss Lucas's talk, as usual, was an inspiring one. We are extremely lucky to have such a wonderful person for the President of our college!

Almost forgot—I spent a week in Washington with my sister early in November and was delighted to run into Mary Virginia Culver Mann and her husband Guy. She keeps so busy with her small daughter and her house that she hardly ever sees anyone. She looks exactly the same and I could almost imagine myself back on the first floor of Randolph with Inch and Callie King across the hall

I do hope more of you will send me the occasional post-card about what you are doing and where!

Class Secretary: POLLY McDiarmid (Mrs. V. Pierre Serodino), Route 2, Box 70A, Ashland, Kentucky.

Fund Agent: Mary Archer Bean (Mrs. James V. Eppes), 33 Linnaean Street, Cambridge 38, Massachusetts.

Happy New Year—we are all one year older and one year closer to our 20th Reunion! Christmas notes, from you all, which I had counted heavily upon, were few and far between. Gert Prior, even, said she didn't know I had moved from Chattanooga. Guess she's been too busy being secretary to the manager of the Sweet Briar College Farm to read this column. Gert is also editor of The Raven, the monthly bulletin of the Virginia Ornithological Society—birds—that is—and her work includes mimeographing and mailing it as well as the editorial work.

Sally Callison Jamison's usual chatty card didn't even come. But I did hear from Harry and Esther Tyler Campbell. Their youngest child is just 3. I certainly plan to get up to Charleston while I am in Ashland and want to see Esther and the other Charlestonians.

Mace and Jo Tatman Mason were having a marvelous trip through the southwest when last I heard. The children were most intrigued with Santa Fe and its Indians. Their little Joan is recovering from a severe attack of rheumatic fever; it all sounds like a wonderful way for the whole family to insure their health.

Emily Braswell Perry lives in Chapel Hill where her husband Bill is Professor of Education at the University of North Carolina. They have 2 sons, aged 6 and 7½.

Some day we may all be bragging that we went to college with the mother of Louise Dailey Sturhahn's daughter. A junior in Sullins high school she is active in theatricals and radio work, and my spies tell me, very talented indeed. Her brother, Ted, is 13 and as yet shows no inclination toward farming as a career. Do you think, Louise, that 13 might be too young to decide? Our son, Peter, same age, is going to be a veterinarian. Louise's husband, Ed, commotes to Washington from their home in Centreville, Va., 5 days a week and spends the other 2 on farm affairs. They live just 20 miles from Lisa Guigon Shinberger and enjoy seeing her fairly often.

That's all for now, and may a happy 1948 for you bring me lots of mail from you.

Class Secretary: SALLY REAHARD, 5525 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis 8, Indiana.

Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George Writer, Jr.), 21 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York.

I knew during Leap Year I would be too busy to gather you much news so have saved some items since last fall. Am sorry they had to be edited as these letters have been rare and rich; it is a shame to have to condense them.

Wish you could read the intimate account of the home life of the R. W. Woodroofes (Lindsay Prentis) of Newton, Mass.! Lindsay says her brood remains at 4; the eldest daughter is in the 8th grade and the youngest child in 1st grade, While they are occupied being educated she finds time to do church work, solicit for hospital building, etc. The "etc." is highly interesting; you should write her for particulars!

Lindsay told of going to an alumnae meeting and tea at Carolyn Martindale Blouin's and seeing her 3 small children. I was charmed to learn that Margaret Hall Smith was there in the flesh. Martie, that culprit who has black marks in my book for at least 5 unacknowledged cards, may go on parole. She is working as Secretary to the fresident of Mt. Ida Junior College besides her home occupation of raising 2 daughters, row aged about 13 and 9.

In October I took a holiday when a letter came from Merry Curtis Loving, Lady Lovingston, that is. I hear they have an electric dishwasher! I think she sat cross-legged on the dining room table, typewriter in Iap, while a sea of legs, arms, feet, and tricycles eddied around her. Incidentally, the picture of Merry's 3 little girls on her Christmas eard knocked the wind out of me. It looked like a Gainsborough portrait; they are beautiful and blonde, so demure in their Sunday smocked dresses I can't believe they could make the bedlam their mama describes.

Merry said she saw Evelyn Ware Saunders with her little girl, Sally, for the first time in many years, though they live about 10 miles apart. Said Evelyn lives in the old Saunders home, "Harewood," and her post office is Roselend, Virginia.

Also, Merry, on a monthly shopping tour in Lynchburg, ran into Jette Baker Davidson this fall. Jette was "roosting in a sidewalk booth, tatting or crocheting or something, celling tickets to a charity ball game." I find our Mme. La Farge has 4 children, aged approximately as follows—Suejette, 14, Jimmie, 12, Willie, 5, and Sally, 2.

Wondrous good fortune has come to 2 old cronies of our number. Reunited as next-door neighbors are Alice Tucker Jones Taylor and Mary Moss Powell since Tuck has moved to Baltimore where her husband will be rector of St. David's Episcopal Church. I nominate them for a new Class Secretary!

Somebody please write Laura Lee Sage Horner and reassure her. She claims none of the "old gang" will remember her but sends a thrilling accounting. She has been living in Biltmore Forest. Asheville, off and on for 16 years and is there now with her lawyer husband and 6 children. This, she adds modestly, includes a boy and girl set of twins! We need a snapshot! She has recently served as Junior League President and went to the conference at Coronado last spring. Had a wonderful time but thinks that will end her travels for a while. By the way, both delegates to the A.J.L.A. conference from Indianapolis were Sweet Briar alumnae, Mary Fulton Garstang and Frances Morrison Ruddell.

Esther Shearman Gray has moved to Pottstown from Kenilworth and I think when any of you are in that part of the country you ought to make it a point to stop there as an inspirational pilgrimage! What she has been doing, besides her daily housekeeping for a doctor husband and children, Carolyn, aged 14, and Bobby, who is 10, will strain your credulity. She herself admits that she did not answer the questionnaire sent by Sweet Briar during the war because it sounded so unbelievable. All she mentioned to me concerning those hectic days is, "I still do camp and hospital work for the Red Cross but am no longer Chairman." Now train your bifocals on this: Esther serves as Secretary of the Town Hall, helped to organize and is a director of Community Concerts, is learning from the editor of a local paper how to be a reporter and publicity agent, is director (8th year) of Junior Activities of the Country Club-handling sports and entertainment program for over 300 children ranging from 6 months to 21 years, is starting an amateur children's theatre this year, served for the 9th year as Chairman of the Junior Catillion at Christmas, teaches a teen-age Sunday School class, and for diversion from her efforts for the younger generation she gives an occasional lecture on International Politics. Nothing wrong with that metabolism!

Class Secretary: Martha McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman), 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio,

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA COOKE (Mrs. Frederick W. Rea) 650 Bexley Avenue, Marion, Ohio

Since I could find no time to send out cards this quarter my column will perforce be briefer.

My ever-faithful correspondent, Split Clark sent a card and a letter! She was doing substitute social work at the Red Cross and finding herself more and more involved with other people's lives and problems, not to mention the office's onslaught of terminal leave pay blanks. She had seen Nancy Worthington at the start of camp last year. This November Nancy had an accident driving from Richmond to Washington, and spent weeks in hospitals. Her car was demolished and her injuries were 2 black eyes and a broken knee, really lucky! She is getting about now.

Split managed a visit to Helen Sim Mellen in Westfield, New Jersey. Jean Cole Lovat was to visit Split last June but family arrangements intervened. Which all reminds me that I sent a double postcard to Jean in the fall and my part came back sans message. Hope Jean will soon explain the mystery to me and send me news of her nomadic family.

Back to Split, who told me she had painted the 3 sets for the Lynchburg Little Theatre production of "Die Fliedermaus." She had been to Founders' Day at Sweet Briar and saw Ruth Hasson Smith, '30's May Queen, who is serving on the Alumnae Council.

To my delight 1 received a card from Tee Kelly Larkin, now located in Washington with her husband, a captain in the Navy. They have a daughter, age 2. During the war they spent one year in Los Alamos, New Mexico, with atomic business. Tee added that Kay Taylor Adams, whose husband is also in the Navy, has been in California with her 2 children.

This is complicated: Violet Anderson Groll wrote to Nancy Worthington; Martha von Briesen sent the letter to me; and now 1 know what Violet has been doing these many years. Violet and her daughter, Penny, age 10. make their home with her family in Brooklyn. Violet is a private secretary with the law firm of Root, Ballantine, Harlan, Bushby, and Palmer in New York and is delighted with her work. Penny is most attractive and many of you may have seen her picture, used on a poster for the opening of the 37th T.B. Christmas Seal Sale in greater New York, (several years ago when Violet was working for the National Tuberculosis Association). Penny was a real trouper, posed for newspapers valiantly, and at the age of 7! Violet has visited Whit Pearsall Smith several times at Wrightsville Beach where she saw Jessie Hall Myers, Virginia Bellamy Ruffin, '32, and Edith Graham.

My activities during the past months have been limited mostly to hurried trips to Cincinnati, where I saw Katherine Cornell in "Anthony and Cleopatra" on its trial run. Ran into Jane Muhlberg Halverstadt on one of my treks, looking as lovely as always. She was on her way to a Sweet Briar tea at Mary Huntington Harrison's ('29), and I was sad to decline her invitation to join them. Jane told me that Margaret Lee Thompson and her husband, who is on the staff of the Cincinnati Inquirer, had a trip abroad last summer and are living in Washington.

Shepard and I saw Polly Woodward Hill and Bob on a week-end in Cincinnati. The men talked ducks and decoys so hard that we scarcely got a word in but hope for a chatty visit soon.

Lunched in Dayton with Mary Stuart Kelso Clegg several times. Her daughter, Carolyn, the class baby, is a stunning young lady. She attends the Grier School near Philadelphia.

Answer to quiz on page 19.

A LIBERAL ARTS EDUCATION

Christmas cards came from Dorothy Ayres Holt, still living in Hampton, Conn. and from Phoebe Rowe Peters, back in Rochester, N. Y., after the war years in Oak Ridge.

Our young Shippy spent a week of the holidays in Chattanooga as the guest of Mary Shelton Charles' (29) son, George. The highlight of the trip was wearing a borrowed tuxedo on New Year's Eve; making me seem as old and tired as I feel after the most hectic "holiday" season ever.

Happy New Year to you all!

1933

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: ANNE MARVIN, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Mrs. WILLIAM K. STUBBS (Sue Graves), 2105 Island Drive, Monroe, Louisiana.

Be sure to attend our 15th Reunion in June. There should be a good many back for such an occasion.

We still have many lost classmates. The list was published in the October issue and since then only 3 have been located.

Frances Neville Newberry found some of the lost 33-ites. Eleanor Niggli Tyler lives in Austin, Texas, with her husband and 2 daughters. Mabel Hickman Flaitz lives in Houston. Frances saw Eleanor and talked to Mabel on the phone last summer. She has also seen Marjorie Kay Peebles, Martha De-Lay Bradshaw, and Betty Cassidy Evans. Marjorie has a new home in Houston, Martha's husband is out of service and they are back in their home in Tyler, and Betty and John are in Boulder, Colorado.

Allice Baldwin is Mrs. Arthur Kells and has a daughter, Martha, who is a little over a year old. Dotty Hedges Cushing has 3 daughters, Cheryl, age 8, Pamela, 3, and baby Honoree, born on September 30.

Jeannette Shambaugh Stein is also the busy mother of 3 girls, Nancy, 4th grade, Susan, 2nd grade, and Edith Carol, 4, who is in nursery school. Jeannette is active in the League of Women Voters. She lives near Emma Knowlton Lytle '32. They were together at both Radcliffe and Sweet Briar.

Kitty Gochnaner Slater wrote a wonderful long newsy letter. Last summer she and her husband spent several days with Kitty Howze Maclellan in Chattanooga. Kitty has adopted a baby girl, Anne Llewellyn. The Maclellans have a lovely big house on Lookout Mountain with a gorgeous view from their picture window. While there she saw Sara Honston Baker, Margaret Anstin Johnson (who has 3 daughters), and Mary E. Clemons Porzeius.

The Slaters went to a wedding in Highlands, North Carolina, and saw Judy Halli-Burton Burnett '35. Kitty writes of her family too. "In the Trinity Horse Show my daughter Anne, 2, won a ribbon on her pony in the lead line class, led by clder brother Nicky, 6."

Kitty saw Mary Spalding Osterman who is living in Richmond with her sister. Mary's daughter, Anne, is about 8 and her son about 9. Kitty sees Frances Seneenditer Stewart, '31, in Upperville quite often at horse shows, races, etc. She also had had a letter from Margaret Green, ex '29, who has been in Santiago, Chile, for the past 4 years. Margaret went down for skiing and liked it so well that she stayed. She is secretary to the U. S. Naval Attache.

Lillian G. Allison was married last June 21 to John L. Redman, Jr., and they are living in Wynnewood. Pa.

Margaret Milam is in Germany in the Personnel Division E.E.S. headquarters, of the European Command. During the war she was in India with the Red Cross.

Mary Buick is doing Red Cross Gray Lady work at the Veterans' Hospital.

Mary Neville Sieman and her husband have bought a house in North Platte, Nebraska. Their little Mary Ann is 7. Mary is president of her 'Church Guild.

Jane Taylor Lacy, in San Antonio, Texas, keeps very busy with her boys, aged 6 and 9. She is Chairman of her Garden Club, in the P.T.A., and works for the Cub Scouts.

Betty Schlenck Campbell has been living in St. Louis for the past 5 years. She has 3 daughters, Paula, 13, Happy, 10, and Beth, 2. Her husband is manager of the radio station KMOX. Betty keeps busy every minute with her family and Girl Scouting.

Dora Tracy Ridgly has been found. She is living in Columbus, Ohio.

Marjorie Morse Emling, her husband, and 5 year old daughter, Elaine, have been in York, Pa., for a few years. Last summer they had a wonderful trip through the Great Smokies and also stopped at Sweet Briar for a few hours while Marjorie proudly showed the campus to her husband.

Margery Gubelman Hastert's fine letter arrived today. They sailed from Hawaii on August 1 and were away for over 3 months. The family, that is Marge, her husband, and 3 children (Mark, 7, and the twins, 41/2), and their Japanese maid, covered most of the United States and part of Canada and had a glorious time. They even drove about Sweet Briar one evening. While in New York they saw Lois Foster Moore and Ruth Daties Young. The family spent 3 weeks in northern Michigan in a cottage near sister Hallie Gubelman Knowles', '29. The highlights for the children were riding on the Streamliner from Los Angeles to Chicago (there are no trains on the islands) and their first sight of snow when they played in 2 feet of it on Pikes Peak. Marge had a Sweet Briar Day Iuncheon in Hawaii with 6 alumnae present!

I worked hard on the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal drive and knit Christmas orders for Sara Hadley in New York so my past weeks have been full. I am still knitting orders but not under pressure.

Happy 1948 to all of you.

1935

Class Secretary: JACQUELYNE STRICKLAND (Mrs. Edward J. Dwelle, Jr.), 4910 Arapahoe Avenue, Jacksonville 5, Florida.

Fund Agent: GENEVA CROSSMAN (Mrs. E. S. Stevens) 2151 Walnut Lake Road, R.F.D. I. Birmingham, Michigan.

1 hope that each of you made a New Year's resolution to drop me a card more often so that 1 can pass on your news to our friends. We were sorry the October letter did not make the deadline (editorial comment—we were too!) and promise to be more prompt in the future.

I saw several Briarites last summer and enjoyed renewing old friendships. Judy Halli-Burton Burnett came to Blowing Rock, N. C., for a visit with Cordelia Penn Cannon, '34. At the same place I saw Banks McPherson Harper whose second daughter is a year old. Banks lives in Hickory, N. C. Dolly Nicholson Tate, '37, was also there with her family.

Becky Young Frazer spent her vacation in High Hampton, N. C., and while there enjoyed seeing Mary Poindexter Willingham, '36, Jane Shelton Williams, '36, and Ruth Robinson Madison, '36.

Mary Willis Kempe is living in Orange, Virginia, and is happy to be back "home in Virginia." Mary says lots of alumnae friends are nearby.

Mary Whipple Clark writes that her 3 children curtail almost all other activities. Her youngest, Mary Allison Clark, is 1 year old. Saralynn is 8 and Rick is 6.

Grace Langeler Irvine says only that 3 children and 12 years have added a little weight. She and Vess are bowling enthusiasts.

Jean Besselievre Boley and her husband have left Argentina and are permanently located in the New York area, just outside Colchester, Connecticut. Jean hopes to show Sweet Briar to her husband soon.

Eugenia Peck Johnson reports the arrival of her second daughter, Elizabeth Eberle, in September. Eugenia is still living in Little Rock.

Jacksonville has recently organized a very active alumnae club and I can't tell you what fun it is to get together and talk about Sweet Briar, its past and its future. Saw Agnes Williams Ellis at the meeting just before Sweet Briar Day and she hopes to have news for one of the spring issues of the magazine.

Jane Mitchell Robeson with her husband and children, Molly, 5, and Bill, 7, have recently moved here and we are looking forward to Jane's being with us at the other meetings. Jane hasn't changed a bit and still is loyal to the Sewickley Herald.

Mary Ann Mason Hawkins (Mrs. Otis, Jr.) is also a new resident of Jacksonville and was with us at our meeting. We are all looking forward to seeing Miss Lucas in February when she will be here to speak before the Jacksonville Junior League.

Hester Kraemer Avery and her husband are stationed now in Fort Bragg, N. C. Hester wrote, "Have just returned from 14 months in Linz, Austria, and I can't wait to go back, the most stimulating, exciting year I've ever spent. Feel I really have a first-hand conception of European difficulties—and also that people are the same everywhere and they want only peace and security."

Mary Marks has a grand new iob in Petersburg, Virginia, teaching salesmanship, and practicing it too. Her title is Itmeran: Instructor in Distributive Education. Mary's home address is Aberdeen Farm, Disputanta, Virginia.

Judy Peterkin's work with the Girl Scouts takes her into the states of Ohio, West Virginia, and Kentucky. She is a member of the National Field Staff and finds the work fascinating. She has seen Alice McCloskey Schlendorf a good bit and they have just built a home outside of Cleveland. Alice has one child, Johnnie, aged 5½2.

Betty Myers Harding writes that sh. and Ken are settled in their own home in Westport, Connecticut. She says, "We love it and the town which is full of interesting people, artists of all kinds such as James Melten, Irankie Sinatra, and many other wed-known names." Betty is working in a dress shop to fill the long hours which fall to the wife of a commuter. She sees Dot Barnum Venter and her husband often and saw Miss Robinson in Greenwich last summer.

That's every little bit for now and please do write me soon about yourself!

Class Secretary: Aline Stump, 125 East 84th Street, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent: Alma Martin (Mrs. Ralph Rotnem), 330 East 79th Street, New York 21, New York,

Thanks to Alma Martin Rotnem who requested a bit of news along with a check from each of ynu, I have more than you would otherwise receive at this time. Also many thanks to those of you who sent word about yourselves via Christmas cards,

Alma spent the holidays in Buffalo with her family. Her son Ricky, now 5, is quite a charmer and is already following in his mother's footsteps as he had one of the leads in the school Christmas pageant.

I spent a pleasant week-end in Beacon, New York, with George Ann Jackson Slocum this winter. The twins, Julie and Jimmie, are bewitching and Julie is already running not only her twin brother but older brother, Jack, as well.

Another nice week-end was spent in L'tica with Nancy Parsons Jones and her two daughters, Suzanne and Margot. Nancy's ability in running a home and creating chocolate desserts on demand is awe-inspiring.

Ann Scudder Shoch crashed through with a note on a Christmas card. She promises a letter too! Scudder is the mother of 3, James, Chris, and Nancy. She says, "I rarely see Sweet Briar gals except Betsy High Gregg and Anne Hutchinson Fort and they are domesticated too."

Ruth Gilliam Viar is another Christmas noter. She writes, "I have 2 new jobs, Girl Scott Council member and chairman of the Red Cross Home Nursing Committee. What with two wild ones, I don't sit down much. The bright spot in my life is my new Laundromat. I can always take in washing and send Elizabeth through Sweet Briar."

The following are bits from letters written Alma:

Corinne Fentress Gray—'I have 3 children, boys aged 6 and 4, and a daughter, 1½. We have acquired a large Victorian house with wonderful grounds, even a barn . . . have solved the help problem by having a G. I. University couple live with us."

Emily Bowen Muller—"I have a son, Charles, born on October 5, 1947. We have bought a little house in Larchmont, New York."

Ruth Robinson Madison—"Although 1 was at Sweet Briar only one year, I made 3 of the closest friends I have, Jane Shelton Williams, Mary Poindexter Willingham, and Chloe Irierson Fort. We've managed to keep up with each other pretty well these past 11 years... I have 3 boys, 6, 4, and 2. It's quite a busy and a noisy threesome... I'm doing the same things the rest of you are, I'm sure, just finished the Community Chest, have a Church Circle and much too much League work. I'll really be glad when I'm forty, I think!"

Carrie Marshall Young Gilchrist—"Our family consists of Peter, III, age 8, and Marshall, age 5... My main interest besides the family is our house which has just been redecorated. With the boys in school and the maid problem better, I've taken on some outside activities again, P.T.A., Church, Junior League (of which I'm vice-president), and my Book Club which I adore."

Esther O'Brian Towle, who paints all the faces and hair on the "Daisy Williams dolls," "The dolls we make have been sold at the S. B. C. Book Shop and in Wilmington . . . At our meetings the other girls do the sewing and stuffing. I have suggested that the sewing be done by machine as far as possible to speed up our production line by about 200% and in proportion increasing our club contribution sent to the Alumnae Office."

Carol Strans Ney—"We are finally settled and, I hope, this time for good. We bought a home a few months ago and I feel as if we are back to a normal existence for the first time since the war. I have 2 little boys, Dickie, 4, and Bill, 2, which all adds up to a heetic existence. Joe is practising internal medicine in Washington."

Alice Benet Hopkins—"Our young ones are thriving . . . Christie is in Grade 2 and Alice in play school."

Logan Phinizy Johns was in New York this fall and completely demoralized me. I played hookey to see a play with her as husband Bill perferred a baseball game. Logan wrnte "Until the children (3 of them) are in college and Bill has several assistants, you'll have to put up with my breezing in unannounced." Woold that more of you would do the same!

Fuzzy Taylor Brawley writes from Greenville, "We're just living the same old life which sounds dull when you tell it but suits me wonderfully well . . . miss gadding about and the chance of seeing old friends." We hope that less than a war will bring you to New York again, Fozzy!

Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott and Fred enjoyed the football season. "The biggest thrill was when they (University of Virginia, of course!) took Harvard 47-0. We had Harvard guests that week-end who were considerate enough to wait until Sunday before they arrived."

Katie Niles Parker was at Sweet Briar for the meeting of the Endowment Committee of the Board of Overseers. Her mother and little girl were with her and a lovely time it was.

Libby Wall Saunders sent a long letter, which arrived just too late for the last issue. Libby and her husband are living in a "tiny Cape Cod cottage atop a hill overlooking Lake Washington," 8 miles from Seattle. "We've jut up a picket fence which I'll take a spray gun to any day now, and I'm dreaming ot wisteria . . . Thumper, 2 years old in September. is most wonderfol," Libby and her husband have been sponsoring and promoting the "World Cavalcade." "We've been doing research on this for almost a year. I flew East last summer, contacted agencies, and saw previews. Back in the northwest, we mailed contracts and in one week-end Gene and I had to whip up copy for our folder."

And so, dear classmates, goodbye for now. Happy New Year to you all. Please write me!

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 804 Osage Avenue, Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.), Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

First off for some news that arrived too late for the last letter. Barbara Munn Green reported that Judy Fox Smythe has a girl and a boy, and Marion Barber Burke has 3 children. In October Bubs had her third daughter. Anne. And speaking of contributions to Sweet Briar's foture enrollment, Becky Donglass Mapp has also just had her third little girl, born on the second daughter's second birthday, just to confuse things! By now we hope Wes Ward Francis is in her new home in Haverford and not sitting out in the cold as she predicted. Son Wardie she reports to be "a big blond chunk of lamb." Last year she was chairman of the Children's Theatre of the Junior League and hoped to do the same work this year if she were settled. While attending a conference in Seattle last summer she saw Boots Bogle Shea.

Grisy Deringer Plater writes that her 2 sons keep her on the hop. Last year she was president of the nursery school. She had a trip to Bermuda last April.

Anna Mary Charles Straub has no leisure moments, as she is fixing up a recently acquired house, doing Junior League work, and looking after 2 children.

Peggy Merritt Haskell says they are very happy in their new home in Painesville, Ohio, where George is co-manager of a new department store. In the spring they had a trip to Hot Springs with a short visit at Sweet Briar and a week-end in Baltimore with Dottie Price Roberts, whose little boy and girl are adorable. Getting settled and Peggy's own 3 keep her busy, but she sees Becky Kunkle, '38, quite a bit. She planned an outing to New York in January and another jaont to Hot Springs later. She's taken up riding again, converted George to it, and the children want a pony.

Jane Collins Corwin plans a trip to California in January, via Mississippi and San Antonio. Molly Gruber Stoddart had a trip to Finehurst in the fall and hopes for Williamsturg this spring, golfing on the way. Incidentally, Lollie Redfern Ferguson has finally found an apartment and is busy fixing it up. She and Frances Johnson Finley can wave at each other from their back porches. Besides moving, Lollie's list of activities sounds like "How to reach an early grave!"—giving the provisional course for the Junior League, Little Theatre and Children's Theatre, United Fund, work for the museum, and helping with Sweet Briar turnouts, Peter Dyer Sorensen says Dot Prout Gorsuch expects to start building a new home any day. She lives within 3 miles of her and Peggy Cruiksbank Dyer—they play a lot of tennis. Helen Williamson Dumont was ill most of the summer—we hope she is completely well now. Her husband was running for State Senator but we have not heard of the outcome. With a son, aged 6, a great dane, and a pet goat (!) I imagine Helen never has dull moments.

Marge Thomas Brookhart has 3 children, Barbara, 6½, Anne, 5, and Baird, Jr., 9 months. Twin Betty Thomas Wells has Joe, Jr., 6½, and Jean, 9 months. Marge is eager for news of Peggy Minder Davis. I heard indirectly that she was at Fort Leavenworth; has anyone later and better word?

Last letter I reported Vera Searcy Mc-Gonigle's plan to move to Dallas, but there was a change and she is in Abilene, Texas. Her second child, Robert Francis, was born December 28. She had heard from Dot Green Kreuzberg who has a 3rd son.

Lillian Lambert Pennington wrote a Christmas note and told of redoing their house. Son Neiland is 6 and loves school. She said that Agnes Crawford Bates will start remodeling an old house in Gloucester, Virginia, this spring. Also that Peggy Hite Palmer lives on an elaborate "farm" near Culpeper and has 2 children. I hear, too, of Terry's car which is exploring Virginia.

Mary Elizabeth Koch (remember "Mouse?") is now Mrs. John Ferguson, has a daughter named Sally, and lives here in Bartlesville where her husband is in the oil business. It was a great thrill to run into her and find her so unchanged that it makes me feel better about incipient old age.

May Weston Thompson told of Syd Gort Herpers' move to Portland, Oregon, to join Ferd.

Sue Matthews Powell likes Dallas now that she's rather settled and with a baby-sitter would like it even more. Having always lived near her mother or Wally's she is spoiled. On her way through New Orleans she saw Kathleen Esbleman Maginnis. Says Kay is very thin and hasn't been well but she was charmed by Kay's 2 children and her lovely new home.

Jackie Cochran Nicholson had a football week-end at Charlottesville with Chink and Ellie Snodgrass Park, who she sees often. Maggie Cornuell Schmidt writes that since her daughter, Ruth, is 3½ and in nursery school, she does volunteer work at Maternity Flospital, assisting a doctor working on cancer research. She saw Virginia Hardin in Chicago this fall. Dinny has been doing some riding, showing her dog, and is still with the Red Cross Motor Corps.

I spent a wonderful Christmas at my brother's in Birmingham, Alabama, the first family reunion in many a year, and we all had a grand time. Had a short jaunt to Kansas City in January and a bit of entertaining and that's all that's new with the Kleins.

Many, many thanks for your response to my plea for news. Happiest of New Year's to each and every one of you.

I am so enthusiastic over my Sweet Briar Day that I feel I must write to you while still under the spell of it. Miss Gertrude Ely, United Nations representative, spoke to us in Philadelphia. It is not my place to review her lecture here, but in connection with the United Nations I can say how pleased I was to hear of all the international work being done on the Sweet Briar campus. Chapel periods fostered by Miss Huber (see page 17) present programs of world interest. The French school adopted by Sweet Briar is flourishing, and the letters received from over there are delightfully amusing and also thoroughly heartening for they reflect appreciation and progress. The resilience of the human body is tiuly marvelous-cold, hunger and privations which we cannot even imagine have not put out the spark of hope and the will to learn and the terrific drive of man to retain his dignity. Moreover, in a period of one week, the Sweet Briar community by individual subscription, raised over $6,000. Now, that is something! I know we all are proud of our Alma Mater.

Henri Collier Armstrong, Kay Bonsall Strong, Grace Robinson McGuire, Ann Parks, Bitsy Gordan Jeffers (she and Ann got together in Norfolk over Thanksgiving), Boot Vanderbilt Brown, Jane Parker Washburn, Anne Huddleston Cheek and Virginia Wellford Farwell are all fine.

Eleanor Wallace Price has come back to West Chester from Seaford, Delaware, to live because of Sam's job. He is still with du Pont in Wilmington though often on the road. Her youngsters are just about the sturdiest I have ever seen. Ellie George Frampton is also moving to Philadelphia because of her husband's business. They seek an apartment. She has Ann 2, and the baby, Richie.

On November 12th a daughter named Susan, came to Mary Treadway Downs. I came back on the train with Mr. Lane who beamed the glad news of Martha Lane Wark's Carol on December 17th. Carol's brother, Jimmie, 3½, is staying with the grandparents and they love him dearly. Mardie and Jim may convert an old house on the Lane property for themselves. He is in the construction business.

Anne Benedict Swain has a very old house, just teeny tiny but full of charm and with amazing spiral stairs. She is fine!

Wish I could print the snappy picture of Mrs. Ted Rinehart (Betty Frazier) that appeared in the Tulsa Daily World. She's the city golf champ, and that ranks next in importance to the state championship. She was going to a wedding in St. Louis and see a lot of Bis. Ted has been working hard and since her brother had just been visiting her, she had too. The brother is sculpting Governor Stassen—some stuff, hey?

J. O. Sartor fell off Cheer (both getting too old) in September and broke her right leg above the ankle. She was in the hospital a month and is now in a cast. She expected to be in bed until mid-January. Alton is having appendicitis attacks, but at least Elizabeth, 14 months, is hale and hearty.

Jane Meissner Beauchamp's address is Box 1663, Los Alamos, Mexico. Heretofore, she has just sort of been in the wilds. She has twin boys, Paul Kurtz and Roger Bonnie, who arrived last April 18, and Ren and Suzy aren't so old. She has not been on a horse for a year, though she hopes to start hunting with a small club in Santa Fe. Coyotes are much more numerous than foxes there so that is the quarry. Her husband is now working on an electro-static generator. He is off the bomb. She was running for election to the town council, almost hoping she wouldn't be elected, for town planning is a big job. She wants you to send her a card, Virginia Wellford Farwell, and is tickled about your marriage, Julie Ridgely Peacock has been living in the country outside of Rochester, New York, with some friends, including a girl who lived with one of the same French families while she was abroad. She is with Westinghouse Electric.

Yes, I retired but I love you all so dearly how could I stay that way? Perhaps unretiring is a mistake and I will wear out my welcome, but if you are good to me and write, I will last out the year. Anyway, happy; happy 1948 and do help curb inflation, save fats, contribute to Sweet Briar College and thank the good Lord every day for all the things that we have to be thankful for. There have been some bitter pills for some of you all to take, I know; albeit, we are mighty fortunate as a group.

Please accept my deepest apologies for drawing a blank in the fall issue of the ALUMNAE NEWS. It was a case of being too late. At the moment, I'm convalescing from a recent operation. Frances Moses Turner has been a great help in every way, especially in assisting with this report. In fact, Mose got a fat letter from Martha Rector who has been a hard nut to crack. Rector has what seems to be an interesting position at radio station WDBJ in Roanoke. She claims that she feels like something fresh out of the "Hucksters," but of course loves her work. Sister Rector brings us word that Nancy Haskins Elliott has a haby girl and that David's car wouldn't start so he called on the police to take Nancy to the hospital.

This fall, Mose and I were caught in a stampede at a football game in Roanoke. We were almost pushed into Betty Frantz. Before our husbands dragged us from the melee, we observed that she looked vivacious and slender. We learned that Betty works for her father in his railway supply company.

It was nice to hear from so many people that the Sweet Briar December luncheons were successful. Polly Boze Glascock said that the Richmond luncheon at the Oak Leaf Inn turned out beautifully. Clara Call Frazier was Chairman and presided at the party. According to Polly, "Clara swears that a muscle in her right jaw was doing a spirited version of the rumba the entire time that she was on the spot, but the observer's opinion was that she was very calm and collected." Mary Petty Johnson Bedell was program chairman and Ann Page Johns read several of her poems, Polly is no longer teaching, but she has taken on some volunteer work. She is helping Mary Bedell in the Rheumatic Fever Clinic at the Medical College of Virginia. Polly says that everyone at the Clinic thinks that Mrs. Bedell dropped down from heaven, so she is knocking herself out trying to keep up with Mary. Polly saw Ruth Goodwin recently and reports that Ruth is secretary to a law firm in Richmond and is most happy about her work.

Mildred Moon Montague is wonderful. She wrote in spite of being stricken with flu. I missed seeing Mildred not long ago when we were in Chattanooga. Mildred was matron of honor in her sister Adeline's wedding in November.

The best Christmas cards of all are those with pictures of various people's offspring. Helen Schmid Hardy's card presented three handsome sons. Mrs. Hardy's new addition, David Graham, arrived last April Fool's Day. Hug says that she is sorry there are no Sweet Briar candidates, but that her boys are plenty nice. Hug must have untold strength and courage as she took her whole family to St. Louis for Christmas. Maria Burroughs Livingston's card also displayed three cute numbers. Maria spent a week-end with Parge Woods Gillette in Oxbridge. Maria did not get to see Helen Cornwell Jones and Bettie Irms Haskins, but did talk to them on the phone. Blair Bunting Both succeeded in seeing all of this group recently. Channy Haskins has inherited her mama's gay personality. It was easy to recognize Miss Patsy Gromel's picture because she looks so much like her mother, Reba Smith. Reba manages to do other things in addition to caring for Patsy and Terry. She is Chairman of the Allentown, Pa., A.A.U.W. Ann Carter Young, Cynthia Noland's daughter, looks like a future femme fatale from her picture. Cynthia never fails to answer my frantic pleas. She sees Ann Conant Weaver quite often. Cynthia also saw Arlen Simmen Mac Arthur at a Sweet Briar Westchester County Alumnae meeting, Cynthia enclosed a note from Marie Gaffney Barry. Marie and Ted have been living in a suburb of Wilkes-Barre for a year and a half. Ted is still working for I. B. M. and is pleased with his set-up. Marie says that there is a grand group of people in Wilkes-Barre and she likes being so close to Binghamton. Marie sees Dottie Campbell O'Connor and her husband frequently. They live in Larchmont with their young son.

Coralie Kahn Ferro and her family have just purchased a lovely home in San Francisco. They have a knockout looking boy, named Mike and a daughter, Nancy, born in June. It was a great shock to learn of the death of Coralie's father last August. I am sure all of you join me in expressing love and sympathy for Coralie and her mother. Marion Phinizy Jones is living in San Francisco too. Phin and Coralie see a great deal of each other.

A kind friend gave us a pound of gold (butter). I snatched off the outer covering of newspaper and stared at an attractive picture of Hortense Powell. The following was written under the picture: "Judged one of the most attractive members of the United Nations secretariat at the Trade and Employment Conference meeting at Havana, is Miss Hortense Powell of Johnson City, and Lake Success, N. Y. She was photographed at the swank Cabana Club of the Hotel Nacional de Cuba."

It was absolutely marvelous to hear from Nickey Gockley McLellan. In Mrs. Mc-Lellan's own words, "The saga of Nickie begins with Robbie's return from the War! We searched and searched for a home and for a long while it looked as if we would have to live in a glass jar, but we finally found a shack-chauffeur's quarters, to be exact, with an attached garage. After months of painting, etc., we came forth with something faintly resembling a house," Robin, Nickie's older son. is attending kindergarten and Peter is hanging around the neighborhood pasting little girls in the eyes. If anybody needs a key punch machine, please get in touch with Papa Mc-Lellan.

Connie Chalkley Kittler and family were completely snowbound. The Long Island Railroad broke down under the snow and made it impossible for Connie to attend the Sweet Briar Day luncheon Connie has hopes though of being dug out by spring!

Kay Hodge enjoyed the Christmas Holidays in Henderson. Her brother John's engagement was announced and Kay seems delighted to be getting a sister-in-law. Kay says that she can really sympathize with parents after having 2 Girl Scout Troop of 13 and 14 year olds, but she also thinks it is loads of fun.

It really is difficult to speak of my old buddy, Ag, in such a formal manner, but for your information, Agnes Spencer Burke, is in her dotage over her baby, Jill. Jill is precious looking—curly black hair and blue eyes. Ag and Peggy Caperton have a grand time together in Washington as they live within a few blocks of each other. Peggy in enjoying her work with the Capitol Airlines Company. She promises to visit us very soon again.

I have refrained from speaking about the little man in my household, but have had several requests, from classmates with daughters, to say something about Bobby II. Right now he has several straight hairs of uncertain color, two large widely-spaced front teeth, and is short and fat in physique. However, he does get around. Much to my horror, he walked when he was nine months old. To me he is still a most satisfactory child and pretty too!

I am about to take off for Florida. Please answer my postcards! Happy New Year to all and to all a good night!

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.), 670 June Street, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: BETTY DOUCETT (Mrs. John Neill) Interlaken Gardens, 1177 California Road, Tuckahoe, New York.

Happy 1948 to you all, and we'll see if there's some news around since it's been quite a spell since you've heard from me. My last letter didn't make the deadline so I will first lift some material from that, most of which was garnered from one "Dowsit." She wrote that she and Jack are so happy in their apartment in Tuckahoe.

Charlie and Betty Jo McNarney Williams became the parents of a son, Joseph Taggart, on August 2. In September they moved into a new apartment in Flushing.

Johnny and Butch Gurney Betz also have a young man to keep them busy now, John, Jr., born most appropriately on Mother's Day. On September 9 Bull and Louise Kirk Headley's 2 daughters were joined by a baby brother named for his father.

The avalanche of boys continued with Marianne White Southgate's on September 13. He is named Thomas F. Southgate, III. She also says, "We have moved from New York to Winston-Salem where the big event took place. Susan is 3 and delighted to be in the 'country' after our years of New York sidewalks."

Jackson and Helen Ann Littleton Hauslein have a daughter, Helen Elizabeth, who was born on November 26.

Andrew and Evie Cantey Marinn named their daughter, born August 8, for her proud mother. Evie said they would probably call her Evelyn as her father says he can't be calling her "little Evie" when she gets to be a foot taller than her Mama! Lillian Foulkes Taylor has her second little girl, Elizabeth Terry, born on October 29.

Ralph and Barbie Netens Young and Wendy are established in El Paso, Texas. They were fortunate to escape to Grosse Pointe, with Barb's family, from the heat of August. William and Libby Lancaster Washburn were with Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster at their cabin in Millboro, Virginia, for their vacation.

Donce wrote of Lou and Sylvia Pethick and their busy summer. Not only had they their own 2 sons, but Sylvia took care of 2 foster sons and a baby, which is a mighty good undertaking, you will have to admit.

Bobby Clark Hall became Mrs. Fred Dickey, Jr., last fall and they have a garage apartment in Kenilworth, Illinois. Bobby is working for Pontiac in Winnetka.

Jack and Martha Ingles Shrader have returned from several years of being stationed in Panama and he is teaching now at West Point.

Joan Myers Riese is living in Philadelphia and working for the Curtis Publishing Company. I've finally tracked down Charlie Davenport, now Mrs. Tyler Tuttle, living in Brooklyn.

Last June I spent a couple of days with Mimi Worthington Foster in Louisville. Shirley Devine was there so we had a hilarious time. Mimi's house, yard and daughter, Louise, are all just perfect. Shirl had been to graduation and then visited with Fran Baldwin Whitaker in Charlottesville and Peg Tomlin Graves in Lynchburg, reported that both were excellent "in the home."

Elizabeth Colley Shelton is busy settling in her new home in Atlanta, acting as president of the local garden club, and working in the Atlanta Junior League. Colley reports that Fanny Bird Jones and her doctor husband are near at hand, and they have 3 precious children, the oldest 3 years old.

A nice note from Emory Hill Rex caught me up with her activities. She and Dan are living in Saratoga Springs—ptobably in hibernation now! Dan is with the General Electric, officer-in-charge of a joint Army, Navy, Signal Corps research project involving dry ice experiments. They have a big house with fenced-in yard which Emory says is priceless for the children. The twins are almost 4 and the baby is learning to walk.

I have managed to keep domestically busy all fall. John and I keep looking in vain for that lovely small inexpensive house—obsolete, I'm sure. As head of the Cincinnati Sweet Briar Club I am looking forward to meeting and entertaining Miss Lucas in February, in our very best manner, I hope.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland Fund Agent: MURIEL GRYMES, Box 951, Bend, Oregon.

My deadline this time is January 1. Enough said? So holidayedly here goes.

There is a lot of career girl news, but fall was a big time for babies so first place goes to the new mothers, especially since one is my old roomie, Anne McJunkin Briber. Anne Schilling arrived October 28, brown hair, grey eyes, fat, and Anne says she bears no resemblance to her mother.

The second new mama is Chesley Johnson Dale, and, second verse same as the first, another girl, named Ann, Ann Elizabeth in full. Chesley says she is "a little devil with a gleam in her eye" and cute even if she does keep them bleary-eyed with lack of sleep. Despite ail Chesley is doing a little free lance photo work on the side.

Betty Lawrie Kimbrough had a daughter the same day as Junk. At least she didn't name her Ann! Instead, she is Lawrie Wells, and according to Camille Gnyton Guething, very cute. Camille herself is busy being maternal with her 2.

Little Margie Shugart Dennehy has done it again. It's a boy, Roderick Charles, Jr., born October 8. They call him Rick and Shug describes him as a "monster with a beautiful soul." She and Rod have bought a house in Norfolk.

Brac Preston reports that Beth Dichman Smith's new son is "placid and chubby," while the first has grown enormously handsome. Since and because of the family increase, Beth and Bevin have moved to a larger apartment. Brac did a nice job of answering my post card in spite of the Christmas rush. She also told me that Carol Tanner is secretary to Dean Finley (Psychology Mrs. Finley's' husband) at the Universtiy of Virginia and is writing her doctoral dissertation. Peggy Roudin is co-head of the recreation room at a hospital on Welfare Island, and is going to Nassau in February. Brac herself has had a little clipping-just had an appendectomy and had her waist-length hair cut off.

But I seem to have sprung off the offspring track. Our September baby belongs to Fayette McDowell Willett—a daughter named Louise. Ouija Adams Bush saw them during a recent trip to Louisville where she also caught glimpses of Jane, Eddy, and little Eddy Middleton, Helen Lawton, Marguerite Hume, and Ann Williams. While the Bushes were roadjobbing through Indiana, where they saw a lot of Elizabeth Munce and Sterling Netfles Murray, '44, Bob received word that his travelling days were over and he was to settle down in the New York office. They were delighted over this, especially since they have found an apartment they like in Montclair.

Wrede and Frances Gregg Petersmeyer are finally settled in Bronxville and have their daughter Susan with them again after being forced by the hectic confusion to leave her in Memphis for a few months.

I believe our newest baby is Peter and Dorothy Campbell (ex '43) Scribner's December 27 daughter, Barbara. She is their 4th child and 2nd girl. And a son was born to Ann Jacobs Pakradooni on October 6 He has been named Dikran Lloyd.

Everyone seems to moving, or at least trying to, to larger places. Nancy Pingree Drake had a time but now has found a place in Norwood, Massachusetts. Her son, David, is growing fast and can perform a remarkable nosewrinkling trick. I had a grand time staying with the Drakes this fall and with Fay Martin Chandler whose little girl is well again, and has a mass of adorable blonde curls. Saw at a Harvard dance Polly Vandeventer, '45, Adeline Taylor, '44, and Jeanne Turney's sister, who said Jeanne is studying law and working quite hard.

Brooks Barnes, only recently back from Hawaii, came over to Pings' and she looks marvelous; it was the first I had seen her new slim figure. Her trip from Honolulu, where she did regular nursing at Queens Hospital, sounds super. She flew to Los Angeles, Mexico City, Guatemala, Yucatan, Havana, Miami, and home to New York, with stopovers at each place. Brooks expected to have a nursing job in New York City by now. I missed Tookie but Brooks gave me first hand accounts of their arrival in Honolulu. Since then I have heard from Tookie about the gay wonderful welcome given them.

Word from Virginia White in the fall that she and 2 other girls have started a nursery school of their own. Frances Taylor Trigg is helping them. White spent the summer at Mackinac Island where she and her mother were with the Moral Rearmament Group.

Debbie Donglas writes that she has just returned home from Atlanta where she had head-quarters for a year as a field representative for the Georgia Citizens Council. Now she plans to stay in Savannah several months and do volunteer work.

Had a letter from Muie Grymes who is doing field work for the Episcopal Church under Bishop Lane Barton. She sets up church schools in remote rural communities. She is enjoying seeing the country and meeting the people very much. She visited Betty Weems Westfeldt at Boulder and made the acquaintance of her 2 sons. Mu says Betty is the same—still painting and working in charcoal. I pulled a premature punch when I told you she received her S.B.C. degree last June—it is this June. Pat finishes law school shortly and will probably settle in Denver.

Jane Norton was married October 4 to Major Herbert L. Duncan, Jr., U. S. Army. He is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and has his master's degree from the same place. He served 40 months overseas and is now assigned to the office of the Quartermaster General in Washington. Jane had worked for some time for the Carnegie Institute in Washington.

Another bride was Annie Laurie Malone, who is Mrs. William Bolling and lives in Tuscaloosa.

I have seen Page Ruth Foster, Mary Law Taylor, and Snookie Campbell Shearer at various local functions. Page is still working in Washington, sees Scottie Simmons McConnell and Posy Hazard Potter occasionally. She says Jane Gregory Moore has a son—another October baby as I recall, and somewhere I heard that Didi Christian had gone back home to Hunzington to live.

Do start thinking, all, about getting back for our Reunion this year; '40, '41 and '42, will be back with us under the new Dix sys-

To those who sent answers to my frantic postcards, thanks, and to those who didn't, letter late than never.

Alice "Steve" Nicholson is secretary to the Washington manager of the British Overseas Airways Corporation. Her fascinating work has led her into contact with the foreign embassies, discussions about various phases of international life, a White House Reception, and a free trip to Bermuda last spring. Lib Hicks is doing bits of reference work in the State Department Library. She recently saw Dede Enright who said that Elaine Krause was in Germany. More details will be welcome. Ellen Gilliam got her B. S. in Library Service from Columbia University. She is now with the Alderman Library at the University of Virginia. El's sideline is knitting, or trying to knit, while studying a novel course.

Barbara Beistle after graduation did Red Cross work. Recently she switched jobs to become the Assistant Director of Admissions at Flora Stone Mather College. She has her own car and takes frequent trips to interview those interested in the school. It's a grand job according to Barb. Frances Hutch Vick living in Falfurrias, Texas, has a boy, Forest Burns II, born in January 1947. Her husband, Borns, is an engineer in the oilfields.

Mary Herbert Taylor left Yankeeland for a month's visit to her home last June. But when back in Minnesota, she says she leads a typical housewife's life with a cocker to keep her company when husband Ed is at the hospital two nights a week. Mary has started taking piano lessons again and also has taken over a Girl Scout chorus. Harriet Porchers' engagement to Robert Elliott Barnwell, Jr., was announced Thanksgiving afternoon. The wedding will be in January, with Jodie Morgan and Harriet Willcox participating. will make her home in New York. Virginia Berrier works in Macy's in New York in a junior Executive Training capacity. Eugenia "Red" Etheridge was married December 26 to Leo Falk, a classmate at Long Island Med School.

Franny Freeman did some overseas entertaining in the ETO during the war and now is doing stage work in New York. Susie Landis Lancaster and her husband are in Michigan where he is doing public relations work for an aircraft croporation. Helen Datis Wohlers has a son Chad born July 23. Thirza Trant Campbell has another son, born August 2.

Dorothy Arnold Waite has a son, Robin, born July 31. She and her husband Bob, who is making pens at the Arnold Pen Company in Petersburg, finally found a house large enough to accommodate the three of them and two German Shepherds. Ruth Longmire has been Mrs. Willard B. Wagner, Jr., for a year. Her husband is in law school at the University of Texas. Between semesters in September they found time to take a trip to Monterrey, Mexico. Lou Furber Hickey, before her marriage to "Pete" on May 1 and honeymoon in Bermuda and nn Cape Cod, had a fascinating job in a poblishing house in Boston. Although it was grand work, Lou seems to think she'll put most of her efforts into housewifery (apologies to the S. B. English Department).

Leila Barnes has assorted jobs. She helps her brother, does music consultant work for the Girl Scouts, assists in such various phases of church work as the Altar Guild, Young People's and Women's Auxiliary. During a recent trip to New York she saw Lyn Dillard who has a half day job at the Cochran Art Gallery. In Washington Leila ran into Antoinette Lebris Maynard whose husband is studying law.

Jerry Cornell Means came forth with a good resume of her activities. When she could not return to Sweet Briar College, she got a job in a radio station in Gulfport, Mississippi, where she was staying with her grandmother. As Assistant Program Director Jerry wrote copy and broadcast women's programs and features. After a year's experience she went to Washington for another radio position. While here, she met her husband who was the Sales Promotion Manager. This past June he was appointed General Manager of WFAK in Charleston. And the latest installment in her story is the birth of her son, Thomas "Tim" Cornell Means, on October 3.

Anne Warren is working at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in the Egyptian Department. Her spare time is taken up with sailing and teking kodachromes when the weather permits. Last fall she and Ann Bower, also at the Museum, found an apartment together.

Julia Mills Jacobsen has been working on a children's television show for the Junior League, doing scenery, costumes, and props. Wyline Chapman Sayler, Dougie Woods Sprunt, and Jane Lesh Spurr are on the same committee. Julie said Ann McLean Loomis talked her into boying half a kiln for firing ceramics From all reports Ann is doing some exceptionally fine work along that line. Carol Cov MacKinnon was the center of attention at her recent wedding in which Julie and the Cox twins, Judy and Jody, participated. Dede Enright and Jay Skerry Tepe were among the onlookers. Carol is claiming that she has completely disabled the New York Red Cross Chapter with her volunteer work. We hope not! Jay Tepe is the proud mother of a son, John Bright Tepe, Jr., born on June 8. Her other interests include Junior League Work.

Anne Mary "Chickie" Chidester divulged that she is still a laboratory technician in Toledo but expects to take time off for a month's trip to Mexico in February with her mother. For a sideline Chickie is teaching a Sunday School class of 5th grade boys. Marjorie Keonce McGregor is taking a night course in business at Centenary College, besides being a housekeeper. Edie Mattison Henderson is building a new home on Beaver Pond Road. Lincoln, Massachusetts. They will move into it sometime this spring. Edie's husband is doing employee relations personnel work with the Sheraton Hotel Company. Ginger Osborn was married on October 18, to Lt. Col. John Malcolm McNabb of the Army Air Corps. Thanks to all of you who wrote to me, both voluntarily and in response to my post cards! I've loved each communique and my mail box has been quite an interesting one lately.

To hark back to last summer, and wedding news—"Cholly" Jones was married to Robert P. Bendall. II, on June 21 in Chatham, Virginia. They are living in Danville. Next bride was Polly Kent, who on September 20 became Mrs. Robert G. Page, in the Methodist Church in Springfield, Ohio. He was a lieutenant, j.g., in the Naval Reserve at the time of the wedding, and a doctor. They are spending this winter in Chillicothe, Ohio, where he is a resident physician and plan to move tn Philadelphia next summer. Carter was a bridesmaid.

From weddings to engagements—the five recent ones I know of. Wheats Young will marry Douglas Call, Jr., of Richmond on June 26. He is a brother of Lucy Call Dabney '42 and is now finishing up at the University of Virginia. Wheats, by the way, took a 3 months trip to Europe this summer, going to 6 countries.

The next engagement was Lil West's, announced in October, to Marion Arendell Parrott of Kinston, N. C. Marion is a lawyer and they will live in Kinston after an early spring wedding.

Crutcher Field announced during the Christmas holidays that she plans to marry John Harrison of Miami in April. Bass reports that Jo Thomas is to be married to Hunter Collins of New Orleans in the spring.

Larry reports visiting Twitter and Dan this fall, and also saw Mary Lou Holton, who is an instructor in history and French at the University of Toledo and loves it. Am afraid to sneeze for fear my conclusions will become assumptions!" She went to Jamaica during the holidays, and expects to finish in March.

Also on the last lap of an M. A. is Catherine Smart. Right now she is teaching American History at the University of North Carolina in Charlotte. Catherine tells me that El Myers married Walter Cole of Greensboro on Lynn Hannah, now Mrs. Kenneth Crocher of 739 Hinman Avenue, Evanston, Illinois, wrote a wonderful letter in the summer. She is studying voice and sees Fanny Pettit O'Holloran quite often. Franny was married this fall to Frank P. O'Holloran; note that the initials remain the same!

Caroline Rudulph is teaching history in a college in her home town of Montgomery, Alabama, and is thrilled with her work. Bev Randolph writes from Charlottesville that she is teaching art at St. Anne's School, tutoring German, and doing League work. Bev says Peg Coffman is doing economic research work for an insurance company in New York and that Peggy Todd is teaching 2nd grade in a private school in Newark, New Jersey.

Jane McRae Schroder of Savannah has a sen, Aage George III, born October 7. Tommy and Betsy Gurley Hewson have bought a new house in Dover, Mass., and Anne Hill Edwards and husband are still in Amherst County.

Helen Graeff is in New York studying for her Master's in Sacred Music at Union Theological Seminary. She has seen so many Sweet Briar girls that she's beginning to think they all migrate to New York!

Ellie Clement Littleton informed me in a very newsy letter that Joan Darby West has a daughter, Marian Elizabeth, born last spring. Boots Taylor is still a social worker in Norfolk. Ellie has a job, is synchronizing it and housework while Freddie finishes law school at Penn.

Mary Moss Madison wrote from Bastrop, Louisiana, that she graduated from Sophie New-

Report from Memphis-Ruth Houston traveled to Texas in the fall, saw Ellen Robbins in Houston. She's going to business school this year. Hallie Tom Nixon Powell had a son, Stanton Preston, in early October, Pinky butler Maxwell is busy with housekeeping. Barbara Hood and Ruth (back in Memphis now) were bridesmaids in Tempe Kyser's wedding. Babs took a domestic science course for while but at present is "gallivanting," according to Mary Vinton. Mary is teaching the 1st and 2nd grades at Miss Hutchinson's School and says, "I couldn't be better satisfied." Also teaching in Memphis is Louise Wilbourn at the Calvary Day Nursery School 2 days a week.

Rosie Ashby sent lots of news. She and Polly Van and Lovah Willcox went to New York this fall. Candy Greene is still working in New York and recently had a promotion.

Jimmy Marr Kurz writes from the big city that she sees Betsy Bowman frequently. Betsy works for Eastern Air Lines. Jimmy said that among the visitors she saw this fall were Betty Simmons and Carroll Cone Cozart and husband Bob. Jimmy has a part time research job for an advertising agency and keeps house.

Marilyn Mandle Dick has just moved to Knoxville.

Mary Jane Lively Hoffman has a baby, born August 8.

As for me, I've been working for a local paper since last fall, now have a daily column with by-line-fun, but also rather like the old sword of Damocles, always hanging over me. I became an aunt for the first time on New Year's Day and am enjoying my new status tremendously.

Thanks again for your grand letters. They arc welcome all the time! Au revoir!

Ciass Secretary: Salite Bailey, 430 North Blount Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. Fund Agent: Frances Gardner, 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk 8, Virginia. Your response to my cards was sadly inadequate and you should all be ashamed. However, since it was nearly Christmas I guess I understand and you too must understand why I can give you so little news.

In November at a football week-end at Harvard I saw Kay Vance, who is now working at Garfinkels, and Ellen Thackray, '46, who is working in a bookstore in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and Betty Ruth Cleaver, whose husband is a Princeton man. On the same trip I visited Betsy Mullen in New York and had a wonderful time. Betsy had planned a dinner party which I couldn't stay for, and it broke my heart to miss by a day seeing Ernie Banker. Kay and Sue Fitzgerald, Laura Lee Grogan, Blair Burwell, and Fanny Ulmer, all of whom were living at the Barbizon while studying or working in New York.

Saravette Royster and I did community chest work in Raleigh this fall. She is attending secretarial school and I will join her there soon. Kay Weisiger visited Saravette for 2 North Carolina football week-end and while she was here she told how much she enjoyed teaching school-a county school near Salisbury. The big scoop on Saravette is her taking the lead in the Raleigh Little Theatre production of The Glass Menagerie, and doing magnificiently, of course!

Anne Seibels made her debut in December-the loveliest occasion I ever attended. Anne had designed her own pink satin gown! My visit in Birmingham was wonderful, I caw Joan McCny, who made her debut December 27. Jean informed me that Marguerite de Lustrac expects to return to the U.S.A. in April for a visit. Saw Patsy Arms, who also came out this season.

Anne Jackson's wedding picture is lovely. She was married December 22 to Stuart Ragland, Jr.

Alex Marcoglou was married on December 26 to Igor A. Pebas, of Athens, Greece. He was educated in Greece and Canada and served with the Greek underground forces during the Ann Elizabeth Graves, with us for 2 years, was married November 23 to Gregory G. Gagarin, son of Prince and Princess Gagarin, of Russian origin. He attended schools in France and Switzerland, is a graduate of M. I. T. After 3 years service in the Navy he was released as a lieutenant. Quite an international aspect we 47ers are acquiring!

On December 27 Julia Holt's engagement was announced. He is George Lacy Coyle, 15., of Charleston, West Virginia. who was a pilot in the Army Air Forces during the war and is a student at Washington & Lee.

Carol Blanton McCord writes from Baltimore that she has a son born November 4. He is named Thomas Blanton for Carol's father. Carol had a note from Margaret Munnerlyn who vacationed in Spain, visiting Barcelona, Toledo, and Madrid. Munn attended a bull-fight—if you can stand it, I can't. Her Christmas plans were for Geneva. Carol was visited by Julia Holt, Judy Burnett, "Mush" Tucker, Liz Ripley, and Stu MGuire just after Nan Hart's and Billy Stone's wedding in Richmond.

Fleanor Stafford sent a Christmas card from San Juan, Puerto Rico, with the promise of a long letter soon.

Jane Warner Cheekmore writes that she became Mrs. Steve Cheekmore on September 26 with a hig church wedding. They honeymooned in Mississippi on the Gulf Coast and in New Orleans where they dined at Antoine's and toured the French Quarter. Alice Reese Edens and husband, Joe, promised Jane a visit but haven't yet. The Fdens are living in Monterrey, Mexico.

Jane reports that Zu is working in the Complaint Department of a Philadelphia store and enjoying the social whirl on the side. Jane also told that Shirley Levis, Ann Lile, and Jean Old are doing Junior League work. Sue Morton has an apartment in Oak Park, Illinois, where she is working, "Wash" Ferrier Ramsey and husband John, attended Alice Reese's wedding.

Marguerite de Lustrac wrote Jane for permission to use her and Zu's song, "Once in a Lifetime" for her father's song publishing company in France. All these items were reported by Jane, and I am grateful.

Maria Tucker wrote a wonderful rollicking letter and the only way to do it justice would be to print it in full. She and Stu McGuire have plans to set sail for Europe in a "self-made" vessel, pick up pocket money by catching minnows to sell to the cooks on the larger commercial ships. I want to go too. When "Mush" isn't dreaming up fantastic schemes she is housekeeping and doing substitute teaching. She had been visited by Sara Bryan, who was chairman of the Chattanooga Sweet Briar Day, and expected one soon from Eleanor Bosworth.

LaVonne Wright was married on October 14 to James F. Labahn. They are living in La-Vonne's home town, Sedalia, Missouri.

Letters to the Editor

I can not be as objective as I would like to be in writing this letter because I feel so strongly that our "Sweet Briar Discussions on Education" are useless unless we all become very practical minded and tell each alumna that she is personally responsible for the educational standards of her community.

In Miss Benedict's article "Wake Up, Alumnae," she notes that "we have failed to realize our responsibilities to our democracy in the task of evolving a way of education which will make our children more effective citizens than we ourselves have been equipped to be," This "Way of Education" is a challenge to all our alumnae and in fact to any alumna. I think that some of our Sweet Brian alumnae who have been "in on" all the plans and discussion groups have failed to realize that, while the ultimate goal of primary and secondary education is a college education, the overall purpose of these discussions on Education was to arouse our interest in Education itself-with all its many phases and problems. We have discussed the goals to which a college education strives, the making of good citizens, and then the tools (courses) with which it works and then we have discovered, through our discussions, our inadequacies of preparation for college and how widespread these inadequacies are.

If we could persuade, cajole, insist or by some other means, interest our alumnae groups in their local and state educational set up, perhaps, we could, not as Sweet Briar alumnae, but as fortunate people with a Liberal Arts training, make our influence felt in demanding higher standards for our public schools, better teachers, better salaries, and more opportunities for groups of varied degrees of intelligence. An aroused group generally becomes educated about the subject which has aroused it!

Since our November meeting I have read everything I could find on Education. From Livingstone's "Inequalities of Education" to Stanley High's article in the Reader's Digest, I have considered all angles of our public school education and I am faced with the problem of what I, just an ordinary American housewife, can do to help our public schools give my children a better education than they are getting.

I have talked to state legislators, high school teachers, junior high teachers, grammar school teachers and county teachers about this personnel problem. The legislator, for the standards I desire in public schools, says that it will take more money; therefore, more taxes. The teachers say that the standard of their teaching is lowered by the fact that over half their class time is devoted to disciplinary problems. A demoralized attitude of the whole class is the result. As parents, we must demand respect and obedience to the teachers from our children. And as citizens we must demand better schools. The public schools are the most important testing field for democracy in the world today. We, as parents, alumnae, and citizens must demand many changes in our public schools if we hope for a stable democracy in the world today.

—Amelia Hollis Scott, '29.

Ever since the appearance of Miss Benedict's article, "Wake Up, Alumnae!" I have been following the trend of the discussions concerning "Education at Sweet Briar." Unfortunately, I have been unable to attend any of the meetings of the Alumnae Club here in Wilmington. The meetings are held in the morning, and I have no one to stay with my children. However, I have read with interest some of the articles suggested, and for many months I have wanted to write what has been uppermost in my mind.

Since the majority of Sweet Briar alumnae fall into the group who marry and have children, I feel that their interest centers around proper preparation for marriage and an intelligent method of training their children to grow up and take their part in the world of today.

Let us hope that we, as parents, are vitally interested in the application of Christ's religion to modern problems, both personal and social. If this is the case, is it not up to us to impart to our children the fundamentals of true Christian living?

For the past two years my husband and I have been fortunate enough to have participated in the Discussion Group of Christ Church, Greenville, Delaware. These groups are composed of men and women—mainly young married couples—who meet together and discuss a chosen subject. Last winter the group held a series of lectures on "The Deeper Meaning of Marriage."

Like many others, I am profoundly interested in seeing that a course concerning marriage and child-training be given in the schools and/or colleges—particularly Sweet Briar.

—BLAIR Bunting BOTH, '40.

I was very much interested in the "Letters to the Editor" section in the October ALUMNAE NEWS and would like to offer my two cent's worth on the subject of a liberal arts education. So often one hears people say that they wish a college education could be made "more practical" and I must confess that I get a little tired of it. Whether or not the education a person receives is practical for him depends very much on his definition of practical—anything we study is as practical as we make it. If by practical one means that an education must prepare us for a certain job, I think that a person who defines the word that way has given the wrong interpretation to the word "education" and confused it with "training." It is not the primary purpose of a liberal arts college to give one a vocational training, although that may happen in the case of some types of jobs. In my opinion a liberal arts education is supposed to teach one how to make the best possible use of the the time and facilities available, whether he needs to earn his own living or merely needs something more or less constructive for his leisure.

A liberal arts education teaches one how to live rather than how to make a living. If we had restricted ourselves always to the practical our culture probably never would have advanced beyond the Stone Age.

As for injecting home economics, either for credit or extra-curricularly into one's college training—I feel that it is no more the function of a college like Sweet Briar to provide an opportunity for training like this than it is for the school to teach a girl to make her bed or wash and iron clothing. These are things that a girl should have been learning at home from early childhood, and if she reaches marriage not knowing how to cook or run a household, it is the fault of her home and family, not of her school.

I was graduated from Sweet Briar only three years ago, but since that time I have come into contact with enough different people and situations to be very grateful for the fact that my education was in the liberal arts.

VIRGINIA NOYES, '44.

When Miss Lucas was in Norfolk in late November she mentioned to the Alumnae that members of the faculty had talked of the possibility of requiring applicants for the degree to have some work experience, during one summer of their four years in college. Her remark made me think back through long experience as a paid worker which began at Sweet Briar, and remember especially a conversation I had with a fresh and sparkling girl who helped in our office here for three months last summer. Also, I recalled an earlier conversation with Mary Pinkerton Kerr and Sue Slaughter that seemed to have some bearing on such a proposed requirement.

Our young assistant of last summer returned this fall to Meredith College to complete another year before she enters the University of North Carolina to major in sociology. She showed stability in her purpose because her summer had been gay with houseparties and a flock of midshipmen, but not for a moment had she turned aside from her determination "to win the little white ticket from Carolina." She told me she was impressed most with the confidence in herself that the work here had given her; that she had learned work for pay is much more impersonal than study, and that she herself was subordinate to what she had to produce to keep the job. She realized, she said, for the first time that study and classroom work are all for oneself and it is up to the student to do for herself as she is willing to expend the energy and effort. Not so with work, she thought; deliver what is demanded of the position one holds or one just doesn't hold it.

When Mary, Sue, and I discussed this subject we wondered what personal habits, points of view, and skills one who has had regular employment learns that her sister who never holds a position and does only volunteer work does not develop. We thought the answer is that she learns first to subordinate thought of her own welfare to that of the business of which she is a part, to keep the hours expected of her and not to take the easy way of missing time for trivial reasons; in short, to see the work to be accomplished rather than her own personal relation to it, and to learn to get on with people, sometimes even hostile ones if necessity arises.

Another important angle that occurs to one in thinking of this subject as it applies especially to a young woman in college is that of learning to see the needs of employe. Probably women would have less trouble with servants, for instance, if they knew from their own experience that one's "day off" is planned for weeks in advance and that just any day off isn't the same; or that long and heavy jobs should be assigned early in the day and not at the last weary minute, and that quitting time should be strictly observed because the servant has a life outside her employer's home and has a right to make "dates" when she is due to be "off." And if our Sweet Briar alumna doesn't become a housekeeper but maybe an executive, she needs the same understanding of the rights and needs of those under her. Besides, if she goes into politics she would "govern" so much more wisely and generously for having been one of the governed. Carried farther and in a larger sense, would she not be able to view the questions of labor, so important today, with better understanding and judgment?

If long observation along these lines proves anything it would seem to be that the woman who has had no work experience early in her life has missed something very important educationally. A listener in conversations among employed women would often be struck, I believe, with their fuller sense of the value of leisure, their high regard for home and home life, and of their sense of making sure it is a place of comfort and shared interests and responsibilities with a husband, if there is one. A small point of comparison comes to mind in thinking of this; from association with students of another school whose names bespeak some of the more spectacular fortunes in this country today, it was rather amazing to find their judgments of people more often than not founded solely upon material success. It was not a question with most of them of intelligence or grace along any line except whether or not one had "made money." Of course, work in itself, might in no way change the basis of such judgment, but a broader outlook and seeing how "the other half" lives does have its advantages.

Eugene William Lyman

THE sudden death of Eugene William Lyman on Monday afternoon, March 15, brought the entire community a deep sense of loss. With it came a fresh realization of the significance of his presence on this campus during the past eight years.

Coming to Sweet Briar after his retirement in 1940, Dr. Lyman soon became an active participant in affairs of the college community.

He preached at Sunday church services and at weekday chapel services frequently, and he was also called upon to preach in Lynchburg from time to time. He joined in student and faculty discussion groups of religious and philosophical issues, and the students found him always ready to give them advice and active assistance in connection with various projects. In spite of a serious illness three years ago, Dr. Lyman continued his participation in the affairs of the college as far as his strength permitted.

Former students and colleagues from the faculty of Union Theological Seminary came to Sweet Briar to visit with Dr. and Mrs. Lyman, many of them on the occasions of their preaching engagements in the college chapel.

As a tribute of their admiration for his teachings and of their deep affection for him, a number of his friends, themselves distinguished scholars in philosophy and religion, dedicated a volume of 16 essays, entitled Liberal Theology, Essays in Honor of Eugene William Lyman, liberal Christian Thinker. This volume was published in 1942, edited by Henry P. Van Dusen and David E. Roberts, and the contributors, in addition to those two men, included Mrs. Lyman, W. E. Hocking, Henry Sloane Coffin, J. A. Bewer, Walter Horton and others.

When Dr. Lyman's latest book, Religion and the Issues of Life, was published in 1943, the autographed copy which he presented to the Mary Helen Cochran Library at Sweet Briar was the 60,000th volume accessioned in the collection. Perhaps his best known work is The Meaning and Truth of Religion, Scribners, 1933, which has been translated into Chinese.

In 1945 Sweet Briar conferred upon Dr. Lyman the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award on Founders' Day with the following citation: "Because your spiritual quality showing through the texture of your keen mind and your gentle ways is a blessing in the daily life of this community."

APRIL 4, 1872 - MARCH 15, 1948

Dr. Lyman took his A.B. and A.M. degrees from Amherst College, and his B.D. and D.D. degrees from Yale He was a Hooker fellow at the Universities of Halle, Berlin and Marburg for two years. He began his teaching caree as an instructor of Latin at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Massachusetts, in 1894. He served as professor ophilosophy at Carleton College, Minnesota, as professor otheology at Congregational College of Canada in Montrea and at Bangor, Maine, Theological Seminary. He next taught at Oberlin School of Theology, going from there to Union Theological Seminary, where he was professor of the philosophy of religion. Dr. Lyman was a member of Ph. Beta Kappa as well as other academic societies, and was the author of numerous books.

Dr. and Mrs. Lyman spent their summers at their hom in Cummington, Massachusetts, where Dr. Lyman wa born. In addition to his continuing interest in his studie and writing, Dr. Lyman found recreation in gardening.

"Send These, The Homeless"

by Martha von Briesen, '31

The following article, written last October, was one in a series of five interviews with faculty members, four of whom had revisited their European homelands during the sammer. They appeared in Richmond and Lynchburg newspapers.

In the intervening months since it was written, the Iwanowskis have won many friends at Sweet Briar where they have been active in the life of the community. Mr. Iwanowski is busy with his teaching, Mrs. Iwanowski became an assistant in the library in January, and Siggi is photographic editor of the Amherst High Schnol yearbook.

Meanwhile, entrance to this country is still denied to all but a few DPs. How many other homeless men and women and children, potentially useful citizens like this family, are we depriving of an opportunity in the United States? Can ue afford to waste this vast human potential?

To many Americans, prebably to a majority indeed, the term "Displaced Persons" refers to several million homeless people, chiefly Europeans, who have been placed in camps awaiting return to their homelands or resettlement elsewhere.

As a matter of fact, several thousand D.P.'s, as they are impersonally known, have come to the United States in recent months. Among them is one family which is finding a new way of life at Sweet Briar, hopefully looking forward to the time when its members can call themselves citizens of the United States.

The arrival of Roscislaw M. Iwanowski, his wife and son at Sweet Briar in September, when he began his duties as instructor in mathematics at the college, marked also the beginning of a new phase in their lives which for almost ten long years have been under the control of successive victors in the European struggle.

In the case of Mr. Iwanowski, the story goes back into the last century, when his grandfather was deported from what is now Poland to Siberia as a political prisoner of the Russians. His son, Mr. Iwanowski's father, grew up in Harbin, Manchuria, where there was a sizeable Polish community.

It was in Harbin that the young man who is now teaching at Sweet Briar was born and had his early education, including English instruction, in a Polish school. By the time he was through high school, his father had returned to Poland and Japan had set up its puppet kingdom of Manchukuo. The boy, his mother and sister then moved to Shanghai where he worked for a year at the American High School. Determined to continue his education, he saved enough money to buy a fourth class passage to Europe, landing in Marseilles in 1933. He went to Vilna, Poland, where his father was then living, to enter the university.

"To earn part of my expenses when I was a student I tutored others in mathematics and physics. I am just crazy about studying, so during the summers I had jobs tutoring in fairly well-off families, so I had room and board and lots of time for studying, and reading Shakespeare," he related.

The degree of magister philosophiae in mathematics was granted to him by the University of Vilna in 1937 and after a year of compulsory military training he went to the Warsaw Polytechnic Institute as assistant in mathematics and student of architecture.

A year later, at the outbreak of the Second World War, Mr. Iwanowski made his way from Warsaw to Vilna to join his regiment in three days, only to find that the Russians had entered the city and the war was over for Vilna, for the time being at least. Vilna was taken into Lithuania, and in 1940, along with Latvia and Esthonia, it became part of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Under the new regime, everyone had to work, and since it was impossible for any man, engineer or shoemaker, to conduct his own business, that meant becoming a government employee. Mr. Iwanowski worked as an architect in a construction planning office, preferring that to teaching, where he would be forced to propound government ideologies.

June, 1941, brought another change of rulers. The Germans entered Vilna from the east shortly after the declaration of war against Russia. Mr. Iwanowski explained that many of the Poles and Lithuanians were not surprised to see the Germans but that the Russians were taken by surprise because "they only believed the news from Russia" which gave no hint of what was actually happening. "The Russians fled without putting up any resistance, and many of them left their wives behind them," he added.

A great food shortage followed on the heels of the Germans' entry into Vilna, Mr. Iwanowski recalls, and he took a job as a waiter in order to be assured of getting some food. Many students and professors took similar employment.

After eight months of this work, Mr. Iwanowski took his family to the country near Vilna where he became a bookkeeper on an estate. Conditions in and around Vilna were not nearly as bad as in Warsaw and its vicinity, partly because the Lithuanian administration, including police, were retained. The underground movement in that region depended on London for assistance and for information, not on Moscow. He tells of listening to the BBC broadcasts in spite of the threat of the death penalty if one were caught listening. They also listened to a Polish underground station from Warsaw.

In June, 1944, given an hour and a half notice, the Iwanowskis and three other families were sent to Germany to work in a factory which had been moved to the vicinity of Hamburg after repeated bombings of Kiel where it had previously been located. They explained that they were farm workers, not accustomed to factory work, and they were fortunate enough to be sent then to a large fruit farm and nursery near Heilbronn. There they all worked in the fields, orchards and vineyards.

"It was hard work, but we had bread enough and we were well treated at this place. There were 23 workers in all, Poles, Ukrainians, Germans and one Jugoslav," said Mr. Iwanowski. The working day began at 6, preceded by a cup of coffee and a piece of bread. At nine there was a rest period of half an hour, with slight additional nourishment. Then work from 9:30 to 12; from 1 to 4:00; from 4:30 to 7. After the return to the farmstead, the stock had to be fed, the cows milked, and the animals bedded down for the night.

Their German master trusted his workers and occasionally gave them little extras in the way of food or wine or "schnapps" for a birthday or similar event. "He even called me 'Pan' (Polish for mister) in a sort of joking way," Mr. Iwanowski added. "Before we left he asked me to write a letter saying we had not been mistreated, and I wrote it and several of us signed it."

When Heilbronn was under bombardment by the Allies, early in 1945, the farm workers were sent to the city to help dig bodies out of the rubble, an experience which left Mr. Iwanowski so shaken that "for a whole month I could eat almost nothing." Life became a nightmare and for the better part of eight days they remained underground in a shelter. Heilbronn was a shambles long before the Allied Armies entered.

"April 14 was the day the Americans came. That was a happy day!" he smiled. "The Moroccans came from one side (French troops) and the Americans from the other. We were expecting the Americans but we were startled to see the Moroccans. My wife was sitting on the steps of the shelter when a Moroccan appeared. She was so frightened, but she said 'Bon jour, M'sieur' and he smiled and then everything was all right.

"After two days the French told us we were going to be moved to a camp at Bruchsal, but on the way they told us that we were free to go where we wanted. "We could not go back because that was the Front. So I asked people where were the Americans and they said at Mühlacker. So we went there, near Stuttgart. This was the only American outfit in that region.

"I soon got a job and two rooms in the former Nazi headquarters for my family to live in. I could speak several languages, English, French (my wife spoke French and we worked together on that at night), German, Polish and Russian, so they put me in charge of other D.Ps. and German personnel who were working for the Americans. I was interpreter. Some of the Germans called me 'Herr Boss.'

"In October the Americans were evacuated from Mühlacker. Some were sent home, some were placed in other outfits. I went with some of them to Stuttgart where I worked in the Military Government as supervisor of workers and interpreter, same as I had been doing. My wife got a job with UNRRA, working as a bookkeeper and medical secretary under Major Elizabeth Fleming, the American physician in charge of several T.B. hospitals near Stuttgart. The older boy was with me, working on a motor pool. (He died of tuberculosis before we left Germany.)

"The Americans let me have a jeep to go to see my wife and the younger boy on Saturdays, but I wanted us to be together so then I got a job working for Major Fleming as mess officer for the hospitals. They needed somebody who could compute and convert weights and measures and order supplies for food. The food situation was very bad at this time."

When asked whether he had previously thought of coming to America, Mr. Iwanowski shook his head. "No, not until the GIs told me 'You ought to go to the States' did I begin to think about it. The American consul arrived in Frankfurt in April and in June I made application to come to America, through UNRRA."

That meant, he related, a long process of questioning, of screening, of examination. First it was necessary to establish DP status, that is to prove that they had been forcibly removed from their homeland and made to work for the Germans. Then, in order to be admitted to this country, as DPs, they had to be able to prove that they were living in the U. S. zone before December 22, 1945, when President Truman issued a proclamation urging that 100,000 DPs be admitted to this country without reference to immigration quotas.

Next came the necessity of obtaining an affidavit from an individual or organization guaranteeing that they would not become dependents in this country. "Well, we had no relatives or friends here, but we could apply to one of the four welfare agencies (Catholic, Protestant and two Jewish). The first DPs to be admitted were those who had relatives here. The Catholic Committee for Refugees made out affidavits for us and paid our steamer passage, which they expect to have paid back. I have already begun to pay them," he added.

"I worked for Major Fleming until just before we were called to the assembly area. First we could not go because there was a coal strike, then the maritime strike. But at last in January we were told to go to the assembly area near Bremen, then to another point near Bremerhaven. There were more physical examinations, more papers to fill out, quite a process.

"We sailed on the Marine Perch which we call the Marine Pech (bad luck) because we had a terrible voyage and almost everybody was sick. We had such bad weather that we were four days delayed. In New York we were met by someone from the CCFR and taken to a shelter where we could stay for two weeks."

Land of promise though it be, America did not exactly welcome the Iwanowskis and their fellow DPs with open arms. A place to live, a means of livelihood had to be found at once. "Every day I looked for a room for us, from Brooklyn to the Bronx. Nothing, always the same. Every night at the shelter we all tell what we have learned in the day, what are the names of the places that might help us.

"My wife was able to get a job in a Polish dentist's office. At last I found two very small rooms on the east side. Then I got a job at Horn and Hardart's, working in the bakery on the night shift. I made crullers. Most of the time I operate the dough-mixing machine. At first it is very confusing; the crullers come from all sides and I cannot get them out of the way fast enough. Freddie, the Boss, helps me and tells me 'Don't get excited.' Before I left New York I helped another man learn and the same things happen to him and I tell him 'Don't get excited.'

"Working there I can get all my meals free. The meals were perfect, just perfect, and I ate and ate. But it does not feed my family and the pay is not high. I talked to the people in the little grocery store where we went to buy things when we were at the shelter and they let me sweep out the store.

"But I wanted to be a teacher, so I made applications at teachers' agencies. In the summer, afternoons before I went to work, I audited two courses at City College in New York, in calculus and differential equations, so I can learn the American teaching methods.

"I went also to the American Committee for Emigré Scholars, Writers and Artists, Inc. I have letters of recommendations from Major Fleming and other American officers I worked for, from my old professor at Vilna, Professor Zygmund, who is teaching now at the University of Chicago. I met him in New York at a mathematics meeting, after so many years.

"It was through this committee that I heard about Sweet Briar. They told me they had a letter from President Lucas and so in a short time I came to Sweet Briar to talk to Miss Lucas. She said I should send my recommendations and perhaps next year there would be a place for me. Perhaps—in this beautiful place—Maybe she saw the tears in my eyes when I turned away.

"Then one day came a telegram from Miss Lucas asking if I would take the position of instructor in mathematics. I send back my answer 'Yes at once.' I told Mr. Hardart I am leaving but perhaps, who knows, I may be back next year to work for him again. He says, 'All right. Come back and I will give you a job.' But I hope not."

As for teaching mathematics, Mr. Iwanowski pointed out that the terms are nearly universal "but sometimes I make a mistake and put the stress on the wrong syllable. The girls are very kind and they help me. Mathematics is so beautiful because it is so sure. It is ruled by logic, not by opinion, and I am glad to teach it again.

"We are so happy to be at this place. My wife has worked so hard for so many years that I am glad she has a chance to rest a bit. And Siggi is happy in his school in Amherst. He learned some English from the GIs who were quartered just across the street from us in Mühlacker, and he went to a very strict German school there after the end of the war. Then in New York he went to school too and so now he is a junior in high school. He works for an hour each evening and four hours on Saturdays and Sundays at the Boxwood Inn, so he earns something for his lunch every day and to buy his clothes. He is already crazy about baseball.

"He will soon become an American boy. For us, my wife and me, we have still some roots in the old country but we want also to become Americans. We have already been granted our first papers."

Do they find it difficult to get used to America and a new set of customs? He laughed and said, "Well, we have lived in so many different places that we can get along. We are used to foreigners."

HEAD OF FRENCH GROUP NAMED

Dr. Theodore Andersson, Yale University, has been appointed to take charge of the Junior Year in France group sponsored by Sweet Briar College at the University of Paris next year.

Dr. Andersson, who completed his own undergraduate and graduate studies at Yale University, has been associate professor of French and director of undergraduate studies there since 1946. His teaching experience includes ten years as an instructor at Yale, four years at American University, Washington, where he was professor of Romance languages and chairman of the department, and for four years at Wells College, Aurora, New York. He also served as section chief in the Division of Cultural Cooperation of the State Department.

Dr. Joseph E. Barker, director of the plan, intends to sail for France early in June. He will spend the summer making the necessary arrangements with the University of Paris for courses and tutors and will establish the Paris headquarters of the Junior Year in France.

NEW ADMISSION REQUIREMENT

In February the College announced the new requirement for entrance effective in 1949. This will include three achievement tests of the College Board in addition to the Scholastic Aptitude Test which was announced in the ALUMNAE NEWS for April 1947. Alumnae will doubtless be interested in some of the reasons for this decision. In past years the number of applicants offering the full testing program of the College Board was increasing year by year until in September 1947 more than 75% of the freshmen had taken these tests. The use of the tests has grown throughout the country so that most schools are now familiar with them: in 1943-1944 some 26,000 students took the tests, whereas this number had increased to some 70,000 in the school year 1946-1947. The Committee on Admission had found these scores particularly helpful for applicants from new or unfamiliar schools.

The Faculty approved unanimously the recommendation of the Committee on Admission for this requirement; and the Board of Overseers also expressed its hearty approval. Notices were sent to schools in February and at the same time applicants for future years were notified of the change. We believe this move places Sweet Briar in the company of colleges which have similar standards and objectives; and we are hoping for the support of the alumnae in interpreting the requirement. The Alumnae Council at its February meeting received the announcement with enthusiasm, and it was interested in the statistics and background information which had been prepared for the Board and the Faculty. We shall gladly supply copies to alumnae who will write to the Office of Admission.

International Understanding and The American College

This address was a highlight at Sweet Briar's Conference on March 12-13. Summaries of each of the addresses will soon be published in a special college hulletin.

by Sir Alired Zimmern

THE promoters of this Conference have kindly invited me, a non-American, to address you on "International Understanding and the American College," as the first of three speakers on that subject, the other two being Americans and, if I may be allowed to say so, Americans peculiarly well qualified for their task. While I appreciate the opportunity that has thus been opened out to me, I feel a certain difficulty in speaking in their presence, I will not say as an amateur before professionals, but certainly as an outsider before insiders. I am not indeed unfamiliar with the American College: I have spent some time in several, as well as on the staff of an American University where I had close contact with students both on the Arts and the Science side. Moreover, I have taught American students at Oxford, as well as year by year, at a graduate institution during the summer. But I have never become personally associated—should I say enmeshed?—in the administrative system of the American college. Freshmen, sophomore, juniors and seniors I know; but the various academic processes to which they are exposed in the course of their four years are still for me an uncharted sea. Or, to change the metaphor, they are like the old maps of unexplored Africa on which, since cartographers, like Nature, abhor a vacuum, the blank spaces were filled in with picturesque descriptive signs such as "Here Are Lions," Lions on the path of education these customary administrative processes certainly are. But this afternoon I am going to ignore their existence, leaving them to exercise their appetites upon my two companions on the platform, who will surely provide them with better nourishment. You remember the little girl whose mother had shown her one of those lurid pictures of Christians being thrown to the lions by Nero. "Look, Mom," she exclaimed, "Here's one poor lion who hasn't got a Christian!" For present purposes I am the fortunate Christian who hasn't got an administrative lion to vex him,

I propose therefore to interpret my commission in the broadest and most unencumbered sense. Here is a college composed of young people taking a four years' course, from the age of 17 or upwards to 21. What shall we do with those four years so that by the time they leave college they will be imbued with the quality described in the program as international understanding.

Let us be quite clear at the outset that international understanding is not an acquisition of the same order as, say, brench or constitutional history or the laws of physics or what we used to call Euclid. It is not a school or college subject. I am still not quite sure whether citizenship is, or can be made, a college or rather a school subject: I am certain that international understanding cannot. It is not something to be learned in class, but a quality of mind and spirit like happiness or screnity or poise. It is a fruit of education, not its root or one of its branches. What we have to consider then is how to create the conditions which will bring forth this fruit and bring it forth in its finest form.

In seeking these conditions we must, for the purpose of this discussion, confine ourselves to the four walls of an American College. No doubt some of its inmates may have the opportunity to gather experience of foreign countries, or of meeting foreigners in this country, during the period of their college life. All that is, or should be, so much to the good: but we cannot take account of it in our plans. Nor can we allow for the possible presence of foreign students on the campus, nor for the fact that among the students from American homes there may be some who have been brought from early years into contact with other cultures and ways of life. These things too may be helps: but we shall best face our problem by assuming that the student body is of homogeneous American composition.

But a homogeneous body of students drawn from the length and breadth of this great country provides material for our task very different from that in a European College or University, as I realize when I look back to the Oxford of my undergraduate days, before the advent of the Rhodes Scholars. American educators are indeed fortunate in having a large and spacious canvas on which to exercise their art. I remember in retrospect the enlargement that I received, without realizing it at the time, through living with fellow-schoolboys at Winchester and fellow-students at Oxford coming from Scotland, Ireland, Wales, and the North of England. But what is that compared with the wealth of experience to be distilled in daily intercourse with friends drawn from homes not only in this lovely and historic Commonwealth of Virginia, but in the deep South and the great Southwest and the heart of the Prairie and the Mountain States and the Pacific Coast and hard by the Canadian border of New England and from that most quintessential of all the world's great cities, for those who have the leisure to sayour its rich and manifold elements, that which huddles beneath the towers of Manhattan Island. All young Americans, through the mere fact of their membership in this widespread Republic, with its infinite variety and its continuous claim on their tolerance and understanding, reach the stage of higher education predisposed—I will not say conditioned—for international studies. This presents a great initial advantage for the American educator in the task that concerns us here. Had I not that situation constantly in mind, I would not feel emboldened to offer the suggestions that follow.

I have spoken of the character of the student body. Let us assume too that our College is a real College and not a University. By a real College I mean an institution not too large to form a true community, not too large to permit the establishment and maintenance of those personal relations between the faculty and the students and between the faculty themselves which play so large a part in creating the special atmosphere of a College campus. In ruling the University out of our discussion, I would not wish to seem to undervalue its possibilities in our field. The University too has certainly its part to play in the fostering of international understanding. But, owing to the variety and diffuseness of its activities, that part, which is not our immediate concern today, is necessarily somewhat different from that which falls to the College, the work of which is normally carried on within the framework of a central program of liberal arts.

Let me further assume—and I think it is a fair assumption—that the students in our College are divided more or less equally between those whose principal interest is in the social sciences, languages and literature and those who pursue the natural sciences and mathematics. Our problem, of course, concerns them all—the future chemist, biologist, and geologist as much as the historians, the political scientist and the linguist. We are not aiming at sending out a few polished and exquisite specimens of cosmopolitan culture and attainments to adorn the anterooms of diplomacy or the studios of the dilettantes. Our aim is to send out a whole class of young Americans, the class of 1952, as well equipped academically as similar classes from other institutions of higher education, but carrying with them in addition the quality of international understanding.

But it is time that I attempted to define what I mean—and what I take the promoters of this Conference to mean—by international understanding. As I have already said, it is not a body of knowledge, but a quality of the mind and spirit. That quality is not easy to describe in a sentence. Perhaps it can best be defined as the quality of mind and spirit which enables its possessor to feel at home in the world.

To feel at home means two things at once. It means, firstly, that you are enjoying inner peace, and, secondly, that you know where you are.

All true educators since the time of Socrates and Plato have agreed that the primary object of education is the attainment of inner harmony, or, to put it into more up-to-date language, the integration of the personality. Without such an integration learning is no more than a collection of scraps and the accumulation of knowledge becomes a danger to mental health: the specialist faces the threat of monomania, as the journalist and indeed all the rest of us are in daily danger of schizophrenia.

There would be no need to emphasize this point in this gathering had it not a close bearing on our subject. All education requires healthy minds to work upon, but international studies demand this in a peculiar degree. No one should be allowed to pursue them-at least in their more advanced stages-unless their mental stability is assured. One of the many mistakes made in the inter-war years, mistakes the accumulation of which made World War II possible, was the assumption that to bring together a group of officials from many different countries in a city like Geneva would be, so to speak, automatically beneficial, that their mere presence and mutual intercourse would exercise a healing and reconciling influence which would radiate out into the wider world. The truth is that this was not, and could not have been, the case. It could not have been the case even if the political difficulties which caused the breakdown of the experiment had not existed. For the officials themselves were most of them not prepared or, to be more precise, predisposed and attuned for their task. They were too often both psychologically and morally unequal to their responsibilities, as the more honest among them recognized when they had faced up to them. I cannot pursue this subject here. Let me sum it up in a single sentence. What to the eye of romance and seen from afar was an earthly paradise or, to adapt the title of Professor Becker's excellent book, "A Heavenly City of the Philosophers," was in actual truth an unhappy place, where most people were suffering from continuous mental strain, but were unable to apply means of relief and generally indeed even to diagnose their malady. It was cruel to fling men and women into such surroundings not only without adequate preparation but unconscious of the fact that any such preparation was needed. But, of course, those who assigned them to their tasks in those days were many of themselves equally naive-participators in that ignorance which remains bliss up to the awful moment when romance is shattered by the harsh impact of reality.

I come now to the second part of our definition. What does it mean to be at home in the world—at home in the world when you have achieved that inner calm which enables you to look out with clear eyes on other human beings—those most interesting of all objects of study, as an Oxford colleague of mine once said of them. To be at home in the world means that, knowing what you are, you also know where you are—or, to put it in Latin, it means to be orientated: orientated in space, and orientated in time.

Such an orientation is the first stage in international studies, the first stage toward an intelligent outlook upon that mid-twentieth century in which the class of 1952 will be beginning its active life.

The academic discipline which orientates students in space is geography. The similar discipline which orientates them in time is history. These two studies should be part of the regular central program of our College.

For it is geography and history, more than any other two studies, which transforms the ordinary man-the small scale being of our acquaintance on the street and in the shop—into an educated person. It is geography and history which differentiate the true traveler from the mere tourist and the contemporary historian from the mere newspaper reader. To be educated is to see the tapestry of life on the right side. But I cannot forbear to cite the immortal passage of Newman in which this image occurs. He has been speaking of the "passive, otiose, unfruitful way" in which "men of inferior powers and deficient education" "receive the various facts which are forced upon them when they travel in foreign countries." "Seafaring men" he continues "range from one end of the earth to the other; but the multiplicity ef external objects which they have encountered forms no symmetrical and consistent picture upon their imagination; they see the tapestry of human life, as it were, on the wrong side, and it tells no story. They sleep, and they rise up, and they find themselves now in Europe and now in Asia; they see visions of great cities and wild regions; they are in the march of commerce, or amid the islands of the South; they gaze on Pompey's Pillar and on the Andes; and nothing which meets them carries them forward or backward to any idea beyond itself. Nothing has a drift or a relation, nothing has a history or a promise. Everything stands by itself, and comes and goes in its turn, like the shifting scenes of a show which leave the spectator where he was." And then Newman sets up against this poor mutilated being, this starveling amidst the glorious plenty of civilized life, his picture of the educated man, the man who both knows his own self and has situated himself in the outer world. "The intellect which has been disciplined to the perfection of its powers, which knows, and thinks while it knows, which has learned to leaven the dense mass of facts and events with the elastic force of reason, such an intellect cannot be partial, cannot be at a loss, cannot but be patient, collected and majestically calm, because it discerns the end in the beginning, the origin in every end, the law in every interruption, the limit in each delay; because it ever knows where it stands and how its path lies from one point to another . . . It is almost prophetic from its knowledge of history; it is almost heart-searching from its knowledge of human nature; it has almost supernatural charity from its treedom from littleness or prejudice; it has almost the repose of faith, because nothing can startle it; it has almost the beauty and harmony of heavenly contemplation, so intimate is it with the "eternal order of things and the music of the spheres."

I said just now that the orientation to be gained through geography and history was the first stage towards an international outlook. Newman has carried us here far beyond the first stage. The personage that he has been describing is certainly a graduate student. He nowhere uses the term "international understanding," but could there be a better description of the quality which we are seeking to foster in the minds and spirits of the inmates of our imaginary college?

But, after this bright glimpse of the goal of our journey, let us return to the more strictly academic side of our problem. What form should the central program of our College take?

In devising that program we have several considerations to bear in mind.

The first is that, however excellent a teaching staff may be, College students, once their interest has been aroused, learn more from one another in free-and-easy discussions and the cut-and-thrust of conversation than from any "grave and reverend senior." This is a powerful argument—to my mind a convincing argument—in favor of a program which keeps the largest possible number of students working in the same course of studies for the longest possible time. Especially it is an argument in favor of keeping the science students and the arts students working together on a substantial part of the program over the whole four years.

The second is that for this exchange of ideas amongst students to be really fruitful they must be given material of the very best quality upon which to exercise their minds. The traditional way of providing for this is through the required reading of certain carefully selected books whose excellence has stood the test of time. If we could have Newman here with us today, I am sure that he would tell us that he owed the development of his intellectual powers, as manifested in the passage that I read to you, very largely to the influence of certain great books—great books a century ago meaning principally the Greek and Latin classics and, for the understanding of public affairs, the Greek philosophers and historians. Few such books are being written today: not many indeed have been written in what used until recently to be called the modern age. One of the unhappy concomitants of the relative decline of classical studies is the fact that students who study the social sciences without a classical background are so seldom given a great book to read and compelled to live with it—to live with it perhaps for a whole summer vacation. If our students are to acquire the quality of international understanding, they must certainly know what it is to be on intimate terms with a master mind through having concentrated their thoughts for weeks together on a great book. What better opening gambit could there be for a conversation with an educated foreigner? Why not bypass the weather and the daily newspaper and plunge straight into Plato or Confucious or Augustine or William James?

A third consideration is that international understanding in its strict meaning, divested of the woolly verbiage which has become associated with the term, signifies a relationship

SARTRE'S EXISTENTIALISM

Alumnae who heard Mme. Johnson, when she spoke on Sartre before The Alliance Française in Louisville last fall suggested that we give her views on this controversial French figure a wider audience—hence this article.

CECILE JULIETTE JOHNSON, Associate Professor of French

PIVE or six years ago Sartre's Existentialism took the world by surprise. At that time when Jean-Paul Sartre publicly discussed Existentialism with his opponents at the Vieux Colombier the police had to keep order. The crowd, composed mostly of youths and women, acclaimed an arduous and abstract philosophy they could not understand. The convinced Sartre was nevertheless perplexed over the vogue of his theories. He said:

"This success does not make good sense. It is a postwar phenomenon. In such times there are people who rush after scandals. In 1918 it was Dadaism. I am the new Dada. But it might change."

It did change! An attack launched by the writers and the thinkers against his moral concepts soon issued. While the battle was raging, women sustained Sartre's position when they gave the word Existentialism a new meaning. Suddenly it became fashionable to buy an Existentialist hat, to have Existentialist manners, to even have an Existentialist language. A slip of the tongue or a profane word uttered in polite society was blamed on Existentialism. "Excuse me," the offender would say, "I am an Existentialist today." The word remained a fad for a while; it retained its corrupt meaning till the storm was over and Sartre's Existentialist novel The Age of Reason had appeared. Then Sartre's name became famous and his theories the rage of the day.

To Sartre "Existentialism" means: crudeness, bestiality, brutality, struggle, life survival, sadness. It is all that, because it is the philosophy of war. It invents nothing, it hides nothing, it simply relates. It is the philosophy of humanity in the conquered countries, of a sad and suffering humanity forced to suffer under the invader.

Clandestine life is tragic; yet starvation and death are probably the least tragic aspects of the life of Resistance. During the German occupation the French, forced to live a life of lies, were reduced to steal from the enemy, to kill by necessity, and to keep a free conscience in the very midst of evil.

To live an evil life and accept it as such till it becomes a part of one's life does not degrade when the cause for which man transgresses is great and noble. But evil destroys whoever touches evil and this is the suffering the French suffer today. The task that Sartre has assigned himself is to explain evil, to transform it into something which will benefit humanity in general and man in particular. His philosophy does not debase man nor does it judge or condemn. It seeks truth.

Existentialism is not the philosophy of evil, as often thought. Its concepts are very humane, compatible with man's behavior. It is the philosophy of man by man.

Postwar life confronts man with an acute sense of responsibility, the responsibility of his own rehabilitation. Conscious of his needs, the man of today seeks to find himself. During the Resistance, not being able to trust anybody, he had learned to have faith in his own experience, to believe in himself alone. He had known the joy and liberty which come to the spirit of man whose concern for himself is merged in the cause for which he fights. Now that he tries to live again his former life, he finds that his standards have changed; so has the world. His inner conscience tells him to be the master of his destiny, to be free again, to be self. He courageously struggles alone but all in vain!

Sartre, a professor in philosophy, published in 1938 a novel, Nausea. At that time he was convinced that man can only make his salvation by art. Interested in Faulkner and Dos Passos, the articles he wrote on them evidently influenced his next book, a collection of short stories, The Wall. His philosophical outlook was changed by his life in the Resistance. His treatise "Being and Nothingness" shows that Sartre now believes that man's salvation is to be found in life or not at all.

His first play, The Flies probably was the most forceful testimony of his Existentialism. "Real life begins on the far side of despair." A second play, No Exit, given on Broadway, did not carry the message expected. Sartre's trilogy, Roads to Freedom, tries to explain his philosophy in the form of a novel. In the first volume, The Age of Reason, Sartre gives us the picture of five characters striving to be free; in The Reprieve, the second volume, we still see them fighting their way to freedom; while The Last Chance shows us how Sartre's characters found their freedom.

Roads to Freedom has not been well received by the general public in America. The novel is bold and unpleasant. The bitter and distorted life of the characters whose conditions require them to make a choice, their lack of direction in that choice, their apathy and complète lack of idealism, their futile efforts to give a meaning to their lives, lend a mournful tone to the whole book. The most ardent searchings of Mathieu, the protagonist, his most rational methods to find freedom, are doomed to failure. In his effort to free himself he suffers humiliation and despair. All characters suffer more from mental depression and lack of orientation in their thinking than from physical pains and privations. They are all body and no soul. Aimless, unable to make a decision, we witness the complete disintegration of their pathetic lives. Mathieu, the weakest of all because he wants to be the strongest, whose moral problem is insoluble, pursues happiness which escapes him.

Sartre's philosophy is based on the idea that "our existence precedes our essence" which means that man strives to define himself through actions and continues to do so all his life. "Man is nothing else but what he makes of himself. You are free to choose, that is, invent," repeats Sartre to all the men of his generation. "You are free, your life is yours, act."

Sartre refuses to accept the assumption that war has determined the life of millions of his fellow countrymen; that the man of today has to bear his destiny; that he is carrying the brunt of his fate. No, man is free. Free to choose even if he is in a world he does not understand. "Man is condemned to be free. He is free to bind himself."

Sartre's free choice has no allegiance to any theory or religious implication. It does not dictate to man to make his salvation, nor does it give him set rules of moral conduct. The Existentialist does not necessarily believe in God. He places his trust implicitly in man and the voice of his conscience.

It could be said that Existentialism is the study of mankind around which the world revolves. Since science has made a machine of man, has reduced his intellectual power, has enslaved him, no wonder man is bewildered, says Sartre. Betrayed by preconceived precepts, man since birth had to accept ideas that were forced upon him. Can he not be responsible for what he believes in and consequently for what he is? If so, man can choose what he wants to be and be the master of his destiny, responsible for what he is and what he can make of himself.

Even if Existentialism does not take into consideration the mightiness of God to rule over men, it refuses to exonerate the weakness of man through the laws of heredity. Through experience the Existentialist strives to become what he is. A definite choice of actions will ultimately bring him absolute freedom. Meanwhile he commits himself and all mankind in the choice he makes.

"See that your actions are examples for the whole universe," says Sartre with Kant.

Existentialism is the vindication of man's freedom. Live, be free, let come what may, and pay the consequences! Each action molds the next till one becomes what he is.

The anguish suffered by the Existentialist, from which he cannot escape, is brought by his not having any moral equations to struggle against, no spiritual outlook to fight with. He is all temporal. He wants to be a man without knowing what kind of man he wants to be. He demands absolute freedom and the absolute responsibility of his freedom drives him to despair.

It is too soon to tell if Sartre's Existentialist novels are going to influence French literature of tomorrow. The chances are that they will. As Sartre himself says:

"A book has its absolute truth in its time. It is an emanation of intersubjectivity, a living bond of rage, hatred, or love between those who have produced it and those who receive it. At the time it is a panic, an escape, or a courageous affirmation; at the time it is a good or a bad action. Later, when the time has died, it will become relative; it will become a message. But the judgment of posterity will not invalidate the opinions men had of it during its life time."

Sartre has written for his time. In that respect he has not betrayed French thought. His realism conceals nothing, needs no explanation, demands no justification. This new implacable reality, challenging as Descartes' conception of truth was for the seventeenth century, reveals in its sordidness a poignant reality: it makes the world conscious of its failures and aware of its needs.

To admit the truth, as Sartre does, to look at it squarely without flinching, to call evil by its right name, is courageous. To Sartre and to Descartes hiding the truth means perpetuating evil; and in that case, revealing the truth is to admit one's wrong and seek to remedy it. Existentialism then would be the middle point between good and evil, the evil of today and the good of tomorrow.

A Proposal to Alumnae Clubs

AST fall alumnae discussion centered around admission procedures at Sweet Briar, and the means by which alumnae could more actively cooperate with the college in admission work. From your discussion reports it is evident that many of you are aware that such cooperative activity can not only benefit Sweet Briar, but can serve as a spring-board for furthering your own interest in, and knowledge of, local schools and the varied problems of education below the college level.

For some years there has been a loyal group of alumnae who have served the college well as Alumnae Representatives on Admission. These interested women studied at length material prepared by the college and then took a written test! However, they are few in number and are in scattered cities. Often one has moved to a different locality, thereby eliminating a valuable contact for Sweet Briar in the first community.

After consultation with Mrs. Lill and the Committee on Admissions and studying admission programs of other alumnae groups, the Alumnae Council decided to propose to the various clubs within our Association that Alumnae Representative Committees be established. Such a committee would be a continuing part of an established organization rather than a perhaps temporary contact with one individual.

For your spring meeting will you then discuss the ways and means of setting up within your group an Alumnae representative committee?

For your guidance may we suggest several important considerations to be thought out carefully. First the purposes of such a committee:

- 1. To establish contacts with local schools for the purpose of interpreting Sweet Briar and its educational objectives to principals and guidance officers, and to call attention of outstanding students to scholarship opportunities.
- 2. To give general information regarding Sweet Briar to applicants and school personnel when it has been requested. Besides individual contacts many schools hold college days in which representatives of all colleges are asked to participate. Specific questions regarding units allowable for entrance, etc., should always be referred directly to the college Office of Admissions.
- 3. To arrange appointments for college personnel when they are on school visiting trips. It is also helpful to have alumnae who are graduates of the secondary school being visited accompany Sweet Briar's representative.
- 4. To see that entering students have an opportunity to meet present students at some informal gathering before coming to Sweet Briar in the fall. This pre-college contact is a valuable one.
- 5. To keep the college informed as to changes in school policy, "rumors," etc.

A second and vital consideration is the personnel of the committee. The chairman of the alumnae representative committee should be selected even more carefully than your club president, for she will be in a position to actively help or hurt Sweet Briar's reputation. Tact and graciousness must be tempered with judgment and calm understanding. She must be a good listener. Above all, she must be able to keep confidences. This is essential. If there is an alumnae representative on admission in your organization, could she not serve as your first committee chairman? See the college catalogue, pages 143-145, for the list.

Naturally for such a committee to be successful it must have direct guidance from the college. The Admission Office and we in the Alumnae Office will cooperate to see that each acquaintance chairman is kept posted as to current admission policy and is in possession of all college publications.

We at Sweet Brair sincerely hope that you will want to establish alumnae representative committees, and promise you that the very real service that you will be rendering the college will be a rewarding one for yourselves. It will give additional purpose to your alumnae activities, and will provide you with opportunities for studying your own school systems—a much needed study today. Let us have your thoughts on alumnae representative committees, and, best of all, send us the name of your new committee chairman!

Re: Housewives

Excerpts from "Clinical Note on My Profession," by Henrietta Owens Rogers, Connecticut College Alumnae News, September 1947, printed at the request of the Alumnae Council.

"We are a highly specialized professional group. And we are a large one. Indeed the profession to which we belong is numerically the largest in the land. But if we bother to look, we are faced with the alarming realization that there is in our profession a higher percentage of human failure than in any other profession in this country. For the national records show that one out of every five marriages runs on the relentless and disintegrating rocks of divorce.

enough educators have succeeded (even if they tried) in debunking our silly, sentimental and fallacious national myth: first, that marriage is a gloriously protracted honeymoon with the most divine man you know, and second, that for reasons of convention plus economic security it is better to be married to almost anyone than not to be married at all.

It seems axiomatic to me that young women should be made aware before marriage that marriage is more than a long and blissful honeymoon—and made aware, too, that many a marriage entered into as a haven of escape develops into a far worse state than the actual situation it was supposed to obviate.

8 8 8 8

When I say young women should be "made aware," I do not mean aware of the unromantic trivia which make up the average working week of the average working housewife.

What I do mean is this. When I consider the relatively few women whom I know to be happily and successfully married, I find that the one quality common to all of them—and thus, I conclude, the essential ingredient in marriages that work—is the quality of human appraisal and understanding. Understanding of the motivating factors of human behavior—in themselves, and in those with whom they are in daily association . . . Too often and far too easily are we inclined to forget that the fears and tensions and satisfactions and impulses and influences that affect us one way or another affect most people we know in just about the same ways.

Human appraisal and understanding—these are no easy attitudes to inculcate in the very young. But surely we must bend every effort in that direction—by teaching them to be good people themselves; complete people, free of prejudice and ill will, free of mental indolence. People who have, above all, the capacity of loving one another. This is the simplest yet the central precept of our common heritage of faith, and it is the one, I often think, we heed the least. Love one another.

The initial and perhaps the fundamental influence that helps in the making of such people lies in the home atmosphere where warmth and affection and tolerance are in full and daily evidence. But the stewardship of parents, the persuasive influence of even relatively happy family environment, usually comes to an end before boys and girls are fully mature and rational human beings. For most of them, the stewardship relinquished by their parents either with great reluctance or with great relief, is subsequently assumed by their schools and colleges. What then is the responsibility of the schools and colleges which assume it?

Is it to teach women students, for example, how to be good housewives? Yes. But not specifically by undertaking to teach them how to sew, cook, clean, garden, carpenter, maintain healthy sex relations and discipline children. You who are accountants, teachers, executives, personnel workers—you can make your lists of the numerous skills and techniques essential to your chosen careers. But you will not say that it was the duty of your college instructors to teach you in detail how to get those jobs and then how to keep them.

Yet it seems to me that the responsibility of our colleges in teaching us to be good housewives, good technicians, good researchers, good linguists, good whatever we are to be, is to offer students-in fact to require of them-participation in courses planned under the general heading of Human Relations. Any course taught, all courses taught-history, ethics, art, economics, psychology—should be regarded and presented as integrated parts of the study of Human Relations. Of the study of men and women who live and work and think and aspire independently and together There is no part of the human adventure which does not come under this general heading. Family affairs, national affairs, international affairs. Human Relations. That's what lovers are, and husbands and wives, and happy children and quarrelsome neighbors and national governments. That's what wars are, too, and treaties and boundaries and sanctions and coup d'etats and Five Year Plans and UN Assemblies. They are people, pure and simple-men and women-and the interdependence of men and women on one another.

Perhaps you think I over simplify my case? I wonder. It seems to me we live in a world in which many of the simplest issues of existence are made hopelessly elaborate and complicated . . . Surely we are in desperate and universal needs of that kind of simplification . . .

(I feel that consideration should be given to the intelligent American housewife as a force for good.) Why is it that nobody pays any attention to us? . . . that nobody recognizes us as the potentially powerful professional group we are? Isn't it first because we haven't the authority which automatically attaches itself to people who do their jobs very well—and second, because we are so busy doing our jobs rather badly that we have no time to become organized and thus automatically to command recognition?

Did you ever stop to think what a tremendous social and political and economic force we might be if we were organized? The National Association of American Housewives—55,0000,000 strong. Not all the Association of Business and Professional Women, not all the Leagues of Women Voters, not even all the UMW's and AFL's and NAM's and ADA's lumped together would add up to more than a part of the force and influence and pressure (hated word) of the Associated Housewives.

And how would we wield our association of influence? We would express publicly and together the very same instincts of decency and justice and good which are common everyday impulses with each and every one of us. We need the organized, associated realization that preventable indecencies and injustices and evils prevail on our human scene . . .

Begin at any level you like. There are few housewives who are not indignantly aware of the shocking inadequacy of teacher salaries in this country—the salaries of teachers who teach your children and mine. Some are lower than those of janitors and handy men in the same schools. Could not 55,000,000 of us make sure that that deplorable situation be changed? Of course we could. There isn't one of us who does not recognize the dangers inherent in the racial problem in this country. Could not 55,000,000 of us at least begin to selve them by making sure that decent schools are provided for all Negro children? Of course we could. There isn't one of us all who has not fervently hoped that the UN will insure a world of peace for our children and theirs. Then could not 55,000,000 of us make sure that our annual contribution to the work of the UN-the annual contribution of the richest nation in the worldshould exceed in amount the annual budget of the Sanitation Department of New York City? Of course we could.

Is it impossible to suppose that this tremendous social force might some day be put into effect? We have only to begin. With individuals. In our homes, in our schools, in our colleges. Through example and through teaching, based on a lofty conception of Human Relations. The possibilities are exciting and they are limitless, applied to any field of study or endeavor you wish to name. The possibilities lie in your home and in mine, where most of us are too preoccupied to recognize them. They exist in our colleges where they also belong. Not simply for equipping young peeple with the varied and innumerable tools and techniques of the careers and professions they will eventually follow. But for developing in them those attitudes and qualities of mind and heart that can best help them deal with the diverse demands of as much of the human adventure as may be revealed to them.

What will we do with those possibilities? It is a matter of burning concern to me as the mother of three children. I suppose those children will one day go to college. . . .

"Not every woman," writes Dr. Liebman in Peace of Mind, "can be a Joan of Arc or a Madam Curie, but there are millions of women who make their heroic stand in the patient, uncelebrated fortress of the home,"

No doubt my . . . (children) will one day join their ranks . . . How will it be for them? Will they make a more successful stand than most of us have made in our time? And will our colleges be so adept in the field of Human Relations that they will take over effectively the stewardship, however inadequately we have maintained it, which we must relinquish to them?

If so, then . . . (our daughters and) the great majority of those who graduate with them, will surely pursue their modest careers with a little more love and warmth and tolerance and screnity than ever we knew in our bewildered post-war world of the forties. I hope it may be so."

A Fifth Year Abroad?

by Margaret Munnerlyn, 1947

HEN Harriet Shaw wrote in December, asking me to write for the Alumnae News an article concerning some of my experiences in Europe, I turned back the pages to Graduation Day, June 4, 1947. I had then in hand the new diploma and a letter from the Institute of International Education saying that I had been accepted for the Summer School Course to be held at Oxford University during July and August.

I had intended to spend the summer months at Oxford attending the special course, "Western Civilization in the Twentieth Century" and had hoped to travel for a week or two after that and return to America in September. However, as opportunity after opportunity for study and travel opened up, I remained one month more, and so a year, being subjected to the most overwhelming education of my life. Thus, I have found after my four years at college an excellent opportunity to practice my liberal arts education, to develop and refine it. I have found a laboratory in which I am able to continue the researches begun in my major, international affairs, and to put to test under fine scrutiny the work I did at Sweet Briar. It has been as if the books from which I learned theory and the lectures which gave an insight into the problems of the past and of today have become personally alive for me. This has been a type of internship, for here I have walked into a world of daily realities, hard, difficult, and enlightening. The philosophy which I was inspired to formulate and which grew with me as the years passed at Sweet Briar has been a strong foundation and has aided me in discriminating among values and forming what I hope have been true judgments. The discipline, mental and spiritual, that was part of my education at Sweet Briar has guided me in discerning when and where a certain obligation lies. And so, these past months of studyng, traveling, and meeting people of many nations and in many walks of life have afforded me such a tremendcus intellectual and spiritual stimulation that I would like this to be possible for another. I suggest that the Alumnae set up a Foreign Scholarship Fund for a Sweet Briar graduate. It would admirably continue the aims of Sweet Briar's program for student exchange.

I am keeping in mind with a real sense of pride and appreciation that Sweet Briar has just taken over the Junior Year Abroad. But I do not believe that this should deter us from thinking and planning for such a fund for a graduate student. The phase of foreign study would be different in that the graduate is a student on her own, choosing a field or fields for research, whereas the undergraduate, although seeking many of the same goals, is obligated to take certain courses required for graduation. The graduate student is freer in her choice of study and in her use of time. In the beginning she could present her central plan to the Alumnae Association and decide upon a center of study, Geneva, London, or Paris. But this would be only a plan of attack as it were, subject to changes as opportunities, uncalculated in advance, arose. These are merely suggestions which seem valid to me and I am putting forth the idea with fervent hope that many of you will find value in it and will sit down to think upon its implications and possibilities.

I started out with no "grand plan" and wish I had!

The Marine Tiger, one of the student ships sent over by the State Department, was my first foreign home. Professors from many universities were on board and led discussions on UNESCO or Russian-American relations. It was a magnificient traveling university and upon arrival in Southampton we regretted ending an interesting adventure. I went from the ship to Oxford where I was a student at Lady Margaret Hall and Somerville College. Small seminars with individual tutors and grand lectures by Oxford professors, Members of Parliament, international figures, and professors from foreign universities were a part of this new educational experience. We students were free to concentrate on philosophy, literature, or history in our course on Western Civilization. In the small seminars Italians, Frenchmen, Dutchmen, Americans and Swedes discussed, shared views and made criticisms. The discussions demanded that each of us know about our own system of government in order to explain it to the others; I found them the most valuable part of the course.

During the summer we were able to experience a part of the old traditional Oxford student life and had some marvelous weekend trips. The most memorable weekend was when I went to hear the debates on Indian independence, attended the famous Eton-Harrow cricket game, and visited the office of Lloyds of London, the Stock Exchange, and the Tower of London.

I left England for France in the middle of August with a large group of the summer students. I could stay in Paris only four days and one of those was spent at Versailles with a Swedish and a Dutch student.

On August 16 I went to Montreux, Switzerland, for the first international conference of the World Movement for World Federal Government. There were delegates and observers from twenty-four countries and messages were received from organizations in Germany and Japan, from Professor Einstein, Count Sforza, and Mr. Bevin.

The delegates met night and day to work on the Montreux Declaration and the Statutes of an international organization for world government.

For the first time I was introduced into a genuine European student atmosphere. We were housed in a university chamber, slept on straw mattresses on the floor, and dined together from wooden dishes in a special students hall. Many had come with little money and only one change of clothing, but devoted to a cause and ready to give up a great deal to be there.

The great obstacle in all the meetings was the difference in languages and the difference in meanings of the same words—that long standing barrier to understanding. Each statement had to be translated into French and English, the official languages, and the time lost and confusion which mounted was painful. Since I knew very little French I made a resolution to come back to Switzerland and study French, the literature and the language.

I left at the end of the week to meet an American friend in Zurich. We flew to Copenhagen to attend another summer course at the Copenhagan School of Science and Literature. This course was on Danish literature, social legislation, economics, and industry. We were met by students who had been with us at Oxford and were soon conducted to the homes of the Danish families with whom we were to stay. In our week and a half I learned to admire and love this small country whose people work diligently, think seriously, and whose social welfare has become a model for the world. What a clean country!

Most of the Danish speak English and other languages fluently. I mentioned to one Danish student how I envied his being able to speak so many languages and he replied, "We are a little country and few in this world can speak our language. We are compelled to learn other languages, and then you know, your language has become the language of the world."

SKATING RINK, St. MORITZ, AT DAWN

It was only a month since I had left England but already I had an impression which was to heighten as my travels continued and the list of European acquaintances grew. It is this: Europeans are eager to learn about America and Americans but have been subjected to false views of our country and our way of life. Many of their mistaken ideas come from our own superficial movie films. These films, depicting many times a glamourous and completely artificial life, have become the picture of America for many of them. The Russian voice comes over Europe repeating falsities about our country. At the same time, Europeans know only the rich American tourists whom they see staying at the grand hotels and the soldiers of the occupation army who came not as ambassadors but to do a tiring and unrewarding job with the desire to return home paramount. The real envoys and ambassadors, the representatives of the ConAlumnae News sulates, are a small group; our cultural services in each country are pitifully staffed and, compared to the Russian and British offices, are way in the past. Thus the American students who come to Europe have an opportunity and an obligation to convey a truer picture of the United States. They can, in talking and meeting with people, present to Europeans, who have been able to learn only by rumor, what America is and is striving to be. We have a great responsibility in this time of world crisis to put every effort and every lesson learned from our education to bear on the problem of misunderstanding. Our position is difficult in that we are trying to correct past impressions, but it is rewarding to find the Europeans so eager to know of America and her people. We who are students have a unique opportunity to present to the generation who will guide Europe in the future a road of understanding to America.

I was in Copenhagen when the newspapers reported that the United States had officially taken over Greenland after the decision at the Inter-American Conference, August 1947. I spoke with a young lawyer in the Foreign Ministry and his reaction was, "Of course, we object to your country's action, but we do in part understand. We are a small country, proud of the few possessions we have, but in the event of a Russian invasion we could do nothing. We must choose between you and the East and in choosing your side we must be prepared to give for the strength of that camp. We realize that our position is strategic . . . The announcement of possession of the island was played down in the papers, for the Foreign Ministry, in part understanding the action, did not want the people to be unduly aroused." However, many individuals were concerned with the "imperialism" of the United States and I was put to the test to explain the action of my country.

My next trip was to Sweden where we met friends we had known at Oxford. We visited in their home in Orebro and with their family drove through the picturesque region of Dalarna in the north of Sweden. As one drives northward the land becomes less populated. Lovely blue lakes dot the countryside and mirror the majestic mountains which tower above. We turned east and stopped at Mora to visit the home of the famous painter, Zorn, and see his works in the museum. Then on to Uppsala, the university town with its roots in the 14th century. We were guests at a banquet in one of the student hotels and met Prince Charles, one of the grandsons of the present King Gustav. The Swedes admire greatly their old king and his family, and their loyalty resembles that so spontaneously granted by the English to their royal family.

We spent a week in Stockholm marveling at the sense of brightness, light, and air in their modern architecture and from there flew to Scotland where I attended the International Music Festival in Edinburgh. The "windy city" had become an international paradise of music and drama. Among those present were the conductors, Bruno Walter and Sir Malcolm Sargent, violinist Joseph Szigetti, pianist Benedetti-Michelangeli, violincellist Pierre Fournier, the Old Vic Company and scores of other internationally-known artists. There was an atmosphere of hospitality and friendliness, and unlimited Scotch pride when floodlights were turned on the Castle of the Scottish kings for the first time since before the war. The castle itself and its contents are historical treasures.

My family consented to my going to Geneva to study rather than returning home. I soon became settled in the home of a Swiss family. They have the warmth of home to keep me happy and the culture to keep me learning, interested, and stimulated. Living here since October and studying at the Graduate Institute of International Studies and the University of Geneva, I have found that Geneva increases with charm as the months go by. All sorts of cultural and intellectual opportunities are offered those who search and with these is combined an international air arising from the numbers of varied nationalities who come here to reside, attend the University, or visit as tourists.

The international conferences held at the Palais des Nations have afforded a chance for direct study and practical application of work and research done. My work on a paper concerning the problems of international aviation aroused my interest in the International Aviation Conference, November 1947. Delegates from thirty governments had assembled to negotiate a multilateral treaty on commercial rights in aviation. The meeting of minds to express the widely different approaches to the international air problem became again more difficult because of the language problem. A simple translation was of a proposal by an American delegate that "the airlines have the right to enjoy the largest expansion of which they might be capable," which reached the delegate from Portugal as "... to enjoy the largest exploitation ...!"

I left for Spain in early November and this trip was like a dream come true; I wrote my research paper for my International Relations major at Sweet Briar on the problem of Spanish government. I stayed in Barcelona with a lovely Spanish girl I had known at Oxford and through her met many representatives of the old aristocracy of Spain. Their reaction to the Franco regime was one of compromise and complacency as they feel that Franco is the lesser of many possible evils. In spite of dissatisfaction, the fear of a Communist successor has deterred them from changing. They feel strongly that any change in their government should come from within, peacefully implemented by the Spanish themselves, not by foreign powers nor foreign-supported provisional governments.

I spent five days in Madrid which was tasting of a cool and pleasant autumn. It seemed like a town of gold lying in the center of a vast barren plain. A side trip to Toledo, was one of the best spent days. This magnificent town, of both Castilian and Moslem influence, lies upon the summit of a massive rock, looking down on the river Tagus which encircles the mountain of stone at its base. As we crossed the bridge, Alcantara, a little boy, asked if we would take a picture with his beloved donkey. Of the many splendid buildings the Cathedral and the Alcazar were to me supreme.

Back in Madrid I was able to have a conference with the cultural attache of the American Embassy. His story concerning the closing down of the American cultural center, Casa Americana, was one which implied unhappy consequences. Here again America was missing the chance to tell her own true story. Congress had cut the funds for such cultural services and understanding of us in Spain was suffering.

I remained in Geneva during the Christmas holidays and saved my "vacation" time for the Olympic games in February at St. Moritz.

There I met the Prince of Nepal, one of the rulers of the small kingdom just north of India. A Nepalese by birth, a Hindu by religion, and a European by education, this man gave me an interesting picture of the feudal-like conditions in his country, the governing method, and the new influx of the spirit of "civil right" from across the frontier. He and the Maharaja of Jepal had visited in America for several months this winter and formed a most favorable opinion of us. His interpretation of the Hindu-Indian conflict was especially interesting. Again Sweet Briar had given me a background for discussion and appreciation since I had a seminar on India and Nepal with Mrs. Raymond. The Prince's friends, Lord Brabazon of Tarr and Prince Osman Fuad, were participants in heated debates of the religious conflicts in India and I learned significant facts about the Moslem strength in Turkey, India, and Egypt.

The Olympic games lasted eight days; the nations of the world had come to participate in a game of peace. St. Moritz played host to the best athletes of many nations and a fantastic group of observers. I spent two weeks in this modern international fairlyland learning more about people and other countries than ever before.

Now I am back in Geneva continuing my education, both formally and from my own observations, learning the atmospheres and feelings, something impossible to derive in any other way than first-hand.

International Understanding

between a mind formed in one country and a mind formed in another—that is to say, a relationship between the products of two different cultural influences and traditions. Now such a relationship, as we all know, is not easy to establish. Let us pause to ask ourselves how many Englishmen really understand the country that lies twenty-two miles from their white cliffs, and how many Frenchmen really understand England. The foundations for such an understanding must be laid in our college course, which must therefore ensure that all the students, the scientists included, should spend their four years, metaphorically speaking, in a room with two windows upon the world, each with a different view. In other words, the course must include the study of one foreign language and culture: by culture I mean not only language and literature but history, including some great books. No one who has not acquired what I would call a two-window mind should be let loose to handle, or rather to mishandle, international affairs.

One result of this would naturally be to integrate what I believe are generally called the Modern Language Departments into the general program, in which their representatives would fill a very important place. There are few more urgent needs in higher education than the breaking down of the barriers which have grown up (I cannot believe that they were deliberately constructed) between the teaching of languages and other branches of social sciences. We have heard a great deal in the last few years of the need for bringing the physical sciences into closer touch with the social sciences. Certainly that is greatly to be desired. But equally to be desired is the bringing of literary studies into closer touch with the social sciences. There is no group of intellectuals who need to be more firmly reminded of their limitation than those who produce fine literature. When they have intruded into the field of politics, as their facility in speech and writing has too often tempted them to do, their influence has been almost invariably disastrous, because, from the nature of the element in which they work, they are constitutionally unable to distinguish between fancy and fact—between the unsubstantial fabric of the imagination and the solid social reality that is the raw material of the contemporary historian and of the statesman. We do not want our young people to be unlettered. Heaven forbid! But we do want them to know the difference between poetry and prose, as part of their outfit for international understanding. And the best way of insuring this is to provide that the study of foreign language shall be accompanied by a study of the history, institutions, social development and thought—in fact, the culture in the wider sense of that word—of the nation in question.

It would be tempting to provide that Greek and Latin, taken together, should be alternatives to the study of one modern language and culture, since so much of what is basic in our present day civilization is derived from them. But this would involve not only an enlargement of staff, but a diversion of interest from the present day to the past. It seems best therefore to preserve the inner unity of the course by relating the study of foreign cultures to our central concern, which is the problem of the present day world. As we shall see, ample opportunity will be afforded to the students to profit by the wisdom of the Ancients.

We are now in a position to draw up an outline of our Four Years' Course.

It should consist of a substantial central core common to both the arts students and the science students.

What subjects should this central core include?

We have already mentioned history, geography, and one foreign language and culture—two arts subjects and a half, for geography, concerned as it is both with the world's natural resources and with what man has made of them, sits beautifully astride between the Sciences and the Arts. What science subjects should the arts students be compelled to take, so that they can talk intelligently to their scientific classmates? And what subjects form the best introduction, at the College stage, for the further studies which the science students themselves will carry on apart in the later stage of the course?

There is no contradiction between these two requirements: for the subjects which afford the best introductory training for scientists are surely those which are also of interest to other alert and intelligent young minds.

Those subjects, it is suggested, are physiology and psychology.

Physiology gives students the key to their bodily selves. It is a more suitable subject for our purpose than biology with its emphasis on the animal world as a whole: for we do not want our students to think in terms of living matter in general but of human life in particular. Over emphasis on biology may easily lead young people in these days to regard the world as no more than a vast zoological garden. However, the teacher of physiology will naturally find room in his subject for at least an excursus on animal biology.

Psychology gives students an insight into the working of their own minds and into the nature of personality. It is essential as an element in the forming of sound habits—intellectual habits as well as moral habits—and the attainment of inner balance.

We have already made provision for one half-and-half subject. Let us now introduce another, the History of Science. No scientist should go out into the world without having learnt of the controversy between Socrates and the natural scientists of his day and without having been at least introduced to Pythagoras, Hippocrates, Archimedes, Francis Bacon, Leonardo da Vinci, Galileo, Copernicus, and Harvey—not to speak of the moderns—and also without some acquaintance with the Greek origins of the classification of scientific studies which is too often taken for granted. To understand how the specialization of studies came about is itself a stimulus to overleap the old barriers under the impulse provided by present day developments.

There is another subject which should have a place, and an important place, in our plan-Sociology. Sociology is an arts subject, since it is concerned with man in society: but it is related to the natural sciences through its method, which is scientific, but scientific with a difference. It is very important that all students, both those on the science side and those on the arts side, should be brought to understand wherein this difference consists: for present-day opinion has been much confused and current controversy darkened by faculty analysis on this subject. No one, for instance, has a right to call himself a dialectical materialist, or any other kind of materialist, until he has made clear to himself the difference between a happening in the natural order and a happening in that human order in which the determining factor, under God, is the decision of individual human wills.

This leads us to the last subject of our central core—Fbilosophy. All students should be introduced to philosophy: for philosophy is man's attempt to see life through the eye of reason. It is pure thought unencumbered by the petty details that litter our daily lives and by the aberrations of human passion and weakness, thought standing back as it were, and surveying the human scene. Philosophy can be taught at College either historically, as a study of the succession of great thinkers, or by direct attack upon its problems themselves. The choice between these two approaches should be left to the teacher: for very much depends on him. Any one who knows France will have sensed in intercourse with educated Frenchmen how great and lasting is the influence exerted by the philosophy course in the final year of the lycee.

We can now survey the list of subjects in our central core: geography, history, a foreign language, with the culture and history related to it, physiology, psychology, the history of science, sociology and philosophy, eight subjects of very varied content, but to be presented by a body of teachers who are not only constantly conscious of the interrelations between their subjects but who regard themselves as members of a common team—a team engaged in creating the conditions for international understanding.

There is a further way in which these conditions can be promoted-by enabling the students to come to grips with the actual problems of the workaday world—the workaday world of America-as a preparation for the experience which they will later undergo on the wider international stage. This can best be provided as an integral part of the course on sociology: for the time is past when the college students' approach to such problems as unemployment, malnutrition or bad housing could be best made through humanitarian agencies, such as college missions or charity drives. These are not the techniques of a democratic world, such as that for which our students are being prepared. What is required is some form of cooperation between the college and the civic authorities, in which the sociology group at the college will be enabled to make its appropriate contribution, as an equal partner, with those responsible for the welfare of the town and district in which the students live. For there could be no worse preparation for activity on the international plane than for students to regard themselves as sequestered in a cloister or immured in an ivory tower remote from the concerns of a busy world.

In this connection, a useful experiment is actually now being carried out by the staff and students of the Sociology Department of Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, New York. This city, owing to the seasonal character of its principal activity, is faced with somewhat special problems and it was recently decided to create a City Planning Board to investigate them. The Planning Board appealed for cooperation to the Professor of Sociology at Skidmore, already known in the neighborhood for his interest in its practical problems. The resulting survey has been carried out by students working under his direction and in constant consultation with the Planning Board. A student who, after an academic training on how to conduct a social inquiry, has explained a comprehensive civic affairs questionnaire to some score of householders of many varied origins and outlooks, living both in poor and in wealthy homes, will certainly be better equipped for international contacts in later years.

Now for the great books. Here I will content myself with a few indications, since I do not wish to divert too much attention from my main argument. But our students should certainly read the seminal books from which our modern thought is derived. Among the Greek books to be read in the first two years I would place the Republic, the Apology and the Gorgias of Plato, which are introductions equally to sociology, to philosophy and to thinking about the natural sciences, the first book of Aristotle's Politics, which is an alternative introduction to sociology and the fragments of the Greek scientists themselves from Thales down to Zeno, the fountain head of the Stoic philosophy and of the egocentric and ineffective cosmopolitanism to which it gave birth.

Among the modern masters of the subjects that I have enumerated, I would mention Mackinder and Bowman as geographers, William James as a psychologist, Graham Wallas as a political scientist, and Whitehead as both a philosopher and a natural scientist.

For history I would provide no set book at present, since we are too close to the events which have plunged us into a fresh historic epoch for the new viewpoint yet to have found expression in a classic form. Of the earlier writers the one who best stands the test of time is Acton, but his projected great book on Liberty was never written. Students should be encouraged to read his essays and letters. So, too, having become familiar with the ancient Stoics, they should read their modern counterpart, Justice Holmes.

I have left myself little time in which to speak in any detail of the second part of the course—that covering the third and fourth years. During this period the central core would remain, interest being shifted from the sociological to the more strictly political approach. It is at this stage that students would be introduced at close quarters to the problems arising out of the interdependence of the twentieth century world and to the attempts to solve them politically through the League of Nations and the United Nations. But this study should be accompanied by a study of Federalism, how it has been worked out in this country and in Switzerland, and of the psychological and social conditions which have made these two experiments successful in a realm where so many others have failed. Indeed we can already see that, in the new perspective which is being opened out to us in these postwar years the constitutional history of the United States and of Great Britain and the other British states will occupy a central place in historical study. For, as the suicidal competition for power between the States of Continental Europe passes into the background and the world settles down under the Rule of Law, with the United States as its principal upholder, men will look more and more to the deeper sources whence respect for law is

In this brief outline I have done little more than indicate a type of approach to the problem which we are met here to consider—international understanding and the American College. Let me conclude with an expression of good wishes to the American educators who are concerning themselves with this question and of congratulation to the younger generation of Americans on having their lives before them at such a time when, however dark the immediate scene, the course of history is laying open to them such majestic and inspiring opportunities.

REUNION MAY 29-JUNE 1

Class Secretary: Bessil Grammer (Mrs. Donald F. Torrey) Alden Park Manor, Philadelphia 44, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: SUF HARDIE (Mrs. William T. Lell) +0 Sherman Avenue, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

In spite of my plea for news, I've had only one additional letter in February in answer to my November letter. Mary Pinkerton Keir wrote me and enclosed a letter she had received from Clytie Carroll Allen in Beaumont, Texas. Mary is teaching at Schuyler School, Virginia, and commutes from Charlottesville. She and her son live together in Charlottesville while he is studying at the University of Virginia. Mary and Ferne Kash LaFon saw Dr. Harley last fall when her train stopped at Charlottesville en route to New Orleans. Jion New Orleans Dr. Harley sailed to spend the winter in South Africa. Mary mentions Miss Gay Patteson's recent death in Richmond, which I hadn't known of before.

Clytie Carroll Allen's letter to Mary tells of a Sweet Briar reunion that she and Sea Willow Ward Stafford had in Beaumont when Ethel Shoop Godwin and Dorothy Bancroft visited them on their way back from California. They were joined also by Katherine Lanier Jones from Houston, Texas. Katherine's only son was a flier and was killed in the Pacific.

Clytie went to Mardi Gras in New Orleans ir 1947 and had lunch with Mary Clifton Tabb George who was as charming and attractive as ever, she writes. Clytie and Sea Willow are both widows and see a great deal of each other.

My sister, Dorothy Grammer Croyder and her 16 year old daughter, Polly, spent last week-end with me. We attended a Memorial Service to our father in his old parish, St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia, where they unveiled a portrait bas-relief in his honor.

As I was finishing this letter I received a most interesting account of a trip to Mexico, from faithful, loyal Sue Slaughter. On February 10 she left for Mexico with Marion Peele. They flew most of the way and were grounded in New Orleans because of fog the day after Mardi Gras. The city was jammed, but thanks to the efforts of Mary Clifton Tabb George they found a place to lay their heads. Mary Clifton had them for tea in her garden, which Sue describes as beautiful, and took them for a sight-seeing drive, Clyrie was in town but laid up with a cold so they missed seeing her. They flew to Yucatan from New Orleans, and, after seeing the sights there, flew to Mexico City, which they made their headquarters for further side-trips. They got in touch with two Sweet Briar girls who are living in Mexico City, Mary Lou Flournoy Brown '31, of Portsmouth, Virginia, and Margaret Kirk Groome 137, of Mississippi, Sue and Marion flew home after a wonderful three week jaunt. Sue writes she is planning to be at Sweet Briar for commencement, which is grand news.

I hear Reunion starts May 29. This ought to be a big year for us. I do hope we can have a large gathering of our class and I am hoping to meet many of you and renew many friendships this spring at dear old Sweet Briar.

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

After Christmas a cold and a visit from Elmyra Pennypacker Coxe '20 kept me too busy to write a letter for the February ALUMNAL NEWS. Elmyra looks very well and is enjoying her life and work in Chicago. Still in the family, Mary Pennypacker Davis '16 in nearby Pottstown exchanges visits with me frequently. Her oldest son, Bill, is a freshman at Princeton; Dick, the second boy, has been discharged from the Army after serving in Shanghai and Tokyo and is back at Bowdoin, Jim, the youngest, is in his last year at Hill School and wants to work for a year before he goes to college.

As for myself, I serve on more and more Boards, the Public Library and the Red Cross being the latest. I have been doing some volunteer work in home service for the Red Cross and during March am filling in at the Phoenixville Hospital laboratory while they look for a new technician.

Miss Howland writes that she and Miss Hull have returned from California. They were homesick for New York. "We yearned for a theatre, a museum, good music—and, yes, for our adopted sons and daughters." They are back in a sketchily furnished apartment as their own they sublet furnished. They hope to go south in late spring and visit the mother of Marian Taber Maybank '28. They will-spend the summer at Dr. Burdick's camp in Rhode Island.

Margaret Grant was unable to get to the Philadelphia Sweet Briar Day luncheon as planned. We hope the pressure of work relaxes so she can meet with us this spring. We have had some very good meetings and I see Bessie Grammer Torrey '13, Henrietta Washburn '14, Anne Schutte Nolt '15, Rebecca McGeorge Bennett '18, and Alberta Hensel Pew, Academy, to mention a few from our era.

Harriet Exans Wyckoff sent me an amusing snapshort of Bernard in long cotton beard and herself in lace cap and spectacles well down on the nose, with the caption, "Grandpa and Grandma." Son Barney is studying law at Charlottesville and Evans, who graduated in June, has a job in Idaho. Barney's son, Randolph Woods Wyckoff was born August 27.

Miss Benedict spent Christmas with her sister Florence near Philadelphia and we were cisappointed that she couldn't stay for luncheon. I talked to her by phone.

A pleasant surprise this Christmas was a note from Louise Weisiger. She is kept busy as director of research for the Richmond Public Schools. One of her sisters, Mrs. Early, died in September. Miss Mattie Patteson is living with them, as she was before the death of her sister, Miss Gay, early in February.

Margaret Lewis Thompson writes that Flora Howe Freer lost her husband last spring. Margaret's son is studying engineering.

Did you notice in the October ALUMNAL News that 1915 has a daughter in the freshman class at Sweet Briar. She is Anne-Louise Fletcher, daughter of Clare Erck Fletcher.

Won't you all please write to me before June so that I can have a good letter in the June issue?

1919

Class Secretary: ISABEL LUKI (Mrs. T. Foster Witt) River Road, R.F.D. No. 13, Richmond 21, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ROSANNE GILMORE, 1303 Terminal Tower, Cleveland 13, Ohio.

My pleas for news brought responses from three faithful members of the class. All insisted they had no news but the letters were interesting.

Elizabeth Eggleston says, "The small, every-day doings of running a house are too familiar to us all to be newsworthy. Struggles with the cooking have levelled out, there has blessedly been small necessity for nursing during the last months, and the furnace for the first time in its career has been quite lamblike." I am sure this strikes a responsive chord in every housekeeper's heart. She also says she is "keenly interested in our new President and her forthright vigor in trying to face present-day problems." But aren't we all.

Isabel Wood Holt moved to Long Island from West Virginia within the past two years. She is getting ready for Julia's wedding in June. Julia graduated from Sweet-Brian in 1947. Isabel has been on the Alumnae Council for two terms and last fall took over the temporary chairmanship of the Long Island Sweet Briar club. She says, "We are a constantly changing, moving group, and the game of organization is like Alice in Wonderland's croquet-when you pick up a mallet, it turns out to be a flamingo and the wickets some other creature." There are plenty of sparks of interest but it is difficult to combine them at one time into a flame. She is also taking lecture courses in Amateur Gardening at the Bronx Botanical Gardens.

Elizabeth Hodge Markgraf reports a very enjoyable visit to Sweet Briar with her husband and son. The latter will be ready tor college next fall. She speaks of how much they all enjoyed the visit Miss Lucas paid the Cincinnati Club.

I saw Ellen Bodley Stuart about a month ago. Her elder son, Zan, is graduating from the University of Virginia in June and his engagement to Cynthia Bemiss, Sweet Briar '47, has just been announced. Ellen's younger son, Roger, is at Oxford.

Louise Hammond Skinner's daughter, Louise, and her husband are living in her mother's home in Norfolk while she is spending several months in Florida.

I am hoping for more letters so we will have some news for the June issue.

1920

Class Secretary: (for this issue) HELEN BEESON (Mrs. Francis M. Comer) 325 Limestone Street, Maysville, Kentucky.

Here is your nosey old member electing lesself secretary, at least for one issue because I can't bear to see another blank under 1920" and also because I have had such nice letters from Ruth Hulburd Brown, Becky McGeorge Bennett, and Ida Massie Valentine, a personal encounter with Ted Sloan Sewell, and lunch with Edith Durrell Marshall and Frannie Simpson Cartwright. So this old Fund Agent job has really paid off. Thanks so much to all you contributors regardless of whether you sent along a letter with news or not. The head of the Fund Drive tells me our class has made the best showing ever, so anyone reading this who has not sent in her check, get it in the mail and help make it a bang-up year for 1920. I pause at this point for the cheering section to take over!

Ida Massie Valentine's letter came first and I quote, "I will be glad to see 1920 represented among the other classes . . . having three sons and not having any daughters, we are not unmindful of Sweet Briar, but must admit our loyalties and efforts have been spent upon Woodberry Forest and the University of Virginia. (Mothers with daughters at S. B. take note.) Braxton, Jr., and Henry are both at the University of Virginia, the former expecting his degree in June after having spent two and one-half years in naval aviation, and the latter, in the Army of Occupation near Trieste, is in his second year at the University. Massie, the third son, is at St. Christopher's in Richmond." With these three sons so well occupied, Ida has taken on the chairmanship of Garden Week in Virginia for 1948. Besides this, she has just finished a job for the Richmond area Community Chest, is on the board of the Y.W.C.A. and her church auxiliary. Ida says she sees Madelaine Bigger and she is fine. I can report on a few Richmondites myself as my sister and I drove east last spring and spent a couple of days with Helen Johnston and had a wonderful time. Helen is fine and as stunning-looking as ever; saw Fritzie Virden Faulkner, Bessie Hoge Brown, Katherine Griffith Murphy and they were all fine. It would turn their heads if I said how grand they all looked to me so I won't risk it, Did not see Ciddie Franklin or Nancy Worthington on this trip but did several years ago and had such nice visits with them catching up on the many years in between. It's such fun to get back to Richmond always as I almost feel like it is my second home and was when I was in school and after.

Next came a letter from Becky McGeorge Eennett with the same old Becky pep. She says, "I don't know whether you want to know of my humdrum doings or not, but the humdrum part is housekeeping." She has two boys, one a sophomore in pre-med at Trinity and one a senior at Episcopal Academy. The latter hasn't decided on a college yet but plans for work in the sciences. Becky and her husband were about to take off for a southern vacation and hoped to stop at Sweet Briar over-night. She has not been back for 14 years and Joe has never seen it. I know he will be as delighted as my husband was some years ago. Becky had seen Mag McVey last fall when she was in Merion with the hockey team and says she is even nicer than ever. Becky's father is still just as interested in Sweet Briar as he was when she was there and remembers more students' names than she does now. Thanks for your grand letter, Becky, and I promise an answer in the near future, or better still, how about nieeting me at Commencement? We have a reunion this year under the new plan.

Then came a long letter from Mrs. John S. Brown, Jr.—Ruth Hulburd to you! From Ruth's letter, "I am always so disappointed when the news comes with no mention of 1920 and am glad you are taking over. I would love to go back to college this June and am hoping that I can but it is sort of early at this point to make definite plans. We have been up to our necks in weddings. My daughter, Mary Ellen, was married last July and is now living in Hanover, New Hampshire, where her husband is finishing his last year at Dartmouth. They will be back in Cleveland next year though and, needless to say, I am very glad. She met Trot Walker Neidlinger up there and says she is most attractive (as we all know) and her husband is Dean of Dartmouth. On December 20 my husband's eldest child was married to a very nice Canadian and they are living in St. John, New Brunswick, which is a long way from home. With Christmas on top of the wedding we are just beginning to feel rested and more or less organized. About other Clevelanders from 1920-just in case they have not written you them-sclves—Isabel Webb Luff is fine now after a serious thyroid operation in the fall. Until the doctors discovered what was wrong she lost pounds and was just a shadow-but she is feeling and looking like herself again. Virginia Hatch Chase has the cutest little three-year-old daughter you have ever seen. After her five sons she rounded out her family with a girl. Ted Sloan Sewell lives in Columbus now so we don't see much of her any more." Right here I can add my bit as I ran into Ted in the station in Columbus this winter on one of my hasty jaunts to see my mother and my sister. She was looking very smart with the "new look" and we had such a nice chat as her husband was coming in on the train I was going out on; I didn't mind its being late at all. Her daughter is a junior at the University of New Mexico and loves it, though Ted hates having her so far away. She has been living in Columbus for four years and I did not know it until last fall, so hope to see her for a longer visit the next time I go up. Back to Ruth Hulburd's letter, she says Gee Brosius Kintzing had had a heart attack last summer, is better now, but not what you would call out of the woods. Surely hope she is feeling fine now.

As for me and mine, we are much the same only a little whiter, a little older (to look at but not inside)! Kitty is 15 and we have lots of fun with her. She is so busy with music, dancing lessons, and basketball games that finding time for school is quite a problem. Fortunately she is a very good student; don't ask me where she gets it, not from me, and I would never admit her pa is smarter than I am. She is a sophomore in high school and I am still hoping she will pick Sweet Briar for her college. In fact, I have entered her for 1950 but that does not mean she will make it. The winter was particularly hectic for anyone in the tobacco warehouse business, which my husband is, but he managed to survive and then took off for Florida to thaw his poor old bones out and came back looking very brown and content. I just could not leave Kitty at the time so had to forego the pleasure. He and Kitty are now in Louisville at the state baskethall tournament, Maysville having emerged the champions last year. I preferred to get a little housecleaning done while they were out of my way so must drop my type-writer and get busy. Must admit that I had lunch with Francie Simpson Cartwright and I dith Durrell Marshall in Cincinnati this week and had a grand visit. Edith brought her daughter Ann's scrap books for Kitty to pour over and she loved them. Edith was just back from Alumnae Council meeting at Sweet Briar and full of news. She had seen Becky McGeorge there and met her nice Eusband so I am glad the proposed trip came off as she planned it.

Hoping to see you all at Commencement!

Forgive the past blanks for 1925. I have fascinating excuses—none of which sound very good now.

I had a grand letter from Deedie Kirkendail Buckman in September. Her oldest son is in college at Yakima, Washington, taking a two year course of eleven months each year. Fred, the second boy, just graduated from high school, and Bobbie, the youngest, is 9. Deedie's family spent Christmas a year ago in Wilkes-Parre where she saw Dorene Brown Humphrey and Romayne Schooley Ferenbach. Dorene has a son at Lehigh and Romayne's older boy is at Hill School. Deedie does volunteer work at the Community Church in Oakland and also in the Sunday School.

Mary Reed Hartshorn writes from Milwankee wondering if everyone in our class has turned out to be a housewife and mother so that she too feels her news is not interesting. Mary feels that way though she reports that her daughter Anne, 19, is a freshman at DePanw University and Ted, Jr., is a sophomore in high school and very active in sports.

I hope to see Mary Nadine Pope Phillips soon when she comes from Philadelphia to Cleveland to visit her sister, Flora Bruce.

Pop Graham Hunter and her husband, Harold, have seen Tootie Maybank Williams '27 and husband in Atlanta at parties and recently spent a weekend together. Tootic looks lovely and is as cute as ever. The four Hunter boys are 16, 11, 3 and 1—so there are no dull moments in Pop's life. She is spending much time in garden club work. She asks that any of us who go through Rome, Georgia, give her a call.

Ruth Taylor Franklin says the Pittsburgh slumnae were charmed with Miss Lucas, almost to the point of wishing to return to college as students. Anne is a freshman at Wheaton with Margaret Malone McClements's daughter, Kassie. Ruthie fears the girls had heard their mothers' old voices singing "The May Queen is Coming" once too often, as both preferred the East to the South.

Aren't you all proud to know that Eleanor Miller Patterson is a member of the Alumnae Council? She loves it and has enjoyed meeting our wonderful new President and seeing

Miss Rogers and Miss Crawford, who haven't changed a bit in 20 years. At a tea for alumnae daughters she met Jane Becker Clippinger's daughter, Judy, who is in the freshman class and "tops in every respect." Eleanor did all our favorite things including swimming in the lake and hiking up Paul's Mountain for breakfast. She has taken up painting and is doing portraits of her family, including Brown, Jr., 17, who expects to enter Sewance next year, and Eleanor, Jr., who is 14.

It was a thrill to get a long letter from fone McKenzie Walker who lives in Lynchburg and has an opportunity to visit Sweet Briar frequently. She reports most enthusiastically on activities there. She heard Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt's talk on February 14, which was also the night of the traditional mid-winter dance, led this year by Ione's son, George, Jr., with Donna Wunderlich of Arkansas. Ione expected to attend the March 12 and 13 conference on "The Role of the Colleges in Promoting Peace Through International Understanding." She had heard Hans Kindler direct the National Symphony Orchestra also; I'm green with envy.

I thank you all very much for your help in writing this letter,

Hank and I are just home from a holiday in Phoenix where I finally got warmed up after our snowy Colorado winter. On the way home I was consumed to see what was in my mail box. When I found all your cards I was as fluttery as Hedda Hopper's hats and wanted to exclaim "you deah, deah girls!"

Peggie Denman Wilson writes she had a small Sweet Briar reunion of her own in the middle of January when she, Mary Gladys Broun Moore, and Margaret Speed Sexton spent the day together. I imagine quite a bit of the conversation was about Speedie's small son born in July, Mary's daughter and Peggy's two sons.

Goodie Eskesen Chase writes that her days are filled enjoying life with her son, Tom, now 15, and her extra time occupied with civic activities. She says she felt dumb filling out the questionnaire about professional achievements, publications, and degrees as she is "just a housewife," which I think is an excellent career. (EDITOR'S NOTE: We wholeheartedly agree!)

Anne Barrett Allaire says her nicest news is of the overnight stop she and her husband made with Mary Lyb Longbery Arthur, her lusband and three sons in Charlotte, on their way home from Florida a few weeks ago. She missed by a few days seeing Page Dunlap Dec in St. Petersburg. An ice storm side-tracked their plans to visit Ruth Jobnston Bowen and family in Roanoke and prevented the long-anticipated introduction of Sweet briar to Anne's husband. This coming summer she hopes to visit Elizabeth Mattheus Nichols and family when the Allaires go to their farm in Rhode Island. As Anne writes, "That is a lot of news for a penny!"

Dorothy Hamilton Davis writes of her wonderful new kitchen units, just installed. She adds her wish for something as remarkable to change her contour, shape, and size. From other sources I hear she need have no worries over her svelte figure. Husband Allam is chairman of the Johns Hopkins Alumni Fund and Dot, an old hand at fund campaigning, should be an excellent girl-Friday.

Annette Broun King lists her small fry as K. C., Jr., 6, in kindergarten, Roberta, 12, in junior high, and Anne, 21, who is married and has a 9 month old baby. Annette's husband is Executive Secretary of the Wisconsin Petroleum Association and the oil crisis keeps him busy. Annette is recuperating from two operations in the past six months. She and husband Ken are in Florida during March and hope to go home by way uf Sweet Briar. Jeanette Hoppinger Schanz visited Annette when she was a patient in Cleveland Clinic Hospital.

Jane Cunningham works hard teaching English and sponsoring the high school newspaper in Lynchburg. She was happy to have Amelia Hollis Scott's daughter, Sue, in her class last semester. Jane sends the sad news of Miss Gay Patteson's passing away. Miss Mattie lives in Richmond.

Janetta Fitzbugh Evans writes that she has done little lately but fight snow and ice and struggle to keep warm during the oil shortage. She is still a Nurses Aide. Her oldest boy, Peyton, Jr., was married in October. Pcyton is a resident at the University of Pennsylvania and will go into practice with Janetta's brother in Philadelphia soon. Tommy, her youngest, is in his first year at the University of Virginia. Janetta is rightfully proud of her family.

Dot Bailey Hughes says her life is filled with boys too. She enjoyed so much a visit with Kitty Blount and Fred Andersen at Sand Island last summer. Wanda Jenseh Harris and her daughter Phoebe were there too. While Phoebe was fascinating the Hughes Loys, Kitty, Wanda, and Dot caught up on old memories. Dot says she manages to do her share of P.T.A. and other civic activities with a bridge game once in a while too.

We all appreciate hearing from Martha Close Page who is still recuperating from an operation she had November 1. Butch, her 17 year old, is just out of the hospital from blood poisoning which came from a basketball floor burn. Fritz, the 13 year old, must have a tooth removed from the roof of his mouth. Martha says "Thank heavens, Lody is hale and hearty during their winter hospitalization." We all certainly hope the Page's share of illness is over now.

Page Dunlap Dee writes that their home is still St. Petersburg, Florida, although her husband's business is in Mount Carmel, Illinois. They returned to Mt. Carmel early in February but were back in St. Petersburg ir March to spend spring vacation with son Roy, Jr., who is a junior at St. Leo's College Prep School, St. Leo, Florida.

Dot Keller Iliff and husband Seward are cff on a marvelous trip to New York and a cruise to Nassau and Bermuda.

Thank you all again for answering my cards. Please everyone else send me news soon for the June issue of the magazine

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. W. B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford. Connecticut.

Fund Agent: ELIZABETH FORSYTH, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham, Alabama.

It seems that most of us have been hypnotized by our daily routine since the Christmas holidays. However, spring is here-at lastso take heart and do something about that wanderlust feeling! Elizabeth Cates Wall is; the will wear her Easter bonnet in Bermuda, lucky girl. Cates had a long siege in the hospital, and Elizabeth Forsyth was among her visitors while here.

Bebe Gilchrist Barnes is truly our most active alumna. She makes frequent trips to Sweet Briar, is on the Alumnae Council and Board of Overseers as well as a consultant on spring and fall planting. She will be there this month. Bebe has done a great deal toward enhancing the natural beauty of Sweet Briar. We of '27 are proud of her accomplishments and grateful for her loyalty.

More about Sophie Lou Hall Chambless and her family Three of her four sons are away at school. The oldest, Jack, is studying medicine at Vanderbilt. Chuck and Billy are students at Auburn. "All like to dance and are 'joiners,' like to hunt, fish, swim, tennis, and golf but mostly eat." Sophie Lou herself is mighty busy keeping "Club Chambless" running but does belong to a Literary Club and plays bridge for relaxation. She sees Billy Quisenberry Marks and Emmie Taber Danziger and, on occasion, Kathering Howers Jackson who now lives in Palm Beach.

Apologies to Claire Hanner Arnold whose name was misspelled in the last issue. The Arnolds are still enjoying their enlarged family.

A card from Hilda Harpster tells that her new book is going well and that she recently enjoyed lunch with Judy HalliBurton Burnett '35.

Maggie Leigh Hobbs's daughter Peggy is attending Garrison Forest School near Balti-

Kelly Vizard Kelly's two oldest boys are away, Bill at Yale and Douglas at Taft.

My spies and a clipping tell us that Ruth Lowrance Street was elected the first Womanof-the-Week in a Chattanooga weekly. I wish I had space to quote all of the article. However, I want you to read a part at least: 'Ruth is the only one we know who could have her finger in so many pies at once, vet merit the widest popularity. All factions agree . . . they like Mrs. Gordon Street, whose calm manner, levelheadedness and good common sense pleases everyone. Her friends are scattered all over the city . . . She is tireless in civic endeavor, never as a means of projecting herself, but always for the cause itself." Our congratulations to you, Ruth Bettie Miller Allan just returned from a visit to her sister Ellen who recently remarried and is now Mrs. Jack Tangeman.

Events are really moving for the Henry Swifts (Gretchen Orr). One of the twins, Adele Staples, has announced her engagement to Alexis Pastuhov. He is on the engineering staff of the DuPont plant in Charleston, West Virginia. The wedding will be in June.

Jerry Reynolds Dreisbach, her husband, and daughter Jerry Lou planned an April visit with Georgia, the older daughter, at Sweet Briar and several days in Williamsburg before returning to Indiana

Jo Snowden Durham enjoyed a gay two weeks in New York during January. Now she is busy with Red Cross and is looking forward to going to an Iowa State University conference at which Miss Lucas has asked her to represent Sweet Briar. We are sure she will do us proud.

Since I last wrote you I have "met up with," for the first time in twenty-odd years, Betty Williams Simmons as well as Jo Snowden Durham, and here report it was indeed a pleasure!

REUNION MAY 29-JUNE 1

Class Secretary: BARBARA DE Z. LEWIS (Mrs. de Zouche Lewis Maxwell) 337 East 30th Street, New York 16, New York.

Fund Agent: BETTY PRESCOTT (Mrs. R. H. Balch) 1202 Parkway East, Utica 2, New

First, may I thank all of you who have been so sweet as to write and say you enjoy seeing 1928 back in the News again? It has been so encouraging to have your notes. I am also proud to report a greatly increased response to my missives asking for news-first thing you know I'll have heard something about all of us.

A long letter from Evelyn Claybrook Bowie was forwarded to me from the Alumnae Office. It had many kind words about the sccretaryship, contribution to the Fund, and news. Evelyn has a daughter, Beverley, 7, and a son, Lee, 3. Beverley is a second grade glamour girl with a passion for swimming and her two-wheel bike. Gordon and Evelyn spend their spare time at golf, badminton, and skiing, and last summer won the mixed doubles in the Cumberland, Maryland, tennis tournament. It sounds like a completely delightful family.

From Altadena, California, Kay Emery Eaton reports on her children: son James Emery Conant Eaton, born June 13, 1945, and daughter Rebecca Eaton, born November 7, 1947. Kay's husband is Dean of the California Institute of Technology. Her present life seems a far cry from the stage and screen, but how grand to be able to have two careers in so short a time.

Charlotte Conway Curran writes from her new address in Charlottesville that Dr. Curran is now Associate Professor of Psychiatry at the University.

Anne Shepherd Lewis fears she is "just the typical wife and mom with P.T.A., Red Cross, Garden Club, church work, etc." Add three boys, aged 9, 7, and 4, and it is a busy schedule. She saw Grace Sunderland Kane and Win West Madden last summer.

Madelyn Markley Lowe writes that she has a girl 16 and a boy 11, which makes for a full life. Miss Lucas' visit to Indianapolis spurred interest in Sweet Briar and delighted all who met her.

Margaret McWilliams Walsh also mentions Miss Lucas' visit-this time to Cincinnati. Margaret was off for Florida and sitting in the middle of New York's snow and sleet I envy her unreservedly! This is being written with Kleenex, Vicks, and cough-drops surrounding me.

Ernestine Keys Rollow writes from Phoenix. hoping that any Briarites who are going through will look her up. They would probably find her at church, A.A.U.W., P.T.A., Rotary-Anns, or the Musicians Club. Besides all this, she has two daughters, 13 and 8, and teaches a Sunday school class of 100 adults!

Kitty Leadbeater Bloomer wrote from St. Augustine that she will be back in Virginia early in April. I hope this time on my spring visit to Washington I can see her; it's been too long.

Betty Moore Schilling and Marion Jayne Berguido both wrote me the same delightful news. Betty is to be god-mother to Carlos III, born in November, and Marion is godmother to Betty's Billy. Carlos, to be called Chuck, is the first boy and his five sisters will have to be careful not to spoil him!

Kay Meyer Manshel writes that Bob is off for Honolulu any day now but she will stay in Connecticut with her kennel of black cockers. She has 21 new pups and expects every one to be a champion. The last time I saw Kay was on the terrace of the Avila Hotel in Caracas, Venezuela.

Constance Furman Westbrook sees lots of Briarites in Atlanta. She sounds busy and liappy as always.

Squeak Harned Ross wrote with her bonnet and shawl on, ready to go to a tea for Miss Lucas. She hoped to see Grace Sollitt, Belle Brockenbrough, and others. She plans to go to reunion and would like to hear from others with the same idea. Here's one, Squeak.

Betty Prescott Balch hopes to spend a couple of weeks in Miami and plans for reunion too. She says Marion Sumner Beadle, whose husband is in the real estate business in Honolulu, has two daughters, Kate and Judy, and she attended the Sweet Brian Day meeting in Hawaii.

Alice Harrold Morgan's 2 year old, Allene, is in a cast with a broken leg. Alice hopes all will be well by reunion time as she is eager to go back.

Barbara Bruske Dewey has been snowed in for two months. Last year she and Charles spent the worst of the winter in the British Virgin Islands and the contrast is sad. She is working on the spring flower shop, and reports that June Slomer Schott and Marion Sibley Marxer were more attraztive than ever when she saw them recently.

Elizabeth Hurlock Mills has a daughter 15 Madison College, studying to be a librarian, another in her first year of high school, and the baby just 9 months old.

Lib Crane Hall is Commissioner of Girl Scouts in Cranford. She is kept busy with her almost-grown-up daughter Addie and son Robert. Lib too hopes to make the reunion.

Frances Coyner Huffard left her daughter,

13, and son, 10, home with their father, and spent three weeks with her parents in Florida. Her 16 year old daughter is in college in Missouri. Frances wishes she could attend reunion and see everyone again but doubts if she will be able to manage it.

Helen Ladd writes from Kansas City where she is Assistant to the Director of the Nelson Gallery of Art. She wasn't notified of Miss Eucas' visit as she had not listed her address change with the Alumnae office; moral!

Adaline Beeson has been working for the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System in Washington for the past two years. During the war she helped build Navy Corsairs in Akron, Ohio.

Catherine Via has moved to New York after working overseas during the war. She is looking for a job and an apartment, the first easy for one as competent as she but the second nearly impossible. Travel overseas has not spoiled her North Carolina accent, I'm glad to say. She spent last summer on a 13,000 mile trek through the west. She visited Teal Barrow Lane in Memphis at the 150 year old "show place of beauty and old Southern charm" which she and her husband have bought. They have four personalityfilled children; one son is a freshman at W. & L. and a daughter who hopes to go to Sweet Briar in two years is a top winner in horse shows.

You see what a tremendous number of you wrote in, and you know how grateful I am and happy to hear so much good and interesting news. My own news is the same as always, Manhattan Club, some charity work, some social life, lots of books—thoroughly satisfying. I hope to see lots of you at reunion.

Class Secretary: SALLY REAHARD, 5525 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis 8, Indiana, Fund Agent: GWLNDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George Writer, Jr.) 21 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York.

Indianapolis alumnae had a real Revival Meetin' recently with Miss Lucas as a luncheon guest and I thought you might like to hear how it 'revived' us! Also, I know you have had plenty of plain feminine curiosity about the new President! Well, she is mighty easy on the eyes and electrifying to dormant brain cells. If you meet her, I predict you will find yourselves stirred up and expounding on a bunch of bright ideas on Education that you (and the girls at the Laundryette) never dreamed you had in you!

We were all impressed with Miss Lucas' extraordinary energy and drive. She is popping with ideas and plans to maintain or improve the standards of the college. Many you have read about in her messages to the alumnae and they are all ambitious and progressive, some of them a little startling to old-timers. Personally, 1 felt that one purpose of this trip around the country was to sound out the alumnae and seek their suggestions and opinions. It seems to be up to us to decide what Sweet Briar is going to offer its students and it looks like a big opportunity for us to have a hand in the policies being formed.

Anyway, we all were convinced that any sentiments received from us would be thoughtfully weighed and considered, so don't hesitate to put some of your wishful thinking into a letter to Miss Lucas or the Alumnae Office. Maybe you have heard some alarming rumors you want verified, or maybe you have been waiting to air a grudge or two! If you have a daughter, it might be interesting to sit down and put on paper what you hope she can get in college.

No one from our class was at the luncheon but you may know some of these from near our class at Sweet Briar: Ella Jane Meriz Dickson, ex '34, Helen Schaumleffel Ferrce '29, Mary Fulton Garstang, ex '29, Madelyn Markley Lowe, ex '28.

Do let me hear from you soon so the June letter may have lots of news!

REUNION MAY 29-JUNE 1

Class Secretary: Anne Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia. Lund Agent: Sue Gravis (Mrs. William K. Stubbs) 2105 Island Drive, Monroe, Louisiana.

Annette Enderly Birgel is living in Brooklyn, New York. It is good to know the whereabouts of another lost classmate. There are still 19 for us to find.

Babs Barber Wilson wrote a wonderful letter. The Wilsons have moved six times in the six and one-half years of their marriage and are now living in Ashtabula, Ohio, where they have a little house right on Lake Eric. Their family roster consists of three girls, Sally Lynn, born August 24, 1942, Barbara, born November 23, 1944, and Patricia Breckenridge, born on March 23, 1947. Babs often sees Becky Kunkle Hogue '38.

Sarah Ellen Wilson Barbour has two daughters, aged 7 years and 16 months. She often sees Roberta Dranc Wood, ex '32.

Clara West Stark is dairy farming in Amelia County, Virginia, and reports that it is a great life.

Mary Buick is taking a course in Braille, which is splendid. I admire Mary for adding this to her many interests. I know from personal experience that it is exacting, time-consuming, and also most rewarding.

Lucy Oliver Hines 'finished the University of South Carolina in '33, worked a few years as key punch and tabulating machine operator, married Jim in '37.' They have their home and two children, Lucy Kate, nearly 7, and Jimmy, nearly 3. She also works with the Junior League.

Betty Workman Wright is now living in Chattanooga, Tennessee. The Wrights have a son Jack, age 6, and a daughter, Betty Louise, 10 months old.

Our column is getting shorter and shorter and may at this rate disappear completely. The responsibility of news gathering rests on all of you as well as me. Many thanks to all of you who have sent items and may those who have not replied either have things calm down enough so they can write or have things happen so they have something to write about!

Class Secretary: Marjorif Lasar (Mrs. E. R. Hurd, Jr.) 425 North Hanley Road, St. Lonis 5, Missouri.

I am still in a happy delirium over the wonderful response I got to this last batch of cards; there is news from all over the place. The newest baby that I know of is Charles Howard Bromley, born November 21, son of Eleanor Alcatt Bromley. Ellie says Miss Lucas was entertained by the Cleveland Alumnae Club when she was on her February trip, Running young Charles a close second is Susan Patterson, 4 months old. Her mother, Julia Shirley Patterson wrote from Chapel Hill that she and Fred, Shirley 4½ and Susan hoped to move into their new home on Senlac Road on April 1. Botts said her doctorhusband keeps very busy with general practice and also that her sister, Alice Shirley Moore '34, has a daughter, Alice, 16 months old, and plans to be in a new home this spring.

Anne Corbitt Little and family are now in Roanoke. Her little girls are Louise 4½ and Suzanne 2. Nancy Butzuer Leavell is living in Charlottesville with her two redheaded daughters, Anne 6, and Lucy 15 months, whose arrival was brand-new news to me. Lib Ogulby Sands, Billy 4½, and husband are living in the country, Gambrills, Maryland, to be exact. She wrote that she had seen Kitty Marsball Hamill in Washington.

Mitzi and entourage moved last August to Merion, Pennsylvania. The children are all in school and are going to camp this summer. Mitzi hopes to go to some adult evening classes. Dot Andrews has moved out a little farther from Miami. They now have a house, a swimming pool, and the kennels on their ten acres. Helen Hanson Bamford had just had a bout with flu and Julie Sadler De Coligny wrote that she was enduring penicillin and liver shots in order to knock off her own particular virus. She was waist-deep in her usual strenuous round of good works and got up to Sweet Briar for the conference on international understanding in March. She also told me that Mary McCallum Neill, her neuro-surgeon linsband, and two sons will be in Laurel, Mississippi, until July and from there will go to Jackson, Mississippi, for Charles' practice.

Ruth Myers Pleasants went to a Junior League Regional Conference in Savannah where she saw Julie HalliBurton Burnett. She hoped to have Lib Scheuer Maxwell and her lusband down for Easter and then go with Clif to New York for a spring vacation. Lib had been to see Cecile for ten days this spring.

Lon Lemmon Stohlmann's raptures on her daughter are both lyrical and laughable. I didn't think it was possible to have that much pure fun with a child. Lou wrote too that Jill Bender, who is working for an M. D. in New York, visited her. Cordelia Fenn Cannon says her life is ever the same, but remembering well Penn's zest for the doing, I took that statement with a large grain of salt. New additions noted in the Cannon household—several small lilac bushes and one large Great Dane.

Mary Walton McCandlish Livingston's oldest is now in school so Mary is most interested in elementary school work. Margaret Ross Ellice wrote of a rugged winter on their New Jersey farm, brightened by a visit from roommate Mildred Redmond Vaughan and husband. Peg is busy with the Red Cross Water Safety campaign and is teaching small Anne to ride.

Emilie Emory Washburn has one chick tucked in kindergarten and deplores her move a bit as the other hangs like grim death to her skirts until school is out. Judy Dangberty Musser after a winter bout with sinus was also feeling the rigors of motherhood. Her projected trip to Florida was put to one side while Janet had chicken pox. She had planned to be in Vero Beach at the same time that I was and I am ill with disappointment when I think of the endless hours we would have spent catching up on the last 14 years. I find that whenever I see any Sweet Briar cronies, at no matter how great an interval, we pore over the class list and only sheer exhaustion stems the tide of tongue and memory. That sounds like a quotation from something but I think it's just me being dewy-eyed over '34.

We in St. Louis enjoyed having Miss Lucas visit us during her swing across the north central states. It made me more eager than ever to go back in 1949 for our Reunion. I think it will be marvelous to have all you other old ladies there too. Remember how we sneered in our youth at those old women in their thirties who tottered back for Commencement!

Class Secretary: ALINE STUMP, 125 East 84th Street, New York 28, New York.

Fund Agent: ALMA MARTIN (Mrs. Ralph Rotnem) 330 East 79th Street, New York 21, New York.

But again I ask you to write me about yourself!

Polly Rich is living in New Haven. She is secretary to the Dean of Yale Divinity School. Please, Polly, give us New Yorkers a buzz when you are next in the city.

Speaking of New Yorkers, Libby Hartridge is now the office manager of the Ladies Home Journal. Alma Martin Rotnem has recently returned from college where she attended a Council meeting. Alma speaks well of the grand job being done by Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, our Alumnae Association President. The class of '36 is proud!

Muggy Gregory Cnkor's young son, Gregory, recently celebrated his first birthday. Muggy's husband, Richard, is the manager of the new Macy store in Jamaica. Muggy heard from Capel Grimes Gerlach who with her Navy husband and two children is now on Guam.

Ruth Gilliam Viar took her two children to Sweet Briar to see the Freshmen production of Alice in Wonderland. Ruth adds, "Neal is my little football player just now and Elizabeth is busy learning to cook." Ruth is the chairman of the Red Cross Home Nursing Committee in Lynchburg and on the Girl Scout Council.

Jane, your nice letter arrived just too late for our last column but I am delighted to have it for this one. Jane Shelton Williams has a 6 year old daughter. Jane says that Fuzzy

ALLYN Capron HEINTZ, '35 AND FAMILY

Taylor Brawley's husband is in the South Carolina legislature so the Brawleys "commute" between Greenville and Columbia when the legislature is in session. Jane saw Chloe Frierson Fort and her husband in the fall. "Her children are darling—twins (a boy and a girl) who are 6, and young Chloe, aged 7." Jane adds, "Mary Poindexter Willingham has the most wonderful family—Janie 2, Ann Crosby 6, Winborn 9, and Eleanor 12. They are all good-looking and cute and sweet."

Kin Carr Baldwin likewise wrote a newsy letter. Kin's son, Bobby, is now 8 and Stuart is 5. Kin has recently heard from Sunny Sim Reid, Mary Kate Crow Sinclair, and Jean Bird Antonius. All have three children apiece. Kin saw Betsy High Gregg in Charlottesville this fall. Betsy had her second son last summer.

Marjorie Wing Todd's husband, Jimmy, is building a hospital at Virginia Beach with three other doctors. He will be the chief surgeon. The Todds plan to start living at the Beach permanently this spring.

As for me, I continue to enjoy my attempts at running a school and am looking forward to spring vacation. I plan to visit Pinkie in Charlottesville and friends in Baltimore.

Our last issue of the magazine comes out in June so please drop me a postcard before May. Happy springtime to you all!

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

There's not very much news this issue. Of the 30 cards I sent out, only 10 came back, and I just can't invent items! Most of those who replied seemed to be, even as yours truly, suffering from frostbite and frozen pipes. What a winter!

Polly Lambeth Blackwell's third daughter was born in February. The other two are 6½ and almost 3. Winfield is very busy with his law practice and running for a second term in the North Carolina legislature. She heard from Anne Lemmon who is in the personnel department of a large store somewhere in the west. Help, Annic, where? The west is a big place! Natalie Hopkins Griggs is now living in Lakewood, New York, just outside Jamestown, where Jack has started a new IBM office. The move has kept her busy and she's looking forward to summer on Lake Chautauqua. Margaret MacRac Allen is still with the Division of Elementary Education of the Virginia State Department of Education in Richmond. She sees Helen Neve, "a lady of leisure," occasionally. Martha Clark is certainly active. After getting her M.A. and M.S.P.H. at Duke and the University of North Carolina, she's taught and done some public health education. Now she's the director of nature recreation in Danville. This includes arts and crafts, photography, field trips, camping, etc. Sounds like fun.

Nancy Nalle Lea escaped ten days of New Jersey winter with a trip to Charlotte where she saw lots of Briarites at Harriet Porcher's wedding. Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlmann '34 has moved to just one-half block from Nancy. Ellie Snodgrass Park finishes law school in May. She has been working on the Neminating Committee of the Alumnae Association. She sees Jackie Cochran Nicholson and Norma Rogers Cook and reports that Jane Collins Corwin and family are having a gay month in California. Anne Lauman Bussey's new house is keeping her on her toes, what with papering, tiling the bath, and general interior decoration. A card from Gurley Carter Davis shows she is alive and living in Annapolis still, but she reports no startling news. Kay Eshleman Maginnis says she's about settled in her home-and recuperating from nursing both children through the mumps over Christmas. And Dot Prout Corsuch says Peter Dyer Sorensen's children are just recovering from the measles! Peggy Cruiksbank Dyer is busy as ever garden clubbing and working in hospitals. May Weston Thompson spent her sixth anniversary at Skytop in the Poconos and Dot is very envious. The Gorsuchs hope to start their house by April 1, depending on the weather. Kate Shaffer Hardy was elected by the Charleston Junior League "Volunteer of the Year." This is a coveted honor and we feel proud.

Marion Leggett Currie's baby is still in the hospital—it will be a year May 1. We all hope and pray along with you, Marion, that he'll be out and cured soon. She had talked to Betty Boyce Emmons the day before my card artived—the first time in ages. Nice timing! Reports that Betty and family of three daughters are all well.

That's all for this time, but please, let's make the last for this year a humdinger! Do answer your cards!

REUNION MAY 29-JUNE 1

Class Secretary: Dolly Nicholson (Mrs. John A. Tate, Jr.) 212 Middleton Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Fund Agent: CONNIE CHALKLEY (Mrs. Fred Kittler) 7 Kirkley Road, Weems Creek, Annapolis, Maryland.

Time grows short, and I do hope each of you is getting her ducks in a row so that we can all be back for commencement and reunion! Shortly after April 1, you will receive blanks to be filled out and reservations will be made "first come, first served" at the Alumnae Office. Bear this in mind and shoot it back posthaste for with all the classes scheduled to be back, it seems to me space will be limited. Of special interest will be the seminar proposed for the alumnae at that time, 'Let's Look at Liberal Arts,' and if you feel the way I do, you'll be keen to see how your perspective concerning liberal arts has changed in ten years. There will be plenty of intellectual stimulation offered.

Marion Brown Zaiser and Lew Griffith Longstaff wrote me a sizzler from St. Pete where Lew and children were visiting Brownie and hers. Frankly I loved the thought of you two getting upset over my not having a letter in the February issue of the News. It's good to be missed! They are planning to be back and want me to send out an SOS to all you '38ers to say that this is our year, and urge each of you to come. Macky Fuller Kellogg chimed in from Weston, Massachusetts, with a second to the motion. She and Fergie (Barbara Ferguson Lincoln) will drive down together for commencement.

Adele Letcher Harvey writes that she is taking up ceramics as a diversion from her domestic duties and three "male pieces of dynamite." She said she sees few Briarites except Janet Macfarlan Bergmann, at whose home she had a wonderful steak dinner recently. Mac says she, Carl, Nancy, and Skipper are fine and all involved with a scale model railroad. What with a new automatic washing machine, and good cleaning woman, she has resumed her weekly art class, joined a bridge club, and does her usual church and school work. When I last heard she was looking forward to seeing Ann Benedict and Ellie George. She sees Adele and Georgie Black Kievit occasionally.

Howell Lykes Colton writes from Wynnewood Pennsylvania, that she has just returned with her children from five weeks in Florida and fortunately missed the worst part of a miserable winter. Billy Herzer Hickenlooper tells me she can't make reunion, nor can Howell; we'll miss you both terrifically. Billy's children have just finished a siege of chicken pox and mumps. I understand from her that Betty Dail Wilson has moved back there from Washington and lives nearby.

Another of my reply postals is from Anne Walker Newton who announces that at last they have moved into a newly purchased home. They love it after being in an apartment for so long. Jane Kent Titus has been visiting in Richmond and she, Anne, Ida Todman Pierce, Susan Gibson Davenport, and Molly Talcott Dodson, whose husband is a legislator from Roanoke in the General Assembly, had just had a little reunion. That should give you all a nice taste of what the end of May will be like at Sweet Briar.

It's good to hear from Dot Evans Haveron after a coon's age! She says Janice Wiley Adams and husband have three children and are now living near Buenos Aires. They plan to come home this summer and as yet are uncertain about returning to South America. Dot has had a time recently going through chicken pox with three children.

Lucy Taliaferro Nickerson proudly announces a son, Charles Clark, Jr., born January 12. That's her big news, and she also tells me of Judy Bemis Wills' new daughter, Patricia Jane, born December 24. Dot Tison Campbell also has a new daughter, Polly, born November 23, which makes three childen for her, with Jamie, 4, and Dorrie, 18 months. The winter in Manchester Center, Vermont, sounds terrific, 25 and 30 degrees below zero morning after morning!

"We are elated that we now have six flights a day (TWA and Mid-Continent) at our new field. Not everyone can boast such good transportation service in their back yard. Now that the farmhouse is somewhat more comfortable we're enjoying life much more. I still miss Virginia and Sweet Briar, and will try to get back this spring. Best wishes-Letty Bouley Phillips, Quincy, Illinois."

Mary Cobb Hulse and Barbara Derr Chenoweth say they can't figure out how to get to reunion from Birmingham, but I betcha nothing will keep them away. Cobbie is involved with church and Junior League work and her two children. She reports that Mary Thompson Ball is now in Cuba and Connie McDuffie Turner has her hands full with a shop, a job on the paper, the Junior League, and three children. How do people do so much!

As usual Jin Faulkner Mathews is busy. She is moving April 1 to a new home, which of itself is a job, Ann, age 1, requires plenty of attention, and Jin has a strenuous singing program of Lenten oratorios, and is still Arts Chairman for the Junior League.

Nancy McCandlish Prichard plans to go over from Charlottesville for reunion. Shirley Haywood Alexander, Tom, and Tommy have moved into a new home-a nice duplex at 1535 Caswell Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. She tells me Frances Bailey Brooke came to see them last month when Frannie and husband were at Chapel Hill.

The scoop of the decade was a grand long letter from that fugitive from a fountain pen-Cec Jansen Kendrick in Denver. She tells me first and best of all that the life of the Charles Kendricks is a very happy one, with three children, Charles, Jr., 6, Clinton 41/2, and Katherine 5 months. After the war they bought an "old unpleasant-looking house" which they did over completely inside and have grown to love. In the winter they ski and in the summer golf. When Cec wrote they had just returned from two perfect weeks in Aspen, Colorado, an old mining town converted into a swank ski resort, where she says she disgraced herself by gaping openly at Gary Cooper. She regrets that because of the distance, the children, and the recent vacation she cannot make reunion and enters a hearty plea for everyone to think of her and drop her a line telling her who was there and what we talked about and did. We'll surely try, chum!

Rilma Wilson Allen, Happy James Wathen and I plan to drive up. Hope to see you there!

REUNION, MAY 29-JUNE 1

Class Secretary: BETSY CAMPBELL (Mrs. Robert S. Gawthrop, Jr.) R.D. No. 4, West Chester, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Lelia Bond (Mrs. Joseph Preston) 240 Shenley Drive, Erie, Pennsylvania.

Just back from a heavenly sojourn in Naples, Florida, where my grandfather has a house that was begging for occupants. Bob and I, the children, and three other couples went down for two weeks. Everyone pitched in with K.P. et al and it was delightful.

It is hard to believe that the time has come to write you again. You have so recently learned that I unresigned that I have little news. Please write and tell me all the fascinating things you have been doing.

Gertrude Robertson Midlen, bless her heart, was my sole informant. Her Margaret, 21/2, is remarkably adept at mischief but with the face of an angel. Husband John was given a television set recently which has given them many pleasant hours. Gertrude fell and hurt her shoulder last year, delayed having it treated, and now is undergoing extensive medical care. It is very painful and she warns others to attend to their ailments pronto. Bennett Wilcox Bartlett and Julia Worthington Lombard are neighbors and see each other at market as well as so-

Spring is a wonderful time and a busy one, but do let's have a long letter for the June issne!

REUNION MAY 29-JUNE 1

Fund Agent: ELEANOR SNOW, 81 Eastwood Street, East Orange, New Jersey.

First of all, I want to thank everyone for their wonderful responses to my plea for news. In the romance department we have some very exciting events. There was a grand picture of Eleanor Snow when her engagement was announced to J. Tatnall Lea, Jr., of West Orange, New Jersey. Mr. Lea was graduated from the Peddie School and attended Princeton University. Ellie will be married on May 22. Blair Bunting Both, Lois Fernley McNeil, Connie Currie Fleming and Betty Ivins Haskins will be at the wedding. El is hoping that Parge Woods Gillette and Hing Schmid Hardy will be there too. In the meantime, El and Tat have been traveling around. They visited Ivy and Bill Haskins in Plainfield and saw Muriel Barrows at the same time. Muriel is going to England this spring and will stay three or four months. It was grand to hear from Lois Fernley McNeil. El and Lois both reported that the Lea-Snow-McNeil get-together at Plymouth Meeting was a big success. The McNeil brood of three sound most attractive. Lois said they have been completely snowed in several times this winter. Hug sent Lois one of those nice tropical postcards that are so welcome in ten inches of snow. Hug seemed to be having a marvelous trip. Lois will be sending cards herself when she goes to Cuba this month.

Peggy Caperton will be married to William Rankin, a graduate of Princeton, on June 5. I can't wait to meet Bill and that is one dainty bride I'm not going to miss. Tommy and Jane Goolrick Murrell attended the engagement party.

Betty Frantz's engagement has been announced to Dr. Tom Robers, formerly of Radford, Virginia, and now of Lynchburg. Martha Rector tells me the wedding will probably take place in April and Betty is all aglow.

Mary Johnston Bedell's son, Reginald Hudson, was born on February 8. Mary says he is a very respectable looking little gentleman. Knox Turnbull, Eve Williams' husband, is Reginald's god-father. Eve and Knox have just purchased one of the most beautiful and historic farms in Virginia. "Punch Bowl" farm, as it is now called, at Shadwell, was the birthplace of Thomas Jefferson. I saw the Turnbulls not long ago and they were most enthusiastic about their farm. At present they are living in the guest house and plan to rent the big house.

Carrington Lancaster Pasco's third son, Robert Lancaster, was born in January. Mary Miller Naquin's two little girls now have a brother, David. Margaret Dowell Cochran's sun, John Jeffery, was born last month in Washington. Margaret and the baby have since returned to Detroit where Juhn works for the Ford Company.

Alice Gass Dornberger reports that she is still crazy about Rochester and her new home. Alice didn't tell me her year-old daughter's name, but her son is called "Butch" and is already a photographer's model. He posed for the Eastman Kodak Company and appeared in several magazines wearing a red snowsuit and standing by a fire plug. Alice enclosed a clipping about Mary Lee Settle. Mary Lee is living in England and is married to Mr. Brian Douglas Newton, associate editor of Ambassador magazine in London. Mary Lee's son, Christopher Wethersbee, is a student at Rugby. Mary Lee spent last summer in Cornwall writing her first novel!

Connie Chalkley Kittler and her children are visiting her family at Gloucester. Connie has joined a local choral club and says that their "warblings are hardly professional, but tney do enjoy themselves."

Marion Dandt MacBride is living in Union, Missouri, where Tom has a thriving frozen food business. Their daughter, Patsy, is a year old. Nan Dickie Neil is thrilled with her apartment in Brooklyn. Billy, 3½, is delighted with his new sister, Bonnie. Beth Thomas Mason and family have bought a house in Ann Arbor. Beth and Tate will be in Boston in May while Tate attends a prefessional meeting.

Margaret Katterjohn McCollom's oldest daughter is in school now.

Ann Conant Weaver has been in Nassau for three months with her 2 children. Constance was born last June.

Emory Gill Williams and Canky had a marvelous Florida vacation in December. Emory was "queen for a week" with breakfast in bed every day. Daughter Dabney is in nursery school, but Frances and Mason keep mama company at home.

Ann Adamson Taylor is living outside Baltimore where Dr. Taylor is on the staff of a large mental hospital. Ann is in charge of the patient's library.

Hazel Sterrett Allen lives in Charlotte and her daughter Laura is 2.

Betty Itins Haskins' letter gave me such a large charge that I must quote: "After such a long interval of silence, I feel that I should have some news of note to impart, such as I'm running for Congress or taking in washing or Bill just made his second million in a big deal. Actually I don't have a thing to say except that the living-room curtains need washing and I have a nifty new cookbook." Don't you know just how she feels? I made an automatic mistake and Ivy replied, "Don't you dare spell my name Bettie again—shades of my uld movie-struck days—Betty, please. Eill just roared when he saw that and hasn't iet me forget it."

News from Blair is that she and Richard plan to attend the Buntings' 50th wedding anniversary. Blair, Jr., is in nursery school and knows all the boys' names but hasn't seen any girls yet! Blair is afraid she won't be able to make our reunion because of her St. Louis trip. Cynthia Noland Young says she has virtually no chance of making it either, but I'm hoping they will both turn up at Sweet Briar.

Polly Boze Glascock is thrilled with the prospect of a '40 reunion this coming 'June. Polly attended the conference at Sweet Briar on "The Role of the Colleges in Promoting Peace Through International Understanding," which she said was extremely stimulating. I intended to be there too but a sick little boy changed my plans. However, nothing will be able to keep me away from campus from May 29 through June 1. Terry Shaw outlined the program and it sounds wonderful. You all will receive cards to fill out sometime in April, which I hope you will all return promptly with big "Yesses." See you there!

REUNION MAY 29-JUNE 1

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.) 670 June Street, Cincinnati 8, Chio.

Fund Agent: BETTY DOUCETT (Mrs. John Neill) Interlaken Gardens, 1177 California Road, Tuckahoe, New York.

(This letter is written by Betty Doucett Neill) A few weeks ago "Dedore" wrote and asked me to "pinch hit" for her for this issue of the News. She and John have just become proud parents of a 7½ pound daughter, Barbara Joan, born February 20, and "Dedore" has her hands full. I scurried around for news of '41ers and will pass on to you what little bits I found.

Jack and I just returned from Washington. He was called down to the Navy Department for two weeks' active duty. While there we had a gay time and I managed to see Anita Loving Lewis, Margaret Craighill Price, Betty Brown-Serman MacRae, and Judy Davidson Walker. Anita and her husband have a nice apartment in Arlington. She entertained Chee-Chee and me for lunch one day, and our tongues wagged furiously for three hours. Chee-Chee and her husband keep nighty busy with their three children. Judy and her husband are living at Quantico, Virginia, where Tony is instructing Marines.

Was so happy to see Craigie and meet her husband, Karl, and their two daughters. Sharon is a darling little girl and Margaret, aged two months, is bursting with personality.

Saw Gertrude Marill from a distance, but didn't have a chance to visit with her. I understand she is working for the Public Health Service in Washington.

A letter from Barbara Holman Whitcomb reports that she and her two sons, Billy and Charles, have all been ill with grippe.

Here is an item a bit old, but not yet reported. Pi Dowling von Wellsheim and Al became parents on October 6 of a daughter, Margaret. Edge Cardamone O'Donnell wrote that the baby is a little doll.

Charlie and Betty Joe McNarney Williams' son, "J. T.," is growing in leaps and bounds. We spent an evening with the Williams' last week. Betty Joe had received a letter from Eilie Damgard Firth, reporting the arrival of their new daughter, Louise, born in December. Also included was the sad news that her mother had passed away in January. I know the entire class joins me in extending our sympathy to Ellie.

Frances Wilson Dowdey wrote that Bebo Chichester Hall has a daughter, Sarah, born in September. The Halls have moved from New Jersey back to Fredericksburg where Dick has a job with the Sylvania Plant there. Frances was busy taking care of five new puppies and teaching folk dancing to the Girl Scouts at the time she wrote Dedore.

This June marks Reunion Year for our class under the new system. As was reported in the last issue of the NEWs, the reunion plan has been revised, and from now on the classes near us, before and after, are to "reune" at the same time. Why not make plans now to be there for the big get-together?

As class fund agent, I'll take this opportunity to thank all of you who have contributed to the Alumnae Fund this year.

REUNION MAY 29-JUNE 1

Class Secretary: Clare Eager, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland.

Fund Agent: Muriel Grymes, Ships Point, Easton, Maryland.

Unfortunately my postcards have borne little fruit this time. However I take most of the blame now that I have received a nauch-needed new list for '43 and have discovered that at least half were sent to out-of-date addresses. I did manage to contact Nancy Jameson Glass who finds herself in the none-too-unusual housewife mother routine. Her child, Billy, is 2 now, and the little family is looking forward to returning to Lake Erie's shores early this summer. Also a card from Pat Robineau Van deVere said Muie Grymes was visiting her in Florida so I guess Mu didn't go back to her job in Oregon after Christmas. Ted and Camille Guyton Guething spent the month of January in Florida where McNeill visited them for a week-end.

My new class list informs me that Della Read is back from China. It also says that Didi Christian is now Mrs. Minto C. Mulligan. However this alphabetical census is peculiarly uncommunicative about interesting details and I have no further information. I suppose her case is similar to that of Debbie Douglas who wrote a couple of months ago that she was "going home to do some volunteer work." Apparently she meant volunteer housework because she recently announced her engagement to Ronny Adams from Jessup, Georgia.

Nancy Pingree Drake, now well settled in Norwood, Massachusetts, writes that Ouija

Adams Bush expects to trip home to Texas in April. I assume she and many others are also expecting to visit Sweet Briar the end of May. Several girls have expressed hopes that lots of us will be back, and I agree that it will be great fun if there are. It should be interesting too as the Council is planning a seminar which we may attend.

Since the last News I have had a very nice visit chez Frances Gregg Petersmeyer and have met her darling and precocious child. She seemed to be the smartest person of her age bracket I have ever met, but perhaps even godmothers can have a prejudiced point of view. Frances and her California husband have been undergoing a great mental and physical ordeal as a result of Bronxville's snowfall this year. I think they thought it couldn't happen this side of the Arctic Circle. Even native Sandy Packard Hubbard seemed a little set back over it. Sandy looks very well and just as chipper as ever. She bad recently returned from a stay with Nancy Bickelbaupt Harris in Rochester.

I have seen Mary Law Taylor and Page Ruth Foster here in Baltimore, but missed Virginia White who was up in March. Also just today I have returned from the Conference on International Understanding held at Sweet Briar. I drove down with Marion Seunders Montgomery '44 who told me that she sees Mary Belle Lee occasionally in Washington where she is still working at Garfinkels as lingerie buyer. Brac Preston was the only other '43er there but there were most interesting speakers and delegates so we thoroughly enjoyed ourselves. I saw Carol Tanner briefly in Charlottesville. She expects (she worded it "hopes and prays" but I'm not worried) to get her degree from the University in June. Brac had seen Elizabeth Shepherd Scott, who is having a wonderful time in Wilmington, and also Carter Claybrook Booth with her attractive husband. Brac told me that Peggy Roudin was having a marvelous time in New York but tailed to mention the big reason why, which appeared in today's paper and is a happy and up-to-date item on which to end-namely, lier engagement to James Foster of that metropolis. He is a graduate of Williams College and a vice-president of the DePinna store.

Hope you will be back at Sweet Briar for our Fifth Reunion this spring!

Class Secretary: Connie Sue Budlong, Occupational Therapy Department, Box 181, Kennedy Veterans Hospital, Memphis 15, Tennessee.

Fund Agent: ELLEN BOYD DUVAL, 3211 Grove Avenue, Richmond 21, Virginia.

It comes as something of a shock to find that all the pile of notes, clippings, announcements, and letters I've been hoarding in my own pack-rat manner have simply vanishedvia spring cleaning no doubt. So, most of the following will proceed from my inaccurete memory and fertile imagination. No libel suits allowed.

Not much news, and I've no doubt missed out on lots too. There's the announcement of Barbara Clark's marriage on April 19, 1947, 10 Frederick Brown Utley, Jr. The Utleys are at home in one of the Oranges. New Jersey. Martha Lindsey was married to John Lambuth Barton in December, just before Christmas. Dorothy Byrd Denny married Fredus Edmund Sutton on January 31. A future in the wedding department is that of Barbara Duncombe to James Allen Lang, which will be April 2 in Winnetka.

MARIAN Shanley JACOBS, '44, AND ELIZABETH

News from Milwaukee comes via Kay Mensing. Her most exciting report was of her appointment to the Supreme Council of the Bank Employees Association. That sounds impressive, and even historical. Franny Pettit O'Halloran is having quite a whirl combining housekeeping with a fulltime job. It's all I can do to swing the job angle! Franny's husband is winding up his dental training at Northwestern, will graduate in June. A long letter from Goody (Eleanor Goodspeed Abbott) in Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, where she and Larry are having a wonderful time among their own chattels. Via Goody comes the news that Paulette Long and Gunner Taggert have bought a house nearby.

Hannah Mallory was married to Joseph Minor Perkins early in December in Warsaw, with E. B. Duval on hand for the ceremony. Physical therapy has Bea Boericke enthralled once more; this time as a civilian and in Wilmington.

This is long ago news, but Frances Longino Schroder and Betty Haterty Smith had babies at the same time last fall, same hospital, different genders. Their names are Hughes Spaulding Schroder, Jr., and Elizabeth Rawson Smith. Hughes looks like his Daddy and little Betty like no one on earth but is mighty sweet, according to her mom.

Wonderful long letter from Virginia Noyes, still plugging higher mathematics into willing brains at Wisconsin, And the Noyes' Amherst latchstring is out to all of us when in the Sweet Briar vicinity. Ginnie has several hundied activities going full swing, per usual, Girl Scouts, Episcopal Youth Center, assisting in physical education, teaching algebra and engineering calculus to 100 students, and studying projective geometry and social legislation!

News from Japan, kindness of Dykie Watts, who should have a job with Cook's! Her descriptions are superb and gave me a bad case of wanderlust. If anyone's in Yokahama, Dykie's name is listed in the phone book, drop in and see her!

Seems as though this is all the news available. Again I mutter feeble promises to reform. Please write and I'll try to do better.

1945

Class Secretary: MARTHA HOLTON, 2318 Densmore Drive, Toledo, Ohio.

Fund Agent: AUDREY BETTS, 888 Park Averus. New York 21. New York.

Elaine Krause and husband Bill (Lt. W. R. Kelty, Jr.) are in Germany for the next three years. Their address (as nearly as I can decipher) is "D" Troop, 94th Constab. Sqdn., A.P.O. 114, % Postmaster, New York City. Elaine would like to hear from anyone who can find the time to write.

Susan Buchanan married John Randolph Coupland III on February 21. They will live in Norfolk, Anne Carter Walker has been Mrs. A. W. Somerville for several months and lives in Earlysville, Virginia.

Ann McLean Loomis has a 7 pound baby daughter, Elizabeth Carter, born January 10. Ellen 'Bunny' Gray Wilson wrote from the hospital in Richmond to tell us of the birth of her son, Robert M. Wilson III, on March 5. Husband Bob is a resident on radiology in the Medical Center Hospital so Bunny had a good time while a patient there. Anne Macfarlane Clark has a son born in late February. She and Sally Leffen Macfarlane are back in Tampa.

Cappy Price Bass wrote of seeing Dale Bogert Baldwin in Louisville last fall. Dale is living in Paris, Kentucky. Betty Gray is in Cleveland and Helen Davis Wohlers lives in St. Louis, Michigan. Dale Sayler Hull is settled in Denver with Johnny and Diane.

Doe Fagg says she is helping her father for a while this winter but doesn't tell exactly what kind of work she does. Alice Gearhart reports herself as an integral part of the Bell Telephone (does she really mean that?) doing personnel work.

Jean Jones Crossman and husband, Bob, are in Syracuse. He is a Junior Engineer with an air-conditioning firm there and she is a secretary and statistical typist for Standard Brands, Jean says Peggy Steinhart was married last June to Reginald M. Rowe, Jr., and they live in Englewood. New Jersey.

Lile Tucker Bell has been in Charlottesville a little over a year and is beautifully situated in a little white house at the University with 7 months old daughter, Eleanor Lile. Husband Tom is assistant resident on obstetries at the University Hospital. They expect to be there for two more years. Harriet Willcox spent a few days with Lile during the mid-winter dances.

Jodie Morgan sent a long letter filled with news of various '45ers. She wrote from bedput there by mumps. She said it afforded her a nice way to catch up on correspondence and reading (?!?). Around Thanksgiving she saw Hedy Edwards Davenport and Sarah Temple Moore both with little boys, Jodie said she walked into Hedy's new apartment and found her in blue jeans and the initialed blue sweater we used to see floating up and down the hockey field, this time holding a little man in a blue cotton suit instead of a hockey stick. Nice exchange! Jodie was oa hand for Pooch Porcher's wedding along with Harriet Willcox, Leila Barnes, Diddy Gaylord, Jane McJunkin, Mary Haskins King and Jct, and Sarah Temple Moore and Luke, Pooch and her husband, Bob Barnwell, are now living at 148 East 48th Street in New York.

Several people have asked me what I was doing to keep busy. I left Curtiss-Wright in Columbus after I had obtained a Structures Engineer Junior rating, and came back to Toledo to work for my father in the monument business. My job consists mainly of keeping cost records straight, but I also spend some time in the drafting room making blueprints and doing a few layouts.

Please send me any information that you may have at any time. I am more than glad to have your letters or postcards.

1946

Fund Agent: DOROTHY SUE CALDWELL, 4707 Bayshore Boulevard, Tampa, Florida.

Report on domesticity: Jean Pollard Kline became the proud mother of Robert Mac-Donald Kline (weight 7 pounds) on January 22, in Wilmington, North Carolina. Polly says he's settled down to being a very good baby; that he has blond hair, blue eyes, and a rosy complexion, and that he "smiles and coos and is a lot more human." Aren't babies wonderful?

Polly also wrote that Char Sprunt Murchison had a daughter on February 18. Her name—Mary Frese Murchison. Polly says she's darling, and that Char looks grand. I hope she's enrolled her daughter already at Sweet Briar!

Jessie Strickland Elcock (who is an old hand at being a mama now that Walter, Jr., is 9 months old) sent me some pictures of her son, and you could tell even now that he has loads of personality, round, sparkling eyes that won't miss a thing and a smile that will charm the ladies some day. Jessie tells me that she had a long chat over the phone recently with Sarah McDuffie Hardaway who was in Atlanta for a few days. Sarah and Ben have a young daughter.

Flash from Miami! A letter just arrived from March Sanders telling me the exciting news that she is to be married there on April 2 to Dr. Harlan Starr of Rome, Georgia, who has been interning in Miami. Jimmie Thompson is to be her maid of honor and is getting a week off from her nursery school work in order to be in the wedding.

Crutcher Field too will be married in April in Miami. Ellen Robbins and Helen Murchison will be bridesmaids. Ellen will join Murch here in Jacksonville and they will continue down there together.

I was the lucky visitor of Dottie Sue Caldwell in early February for the Gasparilla festivities in Tampa. 'Twas a memorable sojourn. After I left, Dottie went to Havana for two weeks, has several trips planned for this spring before she takes a job again.

I had a wonderful letter from our honorary class member Miss Glass the other day. It's so interesting that I shall relay it to you in full. Writing from Charlottesville, where she is living with her niece, she says:

"In the summer of '46 I went to England for one month as chairman of the finance committee of the International Federation of University Women. I flew on a more or less converted Liberator—and it was a nice experience to have had. I came back on the John Ericson (which has since been destroyed) and I have had better crossings! To be in England is always a pleasure to me...

"I have been living most pleasantly with my niece and enjoying Charlottesville and particularly the University group—as much as all of you used to enjoy your part of it—I have pursued philosophy in a graduate seminar, one semester last year and one this.

"Last summer I visited in Massachusetts just at the right time to enjoy the Boston Symphony festival at Tanglewood . . . Then I went on to the first meeting in this hemisphere of the International Federation of University Women, held in Toronto, where I saw, for the first time since the war, old friends and made new ones. It was a most interesting gathering, with women from Iudia, China, the Philippines, and South Adrica, as well as from Europe and North and South America.

"This winter I have been much back and forth to Washington, as a member of the Loyalty Review Board and on a piece of work for the American Council of Education. I have also been over to Sweet Briar a few times, once to a faculty party, to the inauguration of President Lucas, to take a party of friends to the Boxwood Inn, and this year twice to attend a meeting of the Board of Overseers.

"I am much interested in the Music Festival that we are trying to establish as a state-wide activity here in Charlottesville, where we use the stadium of the University for the concerts out-of-doors. Last year I was president of the organization . . . The concerts will come in May this year and the Detroit Orchestra and soloists will give them.

"Ground has at last been broken for my louse. Everything that delays building has delayed me. It is at Farmington on a hillside looking off towards the mountains. It is planned to crawl along the ground like a worm, mostly one room deep only, and it has three levels—something entirely different frem any of the countless plans I have made for it in previous years. I am truly excited at the prospect of its being built and of gathering my possessions from the basement of Sweet Briar House and taking possession . . ."

With this, '46ers, I shall close my April communique to you. Do keep me posted, for the next issue of the News will be the last of the school year and I'd like to round up your activities and finish with a flourish!

Class Secretary: Sallie Balley, 430 North Blount Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. Fund Agent: Frances Gardner, 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk 8, Virginia. The class of '47 has two more engaged girls. Cynthia Bemiss is making plans for a June wedding; she is marrying William Alexander Stuart of Abington, who will graduate this spring from the University of Virginia. Cynthia, Peggy Robertson, and Ginna Walker have attended business school in Richmond this winter. Fanny Ulmer's engagement to Delbert Connolly of Jacksonville was recently announced. After the wedding on May 22 they will make their home in Jacksonville. Saravette Royster and Ernie Banker are planning to attend the wedding.

Another Jacksonville girl in the headlines is Margaret Munnerlyn. She is still in Europe (sead her article in this issue of the News) and has met the King and Queen of Yugoslavia and has skiled with the Prince of Nepal, who invited her on a tiger hunt.

Marguerite de Lustrac, another of our cosmopolites, returned to the United States for a visit with friends in Richmond and Betty Ann Bass in Knoxville. She had attended the Olympics at St. Moritz.

Three others of our number have tried their skill in skiing. Eleanor Bosworth has conscientiously pursued the sport at Cornell. She visited Peggy Robertson, Stu McGuire, and the campus between her exams. Maria Gregory flew up to Mount Tremblant in the Laurentians for a two-week skiing trip, and she reports a wonderful time. Joan McCoy also went skiing but I don't know where. Margaret Ellen "Birdhead" White writes that Ernie Banker, Blair Burwell, and she planned a skiing trip but the snow failed them. Blair was crowned Oneen of the Revelers Ball in Jacksonville this winter and Cecil Butler attended her at court. "Birdhead" also writes that Laura Lee Grogan and Sue Fitzgerald are giving a recital at Sweet Briar this spring. Since her father's death this fall, "Birdhead" has been at home with her mother in Walton, New York, where she is an up-and-coming reporter for her Uncle George on the Walton Reporter.

Ann Cabell Walters Zimmerman has a son, Albert V., III. He was born February 3.

Ann Marshall plans to be a hiking leader at a girls' camp at Estes Park, Colorado, this summer. She writes of hearing from Alex Marcoglou Pezas in New York.

Anne Seibels toured the west in March. She went to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Yellewstone Park. She wrote of Alice Joseph's wedding in February and also that Mary Lib Jones is teaching Social Studies at the University of Alabama.

Eleanor Stafford wrote in January that she is living in Hato Rey, Puerto Rico, where she has been studying social work. She also has a job as an assistant librarian at the Graduate School of Public Administration at the University of Puerto Rico.

Saravette Royster has been in another Raleigh Little Theatre production, Sheridan's "The Rivals." She and I became members of the Junior League recently. We are still in business school, and she is holding up well under the strain—accounting is killing me. I am doing Red Cross work at present.

Please everybody write. Your letters are wonderful, and I enjoy keeping up with you all tremendously.

A Letter to Alumnae from Miss Lucas

THIS has been a grand year for me because I have talked with literally hundreds and hundreds of Sweet Briar alumnae. Since early last fall I have visited alumnae groups in twenty different centers, some of the groups representing several cities in an area. My itinerary has been far-flung stretching from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to Miami, Florida, and from Kansas City to Boston, including the following cities: Boston, Chattanooga, Charlotte, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, Kansas City, Louisville; Lynchburg, including alumnae from Amherst County; Miami, including groups from Palm Beach, Ft. Lauderdale and Coral Gables; Milwaukee, Nashville, New York City, Norfolk, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Toledo. It has indeed been a grand year for me!

In the first place, I have never met more intelligent, attractive or altogether satisfactory human beings as are the alumnae of Sweet Briar College. Many of you are making important contributions to your communities through your homes, through your organizational work, particularly in the Y. W. C. A., the League of Women Voters, and the Junior League. Others among you are working hard at full time jobs as teachers, laboratory technicians, office secretaries, social workers, nurses, doctors, lawyers, not to mention "merchants, chiefs." And the great majority of you are properly restless about the state of the world and what you in your particular situation can do to help solve the pressing problems with which humanity is faced. We have talked together a great deal during these visits about the tremendous responsibility which the collegeeducated woman has today in working for a better world. The liberal arts colleges have been seriously criticized during recent years for not preparing their graduates for full and constructive lives in our democratic society. The women's colleges have come in for particularly strenuous vituperation, the usual complaint being that they are not realistic about the work which women must do in society and that the graduates of the women's colleges enter the world of possible jobs with bewilderment and confusion and a feeling that they aren't really prepared to do anything.

In the face of criticism like this and of the very obvious need of our present troubled world for enlightened and well-trained leadership, Sweet Briar College has given a great deal of thought in the last year to what our curriculum should offer our students and how the presentation of our subject-matter may be most effective and challenging. Many alumnae groups and many individuals among you have written in your own opinion of past and present curricula at Sweet Briar and have offered us many valuable suggestions about ways of contemporizing the curriculum and of enabling the college to offer our students the best possible training for constructive work in the present, very needy world. Many of you have expressed the opinion that no student should graduate from a liberal arts college today without having had a "core" course on American civilization equivalent to the Classical Civilization course which the students of the last fourteen years so often speak of as a "must," in retrospect. The alumnae in general feel that such a course, covering the history of our own American culture from political, sociological, economic, as well as cultural points of view, would give a maturing individual the necessary background for her own active citizenship in our democratic society. Many of you have expressed a need for more correlation in science studies, to enable students to know "what science is all about" over and above the details of one particular scientific field.

Varying opinions have been expressed about the value of more courses of the technical type, particularly concerned with homemaking. A few of you have felt strongly, even after you have pondered the meaning of a liberal arts education, that there is a place in such an educational program for training in home economics. The majority, however, have expressed themselves as feeling that there is so much to absorb in a four-year program of liberal arts in order to achieve the goals of liberating the mind that it would be far better to leave such technical training as that of cooking, sewing, typing and shorthand to the extra-curricular planning of self-disciplined college women.

Particular enthusiasm was expressed by many of you about Sweet Briar's expanding program of promoting world awareness. The conference which was held here in March on "The Role of the College in Promoting Peace Through International Understanding" was only one of the events at Sweet Briar during the current year to stimulate better understanding of people in other parts of the world. I have already told you in some detail about the program of foreign study which Sweet Briar has recently taken on. We are succeeding the University of Delaware in sponsoring, with the cooperation of the Institute of International Education, a program of Junior Year study at the University of Paris, including work in the liberal arts at the Sorbonne. Our plan of study has met with the enthusiastic acceptance of universities and colleges all over the country. According to present indications, we will be sending to Paris in August between sixty and seventy men and women, coming to us from about thirty-two colleges and universities throughout the country, for the Junior Year in France. Dr. Joseph E. Barker of our Romance Language Department is directing the plan; and Dr. Theodore Andersson, of the Romance Language Department of Yale University, will be the Professor-in-Charge of the group in Paris next year. Dr. Andersson will be assisted by Dr. Marion Monaco of Connecticut College.

The most recent development in our program of stimulating world awareness has been the decision of our Committee on Instruction to include in our curriculum next year courses in Russian and in Near Eastern Affairs. We are extremely fortunate in having been able to find two distinguished scholars who are to join our faculty in September in these respective fields. Dr. Edgar J. Fisher, formerly Dean and Professor of History of Robert College of Istanbul, and recently Assistant Director of the Institute of International Education, has been appointed Visiting Professor in the Division of Social Studies and will present a special course next year on the Near East, in addition to taking a section of Social Studies 1-2 and teaching a course in Economic and Political Theory. Dr. Abraham Kreusler, whose past teaching experience has been in Poland and in Russia, will offer courses next year in elementary Russian Language study and Russian Literature in translation. The growing demand for college students with some basic training in the Russian language, particularly for foreign service projects, suggests that the addition of Russian to our curriculum may prove to be a very fruitful experiment.

The exciting topics of our many alumnae meetings over the country during recent months were continued here at Sweet Briar during Commencement week-end, when the Alumnae Council and the Alumnae Association met at the college. It was a good alumnae reunion, with much high discourse both under parliamentary procedure and in informal groups in the dormitories, far into the night! There is not space left for me to tell you all the exciting ideas that came out of those various discussions. I just hope that even more of you will come back for next year's reunions and earry forward with us our thinking about the future of Sweet Briar.

In closing, may I take this occasion to tell you how deeply grateful we are to our alumnae for their generous support of Sweet Briar during the last year. Alumnae gifts to the college have totaled around $20,000, including several gifts for special projects in addition to the many Alumnae Fund gifts. Your enthusiastic response to our requests for help in financing salary increases for our faculty at Sweet Briar has been tremendously heartening to us. For that and all other good things, we thank you!

Seated: Harriet Shaw, Elizabeth Pinkerton Scott, Dr. Mary K. Benedict, Dr. Connie M. Guion, Amelia Hollis Scott, Louise Kirk Headley, Gertrude Dally Massie, Eleanor Miller Patterson; Standing: Mary Huntington Harrison, Grace Merrick Twohy, Lucy Lloyd, Louise Hammond Skinner, Margaret Potts Williams, Marjorie Burford Crenshaw, Edith Durrell Marshall, Katherine Blount Andersen, Elizabeth Lankford Miles, Margaret Malone McClements, Norvell Royer Orgain,

The newly-elected officers of the Alumnae Association and members of the Alumnae Council met on Saturday morning, May 29, with the out-going officers and members.

President Martha Lucas, Dr. Mary K. Benedict, first President of Sweet Briar College, and Dr. Connie M. Guion, a member of the early college Faculty, addressed the group informally, with pride for the development and growth of recognition for the college since its founding, much of which they attributed to the alumnae.

Those who had been serving on the Alumnae Council for the past two years discussed with the new members the Association's policies and their techniques of action. The present Alumnae Club program, featuring the discussions on education, was explained in terms of its immediate and far-reaching aims and with mention of some of the specific problems of college-alumnae relations it has solved and of others it has brought to the fore.

Mrs. Edward C. Marshall, continuing as First Vice-President and Director of Clubs, announced the names of the new Regional Chairmen, who will continue the coordination work so ably begun last fall. These are: Region I, Mrs. Frank F. Mountcastle (Florence Bodine '24) 41 Aberdeen Road, Elizabeth 3, New Jersey, relieving Mrs. Adrian Massie; Region 2, Mrs. Calvert de Coligny (Julia Sadler '34) Bon Air, Virginia, relieving Mrs. John B. Orgain; Region 3, Miss Lucy Lloyd '41, Valley Brook Farm, Downingtown, Pennsylvania, will continue; Region 4, Mrs. Russell Walcott (Eugenia Buffington '13) Tryon, North Carolina, relieving Mrs. W. Brown Patterson; Region 5, Mrs. Julien C. Headley (Louise Kirk '41) Bull Run Plantation, Tallahassee, Florida, relieving Mrs. Henry L. Young, Jr.; Region 6, Mrs. Alfred H. Williams (Virginia Eady '38) 2545 Woodbourne Avenue, Louisville, Kentucky, relieving Mrs. W. L. Lyons Brown; Region 7, Mrs. Louis C. Arp (Eleanor Harned '24) 1525 29th Street, Moline, Illinois, relieving Mrs. E. Webster Harrison; Region 8, Miss Maddin Lupton '48, 1662 Hillcrest Road, Chattanooga, Tennessee, relieving Mrs. Stephen C. Voorhees; Region 9, Mrs. Herman A. Affel, Jr., (Eugenia Burnett '42) 712 Hendren Street, Roxborough, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, relieving Mrs. Frederick H. Skinner.

The 1947-48 report of the Executive Secretary was read for its resume of the activities of the Association carried out in the Alumnae Office.

Alumnae Scholar Named for 1948-49

Alumnae who read Fanchon Scott Lewis's letter on the Advisory System in the February ALUMNAE NEWS, will be interested to learn that she will be next year's holder of the Manson Memorial Scholarship, one of two honor scholarships awarded at Commencement.

Named in honor of the late N. C. Manson of Lynchburg, for many years a member of the college's Board of Directors, the scholarship is an annual gift of alumnae covering tuition costs. Alumnae Club gifts go toward the endowment of the scholarship.

Fan will be a junior at Sweet Briar next year. She came to Sweet Briar from the Durham High School, and has been a holder of large scholarships during both her years here. She has served this year as sophomore house president and is to be treasurer of the Y.W.C.A. next year. She was vice-president of the freshman class and is a member of the paper's editorial staff. She was also chosen for membership in Q. V., sophomore honorary society. Part of the year Fan worked one afternoon a week in the Alumnae Office.

A Glimpse at the Big Week-end

N SUNDAY noon of Reunion-Commencement weekend, there were 138 "registered" alumnae on campus and of this number 115 had returned for the whole weekend. This was our first reunion using the "Pollock Plan," a combination of the Dix system and the usual five year plan of class reunions. A special guest of the Alumnae was Dr. Mary K. Benedict, the college's first president, and she was accompanied on her trip by Dr. Connie M. Guion, former faculty member, who is an honorary member of the class of 1913, celebrating its 35th reunion.

Alumnae were greeted on arrival by a hostess committee, made up of volunteers from the Amherst County Alumnae Club and the Alumnae Council. Six A. M. arrivals were even served coffee! All during the week-end this committee, together with members of the office staff, were on duty in Reid Parlor.

Miss Lucas spoke at the Association's annual meeting Saturday just before her traditional garden party at Sweet Briar House. Saturday evening Manson Hall was crowded with college guests who viewed old movies of Sweet Briar. Then Lucile Barrow Turner, ex '20, gave a delightful half hour of her negro songs and spirituals, which was a surprise addition to the scheduled program.

Sunday was punctuated by rain, taking the Step-Singing and class picnics indoors, but not seeming to cloud the spirits. Another pleasant extra was the hour piano recital by Iren Marik, Hungarian artist who has completed her first year on the Sweet Briar faculty.

Commencement was Monday morning, and in the afternoon the alumnae settled down for a brief seminar featuring a view of the present Sweet Briar curriculum by Dr. Eva Sanford and an analysis of the current international scene by Dr. Gerhard Masur. The informal banquet that evening was followed by a panel discussion on the part played by the liberal arts graduate in home, community, and professional life, led by Marjorie Lasar Hurd '34, Julia Sadler de Coligny '34, and Anne Noyes '43. It was unanimously voted to make the seminar a permanent part of the Commencement week-end.

The Information-Hostess Committee, to whom the Alumnae Association is in debt for their fine help, consisted of the following: Mary Hesson Pettyjohn '36, Chairman, Gertrude Prior '29, Lucile Cox '36, Bessie Lee Garbee Siegrist '38, Roselle Faulconer '43, Mildred Faulconer Bryant '44, Louise Hesson '44, Anne Hill Edwards '46, and Anne Beth Beard Eubank '47. The Alumnae Council's Commencement Committee, with Grace Merrick Twohy '24 as chairman, was as follows: Mary Huntington Harrison '30, Marjorie Burford Crenshaw '33, and Lucy Lloyd '41, and Ruth Hasson Smith '30 was Reunion Chairman.

Lucie Wood to Hold Benedict Scholarship

Dr. Mary K. Benedict, first president of Sweet Briar, was on the platform at Commencement when Dean Mary Ely Lyman annunced next year's grant of the Mary Kendrick Benedict Scholarship, established by alumnae, faculty and other friends of President Benedict in 1945.

Lucie A. Wood, King William, Virginia, will hold this honor scholarship, one of two awarded annually at Commencement. According to the terms of the endowment, the stipend, covering tuition cost, is to be awarded to an upperclass student of high academic standing and personal integrity, who has shown in her college experience a purpose for service.

In memory of Dean Emeritus Emily H. Dutton, the college this spring published a booklet containing the tributes which comprised the Founder's Day program on October 24, 1947. This bulletin has been sent to all graduates in the classes from 1924 through 1940. Other alumnae who would like to have copies may obtain them by writing to the Office of Public Relations.

A report of the Conference on "The Role of the Colleges in Promoting Peace through International Understanding," including the complete text of Sir Alfred Zimmern's address, has just been published. Alumnae who would like to have copies may request them by writing to the Alumnae Office.

FIRST PANEL OF THE

Two of the three talks, given after the informal

Marjorie Lasar Hurd's remarks on the liberal arts graduate in the Community are on page of 1948" on page 7. Anne Noyes gave an interesting interpretation of the role of the FIRST of all I would like to say what a great joy and pleasure it is for me to be here tonight after so long a time. It makes me feel "like a girl again" (I think the expression is) in spite of the fact that the curious glances of the undergraduates have reminded me that I am really a relic. But then, I can remember wondering fourteen years ago at my own graduation how so many women could come so far to act so silly.

The cool glances of the young are not half so great a shock to me as the one I sustained about a year ago. I was reading what we sisters of the sink pass among us and call "escape reading," and was happily floating about in a world of sables and happy endings when the following words sprang out at me from the page "She was no longer young—she was in her middle thirties!" Having been brutally lifted from girlhood into womanhood in thirty quick seconds, I finally recovered only to have a beautiful young woman behind a cosmetic counter ask me several months later, "What, Madam, are you doing for that crepe-y look around your throat?"

I wasn't doing anything much except the laundry and ironing, the housework and cooking, and trying to look like a debutante when my husband came home at night. I was trying to be all things to all men and get out of the house one day a week . . . and I honestly hadn't thought much about "that crepe-y look."

But the radio tells us that "Life can be beautiful for women over thirty" and I am placing my trust in that heartening statement. Meantime, you probably find, as I do, that Time is getting away from us fast. Where is it going and what are we doing with it other than spending it on homemaking? Does our community make any claims upon us and are we making any contribution to it? We are part and parcel of our community whether we choose to be or not; the choice we must make is whether to be an asset or a liability.

I am going to use the class of 1934, my own, as a guinea pig, with their permission and forbearance. Having been class secretary for fourteen years I feel as if I knew their darkest secrets. I am reasonably safe in saying that the following are facts and statistics and that our class can also be called very normal and very typical.

There were 68 of us, tried and true, from 21-odd states, who graduated. In our sophomore year we took a brand new type of I. Q. test which proved what we had all secretly suspected . . . that we were to be known henceforward for our brains and not our beauty. In spite of this gloomy outlook, I am happy to report that 91% of us are married and, of those, 84% have children. In fact, we number more than 100 children among our ranks so you can see that we have not been idle. To my knowledge, in the graduating class there have been one death and two divorces. Twenty of us are active in welfare work and thirteen teach on a part-time basis. We can claim two Ph.D.'s, three M.A.'s and one Ll.D. In spite of our outstanding intelligence there have been only ten professional women among us and of those only five now give their entire time to their jobs.

So, we can safely say that the class of 1934, all in their middle thirties, have for the most part, spent the last fourteen years in marrying, establishing homes, having children, and being, as I say, entirely average.

Now, the point is, what else have we been doing that in any way justifies the time and our parents' money spent at Sweet Briar? Are we any better people as a result of our time in college and have we benefitted from it . . . or in turn, can we, as a result of our education, add something to the community in which we live?

When we left college we were young and full of dreams and ambitions and the community didn't make much impression on us nor we on it. We were casting around for a job or a husband, and, having found one or the other, we settled down. But after a while we began to have growing pains of quite a different kind than we had ever had before. We began to fill out mentally and emotionally: we had children; we learned to balance a bank book to the bank's satisfaction; we learned to keep the peace in our homes. And, as our family grew along with us, we woke up one morning to find that we wanted very much to work our way out of the world of dishes and diapers, of market lists and report cards into the world of adults where the conversation was above the eight-year-old level. And now we have a hideous reckoning with ourselves.

Do the newspaper headlines really mean anything to us? Where is that active little mind we trained so well in college? The one that can spot a one-cent rise in meat prices but can't spot propaganda? The one that could conjugate an Anglo-Saxon verb, but doesn't really understand Anglo-Arabian politics? What has happened to education and politics, to social welfare and religion, while we retired to our own fireside?

College, it seems to me, does two things for each girl primarily: first, it develops her intellectual potentialities and second, her social adequacy.

Through her courses and the personal influence of her teachers she soon becomes familiar with the stream of history, the trials and errors of humanity, the overall picture of the human race... so that in her daily life she should soon realize that, as John Donne said, "No man is an island but a continent. We are all a part of a great whole."

Secondly, she learns to live with other people, to make (Continued on page 15) banquet Monday night, following Commencement.

6, while Julia Sadler de Caligny contributes her views on "Mrs. Housewife and Mother liberal arts graduate in the Professions, but we do not have her speech to share with you.

WHEN I was asked to come to this first Alumnae Seminar and be Mrs. Housewife and Mother of 1948, I must have thought all I had to do was to stand before you and prove that I was a graduate, that I had four children and only one husband, all healthy and reasonably well-fed, and that I was able to come without bringing them all along—then I could collapse and be carried off to get a good night's rest. I did not realize that by the time I spoke I would have been here for three full days of bad weather and good speeches and that every profound thought that I might have had would have been expressed by far more learned tongues than mine. We have at long last reached my name on the program, and I must carry, where possible, the lofty thoughts of the others to the very mundane level of the housewife.

I am assuming at the outset that we all belong to that category of souls who have tasted the sweet nectar of higher learning. We have glimpsed, however briefly and however superficially, the light of pure intellectualism and, having once had that glimpse, we are not entirely satisfied to bury our uplifted heads in the wash tub and the kitchen stove forever. Realizing the obligation we have to the opportunity that has been ours, and at the same time being plunged into the abyss (at first-monotony, later) of houseworkiana, (my days of research were not entirely lost!) we soon realize that we are going to have to make a few compromises. Dr. Darden in his address at Commencement this morning, gave emphasis to the fact that never before had the home as the fundamental institution of American society been in such jeopardy nor has there ever been a greater challenge to the enlightened woman in this respect. I do not need to picture to you the liberal arts graduate in the home, as that is the picture from which most of us want a little escape, by our very presence here tonight. We are grateful for this opportunity to air our problems, exchange our sympathies and possibly give each other courage that we are not alone in our struggles, but it would be pure self-pity for us to dwell on the difficulties of the job at home involving everything from lack of help, rising costs of food and clothing, physical and emotional problems of raising children in the uncertain world of today, etc., etc. Let us accept as correct that our task is stupendous and see if we can't figure some ways of doing it a little better and with more satisfaction to ourselves and all those within the sphere of our influence.

I have narrowed my thinking down to four main points, the first of which is physical fitness. On our physical good health depends our mental health, and our whole approach to the important job before us. If we get over-tired, we lose our perspective, our sense of humor, our joy of living. Every now and then by accident I hear a radio program in which they use the saying, "Nobody loves a fat man." My only reaction is that it should be changed to "nobody loves a tired woman." So I say, don't be ashamed to admit that you're licked, get out the liver tonic, the vitamin pills, the afternoon nap or whatever will help you to feel as if you can meet the day bravely, and stick to it.

The second is to do an intelligent and efficient job of housekeeping. If you don't honestly like housework, then grit your teeth and get it down to a bare minimum. Instead of feeling sorry for yourself, figure out how you can do it the best possible way. The sooner you master it, the less chance it has of mastering you. Each person has her own way of doing things and little Susie Q next door may find her highest artistic expression in a batch of cookies, while, for you, macaroon mix and time left over to paint a picture may be the answer.

This brings me to the third point which is sincerity, or that inner poise which enables us to live our lives as we want to live them. At times that is much more difficult than one would imagine. It takes a great deal of courage and a great deal of patience, as many of us who have moved around a lot during the war years know. Each new community that we have tackled has set a little different pace for our lives. Many of us have been lonely and anxious to conform, and many times quick conformity has not brought us happiness. As the personality of each of our children comes into flower we are so anxious to provide the proper setting, furnish the suitable background, etc., that we spend needless anguish trying to move mountains that need not be moved. If we but realized that our personal example is so much more influential on our children and others than all those longwinded lectures that fall on unlistening ears, how much energy we would save and how mortified we might sometimes be at the realization that we are being so closely watched.

The fourth point we should strive for is a sense of balance between the physical job of housekeeping, the mental and spiritual enjoyment that we bring into the home, and the activities we engage in outside the home as our escape and as our participation in worthwhile community affairs. Many women do a magnificent job of keeping the house neat and tidy, get the children off to school, get dinner organized and ready to pop into the pressure cooker, and then they are off to do good works in the community. That is an enviable picture and many of us don't do that well, but those same women might be the last ones to allow the children to bring their friends in uninvited, or give family parties on Sunday afternoons, or rush off leaving the dishes unwashed and see the play that Johnnie has a small (but important to him) part in. If you have to cut down in your expenditure of time, try not to sacrifice the time spent on pleasurable ex-

THE MOOD OF FRANCE

Time Races Against Time

by GLADYS BOONE, Professor of Economics

Miss Boone wrote this article for the New English Weekly of July 1947-and yet its timeliness is not lost.

TEN years ago, in the Paris Exposition of 1937, the German Eagle and the Soviet Hammer and Sickle symbolically faced each other atop two of the most imposing buildings in the international show. One wondered what might happen to the hostess nation if her two giant guests should turn and rend each other—a prospect which seemed all too easy to envisage if one looked towards the Eastern horizon.

The issue was not quite so simple: the giants appeared to embrace before they locked in combat. And France, having first been enslaved by one of them, has since appeared to be in grave danger of having her destiny decided by the other.

Trying to catch the mood of France in June of 1947, in a summer again clouded by shadows in the East, I put some questions to my French friends. "Why is not this the moment for France to take the lead in making proposals for some kind of European union?" "Surely she has nothing to fear from Germany at present?" "Is she not pre-eminently the country whose traditions 'It her for this role?" And the essence of the answer was "Logically we know there must be a European federation if Europe is to survive, economically and culturally." "But instinctively we are turning in upon ourselves. We do not fear Germany at the moment, but the Occupation left in its train an intense hatred born of five years of slavery. And even if we were willing to take the lead, we are not strong enough to do anything which might incur Russia's enmity."

The France of June 1947, in contrast with the France of a decade ago, did in truth seem turned in upon herself. One sensed some parallels with the situation and the mood in Great Britain—and some interesting differences. The French people as individuals and as a whole were intensely pre-occupied with the immediate problems of everyday life. On the front pages of the newspapers, from Right to Left, priority was given to discussion of internal affairs, to strikes, to the Schuman plan and its attempt to save the franc, to food restrictions, to the trials of collaborators, to administrative scandals. And while it appears that the discontent of the workers has been politically exploited by the Communists, the epidemic of strikes stems from the economic misery and undernourishment of the people. It does not seem to be a sign of a "political" swing to the Left.

In fact there is considerable evidence that the French "man in the street" is disgusted with politics. The mature citizen who has political interests finds himself torn between an instinctive and traditional dislike of "dirigisme" and a logical conviction that a considerable amount of it is necessary under present circumstances. The younger generation show few signs of following their prototype of the years after 1918 in enthusiasm for "political" causes. In the week of June 18, when the seventh anniversary of De Gaulle's flight to England was officially celebrated, and when Bevin flew to France to confer with Bidault on the Marshall proposal, the students of the Sorbonne staged a noisy demonstration. But it was not for or against De Gaulleism, or Communism, or a "United States of Europe." They were merely celebrating the end of examinations. They, too, are turned in on themselves. Many of them are seeking some faith or cause by which to live; but they tend to seek their outlet in cults such as Existentialism rather than in politics.

The enthusiasm of the Liberation period seems to have been followed by profound weariness and disillusionment. France, looking in on herself, is not happy about what she sees there. The young are deeply mistrustful of the leadership of the older generation in politics, in literature, in art. The wounds of the Occupation period have left deep scars. The Resistance movement with all its heroisms has also left a heritage of psychological difficulties. On the other hand, the purge of collaborationists gives rise to charges and counter-charges. Even the latest front-page scandal—the series of deaths by poison in the Macon Hospital—(strange analogue with a recent British scandal) is played up by l'Humanité as being mixed up with collaborationist plots. Everywhere one hears complaints that the old skills of French workers are in danger of being lost: "We are not even using the arts we have always practiced supremely well." And in a country where bread and wine are not only staples of diet but commodities famed for their excellence, people are suffering a shortage of both, and no one enjoys the unpalatable bread made of imported maize.

From an economic point of view this brings us to the crux of the internal French problem. It is compounded of difficulties of production, of distribution, of finance. The country folk are producing—though they are tending to shift their production from grain to livestock—but there are few consumer goods available to induce them to bring their products to market. The workers have genuine grievances in their struggle to make their wages stretch to meet the costs of living, but without increased production any temporary gain by one group tends to be at the expense of the community. And as the Government gives in to the pressure of one group after another, the value of the franc falls lower and lower for everyone.

The economic, political and psychological difficulties which are the aftermath of the War have brought an atmosphere in which one fears the emergence of some sort of dictatorship. There is talk about the need for a leader, but interestingly enough it does not seem to add up to an access of support for General DeGaulle. Paris was apathetic on June 18; several people casually addressed on the streets did not know why the flags were flying on the buses. The Communists complained that the celebration at Mont Valérien, in which De Gaulle took part, degenerated from an expression of national unity into an accolade for one man, but there was no widespread enthusiasm for one General. Some suggest that if Thorez may be accused of deserting France during the Occupation the same charge can be levelled against De Gaulle. Others say that he did not show himself a good administrator during his term in power. While the mood of France—more particularly of Paris—might seem to be sympathetic to the emergence or re-emergence of a "leader," it is doubtful whether De Gaulle would be the chosen one.

Earlier in this article it was suggested that France gave the impression of being turned in upon herself, that the most intense desire of the average citizen was to be left alone "to cultivate his garden." French individualism reasserts itself as always, and though it has its dangers in a time such as the present, it also has its own peculiar excellence. The French housewife somehow still contrives an excellent cuisine although at the cost of much time and trouble; it is fortunate that so many urban households still have connections in the country. Even though one lives from day to day—perhaps because of that—the Frenchman still takes his pleasures gaily and offers a charming welcome to his guests.

Given time, the mood of dégout which seems so general in France when one probes beneath the surface would probably pass. But Time races against Time. At the moment when she is profoundly disturbed within and struggles to retain and regain her moral and cultural values, France is called upon to take leadership in making plans for European reconstruction. Like a proud and sensitive child who has been punished, the French nation seems to need some gesture of encouragement, sympathy, understanding, something to shake her out of her apathy and restore her confidence in herself. Can the United States and Great Britain supply it? Will French individualism respond with a sense of individual responsibility for helping to make possible a collective plan which may avert the economic catastrophe which looms ahead?

Faculty Members Summering in Europe

R ESEARCH, study, and business will take half a dozen members of the Sweet Briar College faculty to Europe this summer.

Participation in two world-wide church conferences in Holland will mark the start of Dean Mary Ely Lyman's sabbatical leave of absence. She will sail on August 6 to attend the meeting of women from 85 countries at Baarn from August 13 to 20, to discuss the Status of Women in the Church. From August 22 to September 4, Dean Lyman will attend as an "accredited visitor" the first Assembly of the World Council of Churches, in Amsterdam.

During September and October Dean Lyman will be in Great Britain, France and Switzerland. She will visit St. Andrews University in Scotland where two Sweet Briar girls will be students next fall, and she will visit the College Cevenol, an international education institution in southcentral France, one of whose former students will be attending Sweet Briar this coming year.

While she is in Paris, Dean Lyman will be in close touch with the Junior Year in France group which is being sponsored for the first time by Sweet Briar.

Dean Lyman will go to Switzerland late in October to teach for a week at the Ecumenical Institute at the Chateau de Bossey, near Geneva, an educational center maintained by the World Council of Churches.

Dr. Joseph E. Barker, chairman of the department of Romance Languages and Director of the Junior Year in France, will sail on the Mauretania with Mrs. Barker on June 14, to establish the Junior Year in France office in Paris. Dr. Gladys Boone, professor of economics, who spent six months in England and on the continent last year while she was on a sabbatical leave from Sweet Briar, will sail for England on June 9 to continue some of the studies in international labor relations she began last year. Professor Boone's plans also include some time in France and a possible trip into the western zones of Germany, in connection with her economic research project.

Dr. Florence Robinson, professor of art, will spend part of her one-semester sabbatical leave of absence in Europe, chiefly in Italy and Greece. Miss Robinson will sail for Naples on June 22, and she expects to spend most of the summer in Rome working on her research project, a revision of an archeology textbook.

Early in the fall, depending upon conditions in Greece, Miss Robinson plans to fly to Athens to continue her work, aided by visits to the Agora and Corinth excavations which have been carried on by Americans in the last decade.

Dr. Jane C. Belcher, assistant professor of biology, will sail on June 17 for France. She expects to visit biological stations in France and Italy and she hopes to attend the International Zoological Congress in Paris in August.

Another Sweet Briar professor who is planning a trip to Europe this summer is Dr. Dora Neill Raymond, professor of history, who expects to go to the French Alps near Geneva in pursuit of some special information for the book she is writing.

"But He That Is Wise--"

Sue Slaughter's summary of your winter discussion

WELVE Sweet Briar clubs harkened unto counsel during March and responded with a dozen excellent collections of comments on "The Advisory System at Sweet Briar." In reading their reports I felt that Dr. Muncy's article, informative and full as it was, didn't quite answer all our questions. And, so, I wrote her about the most frequent of our uncertainties-such queries as: "Is the primary function of the advisory system you describe that of academic advising?" "Who advises the advisors?" "Do entering students know about the system in advance so that they don't resent it through misunderstanding?" Her very satisfying reply is here included but I have used the device in current vogue of keeping it hidden until you have first read all I have to say!

Club leaders seemed freer than before in using their own questions to stimulate discussion, and, then, in boiling down the answers so that, with illuminating asides, they would fit the seven questions following Dr. Muncy's article. And, in that form, they are now presented.

 Do you think that Sweet Briar should have an advisory system substantially like the one now in effect here?

The unanimous reply was "Yes-BUT." Yes, if it actually functions as stated. "The system sounds ideal but none of us remembered receiving such quantity and quality of guidance." "One of the advantages of the small college is the opportunity for faculty and student intimacy. The advisory system is designed to promote this as well as to give the student the benefit of faculty guidance in her academic career. Our group thought that the system had worked more satisfactorily from the latter standpoint than from the former." Congeniality between advisor and advisee is an essential basis of "intimacy" and, while it was realized that, at first, advisor-advisee assignments have to be made arbitrarily, the clubs agreed that considerable elasticity should be allowed in changing advisors because "the success or failure of the system depends a great deal on the personal feeling of the student for her advisor." "Some alumnae remembered nothing about their advisors in the first two years except being petrified at each conference."

The system is excellent, then, if it results in putting the student at ease through an awareness of the advisor's real interest and if it is not cursory or impersonal as some fairly recent alumnae remembered it to have been. YES, if it helps a freshman plan a schedule of study and recreation. In a few instances, students need to be reminded that extracurricular interests are educational too! YES, if a four-year plan can be discussed from the beginning (recognizing, of course, that student interests change and making a change of "majors" possible.) YES, if it helps a student see what college may mean to her (Discussing objectives often during the whole first two years). If it clarifies the relationships between courses and explains why certain ones are given; if it helps kindle an enthusiasm for learning and an ambition to do one's best rather than being satisfied with "getting by." Only the most recent alumna can really judge whether the advisory system fulfills these requirements but all of us agreed with Manhattan that "it must certainly be improving."

Should advisors give more time and attention to advisees?

Response to this question was almost equally divided. Alumnae who have children of their own to "counsel" or those whose majors were in psychology or social science thought more attention should be given because they saw the need for help in achieving emotional maturity. All clubs stressed the importance of giving students the time they need at the time they need it. Advisees should know their questions will be welcomed; advisors should be easily available and show themselves ready to discuss non-academic as well as academic questions. Not more time but a different use of time was the constructive suggestion offered.

3. If so, how can their work he lightened in other areas?

An increase in the number of advisors—by including men teachers, perhaps, was a method suggested. Other methods are noted under Question 7. (Men do serve!)

4. Should there be more provision for counselling on personal problems? If so, how should this be done?

Advisors should be alert and sensitive to a student's perplexities and have the skill to draw them out. Since, however, the same person is seldom equally good at academic and at personal counsel, a plan must be devised to provide both types. Most of the suggestions made are recorded under the final question on "improvements." Younger alumnae discussants reminded their elders that few students are willing to admit need for "advice" or to ask an "advisor" for it. Generally they talk informally to their roommates or other students, to faculty members they have found sympathetic, or to faculty living in their dormitory. Many 'personal" problems are taken to the Dean's Office or, sometimes, to visiting clergy. Often the role of "advisor" should be that of guide or medium, directing the student to the best person or place for the counsel needed, but that is possible only if the student's need and her advisor-appointment coincide or if she is on intimate enough terms to seek help and sure enough that she isn't "taking up too much of your time."

Unless vocational counselling is included under "personal" counselling, there seems no other place in this summary to record the strong feeling of clubs that this is an area needing attention. In last year's discussions its lack seemed to be "our greatest weakness." Experts tell us that vocational guidance "belongs in the secondary schools" and it is there in many states. Virginia, for instance, will require all accredited high schools to have a counselling system by the 1949 fall semester. College students will have need of vocational help for some time to come, however, until the quality of the service in secondary schools is adequate.

5. Should more time be given to good students? Even if this means less time for weak students?

This is the unsolved problem of education! If there must be an either or answer the clubs would choose the weak student for greatest attention but they are not satisfied for it to be simply assumed that a good student is doing her best work. The casual "commendation" now commonly given is inadequate. A very intelligent student should be kept on her toes and urged to use all of her ability. Regularly scheduled conferences with all advises would help to even up the difference in attention and give an advisor an opportunity to fan the flame of incipient genius!

6. Should we spend less time and effort counselling students, thereby forcing them to develop their own resources of judgment and self-reliance?

Here, at least, we were unanimous that counselling as given at Sweet Briar does not hinder self-development. "The method used is more important than the time spent." If we have "advisors and not tellers," students learn to weigh the advice given and to develop maturity and self-reliance. But freshmen are confused, especially in the selection of courses, and need guidance. Learning is disturbing and most students need a year or two to find themselves. When counselling in secondary schools is perfected it may be less needed in colleges, but at present, we do not feel that Sweet Briar is too prodigal of it.

7. Do you have any further suggestions as to how advising may be improved at Sweet Briar?

As usual, alumnae were full of "suggestions"—both as to the advisor and as to the system. The advisor holds a key position with freshmen and should, therefore, be the perfect person, equipped with all knowledge and every noble characteristic! Not only must she have a thorough grasp of the curriculum but she should possess tolerance, patience, warmth, genuine interest in people, imagination, willingness to let others try their own plans, the quality of making the student feel there is time enough to listen and to talk over what she has to say, sense of humor and the faculty of not taking herself too seriously. But we alumnae would settle for 50% of this!

Alumnae would like all advisors to be familiar with the basic psychiatric concepts of personality development—this theoretical knowledge to be supplemented with staff discussions and pointed up by a seminar with a suitable psychiatrist who might be imported from Washington, Baltimore or New York, for instance, for a day's session. The inclusion, in the college curriculum, of a course on Human Relations would help students recognize their own needs for personal counsel and free them from self-consciousness in asking for it. Since so much is demanded of the advisor and her position carries so much responsibility, she should be accorded special honor by both faculty and students.

The advisory system should begin before the freshman enters college. The brief explanatory paragraph in the bulletin, "Studies in the Freshman Year," seems to alumnae quite inadequate. Some personal word from advisor sent to advisees before they come to Sweet Briar would, if it were possible, be a gracious encouraging gesture. By their attitudes Orientation Committee members can give the freshmen assigned to them a feeling that advisors have value for them and can build up a "mind-set" of friendliness. The first contact between advisor and advisee should not be a formal conference but some informal gathering of three or four advisors with their twenty to thirty freshmen. This would dilute much of the self-consciousness that the uncertain freshman has when she first faces her advisor across an office desk and would prepare her for a small group conference to follow. With six or eight freshmen an advisor could then discuss schedule making, study plans and extracurricular opportunities. Upheld by each other, student tongues would be loosened and questions flow. A bridge of partial understanding having thus been built, the advisor and advisee tete-a-tete need not be dreaded and might be short and mutually more satisfying. We recommend the continued use of group conferences, especially during the first semester. They would eliminate the feeling of being called in because of poor work and would provide an opportunity for commendations to good students for their performance and to less able ones for their effort. Again, group conferences encourage students to express their own feelings of uncertainty, frustration or hostility and to learn from each other under the guidance of someone with more maturity and judgment than their classmates.

Early in the year the whole Freshman class should have a simple course on how to study and budget time, followed by a talk (before the 6-weeks tests) on how to prepare for tests. An examination of sample test papers after grading could then be made in advisor group conferences to illustrate the theoretical points already made.

Alumnae feel that there might be less need for personal conferences if more use were made of group conferences and if private interviews when held were unhurried and encouraging. They question the value of planned coffee hours or teas since, too often, advisees attend them chiefly from a sense of obligation. Possibly if upper classmen could entertain a group of advisors and their advisees there would be more freedom about attending and more spontaniety in participation.

Finally, alumnae believe that, within reason, students should be free to change their advisors, not only because "one cannot predict the alchemy of congeniality" to quote Dr. Muncy, but because a student is much more apt to like her advisor if she knows she can change—and vice versa! One club suggested "an advisor-changing day" to avoid hurt feelings! Another, recommended allowing juniors and seniors to choose their own advisors within the department of their major field rather than assigning them automatically to the head of the department.

Several suggestions for lightening the load on advisors might be considered "improvements." They were: to make the fullest possible use of upper class students, especially within departments; to appoint several qualified faculty wives to act as advisors on personal problems; to designate a faculty member as "consultant on religion"; to make greater use of visiting clergy and to use visiting psychiatrists. For vocational guidance Philadelphia makes the following suggestion. "Many students wish information about jobs in connection with their courses. It was realized that the Personnel Committee is hampered by lack of time and finances and also that advisors do not have the time to keep up fully with this type information. Therefore it was suggested that the college might hold a symposium each year on job possibilities and requirements and call on alumnae who have careers in various fields to come to the college to speak and hold discussions. If this could be arranged, it should be helpful to the students in seeing the relation between various courses and work after college and it also would help cement bonds between the college and alumnae." (See April 1947 ALUMNAE NEWS, page 7, for work the college has already done along this line.)

The advisory system now in operation at Sweet Briar seems adequate for academic advising and, with minor changes as indicated, we feel there should be time for its primary objective, education. But the old question of what is more important, development of the whole individual or development of the brain alone, still plagues alumnae. We would like to see an additional person on the faculty, one who is especially trained for the work and who has no other responsibility than to provide "personal" and vocational counsel. We would combine the functions in the same person because "it would remove the stigma of seeking help for emotional problems if job advice were also given." Alumnae support of such a person for an experimental period is suggested by the Louisville club which writes, "The investment in each student is so great and her selection so careful that we believe the college has every obligation to see that each one realizes the full potentiality of her capacity. The process of learning is disturbing or it is not successful. During this period emotional maturity and stability must be achieved as well as intellectual maturity. It seems to us that the student should be given as much help in achieving emotional stability as in maintaining her health. For this reason, we think that, in time, such a staff member will be as usual on college campuses as college doctors are now. In the meantime we are aware that there is a financial problem involved. This project seems to us to be made to commend to the alumnae for their support. Most of us are familiar with the method in which volunteer agencies undertake the support of a project needed by the community, for a given length of time, with the understanding that the city will take over the support after the worth has been proven. Here is an opportunity for the Alumnae to do the same service for our college. Therefore, the Louisville Alumnae propose that the Alumnae Council consider using part of the Alumnae Fund to secure the services of an additional member of the college staff who shall have special training and personal qualifications to enable her to act as consultant on personal problems and vocational guidance."

And now, to make good the promise in my first paragraph, let me quote Dr. Muncy's letter of May 3, 1948, which gives a fuller picture of the Advisory System planned for next year. "Academic advising is the primary function of our advisory system but personal and vocational counselling, although officially secondary, are far from non-existent. It sometimes happens that the greatest aid a student receives from an adviser comes in the realm of personal problems. Academic advising is carried on regularly by the advisers throughout the year; the amount of personal and vocational advising done depends on the extent to which the advisees seek it. Advisers hold regularly scheduled office hours and this year these have been published in the Sweet Briar News in addition to the regular announcement. Students may come to their advisers with any question whatsoever at these times or they may arrange a special appointment or just drop in the office. There is a statement explaining the advisory system in the bulletin, "Studies in the Freshman Year," which goes to all new students in the summer before they enter the college. This is supplemented by an explanation given by the Dean to new students during their first days at Sweet Briar. There are at present thirty members of the Faculty serving as advisers to freshmen and sophomores. They are invited by the Dean on the basis of interest shown in students and student problems and in Sweet Briar's academic principles and policies. All advisers meet from time to time to discuss their activities and learn about new policies; newly appointed advisers have a special meeting with the Dean and Assistant Dean to be instructed in their duties. Any adviser is free to come to us at any time for advice on his problems. The work of each adviser is appraised each spring before invitations are reissued, in terms of advice given and the general adjustment of the advisees. Advisers see their advisees as

BETTY VAN AKEN RESIGNS

It is with regret that the Alumnae Association accepted Betty's resignation. As co-editor, this is her final message to you.

It is with mingled emotions that I prepare to leave Sweet Briar. Two years is far from a life time but it seems now that there has never been a time that I did not know the names, maiden and married, of hundreds of you! I have bemoaned the fate of many of you who can't find permanent homes (not entirely altruistically, either!), have been delighted to "find" one of you who has been "lost" to the office files, have typed class notes telling of the engagement, marriage, and first baby of more than a few of your number, have joyfully recorded your contributions to the Alumnae Fund, and feel that I know hundreds of you more intimately than I do people I have grown up with.

At first I wase more than a little scared at the thought that words I would write, most of them unsigned, would be for you the "voice of Sweet Briar." I still worry about turns of phrase, hoping my attempts to amuse will not be misinterpreted as complaint, and striving to make explanations clear in their wording without being monotonous or condescending.

I was frightened too of being able to please thousands of women. I have met personally only a few hundred of you, but the first meeting of the Alumnae Council in October 1946 persuaded me that every one of you was human and infinitely forbearing and that this was going to be fun. It has been! And I am going to be a bit lonesome for my mail contact with the Class Secretaries, Fund Agents, Reunion Chairmen, Sweet Briar Day Chairmen, Club Presidents, and "just people." I have become interested in your lives and will probably often wonder about the futures of Susie Smith in Yazoo City and Myrtle Lee Jones in Richmond.

The visits of the Alumnae Council, with the in-

Sincerely,

BETTY VAN AKEN,
Assistant to the Alumnae Secretary.

Norfolk alumnae are cooperating with women from other colleges, the A.A.U.W., and the Junior League, in a new project that we enthusiastically urge other Sweet Briar Alumnae Clubs to copy! A Sweet Briar graduate, Mrs. K. N. Gardner (Cornelia Carroll '18) 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk, is the general chairman.

A brief outline of the new organization, which will begin its work this fall, follows:

Project—To present a course of lectures designed to acquaint young women with Norfolk and some of its organizations in order that they may find ways of participating in its life with maximum satisfaction to themselves and usefulness to the community.

Plan—Through a committee, to arrange the lectures and provide the audience.

Persons Eligible—Since the plan is a new one, the audience will be kept small this year. Invitations will be issued to 75 people (including Junior League provisional members) with the idea that an average of 50 will attend each lecture. Invitations will be issued to recent college graduates or students who have attended college at least two years. Other newcomers will be welcomed but no effort will be made to recruit them. The course is designed to bridge the gap between the college and the community so that emphasis will be put on reaching girls out of college no more than a year although others will not be refused.

Sponsoring Organizations—A.A.U.W.; local alumnae clubs; Junior League.

Responsibilities Accepted by Each-

Junior League: Provide course of lectures (speakers and topics), someone to coordinate the lectures, a meeting place, and their own part of the audience.

Local Alumnae Clubs: Each club will be responsible for sending invitations to its own alumnae, for making sure some response is made by each, and for giving a list of those who will attend to the general chairman. The clubs may also agree to invite members of some other group, such as a junior college.

A.A.U.W.: Will invite alumnae of colleges accredited to the organization and not already covered by an alumna club.

Committee—Will be composed of one representative of each sponsoring group with a general chairman, and, if necessary, an assistant chairman.

SURVEY OF GRADUATES' PLANS

What this year's class of Sweet Briar graduates intends to do now that they have left college is indicated in an informal survey made shortly before their graduation.

With few exceptions, the recent graduates did not have definite plans for the summer when they left Sweet Briar a few weeks ago. Many of them, however, were planning to grasp their new degrees in their hands next fall and look for jobs; others will use them as admission certificates to graduate schools.

Mary Florence Ludington, Pelham, N. Y., and Mary Jo Armstrong, Fort Worth, Texas, sailed last week for England, to attend the summer course at Oxford University on European Civilization in the Twentieth Century.

Radcliffe College's summer course in publishing procedures will claim the summer for Audrey Lahman, Sterling, Ill., and Sally Lou Smith, Pittsburgh, will be enrolled in the Workshop in Creative Arts at Adelphi College.

Katherine Berthier, Monterrey, Mexico, will continue her interest this summer in theater production and acting at the Priscilla-Beach Theater at Plymouth, Mass.

Evalena Sharp, Port Norris, N. J., has a part-time job at the office of the Cultural Services of the French Embassy in New York.

At least nine members of the class of 1948 will be married soon.

When September comes, Patricia Golden, Maplewood, N. J., will return to Sweet Briar as a member of the faculty, since she was recently named assistant in religion for the coming year.

At approximately the same time, several of her classmates will be heading for graduate schools. Virginia Holmes, Whitehaven, Tenn., who was graduated magna cum laude with highest honors in social studies, has won a graduate scholarship at the University of Wisconsin. Ceciley Youmans, Bozman, Md., is going to Columbia University.

Jane Luke, Covington, Va., will enter the University of Virginia Medical School in the fall, and Gloria McElvoy, Dallas, expects to continue her studies in French and drama at the University of Texas. Betty Ann Jackson, Merion Station, Pennsylvania, hopes to enter the University of Pennsylvania to study art and French, and Diane King, Homer, La., is making plans to go to the school of social work at Tulane.

Annabel Brock, Wellesley Hills, will be in Boston, hoping to combine a job with advanced study at Simmons. Beatrice Backer, Annapolis, has a job as an assistant in the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore, and Isabel Dzung, Shanghai, will be at Princeton as an assistant to Professor George Rowley, authority on Chinese art.

Several have indicated a wish to teach. Another group expects to attend business school, and a large number say they will be working as soon as they find the jobs they want.

Elizabeth Hooks, Memphis, whose major was biology, will use her knowledge of anatomy making medical drawings and Nancy Vaughn, who majored in sociology, wants to put it to use in psychiatric social work.

A Part of the Secretary's Report

The Office

The addressograph machine arrived during the early summer of 1947 and by the end of February, 1948, the Alumnae mailing list of approximately 5,000 plates was complete.

Miss Elizabeth Van Aken, who has been assistant to the Alumnae Secretary since September 1, 1946, has resigned as of September 1, 1948. Besides clerical duties, she has taken full charge of the Alumnae Fund records, has edited the class news section of the magazine, besides having contributed many articles. Her faithful work in cutting the addressograph plates, a tedious job, is especially noteworthy

Alumnae Club Activities

The program of re-evaluating the Liberal Arts Education begun in 1946 was continued this year. Alumnae clubs were sent material for discussion which was prepared by college personnel, and reports were in turn sent to a committee of the Alumnae Council for summary

Since the inception of the series of discussion programs, there has been a marked rejuvenation of alumnae activities which had lapsed during the war. In the fall of 1946 there were 24 active clubs. By spring, 1948, 12 more had reorganized themselves into active working units. The Alumnae Council has set up a "regional plan for clubs" whereby members of the Council assume responsibility for organizing and advising clubs within nine regions of the United States. President Lucas has spoken to alumnae groups in 20 cities. Mrs. Lill and Mrs. Munger, her assistant, have spoken before alumnae in 8 centers. Mr. Wheaton, the Treasurer, addressed a group in Columbus and the Alumnae Secretary met with Tampa alumnae.

Benefits for the endowment of the Manson Memorial Scholarship have been held by 9 clubs. $917.27 has been raised to date (June 10) for the endowment of the Manson Memorial Scholarship.

Sweet Briar Day gatherings were held in 40 cities.

Alumnae Fund

The Alumnae Fund to date is $14,984.88 (June 10). The Fund this year has been designated for faculty salaries, a cause that has met with marked approval on all sides

Alumnae Publications

The form and general policy of the ALUMNAE News has not been changed. Formerly Miss Martha von Briesen acted as co-editor with the Alumnae Secretary. This year Miss Van Aken replaced Miss von Briesen.

Mr. Wheaton has been preparing and distributing a "parents letter," mimeographed college news-sheet. At the request of the Alumnae Secretary, this paper was re-named "The Sweet Briar News Letter," and has been sent to some alumnae in areas where there are no active clubs. It is felt that many alumnae do not have time to read a whole magazine, and yet are eager for "spot news" of the college Hence, the Alumnae Office will cooperate next year in preparing and mailing a printed monthly news letter, to be sent to alumnae each month in which the magazine is not printed

Student Activities

A party for alumnae relatives among the students was given by the Alumnae Council in October, and a tea was held for seniors in February. During the last week of April, the Alumnae Secretary held a meeting with the senior class, and in May entertained them informally at small gatherings after dinner

The Alumnae Council

The Alumnae Secretary would like to state that the members of the Alumnae Council have been most helpful and cooperative, and are sincere, creative representatives of the college. Their working time is by no means limited to their three annual meetings on campus.

Community Service

herself felt among them, to be a leader or to be led and to make some kind of contribution to the life of her college community.

With this background she, as an older person, is equipped to enter actively into the life of her local community. She can now go beyond the half-open doors of opportunity through which she peered at college. She can make her courses in sociology, Bible, music appreciation, psychology, government, and the great wealth of others, work for her in a practical rather than a theoretical way.

There are four fields of activity—education, politics, social welfare and religion with which we, as women, are most apt to ally ourselves.

I suppose our greatest interest lies, or certainly should lie, in education—both elementary and secondary. It is the keystone on which the lives of our children are built and as products of a college education we should be able to contribute some concrete good to the P. T. A.s, the School Boards and other school functions. We know what our own education did for us as well as what, in retrospect, it lacked and we can make it our business to see, through legislation and other channels, that our teachers and our children are given the best.

We can make our influence felt in the alumnae work of our preparatory schools and certainly there is no more active organization to further education than the A.A.U.W. Almost every community has a chapter or a College Club where women who have had the advantage of a college or university education are doing something constructive with it.

Politically, the League of Women Voters is probably the strongest influence for good which women now wield. Their unbiased information on legislation is invaluable. It seems to me that it is of prime importance to us as families and as citizens to take a constructive and active part in local politics.

The third field, that of social welfare, is so inclusive that I will only mention a few in passing, such as the Community Chest, the Junior League, the Red Cross, the Scouts. There are many others equally well-known to you in your own community and you know better than I the great needs in this field of service.

Last of all, the field of least endeavor, and the most neglected one in our community life, is religion through church work. Church work happens to be my baby and I am continually listening to my contemporaries who tell me that church work is for old ladies. Maybe it, like artichokes, is an acquired taste, but I personally find it a very rewarding kind of work.

The Sunday School gives us a wide sphere of influence but it is amazing how many of us trust in the Lord and the Sunday School teacher for our children's spiritual education, while we busy ourselves feverishly only around the secular schools. It stands to reason that one hour a week in Church School is not going to give our children the religious education that they need in our present world. Knowing this should make us all the more eager to contribute our talents and our understanding to the work of the Sunday Schools and to the full program of our Churches.

A religious family will necessarily reach out into the community and share its life with others. Children who see their parents and the adults in their homes contributing constructively to society will probably be enlisted themselves into concrete activity.

The churches have a tremendous job to develop sound programs of religious education which will, in turn, teach our children to understand themselves and their relationship to God and their fellow man. To know God and to trust in Him develops that sense of security for which all humans yearn. No man who is secure within himself is guilty of race prejudice, minority persecutions, or the hatred and distrust that lives among men today.

By learning to live together in trust and understanding, by giving of our hearts and minds to the people with whom we associate in our daily lives, by realizing our great responsibility to one another can we make the first step forward toward a healthy community and the peaceful world which is the dream of all our hearts.

At its mid-winter session, the Alumnae Council asked that the editors poll the various departments of the college to see if there were items they needed that Alumnae might possess and yet not be using, and which they might be willing to give to Sweet Briar.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

Pictures, post cards or clippings pertaining to English literature.

Victrola records for use in English classes.

Books on Russia or Russian literature.

Costumes, draperies, etc., for Paint and Patches.

Two rugs, 6 or 8 feet long.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT

A record player in good condition.

ART DEPARTMENT

All art books with good illustrations on fine quality paper for the purpose, are quite expensive. Though the library appropriation each year is adequate for most needs, it is not possible to include many very desirable art books which are so expensive that our requests would be out of proportion with those of other departments. This means that the art department is able to secure fewer books for the same amount of funds used for the average department in other fields.

A partial list of books we should like to have included in our library requests this spring follows:

Beigel, Hugo G., Art Appreciation, Stephen Daye Press, 1948,

Cunningham, Henry Francis et al., Measured Drawings of Georgian Architecture in the District of Columbia, 1750-1820, 1914, New York Architectural Book Co., Geoffrey Steele, Chappaqua, New York periences that you share with your loved ones. Read aloud, listen to music, stock up on some popcorn and marshmallows that they can toast in front of the open fire when friends come in. That's where they see the real "you" in action, and it will more than pay for the cost of cleaning the rug!

As to our participation in community affairs, we would have to be hermits, certainly not housewives and mothers, not to know of needs for our services outside the home. It is just a question of how far we can extend ourselves and still keep that balance with the demands at home. A good rule, and more easily said than done, is that we should not undertake any more than we can do well and with pleasure. When we feel cornered and unable to breathe, then we'd better hang on by our teeth until June, resolved not to get so heavily involved next year, and concentrate on the very fine art or how to say "No" and make it stick.

If, after you have gotten all these in proper alignment, you are still lucky enough to feel that you have not reached the maximum capability of your self-expression, treat yourself kindly for you are a rare person and not to be suppressed. Go ahead and find time to write that book, study that course, get a degree, do some teaching or do whatever your inner self is crying for. If it is impossible to find the time, take a cheeful attitude and keep your wits elastic because each stage passes all too quickly, and you can file your thwarted creative life away for a very short span. Soon you will find yourself with more leisure than you know what to do with, though some of us wonder if we can hold out that long.

The last and most important point for which we should strive is a deep and abiding religious faith, and a fearlessness in translating it into a practical and living force within the family circle. We cannot possibly have undertaken the rearing of children without having acknowledged our humility and our need of leaning on something bigger than ourselves. It is not enough that we allow our children to be exposed to the force of religion outside the home. We must bring it down to the level of our every-day lives and give ourselves and our children the benefit of the strength and stability they need so dreadfully in this terrible world we have brought them into. Each family has its own way of bringing religion out into the open. We have the custom of clasping hands around the table at mealtime and saying a blessing, either a set one or something spontaneous which fits the occasion. We include any guests who happen to be there, without the least self-consciousness on our parts. I'll admit they are sometimes a little surprised, but usually don't even breathe differently by the second meal. It does something for us and we like it. It is fun to see how even the baby in her high chair drops her cup and reaches out her hands to join in—and resents it if we don't wait for her.

In trying to squeeze the very last ounce of success out of the Liberal Arts graduate in the home, I should add still another point upon which, of course the whole thing is contingent—and that is, to have an understanding and co-

Report on Advisors

often as seems necessary in each particular case and the number of conferences varies greatly from student to student. Counsel of every kind is also given all students by members of the Dean's Office. The representatives of the Faculty, resident in the dormitories, have this spring officially undertaken to give counsel, especially on personal questions, to students in their respective dormitories. Thus there are three official groups to advise students on personal matters: the Faculty advisers, the Resident Representatives in the dormitories, and the members of the Dean's Office. In addition, a student is sure to find a ready welcome from any member of the Faculty who knows her well and to whom she cares to bring her problems. A great deal of informal advising is done in this way in addition to official advising. Sweet Briar has had a student Orientation Committee for many years and it is frequently reorganized so that it will be more effective in guiding new students. According to the plans adopted this year there will be an Orientation Committee of thirty sophomores, juniors and seniors, each of whom will have an assistant, also an upperclassman. Each team of two upperclassmen will be assigned five freshmen and will be responsible for helping these freshmen to get acquainted, to learn the rules, to acquire good study habits, etc. They will keep in close touch with the new students throughout their first year and be ready to give them advice on any problem. We anticipate that Faculty advisers and members of the Orientation Committee will work closely together, especially where problems arise. Older students will always give a certain ansunt of advice about courses but it is more difficult for them to be objective and far sighted in this area. Although all advisers give vocational advice from time to time the full responsibility for such advice rests with our Personnel Committee made up of both students and Faculty and headed by a member of the Faculty. In addition to giving advice to individual students on job opportunities and collecting personnel data about all students, the committee has held a series of panels on different vocations and has conducted two vocational tests."

Possibly some of our questions hastened the working out of plans under consideration. Until a full time counselor can be added to the faculty we may feel pleased over the amount and variety of help open to present students and confident that "with the well-advised there is wisdom."

operative husband. That takes some doing sometimes, I know, but with a lot of patience and perseverence is not a hopeless task by any means.

If we can practice all that has been preached herein, out of these tired old cocoons may emerge some day a beautiful butterfly to enrich the world—or at least, there is a chance of being a pleasant old lady with a serene expression on her face.

Reunion Secretary: Sue Slaughter, 8 Pelham Place, Norfolk 7, Virginia.

Cluss Secretary: Bessie Grammer (Mrs. Donald F. Torrey) Alden Park Manor, Philadelphia, 44, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: SUE HARDIE (Mrs. William T. Bell) 40 Sherman Avenue, Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

DEAR 1913,

In spite of a rainy weekend we've had a wonderful reunion, marred only by the absence of so many of you. Of course, having Miss Benedict and Miss Guion would have made any visit wonderful, but also here were Mary Pinkerton Kerr, Margaret Dalton Kirk, Sue Hardie Bell, Kathleen Cowgill, Marion Peele, and me. We made Kathleen and Marion honorary members of the class and they've promised to come back to Commencement 1953.

We had the traditional Sunday night class pienic but ate it indoors, finding the rain an excellent excuse for resting our old bones comfortably in arm chairs instead of the hard earth. Harriet Shaw, Alumnæ Secretary, had lent Miss Benedict her charming apartment and we found it a cozy intimate place for laughing over the snapshots saved from the old old days and reading with greatest interest the twenty questionnaires filled out by you all. Six of our original 45 classmates have died and two are "lost." Anybody knowing where to find Jean Staples and Hazel Myers please notify the Alumnæ Office.

Eugenia Buffington Walcott couldn't be at Sweet Briar because she was attending her daughter's graduation at Holton Arms School in Washington. Betsy hopes to be at Sweet Briar soon and Eugenia has been elected to the Alumna Counçil, which requires three visits to college each year, so we hope the habit will be well-enough established to let us count on her for our 40th reunion in 1953.

Elizabeth Franke Balls is so in love with California that she can't tear herself away. "We've been so fortunate in finding a really lovely home. Berkeley is hilly and we're on the down slope of a hill so, from the street, you see only part of our second story. All the living rooms are down hill and from the full length picture windows we have a beautiful view across our garden to the Golden Gate. The house is a pale pinkish yellow stucco with tiled roof. A high stucco wall encloses a patio filled with ferns, pink clematis, camellias, lantana, and Chinese paper trees. It's a good thing it's so secluded and easy to keep clean as the servant problem is terrific. I'm getting to be a good cook. All western women are so capable about running a house and gadding too. Since coming to California in 1943 I've almost become a club woman-had to make friends some way and find Berkeley a very hospitable place where I've made more friends in five years than anywhere else." Mr. Balls, an enzyme chemist, was sent to Germany after VE Day to find out what German research had accomplished during the War. Their son, Kent, is an intern at Bryn Mawr Hospital.

Bessie Grammer Torrey hoped to be at Sweet Briar for reunion but was kept at home by the serious illness of her husband. Bessie rejoices in two sons, a daughter-in-law, and a granddaughter. Long-continued arthritis prevents her from doing much nutside her home.

Helen Lamfrom Nieman wrote that she is still in business with her father, and active in two clubs, the Fostorio, Ohio, library, and dramatics.

Mary Pinkerton Kerr has moved back to her home near Charlottesville, and is teaching science and history in the Schuyler High School. Her son is with her and attends the University of Virginia. Mary's housekeeping, commuting (three to four hours a day), and teaching leave her little time for other things but she does garden.

Margaret Ribble is a practicing psychiatrist in New York City. Her adopted daughter was married last year to a young doctor.

Bernice Richardson Campbell is active in church work, Girl Scouts, woman's club, and Community Fund. She belongs to the Boston Sweet Briar Club where she regularly meets (from our era) Sarah Arnold.

Mayo Thach Tarpley sent the following delightful letter. "Before her marriage my daughter Trista wrote film treatments on the documents of human freedom to be used in a text for elementary schools and then made into 'documentaries.' She married John Conger who went to Amherst with Frances Richardson's eldest son, Jack Pitcher. Trista, Johnny, and their baby, Steve, are living in New Haven where John is completing work on his doctorate in psychology. My son was married in February to a delightful Russian girl whom he met in Rome when making a film called 'Cagliostro' with Orson Welles in the title part. My husband and I have just returned from visiting Frank in Hollywood. In July he goes to France for an assignment with Vivian Romance in her first English-speaking picture-quite an exciting life!"

Rebecca White Faesch, who has two married daughters and two grandchildren, is going to Switzerland with her husband in July for a five months visit. Rebecca's niece, Margaret Ellen White, graduated from Sweet Briar in 1947, and her sister, Elizabeth is a sophomore. Rebecca sees Eleanor Furman Hudgins occasionally.

Florence Coffin Gillem is very active in church work, as well as a book club, Garden Club, and Y.W.C.A. Her daughter, now married, is a Sweet Briar graduate.

Isabel Cornwall Miller is a Grey Lady and interested in church activities. She has three sons. Her letter probably strikes a responsive chord in many hearts "I am completely out of touch with Sweet Briar—which is my own fault, but the years have been so many and so full of home and family that I seem to have neglected other things."

Margaret Dalton Kirk came for reunion with her daughter, Louise Kirk Headley, who graduated from Sweet Briar in 1941, has three children, and has just been elected to the Alumnae Council. Mother and daughter are a lovely and lively pair.

Corinne Dickinson is secretary to an investment counsel and maintains a one room apartment in Philadelphia. Running a job and a home leaves no time for outside volunteer work but Corinne keeps up with her friends and managed a recent vacation in New Orleans.

Ruth Drew Knight has lost her husband, son, and mother, and now lives with an uncle and young niece in Asheville. Sue Hardie says she is a gallant attractive woman who makes everyone around her happy.

Virginia Ely Arthur has a gay life in Winchester, Virginia, which she describes as a delightful place. Her hobby has always been gardening so she belongs to the Garden Club of Virginia. She did a host of important war jobs. Peggy Duval Handy visits in Winchester and Virginia sees her often.

Sue Hardue Bell was a great addition to our reunion group. She is full of pep as always and enjoys life and her family fully Sue has three grown children and three grandchildren. During the war her oldest son was a Lieutenant Colonel in the Quartermaster Corps and went into Luzon. He lives very near Sue who is devoted to his wife and the two little boys. The youoger son, unmarried, lives at home and works in a New York bank. Her daughter lives on Long Island so Sue sees her often too. Sue loves gardening and has time also for the Glen Ridge Civic Conference Committee and Women's Club.

Vivian Mossman Groves wrote a tiny note of greeting to all of us. She saw Sweet Briar late one rainy October afternoon (1947) and in spite of its rather deserted appearance, "it looked mighty good" to her.

Nella Patterson Vance has two grown children. Her husband is Commissioner of the United States Court of Claims in Washington.

Mary Clifton Tabb George, whom Marion Peele and I enjoyed seeing in New Orleans last winter, has three children. Two are married (and there are grandchildren) and one still lives at home. Mary leads an active social life, is president of a church auxiliary and a literary club, and board member of an eye hospital and the Colonial Dames. She worked hard on the unsuccessful campaign to keep Huey Long's brother from winning the recent election. Mary mentions Eleanor Franke Crawford and Bonnie Matheus Wisdom as living near her and Clytic Carroll Allen as a New Orleans visitor.

Kathleen Cowgill was at Sweet Briar from 1907 to 1910 (through our first year), so we who were here felt she belonged to us. She lives on a farm near Easton, Maryland, and raises blooded cattle and horses (hunters and racers). She is a landscape gardener and writes for horticoltural magazines.

To summarize: Twenty-one members of our class contributed nearly $800.00 to the Alumnæ Fund this year. Of the 20 who sent news for our reunion, 16 were married and three of these were widness. We live in 12 different states from Connecticut to Louisiana to California. Our husbands have attended ten different colleges and represent five different professions and four different husinesses. Four of us have not seen Sweet Brian for 35 years, but nine have been back since 1940. We have 28 children (19 of them boys) and a number of grandchildren. Four of us still hold outside jobs and we are all Lealthy. We have a great range of outside interests and do our full share in carrying responsibility for church, civic, cultural, and educational organizations.

Those of us back for Commencement were delighted to have Miss Benedict and Miss Guion honored publicly several times as founders of the college and were deeply touched when Miss Benedict reminded present-day alumna of the work our generations did to make a Sweet Briar degree respected by all American colleges. It's wonderful to have "belonged" and I hope all of 1913 will savor the joy of coming back for our 40th reunion, if not, sooner.

SUE SLAUGHTER.

Class Secretary: Frances W. Pennypacker, 517 Main Street, Phoenixville, Pennsylvania.

Nothing thrills the heart of a class secretary more than having some response to an appeal for news. To the dozen or so post-cards which I sent off I have had three replies.

The first was a fine letter from Dorothea Eaglesfield Bridgman. 1 wish 1 could give to you in full because is sounds just like Dorothea. She was married to Ray Chaflin Bridgman in 1919. David, born in April 1920, went to Hotchkiss and was graduated from Yale in the class of 1942. After war experience in the European theatre he took his M.A. at the University of Wisconsin and last year married Barbara Robinson (Smith College '44) of Boston and they are living in Boston while he is studying for his Ph.D. Jamie, born October 1921, went to St. Paul's in New Hampshire for five years and then to Yale, class of '44. The war interrupted his college work but after three years in the European theatre, he joined his class in 1946 and will get his degree soon. Caroline, born December 1922, went to Staten Island Academy and was graduated from Smith in 1944. She went to Korea with the Red Cross after working a year with the Army Language Service, returning to work on her M.A. at Yale in Russian studies. She interrupted her work to marry Thomas Rees (Yale Ph.D. 1948) of Omaha on April 3 of this year. Tom is teaching chemistry at Yale and she expects to get her M.A. next year. "Ray is still teaching at New York University-brilliantly and poetically-and I am cultivating my garden in a little old house on Fort Hill in Staten Island—a dear little house we call Rickety Timbers. I am fat, old, and funnybut alas, not distinguished. Bringing up my children on a shoe string I forgot all about my head and my musical fingers for such a long time that they hardly survived. I'm playing a little in a local St. Cecelia-I write moronic papers for our Belles Letters group-I help a tiny bit with the Seamen's Church Institute, etc., etc., but 1 am no credit to Sweet Briar or the University of Chicago where I studied fitfully in the fall of 1913-or the University of Indiana (1915-17) where I finally graduated after three and a half years of utterly aimless college work,"

Why do all these wonderful women always have to belittle their achievements? Anyone who has produced and educated three children who are able to study for their M.A.'s and Ph.D.'s is a tremendous credit to her college and in my opinion deserves an honored place in a special Hall of Fame! Thus speaks your spinster secretary!

Enid Sipe Brent's note was short but none the less welcome. She reports "no achievements, no trips, no grandchildren, no catastrophes, no adventures, no fun. Just getting old and falling apart gradually and uneventfully." 1 am sore this is another case of undue modesty!

Louise Kimball Mardin, whom I used to see quite often in the early days when I had my first job near Pittsburgh, now lives in: Evanston, Illinois. She says, "My oldest child, a daughter, Zipper, as she has been called since before there were soch, is married and living in Evanston. My son David is finishing his junior year at M.I.T., after having been with the Army of Occupation in Germany for a year." In March the Hardins adopted two children, Elisha 11, and Edith 14, who had been the subjects of the McCormick-Hobbard foud which was much publicized. Kim says, "We are a very happy family now."

My two Sweet Briar sisters, Mary and Elmyra, and I are planning a motor trip to Virginia next October when the autumn coloring is lovely and we look forward to visiting at Sweet Briar.

Class Secretary: Enith Durreli (Mrs. Edward C. Marshall) 6326 Ridge Avenue, Cincinnati 13, Ohio.

Have just returned from the campus where we celebrated our 27th class reunion. For a while I thought that I was going to reane all by myself, but on Saturday afternoon "Tay" Taylor Corley and Madelaine Bigger drove up from Richmond with Tay's husband, Frank. We had supper together at the boathouse, along with several other classes, chiefly class of 1922. Commencement weekend was quite a success. Over 100 alumnæ were back, many of whom were in adjoining classes, so we all saw a number of familiar faces. We are again using the Dix system of class reunions. The campus was beautiful, roses, honeysuckle, and magnolias in full bloom. Doesn't the thought make you homesick for the Briar?

Gert Pauly Crawford with Bob and their daughter Mary dropped in to see me several weeks ago. Mary is graduating from Western College in Oxford, Ohio, near Cincinnati. Mary is a most attractive girl. She is going to Europe this summer on a bicycling trip with a group of girls from Connecticut College for Women.

1 also had a note recently from Ruth Geer Boice. Her daughter Gratia transferred to Michigan from Sweet Briar this year, thus following in her mother's footsteps. Ruth's son is at the University of Toledo.

Recently at a Girl Scout Regional meeting in Dayton 1 ran into Georgia Millard Hewlings's sister and at long last learned Georgia's address. She has been living in Salem, Virginia, for several years. She has an adopted daughter who is very mechanically minded, preferring tools to dolls. She also shows a marked talent for painting, so they plan to send her to a school of architecture and design when she is ready for college.

Going back to Tay and Madelaine—Mad is still at her old job in Richmon I and Tay on her farm nearby. Her oldest son was a pilot during the war and is keeping up his interest in flying as a member of the Virginia state guard air corps (am not sure of the title of the organization). Another son graduated from Annapolis and a third is at West Point. The youngest is a student at the University of Richmond. With so many different military connections the Corleys must have a hard time keeping their loyalties separated.

Jo Abara MacMillan's Josephine is graduating from the University of North Carolina this June. She and my Ann have been friends since they were freshmen at Sweet Briar.

As to the Marshall family, I am still doing the usual alumnæ job and will be going back for another couple of years as your Vice-President of the Alumne Association. I am involved in a bit of Girl Scouting and church work too. Ed, Jr., will be a Junior at Sewanee and Ann has finished a year at the Cincinnati Art Academy and will be on the staff there next year. This summer she is to be a counselor at Cheley Camp in Estes Park, Colorado. Ed and I expect to be at our cottage on Lake Leelanau, near Traverse City, Michigan, in July and part of August, so if any of you are in our neighborhood look us up Our latch string is out for all of you.

1922

Fund Agent: BEULAH NORRIS, 130 Hazelcroft Avenue, New Castle, Pennsylvania.

According to Sweet Briar's new system of reunions the class of 1922 is having another reunion this year and even though this letter is being written in May it looks as if our class will be doing well again. Gert Dally Massie is chairman and she is going to write an "on the spot" account for you all as I will not be able to be there. Beulah Norris and I have been commiserating with each other over the apparent lack of interest of our class. We feel sure a lot of it is carelessness but won't you all try next year to contribute to the college-not only with cash but news. Only 18 girls, or 15% of our class contributed to the fund this past year. As for news, I sent out about 100 cards and had 12 replies. Come on, gals, try to get back some of the old spirit you had when " '22 was leading 'em all around."

It was a big thrill hearing from a few practically lost souls—well worth all my effort.

Clara Hogans Keepers, who lives only a short way out of Chicago and whom I hadn't seen or heard from in 25 years wrote a grand note. She has a daughter who is a senior at the University of Illinois.

Francis Jordan Truthan sent a card from the hospital. She's had a bad winter with pleurisy, etc., but hopes this trip will fix her up. Her two youngest sons are at Kent State University.

Mary Walkup Woodburn was married March 1 to a writer and editor, John M. Woodburn and they are living at 52 West 58th Street, New York City. I am hoping to see her before too long; then 1 can give you first hand information. They spent a weekend in February with Phoebe and Dick Shideler and Phoebe took over, and the next weekend they returned and were married. Mary had been director of admissions and student personnel at Bennington College since its opening in 1932. They have just bought an old house, 1780, up near Goshen, New York, and are very excited and husy fixing it up.

Grizzelle Thomson planned to be back in June. She has had a long letter from Dr. Stone (she majored in physics) who lives with her sister in Puerto Rico and teaches in a private school.

Alice Miller Bly wrote a nice letter from Winchester, Indiana. She has been in a most interesting group of about 40 women this winter who have been studying under Dr. Robert Hutchin's plan "Great Bouks." The work has been an experiment and attasuccess has been studied by educators and the press. Life reporters visited them so maybe we'll see Alice in print one day.

Liz Huber Welch has spent a lot of time in bed this year so her famous bridge game must have suffered. Her one son was president of his class and is co-captain of the Penn-Charter football team for next year.

Benlah Norris didn't get to Florida this winter. Deepest sympathy to her. We all hope her fund activities weren't the caust. However she's off to Canada soon so we won't feel too badly for her! Benlah hopes to get Selma and Bus and Alice Earley Clendenning together soon. Alice is teaching medical social work at the University of Pittsburgh. She is a grandmother!

Bus Fohl Kerr has been active in politics but not busy enough. We want to see her in a big political job.

Alice Babcock Simons has been sub-chairman of the Fund this year and she is discouraged too. Her sons are growing fast and she feels her French major is no helo in coping with them. Alice talked to Lett Shoop this spring on the phone and said it was as good as a trip to the Briar.

Ruth Ulland Todd and her husband are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary with a trip to Alaska. Hope they have a grand time.

A nice note came from Catherine McCann Becker from Marietta, Ohio. She has a boy and a girl. Joan went to Sweet Briar for 2½ years. Bill is a sophomore at Duke and goes up to dances. Catherine visited college several times while her daughter was there.

May Earl Slocum is very busy working for Stassen for President. She is extremely active in Minnesota politics but does give her two young sons some care too.

One of Trot Walker Neidlinger's twin daughters, Susan, was married in April. Sally and Susan's skiing prowess made the papers often this past winter.

Helen Hodgskin Fingerhuth wrote me a fascinating letter about her life as the wife of a Swiss heart specialist in Zurich. She has three handsome blond sons and a beautiful old stone house. If anyone's ever lucky erough to get to Switzerland again, be sure to look up Helen.

P. S. The "on the spot gals" really wish to commiserate with those who couldn't drop the intervening years and be back in Grammer with Selma at the piano and all the songs and silliness of those days. Four of us, Gert, Selma, Grizzelle, and Bus were there and if we had families and responsibilities we didn't remember. Wish all the rest of you would try it next rennion.—E. F. K.

Class Secretary: Helen Dunleavy (Mrs. Henry D. Mitchell) 880 Clermont Street, Apartment 23, Denver 7, Colorado.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA TAYLOR (Mrs. George Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montclair, New Jersey.

A wonderful letter from Joyce "Sis" Mac-Gregor says she is in a Sweet Briarish mood. having had a reunion dinner this week with Margaret Laidley Smith (recently returned from a Florida trip), Katharine Tracy, and Edith McKelvey. They all had attended the dinner for Miss Lucas and are still glowing with praises of her. Joyce says that her own fascinating address "The Boulevard of Allies" is not as imposing as it sounds-merely one of the long streets from the heart of Pittsburgh out to the residential sections. She lives at the Evangeline Residence in the downtown section, with 240 other girls, and loves it. This June marks the end of her fourth year as office manager of the Buhl Planetarium and Institute of Popular Sciencethe newest and most modern of the five planetariums in the United States. Joyce writes that for the first time in her life she is wearing a size 16 and is so pleased. She has given 21 pints of blood, which she says seems to make her more healthy.

From Montclair comes word from "Ginny Lee" Taylor Tinker about her interesting family. Her daughter Joan is 17 and a junior in Kimberley School. She is in the Glee Club and Cappella Choir, and also rings the chimes each Sunday at St. James Episcopal Church. She is thrilled over the prospect of going to California this summer with her grandmother. "Tink," Ginny's son, is 13 and a baseball fan and in the seventh grade. Fred, Tink, and Ginny plan to go to Bay Head, New Jersey, this summer.

Remember Kay Norro Kelley flying down the hockey field? Daughter Priscilla, who wants to go to Sweet Briar in two years, is hockey mad and is also a beautiful diver. Meta is going to a very progressive school soon, preparatory to going to a horticultural college. Kay writes that all the children, except Priscilla, are wild about horses and ride at Dana Hall. Stillman, her husband, loves golf and collecting stamps, but the Navy rather squelched his previous passion for the sea. Kay's 6-year-old, Randolph, has had osteochondritis and will be out of his hrace in another year. What a great joy that day will be.

Kay reports on the Boston Sweet Briar Club's project of a block of seats for the Boston Pops. Symphony Hall is fixed up like a Vienna beer garden and the occasions are light and fun. She sees Lois Peterson Wilson occasionally.

In March I had a rare treat when Margaret White Knobloch and her most attractive husband, Ellis, came through Denver. We had a grand visit, but Mew was sorry to miss Dot Keller Iliff who was off cruising the Caribbean. Margaret and Ellis took a "Grand Tour," stopping many places in California, boating, visiting in Houston, and finishing at fascinating New Orleans.

At last we have news of Margaret Catterall. She has been Mrs. Gordon E. Mills for a long time, has two daughters, lives in Austin, Texas, and visited Peggy Denman Wilson in New Jersey during January!

lune brings fishing time for the Mitchells. Hank and I went angling at Eagle Nest Lake, New Mexico, over the long Memorial Day weekend.

Those of you who haven't had a minute this spring to answer my cards, please scribble me a line while you're basking on the beach this summer. We want to have a big letter in October!

EDITOR'S ADDITION; Annette Brown King and her hosband stopped by Sweet Briar this spring. Annette is the first grandmother of '26, her grandson, William Robert Grassman, Jr., was one year old on April 25.

1928

lund Agent: BETTY PRESCOTT (Mrs. Richard H. Balch) 1202 Parkway East, Utica 2, New York.

When I first stepped out of my taxi at Sweet Briar, I thought, "Am I completely mad? What am I doing here?" After more than 20 years off campus I didn't recognize anyhody, didn't know the names of any huildings, cooldn't remember anything or anybody. But, half an hoor later, well settled in 250 Randolph, I was so glad to be back! Reunion was fun, and the six members of the class of '28-Betty Presentt Balch, Rip Van Winkle Morlidge, Kitty Lead-Bloomer, Judy Thomas, Kitty Brightbill Biltz, and myself-who were back had a wonderful time. May I tell you how much we missed all of you, and what fun it was to have letters from some of you-Marian Sumner Beadle in Honolulu, Helen Adams Martin in Lancaster, Massachusettsto read aloud at the class picnic on Sonday night. The picnic was held on the floor of Martha von Briesen's room, in lieu of green grass and trees, because it rained most of the time; but it was still beautiful. To those of you who have not been back, as I had not, for many years, may I say that Sweet Briar is far more beautiful than ever before-the trees, the flowers, the buildings, Boxwood Circle full of pretty girls and pretty alumnæ for Miss Lucas's garden party-the whole thing was perfectly lovely, and I am so glad I went back. Perhaps more of us can make the next one.

Among the many of you who wrote me of whom I have news: Sara McHeury Crouse called to say that her Joan, 17, will be a freshman at Sweet Briar this year. Betty Balch's Cynthia will be too, so we have two "alumnæ daughters" now. Sara has four daughters, one, 14, who wants to be a lawyer, a 10 year old, and a 6 year old in nursery school, so her days are foll.

Jane Schoentgen Geiser writes that she and Kay Emery Eaton got together for lunch and "a spot of old school and current mother talk." Jane's husband is practising law in Beverly Hills, her 18 year old Fritz is at U.C.L.A. and 12 year old Gretel is at Marlborough.

Alice Harrold Morgan wrote that she was with us in spirit, but due to the sad fact that her three year old Allene broke her leg again after having the cast off for five weeks, she couldn't make it, and we missed her. Hope Allene is better by now. I deeply sympathize; after spending some days in Washington with my sister on my way back from Sweet Briar (I drove up with Kitty Biltz and Judy Thomas) I spent my time agonizing over the celerity with which a $1\frac{1}{2}$ year old hoy can get away from you and fall down steps and climb over things!

Louise Bristol Lindemann writes that for the past two years she has been Manager of the Cafeteria in the Hastings High School. Her hosband is Director of Physical Education and their two daughters also go there. They will spend the summer at a camp where he is also director and Louise helps him, while the girls attend camp. She also was sorry not to be with vs.

Betty Anstin Kinloch writes that she visited Lucile Fineb MacCallum in Larchmont. Lucile has been "lost" for years and I am so glad to have her address; from new on she gets one of those eternal postcards and I hope she'll answer! Betty's son, Bohun, Jr., is at Taft School, and her daughter, Eve, at Connecticut College with Lucille's daughter Susan.

Bonnie Matbeus Wisdom says she saw Margaret Banister last fall. She has a daughter, Penelope Stewart, who is 4 months old, along with John Jr., 13, and Kathleen (Kit) 8. Teal Barrow Lane visited her three weeks ago and visited El Branch Cornell not long ago. Teal caught a glimpse of Elizabeth Lee Valentine Goodwin in Washington.

Marion Jayne Berguido has seen Libby Jones Shands, who says she met Julie Wilson in Honolulu. Marion Beadle also saw Libby in Honolulu and gave news of Lib Rountree, more beautiful than ever. Marion also sands the sad news of the death of Jane Poindexter Steward's husband.

Frances Coyner Huffard has a daughter at Stephens, and another at the Principia, as well as a son in fifth grade, all of which keep her busy.

Barbara Bruske Dewey reports a long hard winter in New England, but hopes to be at Sunapee Lake, New Hampshire, and at Higgins Lake, Michigan, this summer.

Inch Culver Mann celebrated her 21st anniversary by having Kitty Biltz and Judy Thomas to lunch; I had to beg off because of staying with my sister and large family but I had the pleasure of lunching with Inch the next day and am happy to report that she is the same charming person. Her time is fairly well taken up with Mary Lee, 7, and a large house in Chevy Chase. She went to the Sweet Briar-Princeton concert in Washington in April and enjoyed it tremendously.

Catherine Via is going back to Wadesboro for the summer, but we look forward to having her back in the autumn as a member of the Manhattan Club. Her Army reunion coincided with ours so she couldn't make Sweet Briar, and we missed her as we did everybody.

Elizabeth Woodward Jeffers has two freshmen, Henry and Ann, at Princeton High, who hope to be Princeton and Sweet Briar '54 respectively.

Tommy Claybrook Bowie was sorry not to join us, is looking forward to Pocono Manor in August.

Louise Conklin Knowles and family visited Sweet Briar in April. Ann, 15, was most impressed with Sweet Briar and we hope for another alumna daughter there.

Ernestine Keys Rollow will be in Oklahoma in June and at Balboa, California, in August, and wished she could make reunion.

Susan Jelley croised to the West Indies on the Ninew Amsterdam during the year. She is kept very busy with Previews, Inc.; saw Sis Reares Utterback this winter.

Grace Sunderland Kane visited Win West Madden for the Kentucky Derby, and saw Ann Mason Brent Winn in Lexington.

Elizabeth Joy Porter lost her house and everything she owned in a terrible fire last winter. Rip Morlidge wrote of this, and also that she saw Betty Harms Slaughter in April, looking as lovely as ever, and Mary Lee Glazier.

A letter from Lil Wood tells of her work in California with the Moral Rearmament Group. A card from Constance Furmin Westbrook says she is, as always, involved in domestic life and dozens of organizations and meetings. She is looking foward to a leisurely summer and a vacation at the beach. Ann Lane Newell Whatley was miserable not to be able to make reunion, which unfortunately fell on Memorial Day weekend, for which she and Bob have a long-standing yearly engagement at Falmouth Foreside. We missed her, as we did everyone who couldn't come.

Betty Balch reported that she is having a picnic with questionnaires and accompanying pictures. Wish I'd have as good a response to my postcards; it really is quite easy to tear off the other half of the postcard. Please send me lots of news for September.

By the way, a last minute arrival at reunion, on the last day, was Libby Robius Foster, looking just the same as ever. She is helping run the bank in The Plains, with husband Turner, and it certainly seems to agree with her. Marian Taber Maybank was in Amherst, but because she is suffering from phlebitis was not allowed to join in our active "sports."

My only bad reaction to reunion was that I am definitely too old and fat to run up and down Randolph stairs, but it was fun trying! It was also fun to drive over to Amherst in the middle of the night for been and a sandwich, remembering my young days when it was strictly not done! And I still felt guilty every time I lit a cigarette.

Thanks to everyone for news, with the hope that next September I will get twice as many cards, and all best wishes for a wonderful summer to you all.

Class Secretary: SALLY REAHARD, 5525 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis 8, Indiana. Fund Agent: GWENDOLYN OLCOTT (Mrs. George Writer, Jr.) 21 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York.

Just at the deadline (very dead) for your June report came an unsolicited newsletter from Mary Huntington Harrison. Although she addressed me Indianapolis, Minnesota, I believe she is still hale, hearty, and in her right mind! Of her own affairs she said nothing except that she had had fun with Norvell Royer Orgain at the last Council meeting and that they hoped to room together at the next one in June.

Emilie Jasperson Bayha had been in Cincinnati and called Mary. After she and Mary had maneuvered the latter's 6 year old daughter and the former's (age unknown) husband off on a shopping tour, they settled down to a supper session in the Netherland Hotel. Emilie lives in Toledo and has children who should be about 16, 14, and 8 years old now.

Next surprise for Mrs. Harrison was a letter from Mona Stone Green, the first, she says, in 20 years! You will be excited to hear that Mona's daughter hopes to enter Sweet Briar in 1949. Here's a Head of Track for '53.

Carolyn Martindale Blouin still is in Newton Center, Massachusetts, but wrote Mary that she was eager beaver to sell their house and spend the summer at Joy Farm, their place in Maine. Either Carolyn is not expecting any more winters or has some plans we haven't heard of!

I don't believe that we have had note here of Emma Riely's married name. She is Mrs. Remy LeMaire and is living in New York City and working for an importing firm.

As for me, I fear that this will be my last letter to you all as class secretary. My father and I expect to travel a bir next winter and as our plans are vague, I thought it best to relinquish my official pen. Hope I still hear from you though! It's been fun!

1932

Class Secretary: (for this issue) ELIZABETH JOB (Mrs. August H. Jopp) Box 405, Hazard, Kentucky.

Fund Agent: ALICE WEYMOUTH (Mrs. Frank McCord) 147-37 Beech Avenue, Flushing, New York.

Another ALUMNAE NEWS with nothing about the depression class of '32. One would almost be willing to believe we took a yow of silence along with our A.B.'s or B.S.'s.

Here goes—I'll add my two cents worth and you add yours. Life in the Kentucky mountains continues to grow more fascinating. I only teach a half day (commercial work) in the high school here in Hazard. That gives me plenty of time for bridge, garden club, church, and mission activities. In fact as the years pile on I seem to be able to crowd more and more into each day.

We are near coal mines and the picturesque Hindman and Pine Mountain Settlement Schools. The settlement at Hindman looks just like the visitor would expect it to; the dorms, school buildings and workshops are huge log cabins. The students come from the mountain counties of Kentucky and receive high school training and learn crafts-weaving, farming, and woodworking. The cherry tables they make are truly beautiful and George Washington would have been proud to sleep in any of the beds. Every Saturday night they have folk dancing, not just the American square set, dances from all nations. This was the first public school in the mountains and was established by Lucy Furman. Her books about it are Quare Women and Through the Glass Window. Each year Wellesley gives a scholarship to one of the Hindman graduates. As a result a number of the faculty at present are Wellesley graduates.

My pet love is the Frontier Nursing Service at Hyden, Kentucky. This was founded and is still run by Kentucky's most famous woman, Mrs. Mary Breckenridge. A graduate of St. Luke's in New York, after the loss of two children and her husband, she came to the mountains of Kentucky to help other mothers. She says the Lord intended her to be not a wife and mother, but a nurse. Now she handles the administration of her vast project. She has a hospital at Hyden and numerous outposts in remote regions. Her couriers are from eastern colleges and the positions are much soughtafter. Most of these girls stay at the hospital or Wendover (Mrs. Breckenridge's rambling 3-story log home). Each day they ride horseback over the mountain trails watching for the red or white rag signals hung out by the mountain people when they need medical aid. The couriers find out the type of sickness and ride for a nurse or doctor. The staff is cosmopolitan, composed of student nurses from India, France, and the West Indies, many English nurses, the couriers, and famous doctors, there at various times. The hospital at Hyden was the first school for Midwifery in the United States and until just before the last war the gradnate midwives had to be brought from England to the Frontier Nursing Service. The whole is a wonderful work and Mrs. Breckenridge has a dynamic personality. Anyone who comes to visit me will have tea at Wendover as a treat. Come in the summer when the roads are passable by car.

Now for the bits of news I have gleaned. Last spring 1 visited Sue Burnett Davis in Atlanta. Son Treadwell's Boy Scout activities were so interesting that we didn't do much personal visiting. We admired an arrangement of plants and Sue told us it had just won first place in the Atlanta Garden Club's "Symphony in Green" display.

A little further South, Kay Oglesby Mixon is re-established in Valdosta. Harry is practicing medicine with his father. Kay has two daughters, one of whom is in high school and strives to conquer the foreign languages necessary for entrance to Sweet Briar—one of Kay's fondest dreams for her children.

This past Christmas I gleaned some news from cards. Kate Scott Soles lives in Cleveland. She said she, Aurie Lanc Hopkins, and Billie Hancel Sturdy went to Sweet Briar for May Day last spring. Kate has 2 children, Kathie and Jeff.

Heard from Betty Uber Eby and Ruth Kerr in Pittsburgh. After being one of the few Lieutenant Colonels in the WACS, Ruth preferred civilian life. She is buyer for a woman's shop.

Adelaide Smith Nelson was back in bed with a flare up of her old trouble. Adelaide has always been so active and we hope she is fine now. Her address is Mrs. W. J. Nelson, 345 West Wilshire Drive, Phoenix, Arizona.

Ginny Squibb Flynn sent a card, but didn't even write me a note!

My sister Dorothy, class of '21, and her 23-year-old daughter were here from England this summer for the first time in 15 years. It was good to see them. My red-headed niece, Alice, felt well rewarded for her trip as the Governor of Kentucky made her a colonel!

Now please someone else write in for the Class Secretary: Anni Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Our 15th reunion was most enjoyable. Those returning for reunion were Elizabeth Schlen Stainbrook, Mary Imbrie, Margaret Imbrie, Mary Buick, Marjorie Burford Crenshaw, Gerry Mallory, Virginia Vesey, Ella Jesse Lathim, Sue Grates Stubbs, Frances Powell Zoppa, Rose Beverley Bear Burks, Helen Bond, and myself. Hetty Wells Finn, Sue Belser Peques, Margaret Lamer Woodrum, and Doris Crane Loveland had hoped to join us, but were unavoidably prevented from coming at the last moment. Sue Grates Stubbs travelled over 1,000 miles from Monroe, Louisiana, which is a record.

Many thanks are due to Gerry Mallory, our teunion chairman, for her fine work, not only for arrangements made at Sweet Briar, but for the assembling of our 15th Reunion Book, both jobs taking much time and effort.

Red Top gave us a grand time Saturday evening. Miss Crawford and Miss Rogers were at hone for the classes of '38 and '33 and were as usual charming hostesses. We want to thank them for their gracious hospitality.

The class picnic Sunday night was held in the boathouse, which the class of '22 kindly shared with us. They had priority, having engaged it months ahead. The following members of '34 picnicked with us—Bonnie Wood Stookey, Jackie Bond Wood, Lib Scheuer Maxwell, Jean Sprague, Julia Sadler de Coligny, and Marjorie Lasar Hurd.

There were many other things planned for all the reuning classes and the week-end was most successful.

Warwick Rust Brown, her husband, and 3 children are now living in Richmond, where her husband is rector of historic St. Paul's Church.

Marj Burford Crenshaw will join her husband this summer for 2 weeks at Madison, Wisconsin, where he will be teaching American History in summer school.

Margaret Imbrie was recently elected vice chairman for the Science-Technology Group of the Philadelphia Chapter of the Special Libraries Association.

Margaret Ellen Bell Hare is active in church work, community drives, and Shore Acres Properties Owners Association. She had the Sweet Briar meeting for Westchester County at her house in April. Among the 17 present were: Bonnie Wood Stookey, Suzanne Gay Linville, Arline Simmen MacArthur, and Conne Foulder Keeble.

Mary Bess Roberts has for more than a year been living in Newport News, Virginia, where she is working at the library of the Army Field Forces, Fort Monroe.

Doris Crane Loveland is mighty busy with her 4 children, but managed to snare a nurse this past winter and flew on a business trip with her husband to London, on to Holland and Italy. The Lovelands are moving to Morristown, New Jersey, for the school session beginning in September, but expect to return to Hammonton for the summer.

Elizabeth Gray flew down to Florida to visit Inky Olsson for a few days just before Easter. Inky has a lovely home on an island off Miami Beach where they spend the winters. Elizabeth is Assistant Secretary of the Chesapeake Corporation of Virginia.

Emily Denton Tunis and her 2 children, Leila and Eric, have been living in South Egremont for the past year. Her husband comes home from Hartford weekends. They are remedying this soon as they are building a house in Longmeadow and hope to move in this summer. Emily sees Mary Kate Patton Bromfield and her family now and then.

Susalee Belser Peques and her daughter Eleanor spent Easter week in Washington with Ella Jesse Latham. Susalee saw Hazel Stamps Collins who was in Charleston seeing the gardens.

Nevil Crute Holmes and her family love their new home in Hamilton, Ohio. They have 2 daughters, Beth, 1 year, and Vaughan, 3 years old.

Jessie Coburn is still doing what she started during the war. She is an advertising copywriter for a manufacturer of electrical measuring instruments in Philadelphia. Jessie has little free time, but has her vacations on Cape Cod, her evenings, and a garden.

Lois Foster Moore and her husband went for a wonderful trip to Bermuda in April. They went for the International One Design sailing races. Jim crewed on one of the boats. As the Americans won 4 straight races it was very satisfactory all the way round.

Charlotte Tamblyn Tufts has no news, except that she has taken up golf seriously, which is certainly a time-consumer. I wish she lived near enough to have some of the balls we find in our yard.

Sue Graves Stubbs has an architect husband and 2 children, Sue 9, and King, Jr., 7.

Virginia Vesey saw some of the lovely estates open for Garden Week, was only sorry she didn't have time to see more. She is a secretary in the F. S. Royster Guano Company.

Gerry Mallory did very well in state and county bowling last winter.

Margaret Anitin Johnson bought an old house, spent 2 months remodeling it, and it burned down the day before they were to move in. They lost quite a few things and since then the Johnsons have been moving from borrowed house to borrowed house, while waiting to rebuild.

Emma Hills Boyd is secretary to the President of the Butterick Co., Inc., and in charge of personnel.

Connie Murray Weller is president of G. R. Murray, Inc., and a real-estate saleswoman. A note on behalf of the class was sent to Mr. Howard Skinner expressing our sympathy at the death of his wife, Elizabeth Fouler Skinner. Elizabeth died March 6, 1948, leaving her husband and their son, John who is 7 years old.

Class Secretary: Marjorie Lasar (Mrs. E. R. Hurd, Jr.) 425 North Hanley Road, Saint Louis 5, Missouri.

Fund Agent: JEAN SPRAGUE, 1910 Kalorama Road, NW, Washington 9, D. C.

I am still getting reverberations from Miss Lucas' tour of the circuit. Martha Lou Lemmon Stohlmann writes that everyone had a grand evening in Princeton when Miss L. and Mrs. Lill were there.

Beanie writes glowingly of a trip to New York and Cambridge. She saw her sister and Mary Moore Rowe and small Carter while in Cambridge, and Alice Dabney in New York when not at the theatre. She managed 4 plays in 2 days—some kind of record.

Eleanor Alcott Bromley went to Atlantic City to a medical convention with her husband in May. Dot Turner Gardner hopes to spend her vacation in Tucson with Nathaniel (minus the young, I believe). She has been coping this spring with double doses of mumps and asthma.

Lydia Goodu'yn Ferrell stays very busy with welfare work in Richmond. She is president of the Community Chest Settlement House, works with the Community Chest Budget Committee, and is secretary of the Junior League. She has also found time to play some tennis and speaks of seeing Becky Strode Lee and Julie Sudler de Coligny.

Fran Darden Musick and Jack have bought a house at Virginia Beach where they plan to live all year round.

You won't believe me when I tell you that I am writing the first half of this from the Alumnae Office on the Sweet Briar campus! I came back for the first time since 1935 and am still glowing and beaming after 3 very strenuous days. Bonnie Wood Stookey and Lib Schener Maxwell came down from New York and Julie and Jackie Bond Wood came from points south. Everyone looks exactly the same and we all picked up right where we had left off and had a perfect time. It was very difficult to believe, as we sat in the dell with cokes and nabs, that 14 years had gone by. We all seem to be doing much the same thing except Jackie who has struck a blow for freedom by teaching 3 courses at Lynchburg College. I accused her of perpetuating the greatest fraud of the decade but she brazened it out successfully and I am convinced.

We were having a picnic supper in the boathouse, now all pine-paneled and very elegant, when Jean Sprague appeared, which was a grand surprise.

The campus is more beautiful than ever. There is a lot more planting—trees, shrubs, and quantities of myrtle and ivy, all over everything. There are screens in all the dormitory windows and a telephone in every hall. I jumped as if I had been shot Sunday morning when I heard one ring outside my room. There are enough of the faculty members whom we knew to make it seem very familiar, and people are very kind about remembering one. I am now leaping on my soapbox to urge all of you to make the effort to come back for reunion next year; I promise you it is worth every bit of time, money, and effort put forth.

This last part is written in the sober confines of my own home. Nan Butzner Leavell gave me the keys to Charlottesville and also a good run for my money as I arrived in a state of semi-exhaustion. We had lunched and toured local spots of interest on the way over to school, but she had saved the best until last-her husband and children, all of whom are perfectly delightful. Miss Glass had dinner with us and she, like Sweet Briar, casts the same enchanting spell. We drove over to see where her new home is a-building and met Meg, a most superior Scottie who follows in the wake of Red as faithful escort.

I know I am waxing lyrical almost beyond the bonds of human endurance and certainly way out of proportion to the trip itself. I must have been primed just right, or everything conspired with me, instead of against me, as is so wont with the housewife. Now we settle down to summer. Start a piggy bank, scrimp on your food allowance, or save Christmas money, but plan to come back in June. 1949.

A card from Betty Fox Moon tells of spending the month of January in Phoenix, Arizona, where she and Warren soaked up some gorgeous sun. That's the only place I've heard of where the sun was warm last winter.

I knew if I kept trying I could get news of Alison Dunne Harrison, and, sure enough, she wrote at last! Alison heard Miss Lucas speak in Chicago recently and fell under her spell—as all of us have who have had that pleasure. She reports that she has been aged by her son and daughter, the bad weather (come see me!), and the German courses she is taking at Northwestern so she can instruct her German maid.

Alice Laubach has been reelected secretarytreasurer of the Western Carolina section of the American Chemical Society—which has her up to her ears, but with fun too.

Gen Crossman Stevens says she is involved in "being part of a country community-P. T. A. room mother-Edson 4, Leslie Gale, 8-a house-and 11/2 acres of grapes and 12 pear trees." Gen is also working on the Alumnae Fund.

Helen Wolcott mailed me a card from New Orleans where she was enjoying the Mardi Gras. She had seen Kathleen Eshleman Maginnis and reports too that Sue Strassburger Anderson has a daughter born January 19.

Alice McCloskey Schlendorf would like news of Betty Klinedinst McGavran. She alsu wrote that Blandina Jones Skilton has a third son, Richard, born May 18, 1947. Our deepest sympathy goes to Alice and John who lost their little girl last year.

Judy HalliBurton Burnett took pen in hand to write me a long newsy letter which I so enjoyed and wish space permitted me to pass on to you in entirety. The Burnetts have a new home in Greensboro and a cottage at Wrightsville Beach. Judy found time for a trip to New York where she saw Isabel Auderson Comer and her husband. In January she attended the Junior League Regional Conference in Savannah where she saw Becky Young Frazer and Ruth Myers Pleasants, and, just incidentally, she was chairman of Sweet Briar Day and says it was a huge success.

Barbara Benzinger Lindsley is busy with all the activities 5 children give one. She often sees her sister, Dorothy Benzinger Reed.

Jane Bryant Hurlbert is living now in Hyde Park, Massachusetts. When Jane wrote she and her husband were enjoying a much-needed rest in Hershey, Pennsylvania. All 3 children have had every known children's disease this past year. Jane sees Miss Long at the Boston Alumnae Club meetings. Miss Long is in Cambridge studying.

Dot Barnum Venter's stepdaughter Joan is to be married in June and Dot has been busy with all the happy activities surrounding a wedding. Dot has met Professor and Mrs. Andersson, who will be in charge of the Junior Year in France for Sweet Briar, and thought them charming. Dot has 2 other children, Mary Lou 9 and Si 2.

I journeyed to Atlanta in late May for a visit with Lida Voigt Young, Lida Jr. 9, Elane 8, and Bonnie 18 months old. Henry, Lida's husband, bore up well with 5 women. It was such a treat to see again Callie Furniss Wolfe, Natalae Strickland Waters, Lee Mc-Pherson Virgin, Sarah Harrison Merrill, Becky Young Frazer, Jean Gilbert Moister, and Hazel Stamps Collins. Everyone looked wonderful and young and the conversation was nostalgic.

My letter to you all always coincides with my busiest time at school. As a result and because few of you have been willing to cooperate, I feel that I cannot any longer give time to our class column. I have enjoyed being secretary and hope very sincerely that more of you will acknowledge postcards for the one who takes over than you have for me.

Mary Virginia Camp Smith has been kept busy by her second daughter, Charlotte, born in October 1947. "She is a darling child and so good I am sure she can't belong to us." Mary Virginia plans to be at Virginia Beach during July and extends an invitation to all who are in the vicinity to drop in for a swim and a chat.

June Stein McKillen, in response to my postal sent to Buffalo, called on the phone. She is living in New York and studying Interior Decorating at the New York School of Design.

Mary Kate Crow Sinclair is living in Houston. She writes: "We were very fortunate to have a nice house in Houston to return to after the war. We have 3 children-Trey (boy) 9, Margaret 7, and Adrian 3. She was our bargain baby as she was burn at Fort Benning, Georgia, at the Army Hospital and cost us $11." cost us $11." Mary Kate adds that Jean Bird Antonius, who is living in Madison, Wisconsin, has 3 children.

Alice Andrews Fackert has a son 9. During the first years of the war, Alice took over her husband's business, selling for the Celanese Corporation of America. In '46 Alice was in Greensboro, N. C., with her family as her husband was sent overseas. During the war Alice saw Myra Bridges Greer who had a son the age of Alice's Billy.

Connie Warner McElhinney said she was a trifle "disconbobulated" as she had just fired a maid and was finding life complicated. I don't wonder, as Connie has 3 children-Elliott (girl) 71/2, Paul 5, and Susan 1. "We are comfortably and, I hope, permanently settled in the middle of 5 acres on the edge of Alexandria, Virginia. It's on top of a hill, which accounts for the name Four Winds, They, along with a swimming pool, keep us cool in summer and nearly blow us away in winter! My roommate, Betty Fesser Mac-Leay, lives nearby and since we both have kids in St. Agnes, we see each other fairly frequently,"

Callie Furniss Wolfe is now living in Atlanta, Georgia, where husband Paul was transferred 2 years ago. "We wouldn't leave now for love or money." Callie's children are Juhn 81/2 and Martha 61/2.

Peggy Husley Range, who is living in Tryon, North Carolina, has a new son, Edward. Peggy writes, "I almost feel as if I had my own grandson as 1 have 2 big girls in school."

As for our New York classmates, all have summer plans. Alma Martin Rotnem has taken a cottage in Connecticut and Muggy Gregory Cukor on Long Island. George Ann Jackson Slocum will vacation in Canada for several weeks. I shall visit about before continuing my Masters at Columbia.

I hope all of you will have a pleasant and a restful summer.

We had a fine response of news this time, for which many, many thanks. Margaret Sandidge Mason has moved to a new home in Port Chester, New York, where her husband is with the Army Exchange Service.

Her son is almost 3. She hears from Margaret MacRae Allen who lived near her when she was in Richmond. Ruth Rundle Charters has 3 boys to keep her busy-along with a house and garden, P. T. A., Cub Scouts, and doing a hit of oil painting with an artist's group. Eleanor Wright Beane has run the gamut to cold to hot! She had a ski trip to Canada this winter, "no easualties," and is now raising camellias. Marie Walker Gregory, who has been trying valiantly to raise a garden, has seen Agnes Crawford Bates and family. They hope to be in their remodeled farm soon. Aggie keeps busy with T. B. clinics, Woman's Club, and a daughter, 17 months old. Dinnie Hardin visited her family in Florida this winter and continues in her routine of dog training and Red Cross Motor Service, She hopes to get east for the Morris and Essex Dog Show and see some Brairites en route.

At long last! Locy Gore came through with a card and the lost is found! Having gotten out of the Navy in '46 as a Lieutenant, she has since been at Stanford working towards a Ph.D., a 4-year course. She is taking clinical psychology and has a part-time assistantship doing clinical work at the University Hospital. She's in California to stay! A true addict of the west coast.

Peggy Cruiksbank Dyer is also busy with a garden. She reported the birth of a daughter, Sandra, to Peter Dyer Sorenson, Dot Prout Gorsuch is in a temporary apartment near where her home is being built. The foundation and a vegetable garden are in. Betty Thomas Wells is also the proud owner of a new home. We are in the stage of hoping to build and I can't help envy those who have started or, better yet, are already moved in! Dottie Price Roberts' 2 children are good insurance against boredom. She saw Peggy Merritt Haskell and George for a week-end. Peggy has also seen Margaret Bradley Forsyth who is "back on the farm." Johnnie Jones, on her constant tour of the country, has been in Baltimore too and Dot says that the flitting around most suit her as she looks wonderful.

Jane Collins Corwin had a grand trip to California but the life of ease spoiled her completely. She says Ellie Snodgrass Park is up to her ears in finals, with the Bar exam coming up soon. In the papers we read that Ellie was valedictorian of her class at National University's School of Law. By last year she had already won more prizes than any other student there ever. There was a nice picture of Ellie and her darling 4 year old son in the Washington Post.

Jackie Cochran Nicholson has a cottage at Nags Head, North Carolina, and Ellie and her son plan to spend a couple of weeks with her. Big news is the birth of a daughter to Anne Lanman Bussey! May Weston Thompson reports an unexpected meeting with Helen Williamson Dumont in a night spot. She says Sid Gort Herpers loves Portland and has a beautiful home there. May is looking forward to another summer on Cape Cod. Janet Bogne Trimble has 2 hoys to keep her jumping. She is going to Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, for a month. Thanks, Boguie, for your kind inquiries but I'd hardly be any judge of whether I look the same or not. I like to think I do, even if the joints crack at times! The best I can do is say I haven't gained much weight or acquired any gray hairs—but I hate to think what a short session of Dance Group would do to me!

A grand letter from Vera Scarcy McGonigle who is bemoaning her life in West Texas, what with wind and dust playing havoc with any attempts at a garden, or even a lawn. "We are trying vainly to get St. Augustine grass to grow, but so far we have nothing but a super variety of weeds which I keep well-mowed in hope that they will make a lawn of sorts. We planted 2 elm trees, and trees are so rare in the neighborhood that they stick out like sore thumbs, but I must have some sort of shade before we all roast to death." A dog and 2 children give her little time to play, or, as she says, she's too tired after toting Robert all day. At 4 months he weighed almost 20 pounds!

Sue Matthews Powell is finally settled in Dallas after a grueling winter when both she and Wally were down with the flu at the same time-not once, but twice! She had a short trip to New Orleans for recuperation. She's seen Nancy Old Mercer and Martha Talley Devereaux in Dallas, where they all Junior League together. She also heard that Virginia Mencken Morrison has moved to New Orleans. Lollie Redfern Ferguson had a trip to Roanoke Rapids, North Carolina, in March for her grandmother's 80th birthday and daughter Anne Stuart's 4th. It was a gathering of the clan. She also had a short trip to Blacksburg in May, passing through Lynchburg but not able to get to Sweet Briar. In June she plans to go to New York for her cousin's wedding, when Margaret Redfern '47 will be maid of honor.

As for the Kleins we're about ready to retire for the summer, what with hay fever already here and heat due any time. We hope to have a couple of weeks in New York around Labor Day. Have a happy summer vacation, all of you, and many thanks for your help this year. I've really enjoyed writing the news—hope you've liked reading it half as much.

Class Secretary: Dolly Nicholson (Mrs. John A. Tate, Jr.) 212 Middleton Drive, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Well, I can't begin to tell you what you missed by not being back at Sweet Briar with the rest of us! I had been sorta dreading this 10th reunion business, being as how I felt like I looked 50 instead of 30, but believe it or not, S. B. is exactly the same, only more beautiful. The underclassmen looked just as old as the Alumnae, and for some strange reason I kept feeling that the last 10 years had never even existed!

Rilma Wilson Allen and I drove up on Seturday, arriving about 5 in the afternoon.

Naturally we were late, and the rest of the group had already trooped down to Miss Lucas's lovely garden party. Pretty soon up strolled Anne Walker Newton and Gene Brock Clement, who had driven uver from Richmond just for the day. They both looked like debutantes, and soon we were joined by the gang. Dot Tilson Campbell came all the way from Vermont, having driven from Boston with Macky Fuller Kellogg and Barbara Ferguson Lincoln. Lew Griffith Longstaff and Marion Brown Zaiser had entertained in Washington, and Jin Faulkner Mathews and Janie Weimer Shepherd drove from Charleston, West Virginia, their ear simply balking at a few mountains. Claire Handerson Chapin tooted over from Cleveland bringing a few alumnae of other classes. Bessie Lee Garbee Siegrist was helping at the register in Reid so we all felt it was old home week. Lucy Taliaferro Nickerson joined the Boston entourage at her home in New Jersey and teamed up with her old roommate, Rilma, so that fortunately all of us were put together on first floor Reid. Ves had planned to go with Rilma and me, but unfortunately her little gal got sick so she couldn't make it, much to the disappointment of us all.

As for the entertainment, Terry Shaw and the Alumnae Council had planned a stupendous weekend-old movies; a program by Mrs. Lawson Turner, the attractive spiritual singer from Lynchburg; a thrilling concert by Iren Marik, who before the war was a famous Hungarian concert pianist, has given concerts since coming to America, and has been on the Sweet Briar faculty for the past year. After Commencement on Monday Miss Sanford spoke to the alumnae on what students are studying at Sweet Briar today, followed by a lecture on International Relations by Dr. Gerhard Masur, a visiting professor from Bogota, Colombia. Needless tu say, each of us enjoyed all of the planned programs, but I must admit it would have been wonderful anyway to sit and eatch up on everybody and their children, even if we did sit up half of every night. There were many informal open houses-the faculty welcomed us royally-and on Saturday night a bunch of the gals went to Red Top where Miss Rogers and Miss Crawford had a wonderful party.

I can't begin to tell you all about everyone but I will try to hit the high spots on those who returned the questionnaires.

Frannie Bailey Brooke and her husband, who is a professor at V. M. L., will be living in Lexington after August. They have 2 children, George Mercer, III, 3 years old, and Marian Bailey, age 5 months. Fran urges everyone to please come see her. Virginia Eady Williams and husband, Alf, who is a vice-president of C. H. Willett Company in Louisville, manufacturers of furniture, have 2 hoys, Lawrence Lee 2, and Keith Lipscomb, born April 5. Eady is up to her usual round of civic activities, Junior League, golf and riding, and is a new member of the Alumnae Council.

Margaret Coleman Ford is living in Georgetown, South Carolina, where she has a parttime job in her husband's business, the Georgetown Dairy Products Company. She is also active in the American Legion Auxiliary and overseas relief. Alice Hooper and Margaret were planning for reunion, but just didu't make it. Babbie Derr Chenoweth and Mary Cobb Hulse also were supposed to be on hand, but I understand indirectly that Cobbie lost her father very recently. We all send worlds of love, Cobbie, and deepest sympathy.

Babbie's husband is a physician and with their 2 children, Arthur, Jr., and Emily Frances, are living in Birmingham, as are the Hulses. Frank Hulse is an air lines executive.

After a long time I heard from Georgia Black Kievit. Her husband is with Studebaker. Their little boy is 8. Georgia works for the Knitting Nook, Inc. and instructs, also designs sweaters. She helped with Dick Burton's sweater that he wore to the Olympics and is doing designing for MacGregor Sportswear. Nancy Old Mercer is living in Dallas and is active in the Junior League and Garden Club. Her husband is an air-conditioning engineer and they have a daughter, now 4. They recently were in New Orleans where Smeady and Clay joined them. The latter returned to Chattanooga to find Betsy, their elder daughter, down with the mumps. Since then the little girl has had them too, and Smeady's case was the finishing touch. Poor old Smeady was laid up in a hotel in Savannah where she had gone on a convention with Clay! Nancy reports on Mary Ann Housel Carr who is in Waltham, Massachusetts, with her 4-Brack, Steve, Deborah, and Tricia.

Faithful Winnie Hagberg St. Peter takes part in the AAUW, woman's club, and is secretary of a cooperative nursery school. Her husband is a dentist and they have a son, John Treadwell, 3, and a new baby, Stanton, Jr., born since Commencement.

Kay Hoyt, after a much-needed rest, is back at work, this time with Curtiss-Wright Propeller Division, in the orders department.

Elinor Wilson Gammon is also in Texas where Graham is with the Air Corps at Lakeland A. F. B. Elinor Graham is 4 and Elinor, Sr. is involved with the usual post activities and golf. Wileyna Upshaw Kennedy and Bob, Robert, and David live at Roseland Plantation in Eufaula, Alabama, and fortunately they pass through Charlotte occasionally on their way somewhere, so that I have seen her more often than some of the other gals. She looks wonderful, and their life in the country makes me really envious.

Pauline Womack Swan, George, and their 2 daughters, are living in Saginaw, Michigan, where they have bought a house. George is an oil operator and producer, and Pauline does church guild work and Junior League, along with house decorating and moving. Dot Livans Haveron is still living in West Orange, New Jersey, with Frank, who is with the Hygrade Food Corporation, and their children, Wendy Anne, F. L. III, and Billie. Ida Todman Pierce's husband is in the air freight business and Ida has a job as part-time secretary to the pastor of a Presbyterian church.

The triplets are fine and their mama, Becky Kunkle Hogue, father, and brother, are also surviving. In addition to being the Mother of the Year, Becky is interested in gardening, girl scours, and church and hospital work. You're a fiend for punishment, honey chile! Lloyd Lanier Elliott writes that she sees Eady fairly often, Billy Heizer Hickenlooper in Cincinnati, and Sigur Moore Whitaker. Sigur's family are moving to Lexington, Kentucky, soon, where Lloyd lives. Jessie Silvers Bennett, whose adopted son is 8 months old, also lives in Kentucky, Louisville, though.

Cornelia McDuffie Turner has her hands full with 3 children, John McDuffie 9, Richard 6, and Cornelia 4. In addition she writes a daily and weekly gossip column for the newspaper, has a dress shop in her back yard, and is secretary of the Mobile Junior League.

Barbara Fish Schiebel's husband is a surgeon at Duke Hospital and her interests include hospital work, flying, girl scouting, and being treasurer of the Durham Junior League. In the summer she and Max go to Roaring Gap, North Carolina, where I hope to run into her myself this year. Helen Hays Crowley is going to secretarial school and with 2 children and homework of her own to do, she says she stays too tired to percolate. Also taking care of home and business is Mabbie Berckmans Cauby, who is still living in Wilmington, Delaware with her 2 children, Anne 6 and David 3. With a friend of hers she has started a social secretary enterprise which she says is loads of fun and trusts will be successful. Gardening (especially camellias) and making hats are two of her special interests.

Just wish you folks could see the precious pictures which were sent in to me. They are in a scrap book with your replies and if you want to see them, they are in the Alumnae Office waiting for you. Dotty Gipe Clement sent a darling picture of herself and daughters, Dorothy, born November 1944, and Faith Monroe, born November 1946. Since 1938. Dotty taught dancing for a while at the country day school, was a nursery school assistant, worked for the Junior League and Red Cross, A.A.U.W., been president of the Toledo Sweet Briar Club, and sewed, ridden her horse, and done committee work. She and John are now in the process of building their own home.

M. J. Miller Hein sends everyone a great big "hello." After a siege in bed with an infected foot she was too busy catching up on home and family to be able to come to Commencement. They live at Bayside, L. I., and pictures of William John, III, 4½ and Marian Judith, 1½, are cute as pie. Fritz Cordes Hoffman was crushed to miss our 10th but one of her children had scarlet fever and they were quarantined. Cristy fortunately had a light case, which was lucky on top of a recent recovery from chicken pox. They visited Mildred Gill Williamson in Petersburg not too long ago. Mildred has 2 boys and the Williamsons are building a summer place on the James River near Scotland Wharf. Fritz is a board member of Harrisville Convalescent Home and corresponding secretary for Heart House in Pittsburgh. Her children are Christina (the victim) and Franklin David, Jr.

Susan Gibson Davenport writes that they still live at Oak Ridge, where Steve is an Episcopal clergyman. They have 3 children—Stephen 5, Churchill 4, and Susan Stuart 4 months. Sue teaches art in the Adult Education Program at Oak Ridge and is active in the League of Women Voters. Illness prevented Maud Tucker Drane from being with us. Maud and Hardy have 2 daughters—Eleanor Lile 4 and Roberta Luckett 17 months. The Junior League and volunteer case work occupy her "leisure" time.

I was delighted to hear from Genic Whiteside Winton after a long silence. They live in Miami and have a 2 year old daughter. By the grapevine I hear that Bis Lockett Lord still lives in St. Louis and has 2 precious little boys.

A note from Kate Sulzberger Levi arrived in the morning's mail. In about a month she and Ed will move into a house they have just bought. Kate has not been well for the past few months, but is better now. She reports that Martha Asher Friedberg has 3 children now.

Again I want to thank all of you for your many communications and continued interest. In the fall Lucy Taliaferro Nickerson will take over for a spell and I shall miss hearing from you. Perhaps you will just write to me anyway without the prompting of a reply postal. Worlds of good luck and love to each of you.

Class Secretary: BETSY CAMPBELL (Mrs. Robert S. Gawthrop, Jr.) R. D. No. 4, West Chester, Pennsylvania.

Fund Agent: Lelia Bond (Mrs. Joseph Preston) 240 Shenley Drive, Erie, Pennsylvania.

It is with my personal pleasure and I am sure to the delight of you all that I report the advent of a new secretary, Betsy Durham Goodhue, 31 Orne Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts. Now could anything be nicer? Do give her a bang-up first letter by writing her. Her family has been through a seige of mumps, chicken pox, and measles. She has cancelled reservations to fly to Richmond so often that the reservation clerk knows her voice!

Claffy Williams and Tommy have been skiing in Aspen, Colorado, and Sun Valley, and, as you can imagine, had a glorious time. Seems she's thin and glamorous as a model, 3 children notwithstanding.

Bill and Ellie George Frampton have moved to Philadelphia and seem to love it. Mary Mac also ventures northwards this August. Joe will take an eight month course at Penn Graduate School of Medicine. Annie Benedict Swain came over on Sunday, and Doxie Dingman Cobb almost did, and Dutch Hauber Crowe I couldn't get on the telephone.

By the way, did you see Gracey Luckett Stoddard's nice writing in the Junior League Magazine?

Julie Saunders Michaux is happily established in a wonderful new apartment and I hear Mary Frances Buchanan Flowers sounds most chipper over the telephone.

Eleanor Wallace Price has moved to Westtown from Seaford and she and her husband have fixed up one of those charmming old farmhouses. And while still in this territory, I'll just mention that Virginia Wellford Farwell finds housekeeping unutterably time-consuming but pleasant. Mrs. Farwell is settled in Connecticut after a month's honeymooning.

A note from Helen Cary Stewart reveals that although she is a neighbor of Boot Vanderbilt Brown and Janet Macfarlan Bergmann, she is understandably busy at home as mother of four. Boot and Jon stopped by last week on a business-pleasure trip and it was grand seeing them. She has a new washer which is very fine, but says this leaves hardly any room for the cleaning woman who is about the same size. She is pondering their respective merits. Jon saw Sweet Briar for the first time, and, of course, thought it wonderful. What a discerning man.

Clotilde Palmer Baker has been nursing Butch, age 6, through pneumonia. She had seen Betty Ball Wyman in March, and Arline Simmen MacArthur is another resident of Larchmont, so they are often together.

Lee Montague Joachim moved to Manhasset, L. I., in the fall and though she has seen no Briarites, save Sarah Belk who is busy as ever, she is sure the woods are full of them. They were snowed in most of the winter, though they enjoyed a pleasant two-week interim in Florida, but she thinks there is dogwood around and has great expectations. She hopes to return to Merrie Hill this summer to be with her mother.

Augusta Sanl Edwards and Dick were in New York in February for the national convention of mayors and had a grand time. She has been helping with a rhythm band in a nursery school for her Junior League work. Her 7-year-old was in a piano recital, but is really more interested in swimming at the present. Also just over a chicken pox siege (I'm still in it). They hope to start building their new home this summer.

Patty Balz Vincent and husband are coming for a visit from England this summer. Bobby Earl Reinheimer is still in California where Fred is finishing his law course. Jeff Welles Pearson is at Lexington while John studies at W. & L. In spite of 2 children, she recently completed the thesis fur her M.A. degree.

Bitsy was in Nurfolk in April and reports that Parks "blossoms" with the years. Bitsy has given op her job, and loves the extra time, can read and really practice making leisure be those wonderful things Miss Glass said it should be.

I think it was one of the first talks she welcomed us with, and I have often thought what a mess I made in that line. Bitsy does clinical work in Spanish Harlem, interesting and sometimes heart-rending work. Bill has been with Parents Institute for a year and a half now. They publish Parents Magazine. He is managing editor of a new magazine they are putting out called Varsity.

This is really my swan sung, but it's been fun!

Class Secretary: NIDA TOMLIN, (Mrs. R. C. Watts, Jr.) 100 Madison Street, Lynchburg, Virginia.

Fund Agent: ELEANOR SNOW (Mrs. J. Tatuall Lea, Jr.) 81 Eastwood Street, East Orange, New Jersey.

Reunion-graduation week-end at Sweet Brian was a huge success in spite of the weatherman. The overcast skies and cool breezes didn't seem to effect anybody's spirit or the wellplanned program. It was rather disappointing that more of you '40s couldn't be there. However, that is easy to understand as so many people have very young children. The fur-lined bath tub should go to Cynthia Noland Young for coming such a distance to Sweet Briar and for her arrangements for the wee ones at home. Cynthia's mother came from Richmond to Connecticut to take care of the children, Ann Carter and Carl. Clemmie Carter Murray came from New Jersey and looked and seemed the same as when she was at S. B. Clara MacRae Causey looked grand and reported that she has 3 children. Polly Boze Glascock was the only Richmond representative. Beth Thomas Mason arrived from Ann Arbor, Michigan, via Bluefield where she visited her family. Beth is quite slender and has a becoming new short coiffure. Her daughters, Laura Beth and Ann, are extremely proud of their curly headed brother "Tee." Beth said that it was marvelous to have their new house with its added space.

Maria Burrongbs Livingston spent May Day week-end with us. Both of my boys got a charge from her company. The snapshots of her 3 children were most attractive. When Phoopy returned to Greenfield, Mass., she was elated over a lot of new household equipment which came as a surprise present. Phoopy told me of the birth of Parge Woods Gillette's son, John Westfield, on April 1. Ann Adamson Taylor has a sweet little girl who is named Sally Adamson. Olivia Davis Brown also has an infant daughter, christened Maria, Margaret Royal Davis has a third son called George.

Eleanor Snow was married May 22 to J. Tatnall Lea, Jr. A lovely reception at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club followed the ceremony. Blair Bunting Both and Lois Fernley McNeil were bridesmaids. After their honeymoon at Sea Island the Leas will reside in Orange, New Jersey. Frances Moses Turner, my sister Peg, and I, plus husbands, attended Peggy Caperton's wedding. June 5. Peggy is now Mts. William Rankin and will live at Seaforth, Delaware. The wedding was perfectly beautiful and Peggy's dress was a knockout. Her sister, Mrs. Gene Barnhardt and Mary Frances Barnbardt Calder, ex '40, were the attendants. I didn't have much of "a chance at the groom," but he certainly made a good impression. Jane Goolrick Murrell was unable to be present at the wedding. However Mrs. Goolrick was there and it was nice to see her again, We stayed with Agnes Spencer Burke, Her daughter, Elizabeth Gordon is already May Court material, but does not resemble Mama. Her black curly hair and blue eyes are a divine color combination. I just read through this and it really sounds like "hearts and flowers." It must be because it's all true as my mood has nuthing to do with the rosy picture. Actually, this report is late again and I'm behind in my "housework" today (as always). It is also mealtime at my private 200, so I'll wind up by wishing you all a happy cool summer and a pleasant vacation.

Class Secretary: JOAN DEVORE (Mrs. John E. Roth, Jr.) 670 June Street, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: BETTY DOUCETT (Mrs. John Neill) Interlaken Gardens, 1177 California Road, Tuckahoe, New York.

Seven years "after" turned out to be fun—Lucy Lloyd, Edge Cardamore O'Donnell, Bebo Chichester Hull, Franny Wilson Dowdey, Lou Lembeck Reydel, Do Huner, Gertrude Marill, Peg Tomlin Graves, Louise Kirk Headley, and I represented 1941. Though it rained most of the week-end, our spirits weren't dampened in the least; from the garden party and Mrs. Lill's open house for us Saturday, through graduation and alumnae activities Monday, everyone had a grand time. We caught up on careers, husbands and children. Needless to say, pictures were produced on the slightest provocation.

I stole the questionnaires that were filled out and shall try to skim off the new news for a good fat report. I'm sorry you can't all see them, with more pictures of families and houses. They're wonderful: but the whole thing will again rest in the Alumnae Office, so whenever you're on campus—

"Legs" Lloyd has just announced her engagement to Tyler Port, and they hope to be married this fall. Tyler has been working in Germany, and Lucy said they would probably live there for a year before returning to Winston-Salem.

Learned of some more children, who deserve a very important mention. Barbara Nevens Young had another little girl born April 13, Sue Ann. Barby and Ralph are living in Fort Bliss, Texas. Charlie Davenport Tuttle had a son in April, named for his father, John Tyler, but known as Tim. Another young man to be recorded is James Logan White, Logan and Lillian Breedlove White's son. Ellie Damgard Firth has another potential Briarite in Louise Redman, age 6 months. Shirts and Dick Daniel are rightfully proud of Richard Micou, Jr., who arrived April 17. Mag Johnston Rowan's questionnaire revealed 2 children, Rebecca 41/2, and James, Jr. 11/2it's been a long time since there's been word of Mag.

Jane Loveland Byerts and Bill, with their 2 children are now at Clemson College, South Carolina. Edith Vongebr Bridges is begging anyone who comes to Palo Alto, California, to look her up. She hasn't seen a Sweet Briar girl for months. I was awfully happy to have word of Marian Dailey Avery. She and Lup are well established in Chattanooga and she has been doing a lot of traveling this past year.

A long note from Anne Dewey really should be quoted, since it's the first since '41. However, highlights will have to suffice. Dewey is in Mexico temporarily for reasons—it's cheap, quiet, very beautiful for painters and writers. She's doing the writing she didn't have time for during the war. She's living in a lovely home built by the Spanish Inquisidor in 1594. She says all Americans there in Mexico appreciate the United States as only expariates can.

Berry Blount Kempson is in Pensacola, with Barry 5, and Debby 1. Her husband, a Major in the Marine Corps, has been in China since last year. I know you will all join me in extending sympathy to Betty whose mother passed away this winter. Taffy Spaatz is living in Fort Myer, Virginia, and working as researcher in the Argosy Picture Corporation.

I heard reports of Dotty White's grand position with J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency in New York. Gertrude Marill is a psychologist at the new branch of Child Guidance Clinic in Washington. The Washington Post gave great publicity to this clinic in March, with Gertrude very much in evidence.

During reunion Kirk and I stayed with Peg Tomlin Graves in Lynchburg, where Paul is a real hard-working farmer. Luck has just come John's and my way in the form of a long-sought after house. We betake ourselves from the corner of May and June Streets to the corner of Ivy and Larkspur—a poetic move I'd say!

1942

Class Secretary: CATHERINE COLEMAN, St. Anne's School, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: BETTY HANGER, 1914 Olive Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

(Editor's note: This is Kippy's letter for the April issue, which came in after the deadline. However, as she says "time just evaporates," so we are printing it now with a few reunion post-mortems.)

Earliest news, as far as receiving letters goes, is a letter from Grace Lanier Brewer, who wrote me late in October. Grace reports that she and Carlos are now settled in Clarksville, Tennessee, a beautiful little town just 25 miles from her home. Carlos is practicing medicine and Grace has little Grace, who is 2 now, to care for. In the middle of July 3 5:00 o'clock traffic in Chattanooga last summer, Grace saw Florence Bagley Witt. Grace says that her little girl is adorable. Nashville has become the home of Florence Gillem Pressly and Jim, who is an X-Ray intern at Vanderbilt Hospital. They have a second son, Jennings Gillem.

On October 6, 1947, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. V. Tompkins II presented H. K. V. III to the world. To set the record straight, the proud mama is "Flush" Gwyn.

Home again is Daphne Withington, who resigned from the Red Cross in August, after a most enjoyable 11 months stay in Japan. As she passed through San Francisco on her way home, Daph saw Korah Smith, who is well and may be in New York by now. Daphne was at Sweet Briar for reunion, where she was greeted with eager glances by the Alumnae Office staff, all of whom were dying to see the recipient of innumerable telegrams, etters, and post cards from the Eastern seaboard. It looked like she was going to make a grand tour and catch up on her friends.

Also at reunion were Sally Walke Rogers, Lucy Call Dabney, Polly Peyton Turner, Jessamine Boyce Bowles, Eugenia Burnett Affel, and Louise Kirk Headley. Eugic and Louise are new members of the Alumnae Council.

Polly Peyton Turner, Carol, and their twins are overjoyed because they are a family at last and actually have a house in Norfolk.

Had a nice note from Eddie Syska attached to an invitation to her marrigae to Paul Joseph Peltier, Jr., an engineer with G. E. in Cleveland. Phyl Sherman was maid-of-honor at the wedding which took place on January 3 at the Reformed Church in Bronxville.

Annie Hauslein Potterfield has written confirming Eddie's report that she and Tom have found an abode at Rockaway Beach, where they are living while Tom is stationed at Fort Hamilton. Natch, they have daughter Ann with them. Annie reported also that Cynthia Abbott Botsford managed a most successful Sweet Briar Day in New York, with Miss Lucas a most welcome guest. Debbie Wood Davis and Doris Ogden Mount were also there to represent '42. Martha Buchanan Wadsworth could not make it, due to difficulty in finding a baby sitter, but she is a regular Manhattan Clubber.

'42 was also well represented at the Charlottesville luncheon. Ruth Hensley Camblos took time from her young son's birthday celebration to come and Betsy Gilmer Tremain did something with her 2 little girls and was there too. Also present were Toppin Wheat, whose wedding is in the near future. Penny Lewis, and Marilyn Mundy Young, and your secretary, who decided that finances prohibited the customary Christmas journey to Iowa.

A flash from the campus is that Eleanor Ringer, with a brand-new M.A. in drama from the University of North Carolina, will be instructor in English and advisor to Paint and Patches at Sweet Briar next year.

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: MURIEL GRYMES, Ships Point, Easton, Maryland.

First, I will tell you generally about the reunion, and then report what new items I picked up there and from the questionnaires. There weren't quite as many back as we had hoped, but those of us who were there really had a grand gay time. They were: Esther Jett, Page Ruth Foster, Anne Noyes, Elizabeth Munce, Brac Preston, Elizabeth Shepherd Scott, Nancy McVay Marsteller, Marjorie Shugart Dennehy, Carol Tanner, Franny Pettit O'Halloran, Caroline Miller McClintock, Ginger Munroe Conners, Anne Mitchell, Betty Weems Westfeldt, and myself. Also, Beth Dichman Smith and her husband dropped by for a couple of hours on Saturday evening, and of course there were quite a few from the 3 classes above us that we were delighted to see. We were continuously entained socially and culturally, but with plenty of breathing time in between when we entertained ourselves even more socially. This naturally included a renewed testing of Ye Travelers' wares. In fact, we were all so busy partying and catching up with everyone else's affairs and ideas that most of us kept 2 and 3 A.M. hours, but it didn't seem to matter as everyone was up and ready to go again by breakfast time. Unfortunately there was a good bit of rain which forced step-singing, vespers, class picnics, etc., inside. (You will be glad to know the alumnae did not humiliate themselves by attempting to stumble, crackvoiced, through "The Alumnae Come Rolling Along" this time!) One of the nicest things that happened was the graduation of Betty Weems Westfeldt. I hooded her and so wiggled into the act myself. None of her family could get there but recognition of her achievement was not lacking; she certainly deserved credit for perseverance despite the distractions of a husband and 2 children. She says she hopes to snatch an M.A. in the next few years. Meanwhile she is doing a lot of watercolor painting and is working very hard for the United World Federalists as an official of that group in Denver.

Now to the news, mostly of offspring! Leading off with Sarah Louise Adams Bush we have a disappointed potential reuner. She had probably been doing too much traveling, having just returned from a 2 week trip to San Antonio. She sees Brooks Barnes, who has a new job in a pediatrician's office in New York.

Eleanor Ammarell is Mrs. D. F. Asbury, also in Mountclair, and has a son, Robert Frost, 18 months old. Maggie Baker Kahin has moved from Baltimore to Litchfield, Conn. Her husband is a teacher. Nancy Bean White and her husband are off to Europe this summer and expect to stay there several years. Betty Blackmer Childs has 2 children; Elizabeth Dryden 41/2 and Walter 21/2. She and husband Mackall spent 4 years in Rio de Janeiro where he was with Pan American. He is now at U. of Maryland Law School and hopes to enter his father's law office in Annapolis. Polly Boswell Fosdick has a son, James Stewart, 15 months, while Skip Bracher O'Connell also has a new one, Steven Morison, Dorothy Campbell Scribner still leads wth the largest number of children—Katherine, Jan, Donald, and Barbara. I think even she is a little appalled by it and she allows as how they somewhat curtailed her outside activities. Carter Claybrook Booth has 2 children, John Stephen 3, and Nancy Blair 9 months. Didi Christian Mulligan sent me a clipping of her wedding which took place in Washington on Ash Wednesday. Minot attended the University of London in England and during the war served as a Lt. Colonel in the Air Transport Command. They are living in Washington and Didi had expected to go to reunion until she found the date conflicted with a planned trip to Williamsburg, which she says was a belated honeymoon. Libby Corddry Jones had expected to come too but Win was graduating and she felt obligated to stand by and contribute her moral and "feeble typing" support.

Debbie Douglas became Mrs. Ronald Adams on May 1. No details. Suzanne Douglas Terry lives in Middleton, Ohio, and has a little girl. I have been doing some volunteer work for the United Nations and living the gay life of today's spinsters.

Mary Love Ferguson Sanders had her first child, Lynn HI, last October and seems to be monopolized by him. She sent an adorable picture. She sees Anne Dewey, Jane Findlay couldn't make the rennion due to pressing prenuptial plans. She was married June 5 to Charles L. Tate, Jr., and will live in New York where he is an I. B. M. salesman, Janice Fitzgerald is married to James Wellon, Jr., a lawyer and is living in Smithfield, North Carolina.

Gregg's plans to reune were cancelled at the last minute when baby sitter husband got sick, but she did see Weems and her "captivating sons" when they were in New York. Mule Grymes has made great changes; she has moved to an apartment in New York is looking for a job, and is engaged! Her mother said a few weeks ago that the wedding is not planned for the near future.

Marguerite Hume has been living in New York for a while and was looking for some free lance writing to do there before she went to Europe. Her father is attending a surgeon's convention in Rome, so Marguerite and her mother are going along. Primmy lobuston Craven gave me this news. Esther Jett is sure Marguerite has left by now. Esther herself just returned from a Caribbean cruise to Jamaica, Curacao, and other ports in Venezuela and Trinidad. She was very tan and healthy and reports a marvelous time. I don't think I ever reported Primmy's daughter, Charis, born last June.

Chesley Johnson Dale has a part-time job driving a bookmobile. She expected to have Daphne Withington visit her after reunion. Esther saw Flsie Jackson Kelly a good bit last summer, says Walter is still going to Georgia Tech and they love Atlanta.

Lucy Kiker Jones announced a second candidate for Sweet Briar, Melissa Ellen, born March 15. She says Betty Belle Launder is president of the new Sweet Briar Club in Kansas City, and also that Harriet Sucusion Munschauer had a daughter, Carol Ann, on April 17. Tookie Kniskern White also just had a baby, another son, named Philip, and nicknamed "Pip," Bonilee Key Garrett is settled in Fort Worth, has a husband, house, and a son, 2½2. A long note from Virginia Knowlton Fite told of her move to Piqua, Ohio, where her husband has opened a law office and Ginny is doing some Y. W', C. A. work as advisor to 50 high school juniors and schoors, and is treasurer of the A.A.U.W. there. She was matron of honor for Nancy Littlefield when she became Mrs. Dan Stearns last October and at the wedding saw Judy Horner Mulligan, whose husband is an attorney in Cleveland and who has one son.

Back to Betty Belle Launder-she has 3 jobs! She sings on the radio, is a church soloist, and a fashion show model. Mary Law Taylor has a new son, Stuart Symington, Jr., about 2 months old. Snookie Campbell Shearer wrote that papa Stu was bursting with pride when he called her about it. Betty Laurie Kimbrough sent a most appealing picture of her blond and his brunette baby sister, and a picture of their house on what she says is known as "Baby and Mortgage Row." She and her husband have built fences and a porch, and even laid bricks! They are considering taking a contract to build the Sweet Briar Auditorium. She also told me that Camille Guyton Guething and Ted have bought a house in Birmirgham, Michigan.

Favette McDowell Willett is busy with her little girl. She has seen "Paducah" Wheeler Hilliard and Ann Tweedy Ardery lately, Junk reports lots of family visiting her. Betty McCormick Johnson has a son and is living in Grand Rapids. Nancy McVay Marsteller's daughter is ten months old, and Ginger Munroe Conners' son is just over a year. Ginger saw Martha Bobbitt McTigue at a party for Didi and her husband. Martha is on a 2 month vacation from Peru, where she is living now, and she has a daughter. Munce was the same as ever and we had a grand time chattering until 4 both nights at S. B., but I don't think most of it was reportable. Janet Staples had been visiting her and they had seen Sterling Nettles Murray. She still works for the telephone company. Caroline Miller McClintock has another son, David Miller, and looks as pretty as ever.

Fay Martin Chandler's husband has been taking exams so they have been forced to be anti-social of late. However, they expect to be in Nantucket this summer fixing up a shack they acquired last year. Anne Noyes has a most interesting job doing law work for one of the senators from Kentucuky in Washington. Tish Ord Elliott has a daughter about 4 months old, named Emily Howell.

Sandy Packard Hubbard is doing an unusual amount of Junior League work and has several chairmanships in Bronxville. She sees Val Junes Materne who is very happy in New York City, Sandy says Val and her husband know lots of hidden fascinating places to go and are wonderful guides to the real Manhatten. Nancy Pingree Drake has another baby, Peter Pingree, 3 months old. I forgot to tell you last time that Brac Preston has changed jobs; she is Vice-president and Office Manager of the Crown Book Agency, which buys and sells out of print theological books. In January, Harriet Pullen Phillips moved from Pittsburgh to Detroit, Della Read's brief note said she was just back from China and getting ready for the next post, Dakar. She is rather unhappy about the new assignment, but has been having fun at home and was sorry not to be able to come to reunion. Peggy Roudin was married April 14 to James Roy Foster, a vice-president of De Pinna. Pat Robineau Van de Vere is raising tropical fish.

Elizabeth Shepherd Scott looked fine. She has a daughter 4, and a son, Henry Pepper IV, 7 months old. Shep has been active in the Wilmington Flower Market, Rita Silberstein Raphael has a recent daughter, Cathy Jean-Judy Snow Benoit keeps busy with 2 daughters and making plans to build in Falmouth, Maine. Margy Shugart Dennehy deposited husband and children with her mother and we enjoyed seeing her again. Rod had been on leave and they have just been up to Garden City to visit his family. Byrd Smith Hunter's reunion plans fell through but she does anticipate a vacation this summer away from Norfolk and her child. Dot Stauber Anderson is back in Cuba where her husband works. Mary Jane Steiger is assistant to a general practitioner in Mercersburg and remains in the WAVE Reserves. Margaret Swindell Dickerman says Prentiss Jones Hale plans to build in Wallingford this summer,

We are all very proud of Carol Tanner who right before the reunion received her Ph.D. at the University of Virginia. She looked none the worse for wear but 1 did notice that she seemed to crawl into the sack at the slightest provocation. She plans to keep her job in Charlottesville for most of the summer, but is uncertain after that. Frances Taylor Trigg had a little baby, Loche III, weighing only 4 pounds at birth but now making up for lost time and fine. Fredda Fae Turner Durham, whom 1 hadn't heard from since college, reports in with 2 children, Fred Colin 3 1/2, and Kevin Douglas, 1 year and 3 months.

Last but not least comes Weezie Woodruff Angst, who besides making a complete bag and baggage move to Chicago where Johnny's business has transferred him, had another son, Carlton Clough, on May 1. The little family was homeless at the time and staying at Weezie's mother's but expecting an apartment in June.

You might be interested in a few generalizations from the questionnaires returned (about 1/3 of the class). About 2/3 of the class is married, 5 have been married twice, most of the married have at least one child, most of the unmarried have jobs, biggest outside activity is Junior League, with golf, reading, gardening, and United World Federalists frequently recurring interests, most of the husbands were in the service and are still in the reserves, and most of us have been back to Sweet Briar since we finished school there.

And how do you feel after all the long years since May 29, 1944? The joints are still mobile—but news of us isn't as profuse as it was in 1944.

Had a very clever announcement from Paulette and Ganson Taggart—re the birth of Harriet Townsend on April 13. She will soon answer to Townsend and sounds like a miniature Paulette. Her mama is still going strong in local activities, including the Boston Sweet Briar Club. She has seen quite a bit of Eleanor Goodspeed Abbott who lives nearby, and recently had a visit from Syd Holmes.

Pat Wbitaker Waters sends me an annual communique at the strategic moment for morale raising. She reported that Jane Rice MacPherson has been having a bout with some T. B. Bugs and is in Bolling Field General Hospital at Anacostia. Husband (Dr.) Tommy is stationed there so I'm sure Ricey is having the best of care.

Jinx Griffin Hilbert had her second baby, a boy this time. And Frederic and Barbie Clark Utley have a son, red-headed like his ma, born March 3 and named Frederic Brown, Jr.

May Day was Sally Hollerith's wedding date. She is Mrs. Erich Nietsche and Pat says "new bride reported very happy."

Dot Denny Sutton was hostess to a bangup alumnae meeting in her new apartment. Pat is president, Ginny Griffith Morton, vice-president, and Dot treasurer. Pretty good for '44! Lucy Lloyd was down to speak and they are all out for the Alumnae Representative plan. There have been no noticeable stirrings here in Memphis on the S. B. front, though many Briarites make the news for weddings and other events. Ellie LaMotte, in Baltimore, seems to be constantly on the go. Pat says she herself is being a wife and mother and getting the house in shape—even dreams of weeds! She's doing some ardent volunteer work too.

Barbie Clark and the rest of the Utleys have been at home in Orange, New Jersey, since early May. I'm looking forward to visiting in that area some time this fall.

A belated that I've just come across in my letter file is the announcement of Murrell Rickards' marriage to Sidney Lingle Bowden in Norfolk on April 23, Phyllis Anderson was her maid of honor and Ellie La Motte and Betty Boyd Farinholt Cockrill were among her bridesmaids. They went to Bermuda for their honeymoon and are living in Norfolk now.

Millie Littleford Camm reports that Virginia Noyes blew in for a 4 hour visit on her way from somewhere to Amherst, but has no other news.

So, my aging chickadees, that closes the book for year number 4 and starts us on our fifth year out in the W.W.W. Please keep me posted on your "catches, matches, hatches, and dispatches" and I'll be corresponding again in the fall.

Fund Agent: AUDREY BETTS, 888 Park Avenue, New York 2, New York.

Pani Matton Williams is in Louisville waiting for Hugh to come home from medical school in Philadelphia. Pani had to go back there early so that she could be waited on—an infected thumb seems to have put her completely out of commission. Let's hope all is well by the time you read this. Pani and Hugh have a little girl, Susan, born August 6, 1947. Pani says she is "cute as a monkey—blonde and blue eyes and very fat."

Jo Livermore Foust worked in Detroit for a year after graduation doing personnel work. In August '46 she married a University of Michigan dental school graduate. For a while last year they lived in Havre de Grace, Maryland, while he was stationed at Bainbridge. At present Fred and Jo are in Philadelphia while he completes his Navy duty. Jo says, "Emancipation Day is set for August 12," after which they expect to return to Ohio or Michigan where Fred will set up his practice.

Susie Landis Lancaster, since the death of her husband in March, has gone with her 2 children, Kathy and Cindy, to Neenah, Wiscousin, where Susie's sister Nancy lives. We all send our sympathy and hope that our few words speak volumes.

Sheilah Moore was in New York with her family for a visit this spring. She spent a wonderful winter in South America. Taylor Reese is going to art school in San Francisco. Lib Hicks, who swore she'd never crack another book after June 1945, attended night school last semester taking something in connection with her job. Pat Carr is Mrs. James Bowie of Los Augeles. Ann Gladney was married to Russell Stevenson Rembert on May 19. They are at home now in New York City.

Lib Love Orth has been in Greensboro since November 1946. Husband Charlie is on the Industrial Relations staff of Burlington Mills. Their son, Christopher William, was born on May 6, 1947. "Chris looks like neither parent, and has bright blue eyes while they both have brown."

Caroline Parrish Seager was in Charlottesville for a while this winter helping her sister through the first stages of motherhood. Husband Bobby will graduate from the University of Newark and then go on to take graduate work preparatory to becoming a professor.

Mary Symes's job as an airline hostess was interrupted this winter by a 3 months' visit to the hospital where she recovered from a punctured lung, a cut arm, and cut tendons in her leg. This quite minimizes Mary's difficulties, but the details are too horrible.

Sage Smith Christie has a darling 1½ year old daughter, Alison. They will go to Cambridge in October with husband Peter for a few years while Peter attends Harvard Business School. He will be taking graduate work in architecture.

Barbara Bourke Stovall and her husband live just down the street from Anne Carter Walker Somerville in Orange, Virginia. Barbara has 2 youngsters, Sherry 3, and David 17 months. Harriet Hazen Schmoellen and Clyde are in Alton, New York. Clyde recently received a promotion so Harriet is retiring from the business world. Huldah Eden Jackson said that she and Haller have been living a very uneventful life in Lexington, Huldah was working in the W. & L. library until April 1. Haller will graduate from law school in October. As yet they are not sure where they will be living but the odds are on Shreveport. Cappy Price Bass, Bruce, and their 21/2 months old son are moving temporarily to Chattanooga. Ann Parsons Davis has a little boy, John, Jr.

Audrey Betts har been outdoing herself again. Housecleaning, along with several volunteer activities such as the American Cancer Fund, opening of the Sloane-Kettering Foundation, 2 parties for wounded veterans, and the St. James Church Bazaar, all in addition to her regular work at the Memorial Hospital with the OR Secretary, has managed to fill her waking hours. In February she took time out to spend 2 weeks at Sweet Briar, riding as much as possible. The liniment bottle was her most faithful companion.

Diddy Gaylord gives a running account of her recent activities. "I stopped working at the Staten Island Day School last November 1, after being an assistant kindergarten teacher for 2 years. Since then I've gotten a new front tooth, barely escaped losing my tonsils, become the godmother of Doreen's darling 7 month old son, Kurt Wetzig, and have done much traveling." Those travels included Pooch Porcher's wedding, a visit with her sister-in-law in Cincinnati, a jaunt to Chicago and one to West Virginia with Nancy Dowd to see Jodie Morgan, McJonkin, and Kagee. The latter two are "mere shadows of their former selves and look very glamourons." Jodie is teaching kindergarten, giving music lessons, and planning a trip to Europe this summer. To continue with Diddy, she left Cincinnati to go to Winchester, Virginia, for 2 weeks and then home again. She hopes to take a Singer sewing course until the day camp where she is to be a counselor opens on July 1.

On behalf of our class I want to extend our deepest sympathy to Mrs. I yman for the recent passing of Dr. Lyman. We all have fond memories of him which we will remember for many years to come.

Class Secretary: DOROTHY CORCORAN, 4545 Ortega Boulevard, Jacksonville, Florida, Fund Agent: DOROTHY SUF CALDWELL, 4707 Bayshore Boulevard, Tampa, Florida.

There are four weddings on the agenda. '46 contributes another crop of June brides! In chronological order they are: Babs Hood and Hugh Sprunt (he's a cousin of Charpert Murchison of Wilmington, N. C.) on June 10 in Memphis. Babs says "Leap year's a wonderful thing!" She reigned, you know, as queen of the famous Cotton Carnival in Memphis from May 9 to 16. Mary Vinton was a princess in the Carnival for the Tennessee Club.

Larry Lawrence will become Madame Jacques Francois Houis on Friday, June 18, in the First Presbyterian Church, Westerville, Ohio. Larry and Jacques will make their home in Paris, France, after the ceremony—she's our cosmopolitan bride.

Wheats Young, on Saturday, June 19, will become Mrs. Douglas Call, Jr., in a ceremony at her mother's home in Wethersfield, Connecticut. Doug was a U. of Va. man.

Ellen Robbins will become the bride of David Donglas Red in Houston, Texas, on July 7, 1 believe. The news of Ellen's engagement came when she was in Miami for Crutcher Field's wedding in April. David is in architect, and Ellen's ex-boss! They'll live in Houston. Helen Murchison and Crutcher will be attendants.

Barbara Hood told me that Hallie Tom Nivon Powell and husband Jack are planning a trip to Canada, taking in Banff, Lake Louise, etc. Also on the travel list are Dottie Soe Caldwell and Helen Murchison who sail for Europe on July 16 on the Queen Elizabeth. They plan to see Alice Eubank in Switzerland. She has been traveling in Europe for some time now and may be in school now, but I'm not positive.

Moe and Dick Schley became the proud parents of a daughter, Margaret Christian, on April 23 in New York City. They have bought a home in Westfield, N. J., and will move in after July 1. Dick is a pediatrician in that city with Dr. Daniel Hackett.

A note from Virginia Wynne revealed that she was awarded the Master's degree in English from the University of Louisville in January. She's now doing volunteer work at a crippled children's hospital, taking sewing lessons, and teaching one afternoon a week in the remedial laboratory of the University. Sounds like a busy and interesting life!

Jean Carter is secretary to the beauty editor of either Vogue or Harpers Bazaar—not sure which. I learned this from Ernie Banker when she was down last week for Fanny Ulmer's wedding. So many people from '47 were here for the wedding that Jacksonville looked like the Sweet Briar campus—a very nice sensation considering that I haven't seen the original for 2 years.

Now for some news re the job of class secretary. It's long been my fondest wish that the job could be passed around alphabetically among all the class members, each taking it for say, a year. In this way the work would be divided and all groups heard from perhaps more often than they are now. Some other schools do their class notes in this way and I think it would be fine for the class of '46. What do you all think of it? Write the Alumoi Secretary at school if you think it would be a good idea.

That's a preamble to more news along the same lines. Ariana Jones has consented with pleasure to be my successor, and I'm sure she'll carry all of us along at an even faster and more informative pace than I have. In the foture address your letters to her at 8 Greenholm, Princeton, New Jersey.

I've certainly enjoyed being class secretary for two years and just because I'm "retiring" doesn't mean I don't want to hear from all of you just as often. If my idea of rotating the secretaryship is approved, you may be hearing from me again before too many years go by!

Lots of good wishes and a pleasant summer to all of you!

1947

Class Secretary: Sallie Bailey, 430 North Bloomt Street, Raleigh, North Carolina.

Fund Agent: Frances Gardner, 6225 Powhatan Avenue, Norfolk 8, Virginia.

So many of you sent me such wonderful letters that 1 just don't know where to begin. We've acquired lots of husbands and babies!

"Birdhead" White is going to Europe! She sails on June 24. When she returns I hope she will send me a full report of her adventures to publish in the next news letter. Mary Lib Jones is also going abroad this summer.

"Birdhead" wrote me about Fannie Ulmer's wedding, which she, Saravette Royster, Helen Murchison, Tody Corcoran, Laura Lee Grogan, and Kay Weisiger attended. Gene Hooper, Cecil Butler, Blair Burwell and Ernie Banker were bridesmaids. I don't see how Fannie got married with that Sweet Briar reunion going on.

Speaking of weddings, Nat Hall married Dan Chisholm on June 5. Dan is a decorator and they will make their home in Erie. During the past year Nat has been doing social work with the Family and Child Service of Erie, along with Junior League.

Jean Hazlehurst will marry Malcolm Saouel Cone, Jr., of Memphis on June 29. They will live in Atlanta where Sam is an engineering student at Georgia Tech. Jean has been doing religious education work and plans to continue in that field after her marriage.

Julia Holt's wedding took place on June 5—to "Chook," of course, that is, George Coyle. Liz Ripley and Inez Rosamond were bridesmaids and Carol Blanton McCord planned to attend. Julia, in her letter, also informed me that Sara Ann McMullen is doing social work in Alexandria and has a very attractive private office.

Ginger Barron is engaged to Lloyd Summer of Cherryville, North Carolina, a recent graduate of Duke University. The wedding is planned for early October. She is now cramming (as usual) for her comprehensive in cooking. Ginger writes that Betsy Anderson was married last October to Francis Churchill Bouvrue, Jr. Ginger's fiance is Betsy's cousin. Ginger also wrote that Irish Munter Derr had a daughter on St. Patrick's Day, named Patricia Jean. The Derrs are living in Puerto Rico.

Liz Ripley and Mush Tucker, like myself, are still in the throes of shorthand. Ann Colston finished her business course and is working for the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Marna Bromberg Williams sent a welcome letter giving the following information: Shirley Gunter is married to Billy Rateliff of Birmingham. Billy was an honor graduate of W. & L. Marna took a vacation in Florida in April as she had to recuperate from graduating from college, getting married, taking a sewing course, and adding a son to her family. The new arrival is Charles Crawford Williams, Ir.

Blair Burwell is taking a medical technician's course, and Ernie Banker is editing comic books, which sounds like a delightful job to me.

Jean Old, Margie Redfern, Martha Smith, and a friend have made exciting plans for a tour this summer of the United States, Canada, and Mexico. They will be on the road July, August, and September, and they are traveling in Jean's "Little Gray Wabbitt." They are camping en route and are planning to visit friends here and there along the way, so, class, get out your welcome mats and brush off the living room sofas. So far, they have made plans to visit Patsy Camblos Gutthall, Ginger Barron, Alice Reese Edens, and Janet Amilon Wagner. Any of you living in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, who would like a one-night stand with these travelers, contact Jean Old and she will gladly schedule a visit with you.

Finally I got a letter from Jackie Murray Hale, and that is an accomplishment. She and Newell are attending Hobart College. Newell as a student, and Jackie is an enthusiastic member of the Hobart Campus Characters basketball team.

I'm impressed by all the things accomplished since graduation and I'm having a wonderful time keeping op with you all!

Good Work Alumnae! YOU HAVE WAKED UP

by Dr. Mary K. Benedict

DURING the past two years a treatise has been written. Its subject is "Alumnae Look at Their College." One volume has been completed, and a second volume is planned.

In the make up of Volume I, I wrote the preface just two years ago. Actually, though not in such form, Miss Lucas wrote the introduction. Sweet Briar administrators outlined the chapters. You alumnae planned the method of work, furnished the material, and did the writing. Sue Slaughter did the editing, this magazine did the publishing. I am privileged to write a postscript. This is a sort of critical review.

This volume started out to be a discussion of Sweet Briar's educational policies—an evaluation of the work of the college in terms of what it has meant to you, and as the most important part of that, what you think about your Alma Mater as a force in strengthening citizenship in our democracy.

Miss Lucas wrote the introduction—not as a single article, but in several places—at different times. Her position was summed up in her letter to you alumnae written at Christmas time, 1947. Because of the very inspiring challenge to you which this letter contains, I want to present it to you again here. I quote: "Sweet Briar's student body has always been composed of 'natural leaders,' selected for qualities of mental aptitudes, moral strength, and physical health. We want to know from you to what extent this college served to develop those qualities in such a way as to enable you to give your home, your community, your country and your world the thoughtful and responsible leadership so greatly needed by all . . . Whatever your opinion may be, we do very much want to know.

"These are desperate days we are living through; and they are days when humanity is looking to the forces of education for its very survival. It is time to take stock of ourselves, to re-examine our purposes, and re-valuate our means to these ends. Already we at Sweet Briar are launched upon a discussion program preparatory to adjusting our curriculum and our teaching procedures to meet the challenge of these times.

"And at the autumn meeting of your Alumnae Council, your representatives expressed keen interest in the possibility of organizing an alumnae group to work with the faculty on this important question of educational policy. Working together, we can, I believe, make some quite important decisions for the future of this College, and more importantly, through you and your forth-coming fellow-alumnae, for the future of the world."

I am putting these words of Miss Lucas before you again because it seems to me very important not to drop the primary and fundamental purpose of the formation of the discussion groups—no matter in what directions in the wide field of education you may elect to carry on your organized alumnae work. This alumnae-faculty relationship that has strengthened the ties to the college must be held onto.

There are many centrifugal forces that act as time goes on to take alumnae away from the college orbit. I will enumerate a few of them. (1) Time and space. (2) Life's responsibilities. (3) Adulthood. (College years are late adolescence years and slip away as we leave that period.) (4) The non-academic world in which we live. (College life and work are still in some measure carried on in the groves of Academus.) (5) The fact that our alma maters call on us for more money gifts than we can give them. (6) The fact that alma maters tend to be like parents regarding their children—always older and wiser, and alumnae are blocked a little by feeling that this is so.

There are centripetal forces, too, which draw alumnae to the college, and there could be just so many enumerated. But they are of lesser force if left to operate spontaneously. They have great power, however, if they are used.

The greatest centripetal force, it seems to me, is the enduring part of the four years, or less, of the experience which the alumna did not leave behind her when she left but took with her. I think she feels when she leaves that what she takes with her is as cut off from the college as she is separated in time and space. I think we alumnae tend to stress as connecting links with the college certain things that seemed terribly important when we were in college, but that are not important later in the same way. These are such things as "love and loyalty" to our college; "class spirit" which is appealed to by our fund agent who hopes to get a 100 per cent gift from our class; a beautiful dream that our "college years are the happiest years" of our lives.

What should be used to keep us in touch with our college, and probably is not so used, is an awareness that college gave us certain powers—made us the sort of adults we are today—and that, of course, means that our college and ourselves are akin. In planning our alumnae work we as alumnae should get together with the college in thinking, planning, working at present problems, purposes, and plans. College, too, should reach out and understand and receive alumnae as adults who can now see what college did for them and can now report how well the gains of the four years have stood the acid test of past college years.

The discussions between the Alumnae Council and the faculty made a splendid beginning in bringing into play the most helpful forces that can hold alumnae to the college.

In February, 1947, the organized project took shape. The Alumnae Council met at Sweet Briar with representatives of the faculty. It was clear that the first matter of interest was what was actually going on at Sweet Briar today. As graduates you must necessarily see Sweet Briar in relation to what it did for you, but you must know it as it is today. So you took up the interesting plan of getting an over all picture of Sweet Briar's policies. The college is a Liberal Arts College, and Miss Lucas told you of its educational aims. Its curriculum is planned to achieve these educational aims, and Dean Lyman told you about that. Every college has to choose its students, and Mrs. Lill told how they are selected. Guidance was discussed by Miss Muncy.

You concerned yourselves, then, with Sweet Briar's educational activities as they are today. And it was really something new for alumnae to come back to college and have a sense of belonging—not to the class trees and box bushes that have grown so big, but to the college at work—and not at work as it was in 1910, 1920, 1930, 1940—but as it is in 1947-48.

So Volume I closed. There were four chapters which expressed your views on the material about Sweet Briar that was presented to you. These were summarized after having been written in your separate groups. Chapters I and II were summarized in October, 1947, in the article "Speaking for Ourselves." Chapter III appeared as "Go Choose the East, Go Choose the West" in February, 1948, and Chapter IV as "He that is Wise Hearkeneth unto Counsel," June, 1948.

Now is to come Volume II. What has come from Volume I as a starter for Volume II?

In the Council meeting last Commencement, which I was privileged to attend, it was announced that your plan is to go on with discussions in your groups and that your special concern was to be education—in particular education as it is carried on in your various communities. This, of course, takes you into a new field. You turn from thinking about college, or so called higher education, to secondary and probably, too, primary education.

Out of your two years of discussion then has come a start in a new direction. The study of the field of college work has brought with it an awareness of education in a broad sense. You have waked up to the importance of education as a big social force. And isn't it a most gratifying experience to find as we become better acquainted with Sweet Briar, that the college is stressing the social import and application of its work?

You have taken from the contact with Sweet Briar the fact that the forces that work for education need your help—education needs you—right where you are—in your own communities. You realize that this field offers you something that you can do in an organized way.

I noticed this trend in your thought when I read these words written by Amelia Hollis Scott in the News of February, 1948, Letters to the Editor. "I think that some of our Sweet Briar alumnae who have been "in on" all the plans and discussion groups have failed to realize that, while the ultimate goal of primary and secondary education is a college education, the over all purpose of these discussions on education was to arouse our interest in education itself—with all its many phases and problems. We have discussed the goals to which a college education strives, the making of good citizens, and then the tools (courses) with which it works, and then we have discovered, through our discussions, our inadequacies of preparation for college and how widespread these inadequacies are.

"If we could persuade, cajole, insist or by some other means, interest our alumnae groups in their local and state educational set up, perhaps we could, not as Sweet Briar alumnae, but as fortunate people with a Liberal Arts training, make our influence felt in demanding higher standards for our public schools, better teachers, better salaries, and more opportunities for groups of varied intelligence."

I should like to quote that whole letter and several other letters in that and other numbers of the News.

As individuals you express yourselves in these letters—but you must put these ideas to work through your organization. That you will do so, I have no doubt. Having had a taste of something serious and worth while to do in your clubs, I don't believe you would be satisfied to go back to having purely social or purely money raising purposes.

In the News of April, 1948, you published an article "Re Housewives" by Henrietta Owens, whom I knew well as an undergraduate at Connecticut College. What she says fits into your thoughts and procedures. She feels the need of organized effort. She suggests that housewives could make a mighty band to help to better education. That would take some organizing. You are already organized as alumnae and you are many of you housewives, so you can go right at it.

I am all for your getting at the matter of the education of children—yours and other peoples, and helping to better the sorry state of our secondary and primary schools. But I think it would be very unfortunate to drop the sort of thing you have already started. I think that you could maintain a line of work that holds your interest in college education and at the same time carry on the study of education in the schools. So I would like to ask you—are you going to stop thinking about college education? Are you going to stop thinking about and discussing what Sweet Briar is doing toward training its students for citizenship?

Consider these things. For one thing, you spent quite a good deal of time in getting acquainted with Sweet Briar from the inside—with its purposes, plans, and procedures. And you gained some things of much value. You gained a renewed contact with the college that you love, and this has brought a closer and more vital acquaintance with it as it is today. Friendship with your college must go on as does human friendship by continuing companionship and sharing of experience. This better understanding that has come between alumnae and the college should not be stopped, but should be cherished and fostered.

For another thing, you gained a new relationship to the college. You have said at various times and places that you have felt that the college has received you on an equal footing, so to speak, in viewing the problems of college work. You looked at these along with those who are carrying it on. They have wanted your companionship and help in the task before them. You don't want to lose this relationship.

Again, the faculty and administration have realized that you have a special vantage point—a point of view from which you can evaluate the college work. You are on the outside, looking in. Those at the college are inside it, looking out. You need to go in and look out from the College windows again, and you can point out the places where you live and work. You have been welcomed inside. Do go on inside the college halls and not outside the ivied walls. Miss Lucas and the Faculty invited you in. You went in and looked around. Didn't you like it well enough to stay a long time? They wanted your companionship and your help in the task before them. Don't let them down.

On page 2 of the News for June, 48, Miss Lucas brings together a number of points which she has found expressed in the summaries of your discussions. Those of you who are planning the program of club discussions and activities would do well to study what you have done from the standpoint of what your President has found in it.

It is my impression that your last year's work is not finished from the standpoint of making your contributions. I wonder if the Faculty feel sure just what your position is—as a group, or a majority of the group—in regard to the problems considered. It has reached the point where "some think this" and "some think that," but not yet "we, after careful consideration, feel this way—and (you might add) a minority report brings this other conviction." Only with a majority group behind an idea or conviction does it have force.

I wonder if you could, as a group, express some convictions to be handed directly to the Faculty? Does the work you have done just stand as published in your magazine where it is read by those interested?

I trust that you will select important points from Chapters I-IV to be followed up and discussed with the Faculty. If you could have two meetings a year continuing this contact with the college it would be very rewarding in strengthening the college—alumnae relationship.

You will find, as you start to study the work of the schools in your communities that coming events cast their shadows before. The college years influence the work of the earlier years in many ways. College entrance requirements determine the curricula in secondary schools. Your acquaintance with the Sweet Briar entrance requirements and selection of students will enable you to help with the plans of better school work. And when you work in the field of secondary education, you will be better able to plan for the bringing together of the college and secondary courses.

Many of the questions you discussed in Volume I will have more meaning and the answers will become more clear to you as you concern yourself with education during the earlier years of life.

In starting to work with the schools in your communities you will find already organized the Parent-Teacher Associations. Some of you are probably members of such associations. Your key note should be cooperation with the existing organizations. They have plenty of plans and activities that need you. Where there are not such groups you can organize them—call them by any name that is suggested—a Citizen's Committee has been very successful in one neighborhood in New York.

Probably the outstanding needs that will strike you will be in the environmental side. And you could not work in a more important field than the environmental influences—which include not only surroundings of a material and aesthetic sort, but environmental influences that are planned with special thought as to how the pupil will react to them. Here is a quotation from a great educator. "The only way in which adults consciously control the kind of education which the immature get is by controlling the environment in which they act—and hence think and feel. We never educate directly, but indirectly by means of the environment . . . Schools remain, of course, the typical instance of environments framed with express reference to influencing the mental and moral dispositions of their members."

YOU CAN HELP!

by Polly Boze Glascock, '40

EDITOR'S NOTE: It is our wish to point out from time to time worthwhile activities in which women, especially housewives, can participate. Polly Boze Glascock, '40, last year's president of Richmond Alumnae, is now serving as president of the Richmond Chapter of the A. A. U. W., and has recently been asked to join the National Women's Committee of the Save the Children Federation. Students and other members of the Sweet Briar community have long actively aided the Federation.

This past year $1,300 was sent to the Ecole Maternelle Balard after being converted into food and clothing.

TFEEL sure that all of you know that the student body of Sweet Briar "adopted" a school in France several years ago through the Save the Children Federation. We are all interested in their project and are proud of them for their contribution to the rehabilitation of devastated Europe.

There is a way in which you too, as mothers, house-keepers, church or alumnae club workers, may help. The Save the Children Federation has inaugurated a layette campaign to help mothers in Europe whose babies will very probably enter a world of dire poverty. Thousands of babies are born whose mothers are absolutely unable to make any preparation for them in the way of suitable clothes. Babies are wrapped in old rags, paper garments, in old flour and sugar sacks, perhaps a worn coat or shawl—any makeshift. Unless they get the opportunity for warmth and cleanliness, their outlook seems hopeless.

All layette items are urgently needed. Especially welcome are blankets, diapers, towels, shorts and wool sacques, caps and bootees. Used articles, if clean and in good condition, are most acceptable. Why not pack up the clothes your baby is no longer using and mail them to the Save the Children Federation? They would be more than welcome in France, Greece, Finland, or Holland, not to mention in isolated rural areas in the United States.

Cut-out flannelette layette garments are available without charge at the Federation headquarters. Church groups or sewing circles should find this a most worthwhile project to undertake. Since the Federation is a welfare organization, it is greatly appreciated when individuals and groups pay the cost of materials. $2.00 covers the cost of six layette garments. $10.00 will provide a complete layette and contributions of any amount will help. Checks should be drawn to Save the Children Federation, enclosed in a letter designating the project and country for which the gift is intended. Address checks and correspondence to Mrs. Edith W. Voris, Director of Women's Service Projects, Save the Children Federation, 1 Madison Avenue, New York 10, New York.

MME. BARKER pictured with a group of French children during her visit abroad this summer.

A word about the Save the Children Federation. It was organized and incorporated in 1932 to assist in the relief, care of health, education and general welfare of children without regard to race or creed, and since that time its services have reached over 150,000 children in the United States and overseas. In the United States the program is conducted in rural areas of eight states through 135 county committees which help to provide such essentials as school lunches, low-cost clothing, babies' garments and supplies, children's books, health services, recreation materials and school desks. The Federation maintains 17 Area offices with qualified Area Directors to supervise and administer the program.

During World War II, SCF activities were extended overseas, and many thousands of youngsters have been aided by service programs gradually withdrawn as need diminished. The Federation maintains an office in Paris, and in other countries the projects are administered under SCF supervision by responsible welfare organizations or governmental agencies. Many of the overseas welfare organizations are affiliated with the International Union for Child Welfare, which has members in 34 countries. The Federation is its United States members. SCF is also a member of the American Council of Voluntary Agencies for Foreign Service, Inc. Its director is Dr. John R. Voris, and among its national sponsors are Raymond E. Baldwin, U. S. Senator of Connecticut, Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, former Dean of Barnard College, Herbert Hoover, General Brehon B. Somervell, Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, President of University of California, and Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, D.D., former presiding Bishop Protestant Episcopal Church.

Alumnae and the Library

by Tyler Gemmell, Librarian

Miss Gemmell has come back to work in her native Virginia after service at Vassar and New Jersey College for Women. She is a graduate of Randolph-Macon and holds a B.S. and M.S. from Columbia.

IT IS universally accepted now that the college library is one of the most vital centers in any educational institution. The day of textbook instruction has long since passed. With its passing and with the present emphasis on teaching students to educate themselves, the library's importance has been enormously increased. The library is no longer a storehouse of books to which students come for irregular cellateral reading to supplement textbooks. It is now more like a laboratory where students begin and continue work on problems either suggested or assigned by their professors. Colleges have finally caught up with Professor Justin Winsor's ideal "proposition . . . to make the library the grand rendezvous of the college for teacher and pupil alike." Professor Winsor wrote these words in 1880 when he was working in the Harvard College Library.

This change of emphasis has had a most beneficial effect on college libraries. It calls for alert staff members who are able to give intelligent counsel in assisting members of the college community. Considerable informal teaching in the field of bibliography is expected of librarians who assist at the Reference Desk. Most important of all, a carefully selected and well rounded book collection is now more necessary than ever to keep up with the rapid advances in all fields of knowledge.

How does this concern the alumnae? The fact that some of you have had a part in the most vital feature of the library, that of helping to build up the book stock, has led to the writing of this paper.

Periodical Room

ALUMNAE GIFTS

In reviewing the results of my first year of work in the Mary Helen Cochran Library, I have found myself becoming more and more excited about the gifts that have come from individual alumnae. These gifts in every case came as happy surprises to us. In some instances we knew from the donor that the books were on the way; in others, the books arrived with a card or with an inscription that gave a delightful personal touch to the gift.

This has happened to the library without any attempt on the part of the Alumnae Association or the Library Staff to solicit gifts. The books have been sent to the college because of a continuing interest in the institution. While it would be impossible to list here all of the gifts that have been sent from alumnae, I do wish to describe two recent acquisitions.

Isabelle Deming Ellis, ex '23, of Caracas, Venezuela, had expressed a desire to give to the library some of the outstanding books on Latin America for the Browsing Room. At her request, we sent Mrs. Ellis a list of the Browsing Room's holdings on this subject. She has already had a bookseller in this country supply us with twelve volumes dealing with various aspects of travel, literature, art, music, and biography of Spanish America. Not only is this a particularly timely subject but it is also exactly what is needed to keep the Browsing Room collection a lively one. There are neither endowment funds nor library budget money available for books in this collection. We are dependent on the generosity of college friends and alumnae to keep this group of books for recreational reading up-to-date. The other gift has a double interest in that the donor is not only an alumna of Sweet Briar but is also a granddaughter of the late Fergus Reid who gave the Mary Helen Cochran Library building in memory of his mother. Marguerite de Lustrac, '47, on her visit to this country last March, sent to the library twenty volumes of modern French prose. It seems to me that gifts such as these are a very healthy sign and that they should receive a general acknowledgement as well as the individual letters that we send to the donors.

FRIENDS OF THE LIBRARY

In connection with what is happening at Sweet Briar, you may be interested in learning of what other college libraries are doing. Many institutions now have a loosely organized group called Friends of the Library. Anyone may sign a Friends of the Library card and join the group, whether it is that of his own college library or that of another institution in which he has become interested. There are generally no dues, no meetings, no detailed duties. All that is really asked by the library is that the Friends give support through their interest and by visits when possible. What actually happens is that the Friends often become so fascinated by the library that they not only give generously themselves but also keep an eye out for book collectors and other persons interested in books who might be potential donors if appreached in the right manner at an appropriate time. The Friends of the Library is not in any sense whatsoever an organization to beg for the institution. It is for those who are genuinely interested in books and people. It is tremendously respectable.

ENDOWMENT FUNDS

Many libraries have at their disposal certain endowment funds which have been established for the purchase of books in special subject fields. Sometimes these funds are given in honor of a professor, of a college president, or of a former student. In most cases they are funds which are increased from time to time by additional gifts. Among many such funds at Vassar, for instance, there are two that are particularly noteworthy. The Storer Fund which has a substantial income is designated each year to a different department for expenditure for books in that subject. This means that the fortunate department having the income from the Storer Fund may make purchases of expensive reference sets and additions of background material without going heavily into the regular departmental appropriation. Another interesting fund at Vassar is called the Librarian's Fund. This is used at the discretion of the librarian for certain important works that should be part of the library's collection but may be too general in interest or too expensive to be brought from departmental funds.

At Sweet Briar College there are at the present time three endowment funds for library books. Part of the income from the Carry Nature Sanctuary Fund is used for books and periodicals on nature study and wild life. As you know, this gift was made to Sweet Briar in 1936 by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Carry of Chicago, parents of an alumna, Margaret Carry Durland, in memory of their son, Charles William Carry. In 1944, the Alumnae Association established the Jean Myers Fund, the income of which is to be used for the purchase of books pertaining to the Interdepartmental major, Revolution and Romanticism. The Helen Cole Worthington Fund, established in 1941, by Professor Hugh S. Worthington in memory of his wife, is to provide income for books in the field of the romance languages.

ALUMNAE PUBLICATIONS

All colleges are intensely interested in publications of their alumnae. This interest is not at all a sentimental one. There is actually a very real desire on the part of the administration and faculty to see the visible result of their teaching efforts. Your published works show this as definitely as your professional accomplishments or your community activities. All colleges also make some effort to collect publications of their alumnae. Since the logical spot for housing such a collection is in the library, the librarian is one of the most interested members of your public.

In the Mary Helen Cochran Library there are very few of your writings. At the present time, these are not kept together in one place, but are classified where they will be most used. I should like to see this collection grow. Eventually it should be kept together in one room.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

First of all, come in to see the library when you visit the campus. If you cannot visit the campus, write your Alumnae Secretary to tell her what you liked or disliked in the library during your college days. We feel that your interest and encouragement is vital to us at all times.

It does not seem necessary to organize a Friends of the Library for Sweet Briar. Each alumna who has a continuing interest in her alma mater can name herself a Friend of the Library. From time to time we will keep you informed of new developments and new opportunities for service through the Alumnae News.

And above all, please do not forget us when you break into print. We will cherish your works as carefully as if they were our own.

Your Vote is Your Voice

by Mrs. Gerhard Suhling

Mrs. Suhling, the former Mary Stamps White of Charlottesville, is the president of the Virginia League of Voters, and saw service overseas in England and France for the Red Cross. She and her husband, who is a member of Sweet Briar's Board of Overseers, live at "Edgehill" in Amherst County.

"Why should I bother to vote, one vote more or less won't make any difference." Haven't you often heard people say just that and mean it? But your vote does matter, it matters very much, not only for the obvious reason that, if many people felt the same way, we would soon have a minority who were electing the men and women who make our laws, but statistically your vote counts. In 1944, for example, one Missouri congressman was elected by a margin of 300 votes with 63,000 qualified voters in his district staying away from the polls.

Many American men and women do not bother to use one of their most precious possessions—their right to their say-so in how they shall be governed. With the elimination of free suffrage in so many countries of the world today, your vote should seem all the more valuable.

American women have done conscientious welfare work in their communities throughout the land, in Red Cross, Community Chests, on hospital boards, through Junior Leagues, women's clubs and other organized groups, but many of them have failed to realize that much of the power for social reform today lies in government. Are the sanitary conditions in your town bad? What is your Health Department doing about them? Do you feel that your child's education at his elementary school is inadequate? What steps is your School Board taking to improve your local school? And, by the way, what kind of men and women are on your school board and how did they get there? Did you elect them or did you elect the people who appointed them? Did you bother to register and vote for the men and women who are making decisions about your child's education?

When women begin asking themselves these questions, there are some who say, "But I don't want to get mixed up in politics—it's a man's game and it's a dirty game." But politics is one game where you're counted in whether you like it or not. If you don't play your own hand, someone else will play it for you and possibly not to your liking. Isn't it better that you roll up your sleeves and get into this game to make your voice heard?

"What," you may ask, "should the American woman who has been fortunate enough to have received a good education, do about politics?" First, she should register and pay her poll tax. Secondly, she should find out what the issues are in the election and inform herself as best she can about them. Next, she should learn all she can about the men running for office and how they stand on these issues. Here is where the League of Women Voters can be of great service to her, for the League submits questionnaires to candidates asking their stand on issues facing the community, the state and the nation. Then, finally, when election day comes, the voter should go to the polls and vote for the man or woman she considers best qualified to do the job in hand.

But the obligation of the educated woman does not end here. She should keep herself informed of the action taken by the men she has helped elect, write to them to tell them how she feels about governmental problems they are facing, congratulate them when they have acted wisely in the public interest, encourage them when they undertake measures for the public good, publicize those measures. If she wants to join forces with other women interested in their community, she may work with her local League of Women Voters on local, state or national level, reading their bulletins which show both sides of an issue, or taking part in a Discussion Group, doing her part to "let the people know, make the people care, help the people act."

Politics? After all, what does that word really mean? The art of government, some say, or isn't it really just "acting together to get something done about a common problem?"

SOMETHING OLD, SOMETHING NEW

by Dr. Carrolle E. Anderson

Dr. Anderson is chairman of the Committee on Personnel besides holding an assistant professorship of Biology. Botany is her chosen field, but personnel work is also of vital interest to her.

IN OUR college Catalogue is the following statement: "Sweet Briar is at present engaged in making a general liberal education as rich and valuable as possible to the young women who are preparing to serve their generation." Surely, this is nothing new at Sweet Briar. To this total effort the Committee on Personnel has been trying to make its contribution by promoting an intelligent interest, knowledge and understanding of the world of work, and possible Jobs and Futures for women. Nor is this anything new, but some of the work and plans of the committee are not an old story and perhaps you would like to know more about the committee's activities during the past year.

First, a word about the Committee on Personnel. It is composed of six faculty members and from twelve to fourteen student members, depending upon the semester, since only two freshmen are chosen during the second semester of their first year. Two more from that class are chosen the following fall so that then there are four members of each of the three upper classes. This joint faculty and student committee meets once every month. A faculty member is chairman but there is a student co-chairman, and many activities are relegated to the student group under her direction.

It has been suggested that the name of the committee is misleading or not inclusive enough, but that it be changed to Committee on Personnel and Vocational Guidance. This is a more accurate designation, covering our various activities, and a request for change of name has been submitted to President Lucas.

Perhaps our greatest need has been for a personnel office, and in the spring of 1947 we were allowed the use of one of the rooms in the Library, and now with our files, some office equipment and materials, and our own telephone extension, the office is "functional." Beginning early in January this year we have kept certain regular office hours on three days a week, and other appointments by arrangement.

Our files have been brought up to date, and contain bulletins, pamphlets and various brochures on all sorts of jobs and careers. Considerable new material was sent for this year, and an effort was made to increase the variety and sources of material in fields in which many students seem particularly interested, and to increase the materials in certain fields not well covered. All the vocational books in the Library have been brought together on library shelves in the reading room just outside the personnel office. One of our plans for the coming year is to add current material to this collection and we have been allotted a small budget for the purchase of such books.

Early last fall we started a student vocational card index. On these cards are recorded a student's work experience, to date, if any, and whether volunteer or paid; her vocational preferences for jobs after graduation, if she is a senior and wishes to work. These cards also have space for recording the various visits of a student to the office, the nature of her inquiries, and references or advice given her each time. Many students did make use of our regular office hours, and the files with pamphlet material were available for student use whenever the Library was open. When material in a given field was not found, the student notified us, and this information assisted in determining what was most needed or should be sent for.

The committee sponsored a convocation on Summer Jobs, as it has done several times in the past. Three students spoke about their experiences during the summer and it was an interesting program. This year we have planned to have a sort of Information Program, about what the committee is and does, or to clarify the purpose and functions of the committee, and to tell something of its program for the coming year.

In January, a bulletin prepared by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor (1947) on Your Job Future After College was mailed to every student at Sweet Briar. There is a great deal of good information and common sense in this bulletin and students were very much interested. This, and the establishment of regular office hours really opened our "spring campaign."

A series of bulletin board displays were arranged in Gray, with a new one every week or ten days, from January through May. A student member of the committee was responsible for ferreting out information and putting up the displays which were varied in method and arrangement. Student resourcefulness, ingenuity and good judgment were outstanding so that the displays were both attractive and well aimed for getting across major points. The subjects of the displays were chosen because of student vocational preferences as indicated on their cards, and they covered certain aspects of Teaching, Graduate Work, Journalism and Magazine Writing, International and Foreign Services (Non-Governmental), Summer Jobs, Government Services, Business and Clerical Careers, Marriage and/or Other Careers, Social Work and Public Welfare, Personnel Work and Psychology, Nursing, Medicine and Allied Careers, Jobs in the Arts, and Community Services.

Perhaps our major activity was a series of five career panels and a forum, conducted during the spring. For each panel or forum there was a student chairman who volunteered because of her interest in the particular field, two other student members, and one faculty or staff member who served in advisory capacity. The student group made arrangements for the speakers, attended to publicity, hospitality-in other words they planned the panels and did the work! Each panel was intended not to exceed an hour, with two or occasionally three people participating, followed by a period for questions from the floor and individual conferences if desired. In choosing our speakers an attempt was made whenever possible to secure one alumna for each panel. The other members were chosen to cover different aspects of work in the given field as well as to present various viewpoints about careers in this field. The first panel was in March, on Journalism. April was a full month with a panel on Foreign and Domestic Government Services sponsored jointly with the International Relations Club; A Marriage Forum with addresses, discussion groups and individual conferences lasting for three days and sponsored jointly with the Personal Growth Commission of the Y. W. C. A.; and finally a panel on Social Work and Public Welfare. In May there were two panels, one on Nursing and Allied Fields, and the other on Jobs in Music and the Arts.

The panels and forum were well attended and we feel that they were quite successful. Our plans for the coming year involve having panels in other fields, to begin earlier in the year, and to be more widely and evenly distributed.

Many students indicated an interest in aptitude testing, so the committee sponsored and arranged for two this year. The Moss Teaching Aptitude Test was administered to sixty-five students (forty of these were seniors!). In connection with our continuing effort to interest outstanding students in teaching, it might be of interest to note here that we secured for our files the requirements, salary schedules, and considerable other information from the Departments of Education of forty-six states (requests went to the others but material was not received). Strong Vocational Interest Tests were administered to thirty-three students. The committee hopes to do more adequate work in this field of vocational testing, and to arrange for such tests earlier in the year than was possible this time.

Each year many "visiting representatives" visit campus. Sometimes they came unsolicited, and frequently we are not notified of their intentions long enough in advance to do well by them or by themselves. With our card indices and knowledge of student interests, together with the valuable experience this past year, we hope to be able to interest a wider variety and a larger number of agencies and institutions in sending representatives to Sweet Briar College, and at well arranged intervals.

Not the least of our activities was the planning for the coming year. A sub-committee including both faculty and student members worked on a new budget and other recommendations which were submitted to President Lucas. We recommended that the administration consider arrangements for a trained personnel and placement worker, for at least part time, this coming year. It is the feeling of this committee that a Personnel and Placement Officer is very much needed and that her work should be tied in with alumnae work, because every student who comes to the Personnel Office for assistance is a potential alumna, and alumnae interest could be very important in our placement. We requested, and received, a larger budget in view of the need for further office equipment, books, and the expenses of panel speakers.

Many of the jobs of the Personnel Committee, not all of which have been enumerated here, have involved voluntary contributions of considerable time and effort, and in this mere recording of our efforts there is no indication of our enthusiasm and the satisfactions of the work. We do know that a great deal of interest has been aroused on campus and that student response was most gratifying. The number of students who were actually helped and how much we on the committee have to learn, are unknown quantities, but it was such a worthwhile year!

The committee would welcome alumnae suggestions and criticisms, and we would appreciate it very much if you would send or tell us of any vocational literature or information which Sweet Briar students would find useful. We are just beginning—and our hopes are high!

A Letter from Dr. Harley

My dear Alumnae:

Last spring while I was still with Mrs. Kash's daughter Fern at Charlottesville, Virginia, I got a letter from an old friend, the curator of the Transvaal Museum at Pretoria, South Africa, enclosing an account of his recent discoveries in Sterkfontein caves nearby, the same caves where he made his historical discoveries some ten years past and which had brought me to Pretoria in 1938 and 1939. To see the original fossils is always so much more vivid and interesting than any casts, no matter how carefully made.

Dr. Robert Broom is a Scotchman of sorts about 11 months younger than myself. He is an M.D. of Glascow University, Doctor of Science and Doctor of Laws of several universities, Scotch and American and South African, fellow of the Royal Society of London and Edinborough. He has been to America several times and knows all the big anthropologists here in America including my friend Dr. William K. Gregory of the American Museum of Natural History in New York, where I spent the five years between 1940 and '46. Dr. Broom is the great authority on the mammal-like reptiles of the Karroo, which was the subject of his first great book, followed by several others on his studies of what has been called "missing links" and on the results of his blastings in Sterkfontein caves and Krmdraal and other places.

The creature, more human than ape, was about four feet high, ran on his hind legs, used his arms and hands to throw sticks and stones and to kill, hunting in packs small animals which he ate raw—long before knowledge of fire. His brain capacity was 350 to 450 cc, about that of the gorilla. Dr. Broom has everything but the sacrum and the head of the Radius and some finger and toe bones. If you still deny you are an animal, there is no use. They have "the goods."

The American expedition under Dr. Camp of California University and his helper, Dr. Peabody, have been down there as you know, looking for more evidence and fossils to bring home. They are on their way home after their year in South Africa.

I went freight boat to Dakar on the African coast, from there to Johannesburg by plane and took a taxi at 2 a. m., November 25, 1947, for Pretoria (35 miles) and lived at the Residency Hotel which in Pretoria is 2½ blocks from the Transvaal Museum—went there nearly every day and spent my time chipping fossils out of the very hard matrix, and doing it not too well. Dr. Broom does all the valuable ones himself and is a wizard at it. He will be coming to New York next spring and will have his head-quarters at the American Museum of Natural History with Dr. William K. Gregory. I hope he will lecture on the subject. If he does and you are near enough, go and hear him, he is a vivid talker and his Scotch accent hardly noticeable.

Ever yours,

MARY HARLEY

Nathaniel Clayton Manson

by Margaret Potts Williams, Academy

Margaret Potts Williams has just begun a two year term on the Alumnae Council, at the same time continuing as Academy Fund Agent. Her neice, Eleanor Potts, was a 1948 graduate.

IN THE words of "Miss" Benedict, "No one contributed more to the founding of Sweet Briar College in an essential way than did Mr. Manson. If there had been a less able, less devoted or less understanding man in charge of the college finances during the early days of Sweet Briar the college would not be there today."

His sister, Mrs. Dew, tells us that Mr. Manson was born in Lynchburg, on Court Street where the Presbyterian parish house now stands, on May 25, 1858. Honor man of his class, he was graduated from Hampden-Sydney College at the age of nineteen and then taught for three years so that he might study law at the University of Virginia. With enough money for only one year's study, he managed to complete his course in that time, was president of his class and won the medal for boxing. This boxing put him in good physical shape in spite of his hard mental work, and to the end of his life he loved tennis, riding and golf—everything but swimming—and when his health failed he had a clock golf set made at the foot of the terrace in front of Fletcher and one of his great pleasures was playing there with some of the Sweet Briar girls.

When only twenty-five he was elected mayor of Lynchburg, at that time more of an honor and responsibility than in these days of city managers, and everyone was so elated over his election that the city turned out to march in a torchlight procession up Church Street and down Main Street, in celebration. He was re-elected twice and then resigned in order to practice law, which he did for thirty-four years. He was not only one of Lynchburg's leading lawyers but he was its city attorney and he fought many hard fights for that growing town, among the hardest fights being the one in connection with the city's water supply.

At the time of Mrs. Indiana Fletcher Williams' death, Sweet Briar had been heard of in Lynchburg as a romantically lovely spot, full of treasures from Europe (alongside of mysterious heaps of carving knives and bolts of calico and gingham), but shut off because of impassable roads. Contrary to the popular belief at the time that Mrs. Williams had left a vast fortune to found a college for rich girls, actually she left, in addition to the land, lovely Sweet Briar House and St. Angelo, about a half million dollars in cash assets—far from enough to build and equip a college in a remote and inaccessible spot, where roads, a sewer and water system, a power plant and other plants and equipment would be needed in addition to college buildings and equipment. Moreover, the trustees named by Mrs. Williams, though men of vision, were not men of practicality, and much was spent without return upon the farm, the lake, and the addition of the portico and columns and other costly items to St. Angelo.

Mr. Manson was not on that first Board of Trustees, but when the Board was reorganized he became a member and was made chairman of the executive committee; and he gave so liberally of his time and legal skill that the Board voted him a salary of fifteen hundred dollars, which he refused.

Earlier, Mr. Manson had lost his only child, a little girl of eighteen months, whom he adored. With his warm, generous nature and his great love for people, especially young people, he now turned to Sweet Briar; and it was because of his deep interest in Sweet Briar that the college was able to open—and to remain open.

In Dr. Benedict's interesting account of the part Mr. Manson played in those early days she writes, "When the Board became effectively organized—got a President and decided to open in September, 1906—there was no college equipment, not even blackboards on the walls in the Academic Building, not a book, not a microscope or a balance. There was no cash on hand. A deficit was all there was, there wasn't any more."

"Well, who did what about that? Mr. Manson put his shoulder to the wheel, shouldering the deficit. We got students, and what they paid was our income. We had to pay out more than we took in. So we needed credit—and credit we got, thanks to Mr. Manson. Banks don't give credit on box bushes or on plans and hopes. Banks have to know where they can get back what they loan. To meet this, Mr. Manson put his personal endorsement on notes—sizeable ones, I assure you, and that is how we got the money without which we could not have carried on."

Mrs. Dew adds that when the depression of 1907 struck, shortly after the opening of college, Mr. Manson lay awake at night trying to figure out where the teachers' salaries were coming from. Again he came to the rescue. But not even his wife knew how much he gave to the struggling young college, though once a friend said to her, "Well, Mrs. Manson, Sweet Briar's got your car."

Fortunately, the charming Mrs. Manson, too, loved the girls, and few Sundays passed without Sweet Briar girls as dinner guests. The Mansons always entertained the graduating class at dinner, which was easy enough when the class numbered five; but when the class outgrew the table, Mr. Manson, undeterred, had a larger one made. When that table, also was outgrown, the party was transferred to the country club. To Mr. Manson there was no Sweet Briar girl who was not beautiful and charming and utterly without fault. They were his beloved daughters.

But it was not alone the girls whom Mr. Manson loved; his capacity for friendship seemed infinite and showed itself in a genuine interest in everyone with whom he came into contact, from the highest member of the faculty to the humblest worker on the place, and he never forgot a name, a face, or a person's problems or interests. A scared little girl, one of Sweet Briar's early arrivals, recalls that when she first met him he was so kindly and seemed so interested in her that she lost her fright. The next time she saw him, some weeks later, she spoke shyly, thinking he would not remember her; but, to her surprise, his fine face lit up with a friendly smile and he not only called her by name but took up the conversation where it had been left off.

In return for this heartfelt interest in others, he was one of the most beloved persons who ever came upon Sweet Briar's campus and the effect he had upon people was quite magical.

Mrs. Dew relates that a girl, making her first attempt at diving, called to him, "Oh, Mr. Manson, please stand by me!" To which he replied, "What do you want with me?

SHEEP ON THE LAWN IN FRONT OF ACADEMIC

I can't swim a stroke." "But," she answered, "if you stand by me I am not scared." At another time, during a terrific thunderstorm at Sweet Briar, when a group of people were huddled together in the Apartment House, near which a tree had just been struck, a young mother placed her baby in his arms for safety.

In her tribute to him Dr. Benedict says that in addition to saving Sweet Briar financially Mr. Manson worked unceasingly for the college in many other ways: he secured Mr. Dew and Miss Fannie Carroll, who were invaluable especially in those early days; he brought many people to the college, among them Carter Glass; and he did much to make the college known to the world outside. She adds that he was a tower of strength to both her and Miss Mc-Vea, who followed her, and in conclusion she says:

"Sweet Briar has now lived through more than four decades. Those of us who came during the first half of that time wish we could pass on to those of you of the second half some knowledge and appreciation of the person who, I believe, was Sweet Briar's greatest friend."

Mr. Manson died in his sixty-seventh year on October 15, 1924, at his home in Lynchburg. The last time he came to Sweet Briar he was unable to leave his car, but sat for a long time without speaking, looking at the place he loved, peace and serenity in his face.

Enthusiastic Richmond alumnae have become volunteer theatrical agents. We are proud of their interest in sponsoring this unique cultural program.

And a walking shadow raises funds for Alumnae Clubs and other organizations. Inspired to present something cultural in Sweet Briar's name, the Richmond Alumnae introduced to their part of the country marionette drama for adults. With no underwriting and the usual deflated bank account, they booked two performances of Martin and Olga Stevens' Passion Play for $200.00 each—a magnificent play so well received that other local clubs were interested in sponsoring a return engagement. Since they were so fortunate to interest the Stevens Marionette Theater in coming back to Virginia, and the City of Richmond was so taken with their work, the Club wanted the return engagement to be under its own auspices.

Since they live in the west and usually play up and down the west coast where they are famous, the Stevens' required a number of shows nearby to justify the trip to Virginia. On contacting Virginia Sweet Briar clubs, women's clubs and colleges, we have booked several shows; and requests for more information are still coming. While the Nativity, Joan of Arc, and Cleopatra are also in their repertoire, the Stevens' are bringing their newest achievement here this November; it is a double feature program—Macbeth followed by The Taming of the Shrew. They will play only to adult audiences.

Two years ago four Richmond people, of whom I was one, were delegates to the National Puppetry Festival in New London, Connecticut. On the program was Martin and Olga Stevens' marionette Passion Play about which we were skeptical, thinking it would seem bad taste to have marionettes portray the life of Christ. When we saw it, we were overcome; it was the most moving performance any of us had ever seen. And we came to feel that, in expert hands, marionettes could portray such parts as Christ and the disciples more appropriately even than could human personalities. Since then the four of us had tried to lure the Stevens' to Richmond, and on the basis of my enthusiasm the Sweet Briar Alumnae engaged them for last February 1 and 2. In Richmond, audiences responded similarly to the play, including members of the clergy who were earnest in their appreciation. Men in the audience were particularly interested in seeing backstage mechanics after the shows.

About Martin and Olga Stevens: they began as professional actors with marionettes as their hobby, finally adopting the latter as their life work. Olga carves all the marionettes from wood; it takes her one day to do a hand. She and Martin alone handle as many as 20 parts and speak for all the characters in addition to managing the lighting, sound effects and other details. Their voices are magnificent-measured and distinct-and when a character's gesture accompanies his speech, he moves slowly and in perfect rhythm with his words. The lighting is played like music: in the Passion Play's Last Supper scene there is a glow in one corner becoming brighter so slowly that you can't be sure it is changing until, finally, there is a tremendous climax achieved by lighting alone. Music is also used. All dramatic effects are with restraint and good taste; and the Passion Play, as an example of their work, is the most moving drama that I have ever seen-on Broadway or anywhere. That is a lot to say but not exaggeration!

Departing from string marionettes for which the Stevens' are famous, Macbeth and his co-actors perform on rods worked from below; while the Shrew and her lovers slug it out as old-fashioned hand puppets of slapstick comedy. According to Martin, the players themselves dictated these changes in mechanical structure to suit better their type of action. Shadows against a lighted screen are used for witches and the ghost in Macbeth, and several different puppets portray Macbeth and Lady Macbeth to show change in personality as the tragedy progresses. Audiences are almost convinced that they see the actors change expression.

In selection of scenes the Shrew follows the version of Edwin Booth in his Katherine and Petruchio. The pace is fast, the comedy broad; and Mr. Shakespeare himself appears as author, actor and general factorum. Like the Lunts' production, importance is given to the comedy horse.

Macbeth is staged in the tradition of stark tragedy. Each performance runs a little under an hour.

Figures are one-third the height of a person and, in an auditorium scating up to 1500, seem almost life-sized—an illusion achieved by perfect proportion between puppet and scene. Played on an open Elizabethan stage, with neither proscenium nor front curtain, Macbeth and the Shrew are recreated in the atmosphere of Shakespeare's theater. (The poet himself was familiar with puppets and mentioned them in his plays.) Music especially for these plays was arranged by Dr. Hollace E. Arment, Doctor of Music at Alabama Polytechnic.

The November tour runs from the fifth to fifteenth including bookings in western Virginia on and before November 11 and an appearance in Suffolk November 12, followed by two in Richmond that week. If this strikes the fancy of Sweet Briar clubs or alumnae in other profit-raising organizations, they may write to the Richmond branch for more information. What we expected to be a handicap in this vicinity's not being educated to marionette drama for adults, turned out to be an advantage. Amusement editors, delighted with a novel medium of entertainment, gave even more advance publicity than requested, and the radio was generous. An enthusiastic newspaper review also helped to fill the house a second night.

Marionette theater has been called the highest form of dramatic art; for only there can a man write, produce, direct and act in his own play with no other interpretation to come between him and the audience. We felt this was a real "find" for a program group with a desire for the different—two artists creating with miniature theater, tragedy of a magnitude to inspire in a human audience emotions of pity and awe. It is really thrilling to present Martin and Olga Stevens.

The Class of '52 Enters College

by Mary Moore Pancake, Acting Director of Public Relations

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following information was released from the Office of Admission on September 1. Since that date the number of new students has been increased to 174, including one foreign student, Lucy Kreusler, daughter of Dr. Abraham Kreusler, assistant professor of Russian. Lucy was born in Poland and educated in Russia.

New students arrived at Sweet Briar for the fortythird academic session on September 20, with old students, bringing enrollment to a 451 capacity, returning in time for the opening convocation on Friday evening, September 24. Classes met for the first time Saturday morning.

Geographically, the 171 new students, twelve of whom are entering from other colleges and universities, are drawn from 29 states, the District of Columbia, six foreign countries and Hawaii. The South and Southwest, with 83 students, have a slight edge over the North and Northeast, with 66 enrolled, while thirteen from the Middle and Northwest, two from the Far West, and one each from India, France, China, Argentina, England, Venezuela and Fiawaii, fill the ranks of incoming students. Two whose permanent homes are in the United States have lived recently in the Orient, one coming to Sweet Briar from Tokyo and the other from China.

Virginia, with 24, leads the states in the number of new students, followed by North Carolina with sixteen, New York and Pennsylvania with thirteen and eleven respectively, ten each from Kentucky and Texas, and nine each from Connecticut and Maryland. Then follows District of Columbia with eight, New Jersey with seven, Tennessee with six, Massachusetts, Ohio and Florida with five each, Alabama with four, Georgia and Illinois three each, two each from Mississippi, Michigan and Missouri, and one each from Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont, West Virginia, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Indiana, Washington and Wyoming.

Included among the foreign students are two holding scholarships supplemented by student-contributed funds covering room, board and other expenses, while a third has the first grant from the Askew Foreign Student Fund for World Understanding, a memorial fund begun at Sweet Briar in 1946. Talat Rizaz Rasul is a former student at Isabella Thoburn College in Lucknow, India, which is her home city. Her father is a member of the United Provinces Legislative Assembly and her mother is a member of the Legislative Council and the only Muslem lady member of the Constituent Assembly of India. Tsun-hsien Kwan of Shanghai, daughter of an architect who holds two degrees from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, attended Gingling College in Nanking for one year. Her mother was graduated from Mount Holvoke College, and her sister is now studying at Johns Hopkins, Baltimore. The third foreign student, Genevieve Hammel, has attended the College Cevenol, the first international school in France, where she has been preparing for the second part of her baccalaureate and has also been an instructor. Her father, a French Protestant clergyman, is also a doctor and director of a Protestant rest home in Compiegne.

Another freshman was born in Buenos Aires and received her education in Argentina; two others, American born, have lived abroad, one in England for a time and during the past eight years in Caracas, Venezuela. The other, whose home is now in England, attended school there and during the last year studied in Switzerland.

Alumnae daughters, sisters and nieces are represented by a goodly number of new students. Cynthia Balch, Utica, New York, is the daughter of Elizabeth Prescott Balch, Senior Class president in 1928; Anne Burton Forster, Vero Beach, Fla., of Katherine Zeuch Forster '23; Susan Lewis Hobson, Jamaica, New York, of Mary Marshall Hobson '24, and niece of Myra Marsball Brush '30, and Susan Marshall Timberlake '32; Grace Pettit Jones, Henderson, North Carolina, daughter of Frances McKinney Jones, ex '23, and niece of Sarah McKinney Groner, ex '26, and Mildred La-Venture McKinney, ex '23; Nell Orand, Dallas, Texas, daughter of Frances Nash Orand, '24; Frances Street, Chattanooga, Tennessee, of Ruth Lourance Street '27, and niece of Bess Lowrance Hill '28; Mildred Rebecca Yerkes, Jacksonville, Florida, daughter of Julia Beville Yerkes, Academy, whose niece, Catherine Yerkes, also of Jacksonville, will be a freshman; Joan Crouse, New York City, daughter of Sara McHenry Crouse ex '28, and niece of Martha Mc-Henry Halter '25.

Helen Cummings Graves, Houston, Texas, is a greatniece of Susanna Denman Graves ex '14, while Jacqueline Thornton, Galveston, Texas, is a niece of Katherine Slaughter Thornton and Nell Dumas, San Antonio, Texas, of Edna Steves Vaughan and cousin of Elizabeth Vaughan '44. Sisters of former or present Sweet Briar students include Mary Janet Bowser, Larchmont, New York, sister of Alice Williams Mighell ex '42; Jane Lee Cooke, Muskogee, Okla., of Elizabeth Cooke '51 and cousin of Donna Wunderlich '50; Martha Elizabeth Legg, Binghamton, New York, sister of Sallie Legg '49; Betty Mundy, Amherst, of Genevieve Mundy Lyttle '42, and Ellen Mundy Shaner ex '45; Anne Richards Pope, Columbus, Miss., of Frances Pope '49; Josephine Sharp, Port Norris, New Jersey, of Evalena Sharp '48; Katharine Shaw, Pelham, New York, of Harriet Shaw '37; Mary Elizabeth Sims, Fort Smith, Arkansas, of Ann Simms '49; Mary Grinter Street, Charlotte, North Carolina, of Ruth Street '48; Rebecca Tomlinson, Wynnewood, Pennsylvania, of Jane Tomlinson; Anne Price Estill, Lexington, Kentucky, of Katherine Estill '52.

Incoming students were recently mailed a booklet, published this year for the first time, entitled "The Key to Sweet Briar College." It gives an informal and chatty introduction to campus customs and activities, and is amusingly illustrated with appropriate pen and ink drawings. Edited by the students, The Key supplements the Student Handbook, which outlines policies of the Student Government Association and other organizations.

Elizabeth Corddry '49 and Elizabeth Hancock '49 are cditor and co-editor respectively of The Key, while the illustrations are the work of Ann Henderson '49.

I had hoped to gather lots of news for this issue but I've had a terrible tragedy and sorrow which has changed my life and plans. My husband died June 23 after an illness of six weeks. Of course I did not get back for class reunion in June, but Sue Slaughter wrote a wonderful account of the gathering. Frances Richardson Pitcher stopped off to see me en route to see her mother in Charleston, West Virginia. That was in May. It was the first time we had been together in several years and we had much ground to cover to catch up. Frances lives in Landgrove, Vermont.

I've received an invitation to the marriage of Dorothy Wallace Ravenel's (Academy), son, James, Jr., on September 15 in Charleston, South Carolina, where they live.

In April I took a trip to Williamsburg, Virginia, with my sister, Dorothy Grammer Croyder, ex '17, and her daughter, Polly, aged 16. I also visited Dorothy in August at her summer home in Cragsmoor, New York.

My son, Carl, graduated from Yale in June and is planning to live here with me which is a comfort and joy.

I've been away most of the summer visiting relatives but am now settled here at home keeping house for my son, trying to cook which is hard as I haven't done it since I was first married. My health is better this last year.

I apologize for so much news about myself. Please, girls, drop me cards and tell me of yourselves so I'll have something to pass on next time in the News.

DEAR CLASSMATES:

Just as I was despairing of having any news for the October letter I received a letter from Faye Abraham Pethick, '17, enclosing a snapshot of her two grandsons, Peter and Richard Maltby, whose mother was Sylvia Pethick, '41, and an article from a Richmond paper (date and which paper I do not know) about Louise Weisiger '15. (I am enclosing this article and will leave it to the discretion of our Editor as to the amount of it she would like to copy). Faye and Harry have taken a cottage at Madison, Connecticut, for the summer and have been entertaining the children, the grandchildren, and Faye's mother, Mrs. Abraham.

Today came a letter from Anne Schutte Nolt, '15, with several items of news. She has seen Marjorie Johnson Good, '16, recently and learned from her that Dr. Harley, who is now at her summer home at Cragsmoor, New York, is going to spend the winter with Marjorie in West Chester, Pa. We are planning a luncheon this fall so that we can all get together. If any of you S. B. "gals" in this vicinity want to be among those present you will be welcome. Just let me know and I will give you the date when I know it.

Anne spent three weeks this spring driving through Wisconsin and Michigan and spent several hours with Elsie Zaegel Thomas, '12. She writes most enthusiastically of Elsie's beautiful home on a high bluff overlooking Lake Michigan. Elsie, she thinks, "seems to have the secret of perpetual youth—no gray hair, good figure, has traveled a lot, and is very charming." Her son has been married recently and is taking some work at Madison, following his service. Anne also saw Leona Gunther who married Elsie's brother and who lives in the old Gunther homestead nearby.

Catherine Burns, ex '16, who married Dr. Walter Boothby of the Mayo Clinic, passed through Lancaster recently en route to Sweden where Dr. Boothby will be an exchange professor at the University of Lund in the Physiological Laboratory. He is to establish a Department of Aviation Medicine. Anne says the Boothbys will be there at least a year and will be glad to see any of us who pass that way.

The Nolts are building a house which is now under roof but will not be ready for occupancy until March or April.

I am very sorry to have to report that Anne lost her mother last March.

As you all know this October issue goes to all Alumnae but the other three numbers go only to those who have contributed to the Alumnae Fund. Anne Schutte Nolt will be the fund agent for 1915 so be sure to send her a generous contribution. and to me send some news so that there will be a 1915 letter for you to read.

Class Secretary: RUTH FISKE (Mrs. Charles Steegar) 1 Park Lane, Mount Vernon, New York.

Fund Agent: BEULAH NORRIS, 130 Hazelcroft Avenue, New Castle, Pennsylvania.

As this news letter is the only one which is sent to all members of the class and because of lack of news, the most important thing—the only important thing—in my letter is a plea to you all—a plea not only for contributions but for news of yourselves and any of your old S. B. pals you see or hear from. Beulah Norris and her agents did a grand job for our class last year but we all get discouraged when so few of you even acknowledge our numerous pleas. So—if you want to hear about your old friends, send in your contribution to the fund and write to me. But quick!

A note from Betty Murray Widau came too late for the June letter. She and her husband had been at the Briar in March. Her daughter was a freshman. Everything looked the same to her—even the beds.

Frances Jordon Truthan died on June 6 and I sent our sympathy to her husband. She had written me such a hopeful note from her hospital bed and she felt so encouraged. It is very sad.

Julia Benner Moss and her husband are with us in Maine and we still are talking about last year's reunion. Let's all make it for our next. No more news—serves you right—so write.

The following members of our class seem to be lost. Can anyone help us out?

Betty Barr (Mrs Little), Jean Bumgarner, Ruth Comer, Tressa Emerson (Mrs. B. A. Renson), Elinor Flournoy (Mrs. Barlow F. Parsons), Juanita Fuller, Carolyn Hansen (Mrs. Everett Reed), Helene Harper, Josephine Hereford (Mrs. Hart Smith), Jeanette Honsaker (Mrs. John M. Stauffer, Jr.), Margaret Hoskins, Mildred McCarroll (Mrs. Marion E. Sibley), Frances Marsh, Frances Myrick, Elizabeth Newson (Mrs. Edwin H. Healey), Jeannette Stoffregen (Mrs. George Hunter, Jr.), Sabelle Strother.

Fund Agent: Jane Guignard (Mrs. Broadus Thompson) P. O. Box 480, Columbia, South Carolina.

GRLETINGS TO ALL OF YOU:

No sooner had I written Betty Van Aken accepting the job of secretary for '23 than I had a terrible case of cold feet. Then the answers to my post cards began coming in—cvidently you were just as tired as I was of that monotonously blank space where our class news should have been.

This past commencement was our 25th rennion and although I was on the spot I will not be a very good reporter. I was torn between being a "reuning alumna" and a graduating senior's parent. "23" had 2 daughters in the senior class—Isabel Virden Faulkner's Closey, and my Blair. Fritzie, and I were two very proud mamas.

I saw Marie Klooz at Sweet Briar during commencement. She has just bought an apartment and sends her new address—No. 103, 3026 Porter Street, N. W., Washington 8, D. C. Helen Richards Horn was there too. She has been vacationing in Maine and Cape Cod. In September she had her first one man art exhibit at the Allentown Art Museum—Allentown, Pa. Three cheers for you! Helen. Frances Lauterbach is in charge of the Model room, the restaurant at her brother's airport—the Dahio airport just west of Dayton, Ohio. She lives on the field and would love to see any S. B. girls who pass that way.

Betty Mason Richards writes that the Greater Boston Sweet Briar Alumnae Association had a Sweet Briar night at the "Pops" Symphony Concert early in June. Her oldest son, Stan, Jr., is at Amherst, class of '50, with Lorna Weber Dowling's son, Bob. Betty also has a daughter Caroline—10 years old—who wants to come to Sweet Briar.

Janet Keeling Casey is living in San Francisco. She has three children—Donald, in his second year at Stanford University; and Patricia and Kathleen at the Convent of the Sacred Heart. There are about 25 in the alumnae chapter there, which meets 4 times a year.

Mildred Featherston lives in Los Angeles. She hears from Leona Taggert Cloud and her family.

For nearly three years, Emma Mai Crockett Thompson has been executive secretary of the Kiwanis Club of Nashville. For several years during the war she was director of U.S.O. activities for the local Y.M.C.A. She is planning a trip in October to Medellin, Columbia, South America, to visit her daughter who is married and lives there.

Josephine Bechtel Krugler and her family spent the summer at their cottage at Beach Haven, New Jersey. Her oldest daughter, Pat, is a sophomore at Connecticut College and her younger. Anne Perry, is preparing to enter Walnut Hill in a year or so.

Ellen Brown Nichols is living in Denton, Maryland, where her husband is a merchant. She has a ten year old daughter, Ellen Carter. Ellen must be a busy person for besides being vice principal and librarian for the Caroline High School she teaches several English classes.

I felt it was a "judgment" on me for not doing this sooner, when Louisa Newkirk Steeble wrote that she and her husband had stopped over night in Roanoke early in August and she could not remember my married name—One of the rewards for being class secretary is that this can't happen again. Let me say that I value my Sweet Briar friendships more each year and that I hope any of you passing through Roanoke will look me up. Here's hoping I'll have better luck next time, Louisa. The Steebles spent some time this summer at Northeast Harbor, Maine—Louisa's daughter, Maris, was in camp there.

Virginia Thompson McElwee wrote a grand letter full of news. She has kept in touch with Ellen Paige Lemon who she saw this summer. Virginia sees Polly Goodnow Gardner, too. Polly's husband was in Java before the war and in Iran since. They have three sons—all grown now. One is married and has two children. Is Polly our only grandmother? The McElwees live on an ancestral farm which they farm for pleasure, raising beagles on the side.

Frances McKinney Jones writes that her daughter, Grace, entered Sweet Briar as a freshman this year. Also Catherine Zeuch Forster's daughter, Anne.

Jane Gnignard Thompson, her son, Broadus, and her aunt, Miss Susan Guignard, had a wonderful trip with a small party of friends in England this summer.

Virginia Stanbery Schneider lives in Atlanta. Her son, Tommy, Jr., goes to W. & L., and spent this summer at Oxford. Virginia is busy with the Red Cross and the Atlanta Music Club.

I wish I had known at commencement that I was on the eve of becoming your secretary. I might have had an accurate list of those of us who came back for our reunion. The Georgia group was well represented—Fitzallen Kendall Fearing, Queenie Wise O'Neal, Kitty Hagler Phinizy, Martha Newton Groover and Gladys Neel Dickey. Fitzallen's son, John, is at the University of Virginia. Queenie has three children. Her oldest son will be a sophomore at Mercer University and her daughter is a freshman at Duke. Kitty Hagler Phinizy's daughter was a freshman at Sweet Briar last year. It was good to see Hannah Keith Howze on campus with Fritzie Virden Faulkner.

I see Katherine Hancock Land occasionally. Last year was an anxious one for Kit when her mother was quite ill for a long time. I know you will be glad to know she is much better now. I had a grand visit last spring with Lillian Spilman Howard. Her oldest son, Frank, was in the Pacific for several years during the war and is now back in Knoxville. Her son, Lewis, is at the University of Tennessee and the youngest, Ben, is in high school.

I'm sure after a lapse of several years there is lots more news about the class of '23. Remember the next issues go only to contributors to the Alumnæ Fund—and don't miss them.

September is schooltime! Sweet Briar time. Do you remember the thrill when you first went to Sweet Briar? Remember the thrill of being there? Our daughters and friend's daughters are now looking forward to that thrill. Let us all support the Alumnæ group, so that privilege may carry on and be enjoyed by more daughters to come. By also contributing to the Alumnæ Fund, you will receive the other three issues of the ALUMNÆ NEWS.

Speaking of Danghters of the Class of '26, had a fine note from Sarah Merrick Houriet, telling that her oldest daughter Nancy has just finished her Junior year at Sweet Briar, having transferred from William and Mary Division of Norfolk after her Sophomore year. Sarah's son Paul, age 16, is a Junior at Shaker Heights High School. Her youngest, Sally, age 13, starts her ninth grade at Junior High in the fall. She says Vic. her husband, slaves to keep them all going and plays badminton for recreation. Topsy, the black pedigreed mongrel dog completes the happy family.

From Winter Haven, Florida, comes news from Helen Mutschler Becker that Florida is warm in the daytime but cool at night. They love the summer very much as they live on a good size lake where the children go in swimming every day. Joyce, her daughter, is 11, and Markel, Jr., is 7. Helen is also a grandmother as Pat has a son who will be a year old in October. Pat lives in Alton Bay, New Hampshire, in summertime. Helen writes that they have just remodeled their house and that she is getting gray headed over the bills which are more than twice what they expected. She says she hopes to make next reunion.

Certainly did appreciate the marvelous and newsy letter I received from Lois Peterson Wilson. I should like to nominate her as my successor, as Class Secretary, for she is a complete fund of information. In June she and Howard took a short motor trip to Virginia and of course stopped at Sweet Briar. She said she is "full of old memories and of the beauty of Sweet Briar today, the wonder of the new things on campus." This was Lois's first visit back, since our fifth reunion. Quoting Lois's letter further:

"I was so anxious for Howard to see everything. Amherst is completely changed and considerably built up. Then we took the Sweet Briar road and I was looking for the gates and we were almost by before we saw the small sign 'Sweet Briar,' and no gates. (I am sorry to hear the gates are gone). I wished for someone from '26 as we were all alone in the Boxwood Inn. An Episcopal convention had just opened the day before with some 200 delegates from five states, so we attended a session that evening and heard the presiding Bishop to-be of Hankow, China, being the only Bishop in China. It was of particular interest to Howard, who had just been appointed to the Missionary Committee of the Diocese of Rhode Island.

"It poured rain the next morning, but did not deter us from making a complete tour of the campus. The gymnasium, library, the little chapel in Aurelia's cabin, the new addition and attractive lounge room to the canoe house on the lake, the outing cabin on Paul's Mountain were all new to me. We could not go up to the monument, as the road was so slippery. The boxwood and the gardens are more beautiful than ever. Those tremendous and beautiful magnolia trees were in bloom. We had a nice chat with Miss Winnie, Miss Ruby's younger sister who is at the Book Shop now, and she is very much like Miss Ruby. Miss Ruby and Dr. Will are retired. They and Miss Winnie and a younger brother live in a small house across from Mt. St. Angelo, which they sold some years ago. Both Mrs. Walker and Aunt Kitty have passed away. I also found our that Mrs. Wills still takes overnight guests in Amherst, but does not have a tea room at present. Remember her fried chicken, baked sweet potatoes with marshmallows and mocha cake. (I'm drooling!)

"Also had a nice chat with Dan Boone and so heard about commencement. Kitty, Edna, and Peggy Malone were back from '26. Perhaps there were others, too. The largest group of Alumna ever to be present at commencement were there this year—120 to 150. This year's graduating class was unusually large—93—although they usually run around 75. The enrollment is the same—450. (Isn't Lois wonderful about telling just what we are interested in). At present they have students from 35 states and four foreign countries.

"The rest of our trip included the Sky Line Drive, Charlottesville with the University of Virginia, and Jefferson's home, Monticello, and Monroe's home, Ash Jawn, also Richmond and Williamsburg. It was such fun, all of it.

"As for me-we live eight miles from Providence and enjoy country living. Our garden keeps me busy all spring and summer. I enjoy the Garden Club and state activities and serve on the executive committee of Camp Hoffman, our state Girl Scout camp. Living in Rhode Island we practically have to mention the whole state every time we say anything at all as the state is so small. However, Providence is the gateway to the Green and White Mountains and to Cape Cod and if ever any Sweet Briarites come this way, I would surely love to see them. Last fall I spent the day with Kay Norris and her grand family. I haven't heard a thing about Betty Sutro since we graduated.

"Can you tell me where the farm is in Rhode Island to which Anne Barrett and family come? We must be near neighbors in this small state." (Please note, Ann. Mrs. Howard D. Wilson, Reservoir Avenne, Johnston 9, Rhode Island).

I have quoted Lois's letter in toto, for I felt it was like a visit back to Sweet Briar to read her most interesting letter.

Frances Barry Wood's card says she leads a very prosaic life in Dallas. The same old grind during the summer trying to keep co.! and keeping up with a 16 year old daughter and a 19 year old son! Her son, Charles whom they call "Sandy," is at present on a Naval Reserve Cruise in the Carribean. Her daughter, Jean, is busy dating. Frances says as for herself she is still fat and gray headed, but very, very happy. I think her life sounds not prosaic, but wonderful and full of good things.

Mary Gladys Brown Moore has spent part of the summer looking for a farm in Connecticut. She and Jack hope to live there in the near future. Their one child, Mary Chester, finishes at Briarcliff Junior College in '49. Mary Gladys keeps busy with her house, garden, golf, church and Red Cross Nurse's Aid work.

Eleanor Rechl Birchall says it's just the usual for her. Married lo—these many years. Two sons, one adopted daughter—and now one daughter-in-law. Older son, Mill, wounded in action, holder of Silver Star. Younger son, Jack, a graduate of Williams College at 20. (Eleanor's brains seem to run in the family).

Jack, now in Mexico making colored slides to be used in college Arch. classes. So you see, writes Fleanor, "I am just Mom." (Who could ask for a finer title?)

Virginia Carpenter Ellerston's card made anyone who loves to fish want to get out the old sleeping bag and take off for Ontario. Her husband, daughter Susan age 10, and her son Tom age 19, have just returned from fishing on an island in Rainey Lake, 11 miles by water east of Ft. Francis. Their prize fish was a five pound small mouth bass, and that is a big fish in any man's language. (Congratulations.) Virginia says they caught so many big ones, they were sick of eating them and she was particularly sick of cooking them on a balky old wood stove, by kerosene lamp light. (I know that stove business, as it always seemed to come out the winner when I cooked with it on the ranch). But in spite of store, I agree with Eleanor when she says they loved taking to the woods.

From Edna Lee Cox comes the thrilling news that they have just purchased a house in Montclair, New Jersey. Edna is especially pleased as she was brought up in Montclair, and this is like returning home. They are expecting to move into their new address, Welsh Road, Essex Fells, New Jersey, in time for school opening. Edna says she is just returned from a visit at the Cox's farm in Grayson County, Virginia, On the way back she spent two days at Sweet Briar, visiting Gert Prior, '29. She also saw Polly Cary Dew Woodson, her son Nat, (age 7), who is the same age as Edna's twins, Jocky and Judy-all had a picnic together. Although Edna didn't make May Day or Commencement, she is still doing an excellent job on Endowment Board of Sweet Briar.

Sounds like a miniature reunion at Edith McKelvey's house, as Marg Laidley Smith, Kay Tracy, and Sis (Joyce) MacGregor all have gotten together. She also spent two evenings with Marietta Darsie in July in Cleveland. Marietta was on her way to Navy Training, Great Lakes, Illinois, the following week in July. She is a reserve. Edith says Marietta has poise and carriage that is marvelous and simply looks wonderful. Edith says of herself, that she is busy working at the Steel Corporation plus active social and community life.

Postmarked Winooski, Vermont, Charlotte Alford MacVicar, sent a grand card from their summer holiday place, telling of her family. Donald, Jr., their oldest child is 19. He went to Deerfield Academy, Deerfield, Massachusetts, and now has just completed his first year at Amherst College. Their daughter, Gail, is almost 11 and has been a joy to their home while their son was away. The whole family have been spending the summer at Mallets Bay on Lake Champlain. The MacVicar family have had a place there for years. Charlotte writes a fascinating description of their winter home in Naugatuck, Connecticut, an industrial town located between New Haven and Waterbury and two and one-half hours by train from New York City, where they often go for theater, shopping and concerts. There is ice skating, practically in their back yard in Nangatuck and swimming in the nearby lakes in the summer. Charlotte says they have a great abundance of real living and it certainly sounds that way. She says the only one she ever sees from Sweet Briar is Gladys Woodward Hubbard, '24. She lives in Hartford, Connecticut.

I was so happy to receive Dot McKee Abney's grand newsy letter. She writes that Hamp, her son, graduated from high school this May and enters Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, this September. Barbara, her daughter, will be a freshman at Winchester-Thurston, a girls' private school. They all had a grand summer. Left Wilkinsburg the 15th of June and spent three days in New York doing the sights, before going to Ocean City, New Jersey. They stayed there until August 1. They loved their stay there. Dot says she "had a very pleasant surprise one day when Helen Adams Thomson and her son drove down from Swathmore and spent the afternoon with us. Helen's son, Bill, has been i the Navy two years and has just returned home in June. Bill and Hamp spent the afternoon on the beach, while 'Hadge' and I talked over old times. Helen's two daughters were at Girl Scout Camp so she felt very carefree." And Dot says Helen is just as much fun as ever. Bill hopes to enter the University of Delaware this September but hadn't heard definitely. Of herself Dot says she belongs to Sweet Briar Club and this winter she also plans to work in the Junior Cotillion Dance Committee, Barbara will be in the group. And it will be a thrill to see the lovely young people in their first evening dresses. Dot also has charge of all the candy and baked goods at the large bazaar their church is giving in November. Dot says trust her to be connected with the food. She added a P. S., the exciting news that Helen Finch Halford sails for the U. S A. on September 23.

Beulah Ellis von Arnim writes from Buffalo that her husband is the General Agent for the Monarch Life Insurance Company and that she works in the office with him. Beulah's stepson, age 10, goes to Ridley's private school. Beulah says she was so disappointed to miss the Christmas Sweet Briar Tea which Mary Templeton phoned her about, as she feels she has lost contact with her classmates, though she still has an avid interest in Sweet Briar and reads the ALUMNÆ NEWS diligently.

I've heard about the Reporter's Date Line and as mine is the first of September in the Sweet Briar Post Office, I'll have to say thirty! It really has been fun doing the News this time as you've all been so good to answer my card. I certainly do appreciate it. Cheerio!

Ken and Jo were kept going at top speed trying to see all the people in these parts who wanted to see them, as you can guess, there are plenty! I could write pages on the four Durham children who captivated all who met them.

Betty Williams Simmons gave a luncheon for Jo, including Maggie, Kelly, and myself. We had a grand time. Betty's house is most charming and unusual with much acreage.

Class Secretary: Barbara de Zouche Lewis (Mrs. Bernard Maxwell) 337 East 30th Street, New York 16, New York.

Fund Agent, Katherine Leadbeater (Mrs. Howard Bloomer, Jr.), Shoreacres, Lorton, Virginia.

I am sorry to report that your secretary fell down on the job of the post-cards this time, not you . . . I have been extremely busy all summer, working in a publishing office, making plans to get married, finding a wedding dress suitable to my age and style of beauty, to say nothing of the weather . . . altogether going quietly crazy. Also enjoyinglucky me-my garden, Fire Island, various visits from friends in North and South America, and life in general. As far as the wedding goes . . . you will have to hear about it in our next, as it is not to be until October. Since the recent heat-wave I have been devoutly thankful for the postponement, the mere idea of dressing up in taupe satin and a Jean Baudonin hat at this stage gives me the creeps. The briefest playsuits are the order of the day.

We have had one wedding in the class. Virginia Morris Kincaid's daughter was married in Washington on August 28 to Ralph Earnest Huschke. Virginia Earle is an extremely pretty girl and made a lovely bride, in her great-grandmother's wedding gown.

We have two freshman "daughters" this year. Cynthia Balch (Betty Prescott's daughter) and Sara McHenry Crouse's eldest. I hope to see the latter before she gets off to Virginia . . . and I know the whole class will wish them both the best of everything.

Remember the Alumnæ Fund . . . and that if you send in your contribution now you will get all the issues of the Alumnae News during the year.

I promise a real budget of news next issue, Vale.

1929

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: WANTED.

Fund Agent: MARY ARCHER BEAN (Mrs. James V. Eppes), 33 Linnean Street, Cambridge 38, Massachusetts.

Gert Prior received a letter from Polly McDiarmid Serodino telling of her numerous travels and from that and one or two others, the alumnae office compiled this letter. She reported that she has spent some time in Chattanooga, some in Knoxville, and then to Michigan where she visited Ruth for a while and later took a cottage with her mother and Peter. Says it was amazing to find five S. B. C. girls taking off one afternoon to call on another. . . . Hallie Gubelman Knowles . . . who is reported to have turned from a Michigan resorter to a native. The calling party consisted of Sally Callison Jamison, Jane Callison Smith, Ruth Ferguson Smythe, Peggy Ferguson Bennett and Polly. Hallie and her husband, Bob Knowles, have recently beight a big farm-with a lot of it in truck garden, and Polly relates "You can be sure we filled our arms (and the car) with the grandest variety of delicions vegetables you have ever seen. Hallie was so glad to see us and looked just the same, and seemed very happy. They have a darling 2 year old son. We had an impromptu class meeting, with Sally calling us to order-me, nominating Hallie for Secretary, and Ruth closing the balloting. In spite of her being unanimously elected she refused. I know her days are busy ones, and we had to accept her verdict."

Adelaide Richardson Hanger writes that "Dr. Dora Neill Raymond, sponsor of our class, spent the Christmas holidays in San Antonio and attended our Sweet Briar tea as our guest of honor." She says the tea was given by Frances McCamish McNeil, ex '26, and Claire Giesecke Walker, '30, and that it was a lovely affair with about thirty attending. Everyone was happy to see Dr. Raymond and thought she looked well. Adelaide says to her "she looked younger than when we knew her."

Since Adelaide has no children she gives a good deal of her time to child welfare and is a member of the Board of the Children's Service Bureau, a Community Chest Agency in San Antonio.

1932

Fund Agent: ALICE WEYMOUTH (Mrs. Frank McCord) 147-37 Beech Avenue, Flushing. New York.

ED. NOTE: Mary Moore Pancake, acting Director of Public Relations, edited this issue's class notes.

Ave 1932! This is both the beginning and the end of me as your colomnist, but being temporarily back at Sweet Briar and also inspired by an elegant letter from Mildred Hodges Ferry, I felt inclined to rescue the 1932 news from the doldrums for one issue. In view of our interminable silences, it seems to me another of you creatures with nothing to do might follow this lofty pattern and keep us on the map!

Hodges conveyed the pleasant information that she and Jim are planning a jaunt to Virginia in October (which I hope will put others in the notion), and it will be grand to see them. She was vacationing at Mentone in the Alabama mountains, where her family has a summer place, and the day before she wrote had had a visit from Eleanor Iranke Crawford, Charlie, and their three offspring, who were on their way back to New Orleans after a month at Blue Ridge, N. C. Their youngest, Chuck, age 2¹2, says Hodges, "is walking and talking like a full grown man!" It is not surprising that Franke's child should be so precocious.

Chubby had been in Birmingham recently and, according to our Hodges had distinguished herself by taking the DuBarry success course, and, consequently, looking like a million dollars, slim, trim and the New Look personified. She, and Art spent a week this summer at Ponte Vedra, Florida, and in addition have bought a new house, which certainly sounds prosperous. Hodges further revealed that Ellen Pratt McGowin, '35, and her husband were leaving in September for a trip to Europe. Also, that Larimer, who was in Greece with A.M.A.G. for some time, finished her job there June 30, but that she might stay on in Greece until August. She planned to make the Grand Tour and maybe end up in Paris with a job. The last I heard from Larimer was a Christmas card from Athens, with no more revealing statement than "Love, Mildred," which was particularly disconcerting, since I thought she was in Brazil with the State Department! At least, we have one pal who is seeing the world!

Last spring, out of a clear sky, came a long and welcome letter from Jane White Burton, enclosing a bewitching picture of her three children, Janey, eleven, Bill, Jr., nine, and Robert Mitchell, at that time six months. Billy, in addition to private practice, is professor of Radiology at the University of Oregon (their address is 4514 South West Highland Road, Portland 1), and was one of those exclusives going to Bikini for the Atomic Bomb tests. Recently he had been to Alaska where he was put on cancer clinics in four cities, so it sounds as if he is getting along in the world. Jane had seen Barbara Munter Purdoe in Seattle where the Burtons attended Billy's sister's wedding way back in December

Marcia Patterson and Henrietta Bryan Alphin appeared at Sweet Briar not long after I came in July, and were as surprised to see me as I was to see them. We had dinner together at the Inn and it was good to have a word with old classmates. Marcia, who teaches at Kent Place School, was visiting Henrietta at her farm near Charlottesville, but she is about to forsake rural life for Boston. Tom has returned to medicine and is interning at the Marine Hospital in Boston, planning to go into public health work, so Henrietta and her brood were to join him there in September, or as soon as the farm could be disposed of and a roof over their heads found in Boston.

My correspondence has been sadly neglected of late, but I do know that Emily Maxwell Littlepage has a son, Charles Kemp, born last October 24. They now live (or did then) at 307 Summit Avenue, Wayne, Pennsylvania. You will all be sorry to hear of the death of Virginia Hall Lindley's mother, which occurred in the spring. Virginia, so I heard by the grapevine, retreated to the mountains when polio became so rampant in Greensboro. Van, her daughter (the same grapevine indicated that she is a thing of beauty) had been visiting in Washington this summer, and my hope is that Virginia will see fit to fetch her home, stopping en route at Sweet Briar.

Bellamy and her clan were just taking off for Wrightsville Beach, where they have the most soperb cottage, the last time I heard from her, but I know she has seen many Sweet Briarites. Tiny Marshall Timberlake and her family spent a while at Virginia Beach, and she and Wayt made a whirl to Florida in the late spring, Tiny's niece, Susan Hobson, is coming to Sweet Briar this fall as a freshman.

As for me, I am loving it back at Sweet Briar, where I will be for a year as Acting Director of Public Relations while Martha von Briesen, '31, is on a leave of absence. It would be impossible to answer the questions each of you would undoubtedly like to ask, so just write your individual queries, or better still, come back for a visit. And one of you speak up to do your bit for the February issue!

Vale!

FLAPPY.

Annette Enderly Birgel has two daughters . . . Cornelia Anne, born January 8, 1945, and Carol Linda, born July 11, 1948.

Mary E. Clemons Porzelius, Bettie B. age 8, Susan age 4, and Al went to Pauley's Island, South Carolina, in June and had a wonderful time.

Helen Martin is a little closer to her botany major, as she is working in a laboratory in an Industrial Plant, which has a greenhouse and an experimental farm connected with it.

Madeline T, Hawes left Boston last May and is now doing Public Relations work with Hawaiian Pineapple Company in Honolulu. She loves the year round climate in Honolulu.

Virginia Vesey spent a week end in June with Fran Powell Zoppa and her family. Fran has two adorable daughters age 4½ and 9. Vesey saw "The Common Glory" in Williamsburg and thought it most impressive. She went by to see Anne and Sue Brooke, who now live at Virginia Beach permanently. Virginia spent a week at The Tides Inn at Irvington on the Rappahannock.

Langhorne Watts Austen was in Lynchburg during July. She left her three children, aged 7, 9, and 12, there with her mother until after Labor Day. She and George spent the last two weeks of August in Maine. Langhorne has seen Mary Moore Rome, '34.

Mary Kate Patton Bromfield's family spent a busy summer. Betsy, 10 years old, went away to camp; Susan, age 8, attended Brownie Day Camp. Bill is almost two. Mary Kate will be busy this fall with Junior League Placement Company, P.T.A., Brownies and hospital volunteer work.

Cotton Skinner Shepherd and her husband still live in Coral Gables, Florida. Her husband is still a Captain with Eastern Air Lines and Cotton, having no children, often goes with him. In the past year she has been with him to New York, St. Louis, and Atlanta. In September they vacationed in Raleigh, North Carolina, and then are going for a stay in California.

Babs Barber Wilson's husband is working with Monsanto Chemical Company in Ashtabula, Ohio.

Marjorie Morse Emling and family moved in the summer from York to Erie, Pennsylvania.

I spent a very busy month of August visiting in Hartford, Connecticut; on Upper Saranac in the Adirondacks; in Troy, New York; Bronxville, New York; Tenafly, New Jersey; Shoreham, Long Island. I had wonderful visits with Gerry Mallory and Hetty Wells Finn.

The following is an interesting bit of statistics. For this October issue of the News I sent out 61 postcards (58 double postcards and 3 single postcards) and received 7 answers.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Marjorie Lasar Hurd (Mrs. E. R., Jr.) 425 North Hanley Road, Saint Louis. Missouri.

Fund Agent: JEAN SPRAGUE, 1910 Kalorama Road, N. W., Washington 9, D. C.

Two new class babies to be reported: Lou Dreyer Bradley, who, incidentally has moved to Hastings-on-Hudson, has adopted a baby girl named Barbara Louise; and Becky Strode Lee has a July baby named Aubrey Strode. Bonnie Wood Stookey writes that she has seen Lou; also reports on a very pleasant summer and says Dot Hulchinson Howe, ex '34, has a new baby girl, Doria. Lib Scheuer Maxwell says no news from New York, but she and Charles hope to have a September vacation.

Lou Lemmon Stohlmann had the best idea yet; she and her family spent the entire summer at Sweet Briar. As she said, "We just sat around and talked to people and watched Julie grow." They did make a side trip to Williamsburg. Having had three days of S.B.C. I realize now how insidious it can be.

Julie wrote that her summer was hectic and the Fall promises same. Mentioned getting back from a vacation, but neglected to say where. Jackie has been home all summer, but she and her tribe took off for the beach in September.

Eleanor Cooke Esterly and her family spent their vacation at Balboa Island and plan to make their annual junket to Chicago and Topeka in October; she sees Betty Carter Clark from time to time, and said that Betty had spent the summer in Indiana and Chicago.

Helen Hoffecker Rochm writes that she has no news to report, but that they are still a family of three waiting for the housing shortage to cease.

Mitzi's life is always busy; sickness all winter and children in camp all summer and relatives coming and going, but she stays right with it.

Boots Shirley Patterson wrote that she and Alice and respective families were all at Pawley's Island for their vacation. Boots is in her new home and enjoying it thoroughly.

Nan Russell Carter and Helen Hanson Bamford both wrote of a terrific reunion they staged this summer at Bay Point Beach (H.'s version) and/or at Marblehead Beach (N.'s version). They both agreed on Ohio and the following statistics: Helen was there with three boys; Mary Lee Ryan Strother with two boys (one girl left at home); Eleanor Alcott Bromley there with one girl (one boy left at home); Dot Hussey Rockaway with two sons, and Nan with two boys, having left one boy and one girl at home. Oh, yes, all husbands present and accounted for except Jim Carter who was busy at the time.

I probably should be brimming with news but mine is strictly domestic and of absolutely no interest to any one but me. Love has come into my life in the form of a Laundromat and I sit transfixed day after day in my nice cool basement watching her do her stuff. Beautiful!

Please be sure to send your contributions to Julie; that is why her name appears on the masthead, girls; not just to take up space. AND, as you will remember, this is the laa—aa—aast issue of the News you will get this year if you do NOT pay them dues.

P. S. You can all be deciding who wants to write this column for the next fifteen years; this year is my swan-song. All volunteers mail names to me (joke).

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: JACQUELYN STRICKLAND (Mrs. Edward J. Dwelle, Jr.) 4910 Arapahoe Avenue, Jacksonville 5, Florida.

Fund Agent: GENEVA CROSSMAN (Mrs. Edson S. Stevens) 2151 Walnut Lake Road, R.F.D. 1, Birmingham, Michigan.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Elizabeth Crawford to Mr. Morton Byrd on July 29. Elizabeth's new address is 205 West 57th Street, New York City.

A nice letter from Gen Crossman Stevens reports a 2½ week trip during which she saw sister Betty Crossman Cook, ex '41, and daughter, Stuart, age 1½ years; Cynthia Harbison Heye and her three children; Ruth Gill Wickens and three boys and Margery Curtze Vicary and family. Gen has a busy winter already planned with P.T.A., Brownies and Community Chest. (Gen's new street address is 2151 Walnut Lake Road, Birmingham, Michigan).

Anne Baker Gerhart took in the Junior League Conference at French Lick, Indiana, last spring where she saw Becky Young Frazer, Frances Morrison Ruddell and Rose Ilyde Fales. Anne and Rose were together at St. Andrews their Junior year and had lots of memories to go over. Anne has a new home at 3482 North Frederick, Milwaukee 11, Wisconsin.

Elizabeth Broun Trout had a son in July which swells her total to two boys and a girl and while on the subject, I heard, too, that Banks McPherson Harper announces the birth of her third Sweet Briar-ite!—in July.

Eleanor Elliott Scott sent me news of their moving to Grand Island, Nebraska (1203 W. Louise). She still finds time to do social service work. She says their new location is lovely and wonderful land for fishing, riding, etc. She had heard recently from Doris Kendall Richards, Eugenia Peek Johnson and Eleanor Townsend Rector.

I know all of you join me in sending sympathy to Mary Jane Hustings Gaff who recently lost her husband.

We spent our usual summer in Blowing Rock, N. C., escaping the Florida heat and being thoroughly lazy. Judy HalliBurton Burnett, Cordelia Penn Cannon, '34, Carrie Marshall Young Gilchrist, '36, Angelia Morrison Harris, ex '33, Camille Guyton Guething, '44, and Elizabeth Lee McPhail, '36, were on hand, too. I have been accused of press-agenting Sweet Briar all summer but we have had fun reminiscing.

The Magazine will continue to come to you only if you contribute to the Alumnae Fund so why not send in your check now before the Christmas rush of things? And please drop me a card during the year. I need news of you all for my sketchy notes.

Under Dix plan, we, '39, '38, '37, '36 and '34 will "reune" together in June.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 804 Osage Avenue, Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Here we are, back at the old grind, and as usual few responses to help us out. But we are most grateful for the cards we did receive—a million thanks to those who took time out from summer fun (and heat) to answer. One of those is Maggie Cornwell Schmidt. She wrote from Michigan where she was vacationing with daughter. Ruthie, 4, has learned to swim and they are both very proud. Just before she left St. Louis she saw Wes Ward Francis at Cabbie Mitchell Ravensctoft's. Reports George very nice and most attractive and Wardie, from pictures, adorable. Wes was un her way to Denver for a Junior League Convention and hoped to see Dina Newby Adams and Nookie Hardesty O'Shea while there.

Becky Douglass Mapp has her hands full with three children and what with remodelling their 150 year old house hasn't had time to go anywhere or see anyone. Frances Kemp Pettyjohn is pretty well tied down too-she has a new son making 4 children in all, 2 of each. Sally Kirkpatrick is now Mrs. John M. Fearing-anyone know any details or her present address? Anna Mary Charles Straub is another busy mother, with two offspring, Junior League work, and fixing up a house they bought about a year ago.

Grisy Deringer Plater is excited over the prospect of living in the country. She and her husband have bought a farm in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and after repairs and changes are made, they hope to move in next spring. Terry Shaw has moved to a little house a mile off campus. She hopes to get to the West Indies again for Christmas. Her sister, Kate, enters Sweet Briar this Fall. Anne Lauman Bussey's husband has been moved to the San Francisco area so, until he finds a place to live, Annie and baby will be in Washington with her family. She reports that the new arrival, Elizabeth Carter, can't make up her mind whether to be a blond or a redhead, but either way she's a cherub!

We have had a very cool, and wet, summer, fortunately-but a very quiet and uneventful one save for two weeks in New York over Labor Day. We took the leap and are building a house so that takes our every waking thought, and a lot of dreaming ones, too. We hope to be in by Christmas but at the present rate of speed, next Christmas may be the one I mean! When finished, there'll be a guest room and the latchstring always out, so come a-visiting! Don't forget this is the only News issue you receive unless you contribute to the Alumnae Fund. Come on and give and make '37 a 100 per cent class! Under Dix plan for reunions we, '39, '38, '36, '35 and '34 will have a reunion in Juneplan now to return to S. B. C.!

1938

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: LUCY TALIAFERRO (Mrs. Charley G. Nickerson), Monroe Terrace, Laurel and Franklin Streets, Richmond 20,

I hate to follow two such fine correspondents as Dolly and Claire, but their five-year stretch deserves a rest, so here goes! I was pleased to hear from so many of those of the class who did not get to reunion with us, since Dolly covered their news so well. It seems as if there was another S. B. reunion at the Junior League Conference in Indiana in June, with our gang well represented. Jinny Faulkner Mathews told us some of the details down at college, and my cards from Mary Thompson Ball and Rose Hyde Fales were also full of it. Besides those three as officers from their towns, J. G. Stevens Scott was representing Jacksonville, Florida, as President of her League. Also Anne Baker Gerhart and "Pood" Morrison Ruddell were there from the Class of '35. How's that?

Most of the rest of my news was of vacations, but the class still gets together all along the way. In the South, lots of people have been ousted from their homes by the polio epidemic. "Dolly" Nicholson Tate has spent most of the time with her mother; but she and Vesta Murray Haselden and Dee Armfield Cannon got together down at Myrtle Beach, and the report is that they "beat their gums' as if they were just out of college. Ves promises a New York trip this fall, so maybe we'll have another rallying point for reunion.

Besides her Junior League work, Mary Thompson Ball reports that due to her Havana trip in the spring, she has been home all summer, but did manage to have lunch with Mary Cobb Hulse in Birmingham. Helen Hays Crowley had Jimmy in the hospital ten days with pneumonia, then took off for a trip to Canada and came by Cape Cod where she and Janet Macfarlan Bergmann got together for the first time in ten years and compared children. Helen expects to get some part-time work in the fall. Adele Letcher Harvey and husband and three sons-Jonathan, 5; Stephen, 31/2, and David, 1-spent their vacation at Normandy Beach, N. J., where she met Nan Dickie Neil one day.

The Richmond gang also seems to stick together. Mickey McGuire Williams writes from her farm 60 miles from Richmond that her four little girls under seven are all helpful but keep her from getting out too often. Still, Susan Gibson Davenport had come by while home from Oak Ridge, Tennessee and Molly Talcott Dodson sends her the most "fetching garments for my younger 3." A card from Kay Hoyt while visiting friends in Sakonnet, R. I., said that she had seen Janice Wiley Adams' family and they were expecting Janice home in a couple of weeks. I had hoped for a phone chat, but nobody answers so far at the Wiley home. I had a near-visit with Rilma Wilson Allen when she and Bob drove home after a motor trip all through the White Monntains and New England. In New London she had seen the Bemises, but Judy B. Wills and the two little girls hadn't arrived. Since Rilma couldn't find my house, that was two near-misses for her-and a great disappoint-

Dot Thomas Upton wrote to tell me that she has a brand new son, Luther III-the first in the family of 6 granddaughters. Frances Cargill Stone says that she is busy with secretaryship of the Larchmont Woman's Club, Class Mother for Laurie's first-grade, as well as having Richard, aged 3, at her heels-an ambitious program. Gertrude Alexanderson Young dashed off a line to say that she was just back from a summer at Lake George. Louise Bailey McDermott had also spent a couple of months at the shore, was home for August to catch up on laundry, etc., and back to the shore for September again. She says that every now and again she gets a temporary job in N. Y. C. to keep her hand, but mostly she just domesticates. Mary Brown-Serman Walke writes that they are in Vermont for the summer but will all-including three children-return soon to Portsmonth, Virginia, where her husband is the rector of Trinity Church, and that they love his job and location. Denise du Pont Zapffe says she has three children, Denise, Jr., 9; C. Moberg, 4; and Jessie G. Ball, 22 months; so she doesn't have time to ride now. She did hospital work as an aide last year as a recreation! Her husband has his own Research Lab. and enjoys his work as a Metallurgical Engineer.

And the other news about Rose Hyde Fales is that she had spent the summer in a tiny cottage near Rutland, Vermont, but was looking forward to entering her youngest girl Alice in her old school; Willia the oldest girl, is in the fourth grade. Rose is pleased because she thinks her husband's chance for another tour of duty in Washington is pretty slim.

As for us Nickersons, we sat tight-me, Charley, red-headed Clark, and the police-dog puppy, through the summer; and when I think of the number of diapers I'd have to lug, I'm glad. It was wonderful getting together again in June at S. B. C., and the added round trip with Fergie, Tison, and Macky. In Washington on the way home, I called Lucy Robb Winston Works and she told me that David has been appointed to the church in North Conway, New Hampshire, and they are thrilled. Maybe we'll get a glimpse on their way through. Thanks for all your cards-it's nice to have a full issue for this magazine that goes to the whole class, whether Fund contributors or not. Please keep up the good work, and I'll do my best to pass it on.

Had a call from Isabelle Franke de Graaf on her way home from the Cape to Florida. She said that Marion Brown Zaiser had come to see her after rennion, but as Isabelle's two boys had bronchitis, they had to converse with a screen door between them and Brownie and her two boys

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: BETSY DURHAM (Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Jr.), 32 Orne Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Fund Agent: LELIA BOND (Mrs. Joseph Preston) 240 Shenley Drive, Erie, Pennsylvania.

How to follow in the footsteps of our great ex-journalist Betsy Gawthrop, is not to be learned in six easy lessons. However, by frantic cabling, mailing, and pony express, certain bits of news of us all have come to Everyone seems to have been going somewhere, or moving lock, stock, and barrel into a new house. Heading both lists is Jean McKenney Stoddard. She and Johnny and their two daughters, Anne and Jenifer, arrived from Ecuador and were visiting in Madison, Connecticut, for two months this summer. Then came orders for the Stoddards to move from Ecuador to Panama, by rolling the work of five years into a few weeks (as McKen could actually do) they are now installed in a new house in Panama. It must have been a back-breaking job, and a great many saludos to the Stoddards from us all.

The Dyers have been going places, too. Yvonne and Danny spent part of the spring in Bermuda, and later spent a month at Westhampton, L. I., with their two little girls Susan and Diana. Yvonne is the one girl who runs into Sweet Briar girls at every turn, every day, and on the hour.

Cribbs Johnston Crocker has been visiting in Scarsdale, after making the trip from Pensacola with her seven year old daughter, Mandy, so that's quite a jump. Hylah Coley Kitchel came over from Old Greenwich, Connecticut, with her grownup daughter Heather, aged 81/2 years, to play with Susan Dyer. They spent the time in the wading pool, which seemed the perfect entertainment for any age during the summer's heat waves.

Lelia Bond Preston has moved from Pennsylvania to a new house in Scarsdale. It evidently wins all the blue ribbons for charm and comfort, and Lelia and her husband Joe have done all the decorating themselves.

Kay Oriet Osborne was visiting Leila, and had made some stunning chintz curtains for the Preston's new house-and even hung them herself! As for the Osbornes they are coming up this way and are building a new house in Duxbury, Massachusetts.

Another new landowner is Thready and her husband, Fritz Downs. They have just moved into their new house in Bristol, Con-

Betty Frazier Rinchart has been visiting the Downs in Connecticut and before that had spent July with her family in McGregor Bay, Ontario. Now that she is at home in Tulsa, Oklahoma, she must still be a bit breathless.

Jane Parker Washburn has been visiting in Larchmont, N. Y., and brought along her son Steve and daughter Linda for the younger generation to meet.

The Louisville Stoddards (not to be confused with the Panama branch) have been traveling around, too. Brooke and Gracey Luckett Stoddard visited Claffied and Tommy Williams in Cohasset, Massachusetts, this summer. The Williams made-over boat house was the scene of the great reunion, and Gracey told all about little Gracey, who is four years old, and Brooke, Jr., who is just over one. Father Brooke is working for a publishing house, and ves-you guessed it-they are moving to Columbus, Ohio.

Another family transplanted to a new field are the Framptons. Ellie and Bill and their daughters, Anne and "Ritchie" are completely at home now in Abington, Pennsylvania. They all love it and Ellie says she sees a lot of Anne Benedict Swain, and Molly Gruber Stoddart, who live close by.

Boot Vanderbilt Brown and John have been spending their vacation at Squam Lake, New Hampshire, and living in sweaters and tweeds while the rest of us wilted.

Augusta Saul Edwards and her husband seem to win the New House Race, for they not only have bought a new house in Roanoke, Virginia, but Augusta has proudly presented Dick and their two boys with a baby sister just before moving day. The member of the class of 1969 is named Elizabeth Augusta Edwards, and we know she is as pretty as her name.

When in Richmond last month, I ran into Julie Saunders Michaux several times. She is the newly elected President of the Richmond Sweet Briar Alumnae Association and has a full time job on her hands. Yet she still finds time to be Chairman of the Junior League Old Clothes Sales, and is making Hattie Carnegie's seem very dull in comparison.

She sees a lot of Mary Frances Buchanan Flowers, and it seems the Flowers' children are the best mannered in all of Richmond, What is your secret, Mary Frances?

Many thanks from all of us, Betsy, for keeping us so up to date with our class these past three years. You did a superb job, and now you can sit back and wait for the issues to roll in-or are you, too, moving into a lovely new house on a hill.

Everyone of us is getting this October issue, and I hope will be wanting to receive the other three ALUMNAE NEWS. You can do this by sending in your contribution to our Alumnae Fund. Do it now and help our fund grow as fast as it can.

Couldn't gather much for you this timepeople to whom I wrote were probably still a'summering and didn't get my pleas. Ifowever, what I can report is most interesting.

A hasty note from Shirley Devine disclosed happy plans for her marriage to Jack Clemens on September 10. It was to be a quiet wedding in Westfield, New York, followed by a fishing trip to Georgian Bay,

There are several new young ones which I'll catalogue.

Betty Doucett Neill had a son August 10, named for his father-John Edmonds, Jr.

In July, Bobbie Clark Dickey also had a

Another son in June was born to Lucy Parton Miller, ex '41, Arthur Parton.

Pat Sorenson Ackard was different, for her new baby is Peggy Ann, born June 28.

Helen Watson Hill was my best correspondent. She and George spent three weeks in Maine this summer with Jett. I can report on myself too, a vacation in Michigan and a summer of painting our new house-it's all finished and we're in. John and I would be glad to teach anyone the art of painting kitchens and baseboards.

Greetings from the land of "dem bums." Let me thank you all for your wonderful response to my cards, it was good to hear from so many of you, and to be able to pass the news along. Remember that you can read this news only if you contribute to the Alumnae Fund, keep your news pouring in to me and your money to the Alumnae Office. Most of the news consisted of busy mothers reporting busy hours with busy little tots. Here's how it came to me, sorry that each letter cannot be reproduced in full.

Grace Bugg Muller-Thym is now living in Havre de Grace, Maryland, where Harry has gone into business with his Dad. They have 2 children, Harry, 2 plus; and Anne Wilson, Eloise English Davies had a 2nd son born in June.

Alice King wrote glowingly of her coming marriage in October to Morris Harrison from Memphis. Vive Walker Montgomery will be the matron of honor. Vive also wrote of a visit from Alice, at the same time boasted of her three offspring, Warren, 4; Walker, 18 months; and Eugenia, 2 months.

Betty Duffield is another prospective bride, she will marry Wayne Fagans.

Dorothy Hutchings Price announced the birth of a son, Leonard Paxton, in March. She wonders now how they ever lived without him.

Anne Chamberlain Carman has done a lot of traveling since she married a Lt. Col. in the Army. At the last station she contracted malaria, and does not recommend it to anyone.

Joanne Oberkirch Willis had a daughter, Karen, born in July.

Betty Hanger has a wonderful position as Secretary to the Dean at Washington University in St. Louis. On the side, she is active in Sunday School work and the Naval Reserve. This summer the Hanger family took an extensive trip to the West.

Cherry Dearstyne has recently taken up her duties as Assistant Field Director for the Red Cross at the Veterans Hospital in Richmond. She would love to get in touch with all Sweet Briar girls.

Alice Survey Weed became the bride of George H. on June 11, and is now spending her time fixing up a home. Fannie, Carl and the two children have visited them.

Jean Hedley Currie presented Candace Gail (Candy) to the world on July 17.

Jeanne Buzby Runkle was married on June 19, and is now living in Baltimore where her husband is with Westinghouse.

Jane Taylor Lowell is shouting with glee because her Naval husband is finally getting 2 years of shore duty, and they will settle down in Washington, D. C₁₂ with their two children, Bobbie and Joan. Bobbie sings "I'm a Sophomore" and "Sitting on the Golden Stairs."

Pat Brightbill is doing technicians work at the Women's Medical College Hospital in Philadelphia.

Barbara Engb Croft is living in California with her three children: Billy, 3½; Mimi, 22 months; and Douglas, 10½ months. Bobbie told of her sister, Jean, who is married to a Lt. Col., living in Anchorage, Alaska, and loving it.

Douglas Woods Sprunt continues her active life with a Junior League Television Show and work at the Children's Hospital in Washington. Worth is in an Opthomology residency at the Episcopal Hospital. Last summer the Sprunts spent 2 months touring Mexico.

Margie Troutman Harbin claims that most of her time is dedicated to her 2 sons, ages 3 and 1½.

Ruth Hensley Camblos has returned to Asheville, N. C., to live. Josh is now Associate with Dr. Marshall Lee (Betty Lee's brother) in surgery at Norburn Hospital. Ruth, Josh, Josh, Jr., and Heleo Stuart, born last April, have a home right on the hospital grounds.

Polly Peyton Turner is another Navy wife celebrating shore duty for a 2 year period. Carol is stationed in Norfolk where they hope to have quarters soon. The twins, now 4 years old, are at a most difficult stage, wails Polly. Polly was one of five who returned for reunion last June.

Mary Alice Bennett Dorrance told me of seeing Nancy Gilbert Howland who was living in New York at that time. I am going to try to locate her.

Cynthia Abbott Botsford raved joyfully about their newly acquired home in the Turtle Bay section of Manhattan. Cynthia and family, Peter, 3½, and Kathy, 1, are spending the summer at Quogue, L. L., where Cynthia is a chorus cutie in the "Quogue Quips," "Shades of Senior Show." Jeanne Sawyer is sorely needed.

Lucy Call Dabney took a northern trip and saw Cynthia, looking as glamorous as ever. Also saw Margaret Kelly Gardiner, Debbie Wood Davis in her new apartment in White Plaios, and Barbara Bull Peake, who has since left for the Dominican Republic. Virginia

McGuire Brent is living in Richmond, and now has 3 children, Virginia, Roberta, and Elizabeth Marshall, Poose's Todd, Jr., is 4.

Diana Greene Helfrich is very active in a Little Theatre in Arlington, Virginia, and is also busy with her hobby of building model railroads. Daughter, Hope, requires the rest of her time.

Virginia Duggins is back from Germany and is living in Washington where she is working at George Washington Hospital on her "brain machine." While in Germany she saw Harriette Gordon Lowman, well established in a large home with servants.

Frances Meck Young and "Widget," otherwise known as Melissa Rumsey, have moved back to Columbus from Louisville. They have bought a house and are preparing to get settled. Frannie saw Virgioia Beasley at a Horse Show, where Beasle walked off with another blue ribbon.

Sally Schall Van Allen is another Capitol dweller.

Mimi Gallouay Manire was living in Charlottesville where her husband was Editor of the Law Review.

Margaret Leonard Baker has a daughter who starts nursery school in the Fall. The Bakers spent their vacation in Hingham, Mass., catching and eating plenty of fish.

Lucy (Calamity) Hodges Fuller and son, Allen Jr., are in Alexandria while Allen serves on the surgery staff at Ft. Meyer. They pass their free time learning to sail and teaching young Allen to swim.

Ethel Charles Lindsay Martin took a Sociology course while her husband attends the University of Pittsburgh and works at the Mellon Institute.

Betsy Gilmer Tremain has two daughters, Lynne and Ann, and since her maid has departed, Bets has been kept stepping. She and Mike managed to get to Williamsburg for a brief vacation. In June, Betsy, Sudie, Martha and I, and husbands, of course, had a reunion on the St. Regis roof.

Jeanne Sawyer Faggi lives in a little green cottage in Shanks Village, a veterans' development here in New York. John is slaving for his M.A. and PhD. at Columbia. Their son Johnny is now 3¹2.

Mary Ruth (Rufus) Pierson Fischer called me from Jamaica, L. I., to say that she and Ted were leaving for an extensive tour of State Fairs throughout New York State. They will advertise under a yellow silk canopy, Fischer Products, Inc.

Ruth Jacquot Tempest wrote me a wonderful letter describing their life in mining towns and on the New Mexico desert. R. B. is a mining engineer with Kennecott Copper Corp. Rut has a son but manages to spend a couple of hours a week working on the little town paper, and doing volunteer work for the Red Cross. Watch for Rut's name, for we may hear great things of her.

Virginia Moomau' Hall was married to Bill in May. After a gay honeymoon to Canada, they returned to their own cosy apartment in Roanoke.

Elsie Diggs Orr and Sam have finally bought their dream home and have spent many wonderful hours fixing it up. They have two sons, Marshall and Peter. Helen Sanford, from way down Texas way, claims she has no news except that she sports around in an Austin, which she does not wish to have confused with a Crosley.

Susanne Hogue Deas, daughter Zan and son Hank (Henry, Jr.,) have spent the summer gallivacting from Wrightsville Beach to Sullivac's Island.

Margaret Becker Schiltges regaled me with tales of daughter, Beth's activities. She sounds like quite the child, full of fun.

Tom, Ann Dawson, age 2, and 1 are living in Brooklyn where Tom is stationed at Ft. Hamilton doing Pediatrics for the Army. Wish I had more exciting news of myself, but I could not make the deadline. Some news letter, let's have this fine a response to all of them. You gals who did not get your name in print, WRITE. Contribute to the Fund. Hasta luego.

I didn't think there would be anything to say after such a complete reunion—issue report, but people seem to keep on having babies, at least Harriet Sucnson Munschauer wrote me of several including her owo, Carol Ann, boro April 17. Also Forrest Fraoklin Haller, March baby of Harriette Morris Haller, and Richard Arthur Leaman arriving June 27 for Jody Willis and Claude Leaman. Harriette herself seems much pleased with her offspring but nevertheless was looking forward to a vacation without same at the Thousand Island Club.

Prinimy Johnston Craven posted me on Margaret Suindell Dickerman's new daughter, Alice Hall, born in May, and on her own recent reproduction, Christopher, born in July. Besides Mese Jimmy and Karen Norris Sibley have announced the arrival of their third, Jack Norris Sibley on June 15, while Janie Lampton and Ed Middleton had a daughter, Anita Gheens on July 12. Janie wrote me earlier that Mary Wheeler Hilliard had a daughter, Helen, toward the end of May. It seems a lot of people had the same reason for not coming to the Reunion.

Janie had seen Jane Findlay Tate and met her husband, Charlie, shortly before they were married. She said Findlay was very happy and they had a grand time together in New York. As for the wedding—Findlay wrote me that Muie Grynnes was there and that she heard it was quite an affair. Seems to have been in somewhat of a daze herself. They went to The Homestead in Hot Springs on their honeymoon.

Thanks to a better than usual response (much obliged, girls) to my cards from the Canadian back woods! I surprised myself by having a few other items beside infantidings. However, it was a bit depressing to have several people come proudly to my aid with news I told you all about in the last magazine. A contribution (ahem!) to the Fund should bring you 3 issues after this Fall one so check with the Alumnae Office on your address if things seem to be fouled up.

Ouija Adams Bush has been tripping about as usual. She saw Virginia White and Frances Taylor Trigg in Richmond, Frances Gregg Petersmeyer and Sandy Packard Hubbard in Bronxville. She reports that "Tay" and Locke's baby is darling, and that Locke, now finished school is working in Richmond. She had also seen B. J. Leighton Lane and Chet, who still works for the Newark Baseball Club and loves his job. (He must-took them to a baseball game for entertainment in good old busman holiday style.) Onija also had a letter from Prentiss Jones Hale telling of their plans for a house outside of New Haven and of her job as gift buyer for the Junior League Shop.

Judy Snow Benoit also has great plans for a house in Falmouth but they seem definitely further from completion than Prentiss'. Judy had got together with Beanie in New York where they yelled at each other over the lunch table for an hour, much to husband Arthur's amusement. Apparently he has not been fully initiated into those genteel S. B. sessions.

Bean since then has gone to Europe. She says "Teddy will be covering western Europe for the overseas News Agency and I'll be freelancing (polite term for quietly drowning myself in a bottle of Calvados in a favorite bistro)." They will be based in Paris. Before she left she had seen a good bit of Muie who has an apartment in N. Y. C. now.

A short note from Marjorie Shugart Dennehy says that Tod expects new orders any time but is trying to get stationed there in Norfolk where they have got pretty well settled. They have been having a gay time and playing a lot of golf.

Anne McJunkin Briber writes of getting Jane off for Europe, plans to see Barbara Duncombe ('44) and husband, and of her daughter whose "hair gets blonder and straighter by the minute and still doesn't have a tooth in her head." She also saw Betty Weems Westfeldt several times in Denver and had most complimentary things to say about her two boys.

I was so sorry to hear from Lucy Kiker Jones of the death of Caroline Miller Mc-Clintock's oldest son in July. He had polio. Her baby son had it, too, but in a mild form and she hopes for a complete recovery with him. I am sure you all join with Lucy and myself in deepest sympathy for her.

Lucy spent the month of July at Virginia Beach where she had a marvelous time. She saw Esther Jett, who has been dividing her time between working for her father and enjoying herself at the beach.

My family took the annual jaunt to Nova Scotia so I have just returned from there. Spent a couple of days with Ping, took off for a screaming houseparty in New Hampshire where nobody took a bath or ate a meal for 3 days, and am recuperating at Fay Martin Chandler's. Both Fay and Ping look very well and have adorable children. Ping's husband has stopped working at the Veterans Hospital here and is going to practice Thoracic Surgery in Portland, Maine. They have just bought a house there and a September move is in order. Fay has heard from Tookie Kniskern White who seems to be having a grand time seeing the Hawaiian Islands and moving into her new home. Fay herself has recently returned from a good summer in Nantucket which I won't go into as I have exhausted my will power sticking to this job.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Connie Sue Budlong, Occupational Therapy Department, Box 181, Kennedy Veterans Hospital, Memphis 15, Tennessee.

Fund Agent: ELLEN BOYD DUVAL, 3211 Grove Avenue, Richmond 21, Virginia.

Had a very excited letter from Lulu announcing her departure for Europe for what sounded like a wonderful trip. Don't know how long or where she'll be most of the time. Hope lots of our class have seen the fabulous cookbook with Lulu illustrations-it's quite new and very good-"The Care and Feeding of Friends."

Just missed Susie Somervell Griswold in Williamstown, Massachusetts, but heard that she is fine. Living in New York most of the time.

Pat Patton MacMinnis looked just as cute as ever in April. Her daughter, Gay, is a darling and at least half as tall as her mama at 3. Anita Lippitt Clay and Lieutenant Commander Tom were in Newport then and such southern cooking-nothing vague about Lippitt in the kitchen. She's really a wonderful cook. Now a grand mother, too, I imagine, to little Stuart McGuire Clay, born in April. Nita could be prejudiced but she says he's a wonderful baby, as good natured and adorable as he can be. The Clavs are living in Washington now.

Mr. and Mrs. William N. Fessenden (Alice Johnson, '44) announced the birth of a daughter, Lucinda Carl, on August 3, 1948, in Caracas, Venezuela.

Learned about a few people from E. B. Duval in Richmond. She's doing fine work in a new job at the Vanderbilt Museum there. She says Hannah Mallory Perkins is very happy and well. (Will have had a child by the time the NEWS comes out.) Fence Williams is teaching school and loves it.

The Toledo Briarites are great travelers it seems. Pat Stickney and Joan Gipc Lewis have both had wonderful vacations this summer, including a marvelous time at the Berkshire Festival, and my nice husband let me drag him down to see what Sweet Brian looked like after four long years. It's been a grand visit and most of the finest faculty members seem to be here still. I can't wait to see the campus peopled with members of our class next June. It will be loads of fun.

Class Secretary: MARTHA HOLTON, 2318 Densmore Drive, Toledo, Ohio.

Fund Agent: AUDREY BETTS, 211 West Fisher Avenue, Greensboro, North Carolina.

Several of our classmates seem to have decided that it was time to travel a bit. Jodie Morgan and Jane McJunkin left in early August for a 6 weeks tour of Europe. They sailed on the Queen Elizabeth and expect to get back on the 14th of September. Thanks to Mrs. McJ. for this tidbit.

ROBBY MORGAN, SON OF MIA HECHT

Dede Enright went over with her mother in March. They flew over, visited London, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, and spent a month in Paris. Dede decided to stay longer when her mother came back in June. Since June 1st she has spent some time in Switzerland where she was able to meet Swiss people and see a little of the real Swiss life. She has also met several S. B. C.'ers on her travels, according to her mother. Dede had planned to visit Nice, France, and then go to Spain, Portugal, Italy, in September, and the British Isles in October.

One of the latest additions to our families is Edna Frances, born to Liz Joseph Boykin on July 26, 1948.

The marriage of Helen Olson to James Roberson Pope in Okmulgee, Okla., on July 17 was announced by her aunt, Mrs. Poindex-

At this point I would like to ask anyone who has moved or been married during the past two years to send a postcard with her new address and/or name to me or the Alumnae Office. 'Twould be a great help.

Also since all alumnae get this issue, a reminder to send in your contribution to the Alumnae Fund is in order. Only those who contribute at least three dollars will receive the following three issues of the NEWS.

Ellen Gilliam is still enjoying her work in the Alderman Library in Charlottesville. Frances Brantly Goodwin is doing part time work there in the Rare Books Room while her husband attends the University. El saw Edith Farr Elliott who is living in a cute trailer on Copeley Hills. Edith is returning to St. Anne's to teach dramatics this year.

Mary Kathryn Frye Hemphill sent a snapshot of daughter, Kathryn, and said that husband, Sam, had become a Certified Public Accountant. She may well be proud of both. Mary Kathryn had a note from Ellen Dodson saying that she and her husband were taking care of a five bedroom house this summer.

Anna Mary Chidester recently visited Marian Keddy Lee and relates that Marian has a very cute daughter, Kathryn Burks, born in April, 1948. Marian is housekeeping most of the time hut manages to find time to carry on some dramatic activities with the Little Theater in Shanks Village. Anna Mary spent a month in and near Ocean City, New Jersey, and has a nice tan as a result.

Mia Hecht Morgan sent a grand letter. She and husband Tom spent the 4th of July in the mountains at Highlands, N. C. Hilda Hude Voigt and Sarah Temple Moore and husbands walked in on Mia in the dining room and all enjoyed the unexpected get-together. Mia said that she and Tom had found a home in July and have been in the throes of painting and carpentering ever since. It is a modest white shingle ranch type house with a fine yard for son Robbie. From the photo Mia enclosed, Robbie looks like a boy who will make good use of his play space. Their new address is 749 Woodward Way, N. W., Atlanta, Ga.

I hope you all had a nice summer and will take time out to send me a few details of your recent activities for the next issues of the NEWS.

Wedding bells are ringing gaily this summer. On June 16 Emily Albert became Mrs. James Ross Hanahan. Mia Hecht Morgan, '45, was her matron of honor. Emily loves keeping house and loves being back in Atlanta. Pat Luke was married to John P. Bryden, III, on June 26. Pat attended Vassar after leaving Sweet Briar at the end of freshman year.

Bea Dinguell writes that she has been floating on a lovely pink cloud since announcing her engagement this July. She is planning a February wedding. Bea also tells us that Peggy Todd will be married in September and that Clara Nicol has set September 10 as her wedding date. Nancy Waite is another early fall bride. I'm sorry not to be able to give you any more details, but I hope to hear all the particulars from the brides themselves.

Helen Mnrchison has had a very exciting summer. First she announced her engagement to Ed Lowe of Jacksonville. Then she and Dotty Sne Calduell set off on a trip to Europe. Ellen Thackray and Betty Ann Bass sailed on the Queen Elizabeth on August 21. They will be gone about seven weeks and hope to see Larry Laurence Houis in Paris. Another globe trotter is Leila Fellner Piel. The Piels are setting out for China where David will work with a young movie company. Mary Lou Holton spent the summer in Canada where she studied in Montreal.

Cholly Jones Bendall sends news of Carolyn Rudolph's wedding in July. The Lees of Amberst went down to Montgomery to tie the knot. Cholly is living in Richmond where Bro is a sophomore at the Pharmacy School of the Medical College of Virginia. She was delighted to find Julia Jerman Neal living on the same block. I wish there was space to print her description of Julia's charming danghter and Jean Pollard Kline's wonderful son. Polly's husband is with the Richmond News-Leader.

There is big news from Jane Cook Beirnes. Her son, James Richardson Beirnes, Jr., was born on July 1. Jane often sees Lynn Hannah Crocker who is now living in Evanston and says that Lynn is doing quite a lot of singing on the radio and in operettas. Barbara Stern Piermont is living in Fair Lawn, New Jersey. She and Donald have two children, Donald, Jr., 21/2 years, and Jack, 2 months. Palmour Holmes McIntyre declared that she feels very settled and domestic. She and Pope have been living in Atlanta about a year. Pope graduated from law school and is now practicing law there. She and her 11/2 year old daughter often see Bowdre Budd Poer and her daughter and Jessie Strickland Elcock and her son. Ellen Robbins Red stopped in Atlanta on her way back from Crutcher Field Harrison's wedding and Marguerite Emmert Baldwin was back from Texas for a visit this summer.

Jean Carter writes that she is forsaking New York City and the Beauty Department of Harpers Bazaar for Chattanooga. Tody Corrocan has definitely not been loafing since her "retirement." She does a daily column for the Jacksonville Journal as well as her regular reporting. Her column, "World of Women," includes short biographical sketches of leading women, fashion notes, and even recipes and menus.

I had a wonderful letter from Mildy Reed putting us up to date on her busy life since leaving Sweet Briar. She graduated from Barnard in 1946 and married Ned Hall. They lived in Denver where Ned was a professor of anthropology at the University of Denver. Mildy found time to serve on the Mayor's Committee on Human Relations and to teach a course at the university. The Halls are now back east and Ned will be teaching at Bennington College this winter.

It has been wonderful to hear from so many of you. Please send me loads of newsy letters just as often as you can. I hope to have lots of news for you in the next issues. Do remember the Alumnae Fund Drive. As you know the next three issues of the News go only to the alumnae who have contributed to the fund.

Class Secretary: Sallie Bailey, 430 North Blonnt Street, Raleigh, North Carolina.

Fund Agent: Frances Gardner. North Shore Point, Algonquin Pk., Norfolk 8, Virginia.

Dear Class:

I did not get many replies this time because I did not send out many cards, but the letters I received were excellent, and I send heartfelt thanks for them.

Judy Burnett wrote me a wonderful letter telling me that her engagement to John Halsey has been announced. They will be married November 6 at Judy's home with a reception afterwards at the club. Judy also writes that she saw Jenne Belle Bechtel and Kay Fitzgerald in Philadelphia. Kay plans to continue working in New York, and Sue Fitzgerald is going to teach music this winter.

Cynthia Bemiss Stuart went to Europe on her wedding trip. Peggy Robertson also went to Europe for six weeks, and I have had cards from Louise Crawford, '46, and Catherine Smart, '46, saying their grand tour of the continent was wonderful. "Birdhead" White sailed to Europe on the Queen Mary and is expected to return in September. Peggy Pitman Dee also is in Europe. Margaret Munnerlyn has returned. Europe has really had an eyeful of S. B. C. girls.

Jane Arthur Etheridge graduated from the University of Miami in February. She returned to Sweet Briar for May Day this spring.

I had a grand letter from "Bizzy" Caldwell, who received her M.A. degree in dramatics at Western Reserve University in Cleveland. This winter she will be in New York studying at the Neighborhood Playhouse under Sanford Meisner and Martha Graham. She is pursuing her dramatics with real fervor, and I expect Sweet Briar College will soon boast of the successor to Sarah Bernhardt.

Liz Abbot also wrote very enthusiastically of the drama. Her Thespian urge came to life when she had the lead in the Lynchburg Little Theatre production, "Years Ago." She has forsaken teaching, although she enjoyed it, in order to devote more time to the drama. She writes that Margie Redfern, Martha Smith, and Jean Old spent a night with her on their continental tour. Liz visited Nat Hall Chisholm in Erie and spoke with high praise of Nat's excellent housekeeping. While there, Liz had lunch with Sue Van Cleve Riehl, who is building a house. Liz says Sue's year old daughter, Christy, is just adorable. After her visit in Pennsylvania, Liz went to New York City and had a woderful time sightseeing. She went to the Little Assembly and met diplomats Kaduggan and Kalik. She passed on the word to me that Trudy Vars is now Mrs. Ed Harris.

Ann Colston, my excellent reporter in Cleveland, is working on the Cleveland Plain Dealer. She writes that Maria Tucker took a tour of Canada and has now decided to go to work. Liz Ripley is working for her father. Jackie Schreck is a secretary for the Eldred Players, a dramatic organization at Western Reserve University. Colston also informed me that Meredith Slane spent six weeks at Chautauqua in New York and that Sam McMullen is married and living in Alexandria, Va. Sammy wrote Colston that Em Schuber was in the Rhododendron Festival in Asheville.

Betsy Mullen is still at Governors Island, New York. She plans to go to business school this fall. She has taken up golf and sewing as hobbies, but I think she still finds time for West Point and Dartmouth.

Ann Briggs is working at the Metropolitan National Bank in Washington, and she likes it so much she is considering taking courses at the American Institute of Banking.

Saravette Royster is in New York City, where she has a wonderful position as secretary to an executive at NBC at Radio City. She started there in June, and already she has had a promotion. I heard by the grapevine that Saravette and Blair Burwell visited La-Vonne Wright at Cape Cod this summer.

In August I started working, and I have the most wonderful job. I am a receptionist, stenographer, and flower waterer in the Crystal Room at the Mother and Daughter Store here in Raleigh. It is a beautiful place, and the clothes are darling, and our bridal salon is the best in the U. S. A. I'm just wild about it. I am going to night school to finish my business course, and I do Junior League work whenever I can. My other plans for this fall include heading a girl scout troop and teaching Sunday school. It is a busy life, but a wonderful one. My only other news is that I am at last 21!

P. S. and Nota Bene! Be sure to contribute to the Alumnae Fund. Remember, if you don't, you won't get to read this sensational column but once a year.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Liz Abbott, in company with Martha, Jean, and Margie dropped into the Alumnae Office to regale us with tales of Mexico, etc. Their adventures will grace the February issue of the News.

1948

Class Secretary: Audrey Lahman, 1408 Locust Street, Sterling, Illinois.

Fund Agent: Anne Ricks, 1506 Westwood Avenue, Richmond 22, Virginia.

You all were wonderful to respond so quickly to my plea for news. When I read your cards and letters I began to feel like I'd just had a coke in the Senior Parlor with each one of you. So much has happened to so many of us in so little time that I scarcely know where to begin.

It seems like the brides deserve first place though, because of sheer numerical superiority, if nothing else. Betty Lou Bruton (ex '48), began the trend June 14 in Memphis. Phil Thorpe was B'Lou's maid-of-honor, and Liz Hooks was among the bridesmaids.

There was a double feature in the annals of the class of '48 on June 16 when Janie Leach became Mrs. Stephen Cluskey Cromwell, Jr., in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and Marge McCallum was married to Bill Anderson at Haddon Heights, New Jersey. Sweet Briar was well represented at Janie's very lovely wedding by Weezie Lloyd, Blair Graves, Boots Johnston, Dot Wallace, Kax Berthier, Ann Fiery, Judi Campbell and me. Boots, incidentally, looks grand, and is busy doing volunteer social work in Toledo.

Weezie has no immediate plans beyond bridesmaiding at her sister's wedding this fall. Chances are that she'll share an apartment in New York, after the first of the year, with Ces Youmans who'll be working on her M.A. at Columbus.

Martha Sue Skinner and Nela Wattley were bridesmaids at Marge's wedding. The wedding was missed, however, by Mayde Ludington and Mary Jo Armstrong, who were sailing the same night for Europe. I've received one post card from our Oxford cousins saying they like Europe so much that they've extended their sailing date to September 9 and are taking in France, Switzerland, Belgium and Holland. Can't wait to hear more about that trip.

June 26 was another big day. Ginny Wurzbach was married in New York and Indie Bain Lindsay in Norfolk. Kax was a bridesmaid in Ginny's wedding and Nancy Vaughn, Lyn Irvine and I were among the spectators. I spent that week-end with Lyn, and I can't tell you how good it seemed to see her out 'n' round.

Norfolk was virtually turned upside-down for six weeks by a round of parties for Indie Bain and Peggy Addington that brought out-of-towners Betty Johnson, Caroline Rankin, Kitty Doolin, Liz Barbour, Eleanor Potts, Pat Smith, Beezie DeVore, and Wayne Stokes as guests, as well as Norfolkites Patty Traugott, Helen Pender, Mary Pierce and Betsy Plunkett. Indie Bain returned from her honeymoon to be Peggy's matron-of-honor in a lovely garden wedding July 10. Peggy and Twohy honeymooned in Europe and are now living in Richmond, while Indie has moved to Charlottesville, fixed up their apartment, and has a job in the lab at the hospital.

On June 30 Martha Frye was married to Rev. Harold Terry in Hickory, North Carolina. Pat Goldin and Nita Minchew were in the wedding, and Suzanne Hardy and Felicia Jackson attended the doin's. Suzanne has been going to summer school at Chapel Hill.

Eve Godchaux became Mrs. Herbert Hirsch in New Orleans in the best French-major tradition on Bastille Day, July 14. Rosemary Gugert, Bea Backer, and Ginny Holmes were among the guests.

Kay Fulton was married in Roanoke August 6. Gugey and Martha Davis were in the wedding and Blair Graves, Jane Ransom and Westray Boyce were among those-present. Blair, whom I saw while visiting Jane in Roanoke, was modeling college clothes in a Roanoke shop. Jane is returning to Vanderb.lt this year for an M.S. in chemistry.

Mary McDuffie and Lee Redmond were married in Columbus, Georgia, August 27. Jenne Belle Bechtel came down for the wedding, stayed with Sally Davis, and stopped off to visit Pat Cansler on her way home. Pat's teaching kindergarten, working with the Little Theatre Group in Charlotte, and doing volunteer work at the hospital.

August 31 was the date of Twink Elliott's marriage to Warren Sockwell in Huntsville. The date is so recent that I haven't been able to get details on it.

Rucker has set her date for October 15. There are rumors of other engagements, but they are still unofficial. You'll get the big scoop next time though.

Vital Statistics Department: About the time the rest of us were clutching our diplomas for the first time, Jodie Vestal Lyon was having a son, Robert, Jr. Jodie and Bob are living in Laurel, Virginia.

Looks like we're a travelin' as well as a marryin' class. Jane Luke spent part of the summer in England, Scotland, and the Scandinavian countries. She's in med school at Virginia now, more power to her!

Sally Pearre is in England with her sister. Meon and Vickie went to California this summer, as well as Ann Paxson, who took in Chicago, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and the Grand Canyon. (I sound like one of those men in train stations that calls off the stops over the loud-speaker only you never can understand him.)

Martha Garrison also went west, spending three weeks on a Montana ranch. She's now beginning an eight month's secretarial course. Anne Ryland payed her a visit out in Cincinnati early in the summer.

Mary Pierce, Helen Pender and Betsy Plunkett are all in secretarial school in Norfolk, although Pierce took time out to visit Caroline Rankin in Louisville and to vacation in Michigan. Betsy did likewise in order to reune with Bitter Suite-mates Felicia Jackson, Nita Minchew, and Diane King at Sea Island in August.

Kitty Doolin is resourcefully and ambitiously teaching herself to type and hopes to find a job at the Naval Academy.

Evie Sharp is doing graduate work at Wellesley, while Ginny Holmes has a teaching fellowship at the University of Wisconsin.

Nan Steptoe suffered a bitter blow when word of her acceptance at Oxford arrived two days after her ship sailed.

Kax has spent a very busy summer at the Plymouth Playhouse. I know she was busy because I visited her one week-end and I've never seen people work so hard.

Ardis Fratus is taking a three months home economics course in Boston. McCall summered in Alabama and Pris Masten is moving back to her beloved Connecticut.

Several of us are already working. Jane Shoesmith has a job in the personnel department of a manufacturing plant in Roselle, New Jersey.

Polly Rollins is also doing personnel work in an employment agency and loves it.

Liz Barbour is putting her mathematical mind to work in the Bureau of Naval Research in Washington and is living with Miss Estes, a former member of the Sweet Briar faculty. Betty Kernan is in Washington, too, working for the F. B. 1. Pottsie is also working in Washington.

Bea Backer has a job in a library, Isabel Dzung is working at Princeton, and Jeanne Morell is teaching.

Nancy Vaughn and I have become Washington bureaucrats. Nancy is working for the State Department and I for the Securities and Exchange Commission. We're apartment-hunting at this stage, but when we find this very elusive commodity, you all have a standing invitation to visit us, although you may have to sleep in a dresser drawer. You know, since I'll be living with Cupid Vaughn, I can practically assure you of news for future issues.

Nancy Moses, who had a wonderful-sounding vacation in Mexico this summer, and Diane King will probably join us later.

For one other bit of Sweet Briar news, Luke, Nancy V., and I drove through S. B. one Sunday afternoon, saw the new date house, which looks darling, and learned that plumbing has been installed in the Pent-House. Guess we were born just one year too soon.

I don't know what Ricky's duties as fundraiser include, but my crass commercial sense is running away with me, and I'd just like to remind you that a contribution to the alumnae fund will bring you the next three issues of the Alumnae News for free.

Please don't forget to write. I certainly do enjoy hearing from you.

The Alumnae Fund for 1948-49 is for faculty salaries

Council Jottings

Due to Amelia Hollis Scott, Jr.'s arrival on January 16, 1949, Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, is Acting President of the Alumnae Association this year. Amelia has another daughter, Sue, 17 and Tom, Jr., 15.

This is Edith's third term on the Alumnae Council and she will continue to act as Director of Alumnae Clubs together with supervising association activities.

Lucy Lloyd, '41, recently reelected to the Council, was forced to resign because she has accepted a business position. Mrs. John B. Powell (Mary Moss, '30) of 121 Woodlawn Road, Roland Park, Baltimore 10, Maryland, will fill the vacancy created by Lucy's resignation. Mary was an economics and sociology major at Sweet Briar and is the mother of two children. She has been active in Red Cross, Community Chest, P.-T. A. and Junior League work in Baltimore.

Harriet Evans Wyckoff has resigned from the Council to accompany her husband on a two-year government assignment in Greece. She has been serving as Alumnae Representative Chairman in the Washington area for the past year.

Announcing . . .

A NEW ALUMNAE CLUB PROGRAM

At spring alumnae gatherings the Alumnae Council urges you to begin a study of the problems of education below the college level. The Alumnae Council and college personnel will help you plan your study.

Miss Lucas Suggests a Beginning to Your Program

A lot of desperate remedies are being tried on our sick world. But they will add up to just that much waste effort if we neglect the very foundations of the world's future, the education of our children. There have been no more grim headlines in our news of the last few years than the repeated references to the crucial teacher shortage, bringing lowered standards and inadequate educational facilities throughout the schools of our own as well as other countries. Everywhere, unqualified persons are filling the vacancies created by the drift of teachers into more remunerative, more satisfactory jobs. Classrooms are over-crowded; and young minds are being abused and neglected at a time when it is imperative for the world that these young minds have the best possible training we can give them.

But there's a bright side to this bleak situation because it can be put right. And we are the ones who can do it, beginning in our own communities, with the nearest school in our own neighborhood. It is the college women in every community who are best qualified to undertake this vital and urgent assignment for a better world. You can start now.

I would suggest three "first steps" for your program of action:

- 1) Write to the State Education Department of Albany, New York, for the 35-page pamphlet entitled Teachers for Today's Schools.
- Get the college women of your community together to discuss the situation in your schools, in the light of this pamphlet and other articles on the subject.
- 3) Map out your campaign of investigation and action —and go to it!

Keep in touch with us and give us any "pointers" we may pass on to other groups. It's worth all the hard work you'll put into it!

Let's Look at Secondary Education

Noted Alumnae Educator Spurs You On.

LOUISE PAGE WEISIGER, '15, is the Director of the Department of Research of the Richmond Public Schools

That Sweet Briar alumnae are now turning their attention to secondary education in their own communities is indicative of the growing sense of responsibility on the part of liberal education for purposive activity, for insight as a means to commitment and action, for the solution as well as the understanding of social problems in this time of nati-nal crisis. It is natural that those who are concerned with the role of higher education in American democracy should look into the nature of modern secondary education. For, to use a very simple metaphor, the latter is the foundation on which the higher edifice must be built, and the strength of the foundation determines the altitude. What Sweet Briar or any other college can accomplish is conditioned to a large extent by the quality of education which its entrants have received in secondary schools. Scientific studies have made it very plain that learning is a gradual process of development; that the full flowering of education is the result of long and patient cultivation. Therefore, if higher education is to reach its full potentialities, what the college accomplishes must be the continuation and further refinement of desirable processes begun at lower levels of educational attainment. It is entirely within the scope of modern secondary education, as carried on in better schools, to send to college students endowed, to some extent, not only with the intellectual understanding but also with the social sensitivity, the attitudes, appreciations, and ideals, and the qualities of leadership, the full development of which a college covets for its graduates.

It is, however, from another point of view that the study of secondary education should be carried on if it is to be seen in true perspective. For modern secondary education is democratic in design, and its primary purpose is preparation for democratic citizenship. Hence secondary education must meet the needs of all American youth. How to offer the varying programs which will have meaning and value for every individual of high school age, in every walk of life, is the problem facing secondary education today. How to make the schools more effective agents of democracy is the challenge before us. The fact that approximately only seven youth out of ten enter our senior high schools, fewer than four of whom remain to graduate, must give us pause!

I suggest that in studying secondary education in your community you try to see it in its larger aspects, as preparation for democratic living rather than for college entrance alone. After all, only one in five of our American boys and girls will go to college. It is not given to all "to behold the bright countenance of truth in the quiet and still air of delightful studies." There are, however, other media close at hand through which the true, the good, and the beautiful can be found. Using the commonplace experiences of daily life in home, and school, and community, the secondary school attempts to put the abundant life within the reach of all, in accordance with the limits of individual abilities and interests.

I suggest further that you visit the high schools of your community. In many of them you will find that great changes have taken place. Some of these changes you may not understand. Talk to the principal and let him explain how democracy's schools are trying to meet the imperative needs of youth and increase the holding power of education. He will welcome your interest and support, and you, I am sure, will find much food for thought.

A Synopsis of a Recent Educational Survey

by Sue Francis

Taken from an article in The New York Times by Benjamin Fine

ROM a nationwide survey conducted by The New York Times it has been proved that due to a sharply increased birth rate the nation's public schools face a critical teacher shortage, most acutely felt in the elementary grades. It was found that every state in the union needs more qualified teachers.

The survey indicated that while more money is being spent for education now, still more is needed to meet the requirements of the 500,000 additional children attending classes.

Although for the last three years teachers' salaries have increased, many educators and teachers' organizations pointed out that inflationary costs have more than offset the present higher figures.

As a result of the inability to secure elementary teachers, the policy of employing emergency or substandard teachers, started during the war, is still being carried on with little change. The Times survey shows that 105,860 teachers now serving cannot meet the license requirements considered necessary by the states. Although conditions on the high school level are not as weighty as in the lower grades, it was found that twenty-nine states still have a shortage of secondary teachers.

Suggestions were sent in from many parts of the country. One such suggestion being "a higher minimum wage schedule for teachers would help." One state reported that "the most pressing needs were for additional classrooms to house the rapidily increasing number of school children and for fully qualified teachers."

As serious as they are today, compared with a year ago, conditions show a slight improvement. "Educators, however, warned that it was far too early for the public to become complacent about the public school system."

Sweet Briar Alumnae Prominent in the Field of Education

NAR WARREN TAYLOR, '27, headmistress of Milwaukee-Downer

Annie Powell Hodges, '10, principal of Stuart Hall.

Another Alumnae Educator Speaks Up

Almena Perkins Meeks, '25, is a member of the faculty at Louisiana State University.

I think the Sweet Briar Alumnae program aimed at arousing the interest of college trained women in the problems of Secondary Education is very fine. Surely college women should recognize this responsibility to work for the betterment of our schools.

Although there are many conditions to which college women could well lend their attention, the problem with which I am most concerned is the type of teacher and supervisor that many of our educational institutions are sending out into elementary and secondary schools. Today the emphasis is upon bow to teach, not what is to be taught, and in order to acquire a teacher's certificate the student must spend the major part of his junior and senior year taking course after course in pedagogy. Such a curriculum produces teachers thoroughly versed in the jargon of the professional educator, but certainly not well educated men and women. It is my belief that no amount of "education" will make a good teacher of someone who does not have a thorough knowledge of the subjects he is to teach. Teaching methods are no substitute for a liberal education.

I hope that the alumnae of Sweet Briar will become aware of this growing problem. Through Parent-Teacher groups and other organizations they could acquaint the public with the facts and could exert their influence to bring about changes in the requirements for teacher certification in their respective states.

Mrs. Lill Praises Representatives

Mrs. Lill spent three weeks in November visiting schools in Texas and Oklahoma to acquaint them with the current opportunities Sweet Briar is offering in the field of education. The following paragraph is an exerpt from her report to the Committee on Admission.

"The Sweet Briar Alumnae were splendid in making contacts with schools prior to my arrival, taking me to the schools and participating in the conferences with guidance officers and students, entertaining the parents and applicants. The Guidance Officers are very cordial about the plan of having local alumnae to whom they may refer students or turn for information about Sweet Briar. In most cities that I visited an alumnae is willing to undertake the work of Alumnae Representative."

Manson Scholars, All

by Sue Francis

EDITOR'S NOTE: It would be impossible to print in entirety all the letters I received. To prevent omitting any of the excellent content of the letters, some of them will be summarized and printed in part, while others will be printed in full in the following issues of the magazine.

"The Manson Memorial Scholarship is to be given to the upperclassman who most nearly meets the qualifications set forth in the catalogue, as an bonor scholarship, not necessarily based on need. This by no means precludes the possibility of awarding it to a girl who really needs it, but it does not limit the potential candidates to girls who have filed application for scholarship aid." As stated in the catalogue, the recipient must be "an upperclass student of high academic standing who shows qualities of leadership, and makes some real contribution to the student activities."

The Manson Memorial Scholarship was established in memory of Mr. N. C. Manson, Jr., and since 1925, when the first award was made, there have been twenty-six recipients. The Alumnae Office sent letters to these twenty-six alumnae inquiring how they personally felt toward the years they spent at Sweet Briar, and especially the year they held the scholarship. They were asked to explain how these years had aided them in pursuing a career, being a better citizen, a homemaker, and for any personal ideas they might like to add about positions they had held, their families, or anything about their post college life that was affected by their years at Sweet Briar. We received eighteen replies.

Only those who have held such a scholarship know the pride and appreciativeness that go along with it, and all those who experienced it expressed a deep and sincere appreciation for having been chosen the recipient. Page Rutb Foster writes, "I will always be tremendously grateful to Sweet Briar for the four years I lived and learned there. College was a great experience and one which I feel inspired a real, continual, and growing interest in civic, cultural and educational activities in post college life. I attribute to the enjoyment derived from participation in extra curricular activities at Sweet Briar, a resulting interest in similar events in my community. And from the point of view of further improving my mind, Sweet Briar may be credited with having whetted my appetite! I count myself lucky for my years at Sweet Briar as my husband's work in museum administration includes a variety of events in the field of art, music, and the theater for which a liberal arts education provides the best kind of background of appreciation." And from Helen Littleton Hauslein comes, "I am eternally grateful for the years spent at Sweet Briar. College life seemed to be an introduction to the realization that there are many things going on in the world outside of personal interests and limits. This became more apparent through studies and social contacts. I became increasingly aware that there was a responsibility involved and that was to keep active and growing mentally instead of becoming narrow and self-satisfied. This I felt particularly the year I won the Manson Memorial Scholarship."

As strongly as appreciativeness was accented, so was love and loyalty to their Alma Mater. This is not out of the ordinary since it would be fantastic to think that you could leave a place in which you had worked and participated, and actually been a part of without it being indelibly impressed in you as irreplaceable. As Marian Bower expresses it, "My four years at college were the happiest and richest of my life so far. The stimulation of classes and classwork was a large part of this, and I think some of the friendships I found there will last as long as I live. I held the Manson Scholarship during my senior year, which was the happiest and most fruitful of the four. My Student Government work kept me quite busy, but the satisfaction of working closely with other students and with members of the faculty and administration was complete compensation for the time and energy expended. The knowledge that Sweet Briar's generosity enabled me to attend college was partly responsible for the desire I had to do the best work I could, but equally responsible was a feeling of love and loyalty for the college which I will always feel. This sort of feeling, of course, one can only suggest, never define in words!"

Although many of the recipients have never had a career, it was prevalent through their remarks that the years spent at Sweet Briar had not been in vain. When I say "career" I do not include the roles of housewives, mothers, community activity participants, and the like, and certainly they are very important! In these roles, many were benefited. Katherine Street Sharp, housewife and mother of a four months old baby, writes that a big majority of her activities have been "limited to unscholarly works, such as cookbooks, home planning guides, baby care manuals, and their like. All this may seem to indicate that my time at Sweet Briar was spent in vain, but, on the contrary, it has meant as much to me as a housewife as it would have were I pursuing a career in psychology, my major." She adds, "I can only say that I benefited personally from my years at Sweet Briar and can only hope to benefit Society later."

In the way of a career, Elizabeth Hanger attributes many of her accomplishments to her four college years, as she says, "I am now secretary to the Dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Washington University and am exposed every day to the wonders of students discovering the richness in life which can be discovered only through an awakening of the mind. I certainly think my four years at Sweet Briar contributed materially to my being able to help out in my present position. And without those years, I could never have enjoyed the stimulating post I had in the Waves." After college, Marian Shanley Jacobs was a traveling secretary for the World Student Service Fund. She states that "the four years at Sweet Briar gave me a most liberal education in the arts—which is what I wanted out of college and primarily what I have found most useful since graduation."

The idea which Ellen Snodgrass Park expresses is probably current among those of you who have done graduate work or further carried out your education. She says, "For several years after I left Sweet Briar my liberal arts education simply meant an awakening of an interest in a variety of subjects. When four years ago, however, I started law school I found my college education of great practical value. My liberal arts background enriched immeasurably my study of the law."

The realization that every member's participation is important for the welfare of an organization in building a stronger and better community, state, and world was shown by the active part taken by a big majority of the recipients in a variety of organizations. They, being too numerous to mention, will be exemplified by those such as Dorothy Boyle Charles who writes, "Everyone has an opportunity to enter into the activities of a small college-and I believe this to be a most valuable asset. Having taken part in collegiate activities, you are then ready to accept your responsibilities in your community. We have lived in London, Ontario, twelve years and during this time I have worked for the Red Cross, The Community Chest, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, and the May Court Club." And from Mary Loughery Arthur comes "I have entered into many community and church activities. My only offices at present consist of being vice-president of Women's Society of Christian Service and a member of the Church's Music Committee. I have always had some part in our church music and Mission Study Courses." Mildred Stone Green has also taken a very active part in many different organizations, working as a Red Cross Nurse's aide, assisting in a local cancer detection center, serving on a school advisory committee, being president of the Women's Guild, a member of the Altar Guild and Auxiliary, and participating in various church work. She adds, "I have been concerned in trying to stir up local awareness of the terribly antiquated and inadequate system of rural education in Wisconsin. My efforts have consisted of a few talks before women's groups and over the local radio, and countless discussions with our state Senator and letters to others."

All of these recipients of the Manson Scholarship expressed how their college life had aided them in pursuing a career, being a better citizen, or homemaker, or in some way gave the result of their four years, but some seemed to think their words were inadequate in explaining just what Sweet Briar had meant to them. Perhaps these thoughts are best expressed in the poem written by Mildred Stone Green, with her apologies to Longfellow.

"SWEET BRIAR"

In the mountains of Virginia In the shadow of the Blue Ridge There's a college, known as Sweet Briar, Well beloved by all alumnae, For their liberal education, Lessons in the art of living. There the minds of their young women, Learn to take the broader vision, Learn to think, and grow in seeking Understanding of the world. Four years spent I there at Sweet Briar, In the friendliest surroundings: There was Nature at its finest, Mountains, both serene and awesome: There were teachers bent on giving Intellectual stimulation: There were students from all sections Making an harmonious unit. Learned we lessons, while at Sweet Briar, Lessons from our books and teachers, From our sports, and friends, and Nature, From our every slight endeavor. Many years have now gone winging, Since I graduated there. I have won no fame and glory On my college to reflect: I have been a wife and mother In a small community. "What good is your college training Living on a farm?" they say, "Did you learn to drive a tractor, Milk a cow or gardens make?" "Did they teach you preservation Of the foods your family eats?" Ah, these skeptics miss the meaning Of a liberal education, Miss the personal satisfaction In a life that's full and busy. Humble tasks or high endeavors, Make no difference in the end, If the mind has understanding, If the heart has learned compassion, So to savour to the fullest, Any kind of life God gives.

The staff of the Mary Helen Cochran Library is eager to complete the file of the Brambler. The only issue now lacking is number 2 of Volume 7, published either in December 1929, or January 1930.

A recent gift of fifteen issues of the Brambler from Martha von Briesen included two numbers that filled gaps in the Library's holdings. Is there an alumna who is willing to part with the needed copy of the Brambler? Such a gift would be most welcome.

Music Majors Take Notice

by MIRIAM WEAVER

LUMNAE who were students at Sweet Briar in the ALUMNAE who were scudents at outer Indiana. All and who have not visited us recently would not now find familiar faces among the staff of the music department. Too we have changed our quarters-but that is ancient history. Only one member of our present staff remembers when we were housed in Grammer basement and we have heard it said that at one time the music department occupied the basements of both Grammer and Randolph. How strange that would seem to us now and what noisy "halls of residence" they must have been. Grammer was bad enough but Randolph too-?! We are, however, jealous of the opulence of two basements!! Today our assorted noises eminate from what a recent graduate addressed as "thou white frame shack." But we of the staff are not so irreverent-we call it the "Music Building" though, if the truth were told, the term "shack" is perhaps more exact though less elegant. Sad to relate, the shack holds just the same number of rooms that we had in Grammer plus a sizeable classroom, and in consequence is quite inadequate for our present needs. We often say that we are bursting at the seams but, as a matter of fact, we have already done so for we have erupted and flowed over into the Gym and the Chapel (now called Manson Hall when used for secular purposes). This is not surprising since in comparison with three full time staff members and one visiting instructor who came twice a week from Charlottesville, we now number five full time instructors and are turning away students because we cannot take more. But as it was said of the man who was bemoaning the loss of his hair, "It is not what is on the head but what is in it that counts." So it is with our music building. Though it is of lowly appearance and dreadfully crowded we are now offering a major in music, giving more courses in theory and music history and have a corps of teachers of applied music second to none in the best college music schools over the country.

Perhaps those who do not know us all would like us to introduce ourselves. We will begin with Ernest Zechiel as one of the two who have been with us longest. Mr. Zechiel came to Sweet Briar after having taught for five years at the Curtis Institute of Music at Philadelphia. And before that he had been at the Riverdale School of Music in New York in a like capacity and for the same number of years. We are very fortunate that he has stayed with us something over three times as long. But to go back—born in Indiana, Mr. Zechiel was graduated from Oberlin College with a double major, his interests being divided between law and music. Pursuing the latter, he went to London and began his graduate study there at the Royal College of Music. His stay at this institution was short as he was soon accepted as the first and only student by the eminent Russian pianist Benno Moiseivitsch. It was during the two years spent with Mr. Moiseivitsch that Mr. Zechiel became seriously interested in composition. His study was interrupted by America's entry into World War I in which he served as an enlisted man until the Armistice. After the war he spent six years studying theory and composition with Rosario Scalero in Italy and New York since Signor Scalero divided his time between these two places. Mr. Zechiel is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, of The Melville Society of America and of the Thirteen Club. Although he had always expected to make a permanent home in Europe he has now bought himself a place near Sweet Briar where he is remaking his acre into a flower garden after his own heart. Mr. Zechiel teaches counterpoint, harmony, form and analysis, composition and piano at Sweet Briar and is constantly writing—chamber music, piano works and compositions for voice and organ. His organ works are used by many organists throughout the country. He holds the rank of Associate Professor of Music.

Lucile Umbreit was born in Kobe, Japan. She had her elementary schooling in Berlin and prepared for college at the American High School in Paris. She did her undergraduate work at Radcliffe College, received her masters trom Vassar where she held the Marston Fellowship in Music and, back again at Radcliffe, completed all course and residence requirements for a Ph.D. in music holding there the Barrett Fellowship in Music from Wellesley College. She has studied piano at the Stern's Conservatory in Berlin, with Jesus Maria Sanroma in Boston, with Tobias Matthay at the Matthay Piano School in London and with Richard Mac-Clanahan in New York City. Miss Umbreit was an apprentice teacher at Beaver Country Day School in Boston, was an Assistant in Music during her two years at Vassar and is now an Assistant Professor of Music at Sweet Briar. She is a Director of the American Matthay Association, a member of the Music Teachers National Association, the College Music Association and the American Association of University Professors. Miss Umbreit teaches piano and a very large class in a Survey of Music History at Sweet Briar.

G. Noble Gilpin is a native of Sterling, Pennsylvania, and was graduated from Greene-Dreher Community School in 1928. He holds the degree of Bachelor of Music from Syracuse University, College of Fine Arts and a Master of Music from the Graduate School of the same university. He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha, National Honorary Music Society and Phi Kappa Phi, National Honorary Academic Society. He has attended the American University at Shrivenham, England, the Juilliard Summer School of Music in New York City and several summer sessions at Syracuse. From 1942 to 46 Mr. Gilpin served with the United States Army. He was Post Organist at Camp Crowder (where, by the way, he composed the camp song called the March of the Signaleers which was a great hit at the time) and afterward was with an Artillery Combat Unit in Europe serving twenty months in Italy, France, Germany, Austria and England. Mr. Gilpin has taught at Greene-Dreher Community School and in the Music School of Syracuse University. He is Assistant Professor of Music at Sweet Briar where he teaches Voice and Elementary Theory, conducts the Glee Club and the Choir. He plays the organ for all church and chapel services and is supposed to teach organ, but his time is so filled with voice students

News to You?

More about personnel and vocational guidance at Sweet Briar by Carrolle E. Anderson, Chairman and Jean Grove Taylor, Student Chairman.

EW extracurricular courses in typing, shorthand, and radio! New projects, such as the investigation of aptitude tests and testing programs, and the study of vocational guidance and placement services in other colleges! A new office with a student secretary six hours a week! News to you? We hope you will be interested in this "continued story" of the activities of the joint Student-Faculty Committee on Personnel and Vocational Guidance (for the first installment please see the October issue of the Alumnae News) because a great deal has been happening at Sweet Briar this Fall and we want to know what you Alumnæ think, and what you would like to have happen next. (Please make a mental note to write us after you read this article!)

Sweet Briar students seem to be particularly interested in vocational testing and perhaps you would like to know about our investigations. Under the student chairman of the committee, five senior psychology majors have been trying to find out all they can about what tests are available, and what kinds of tests students here would like. A letter was sent out to some fifty known publishers, bureaus, or corporations handling vocational and personal inventory test materials. In addition, some fifty colleges the size of Sweet Briar and fifteen larger women's colleges were asked about their testing services and actual tests which they had found useful for vocational guidance.

The student group has gone over the literature, specimen tests, and questionnaires carefully, and at present favors the Kuder Preference Record as a starting point. This is published by Science Research Associates, Chicago, publishers of vocational monographs in such fields as Teaching, Advertising, Radio, Personnel Work, Photography, Public Health, to mention a few. The Kuder Preference Record has two parts: one, Personal, and the other, Vocational. The purpose of these inventories is to direct an individual's attention "toward occupational areas which appear to be particularly promising in the light of his (or her) preferences," or the more specific uses in vocational guidance are:

- "To point out vocations with which the student may not be familiar but which involve activities of the type for which he (or she) has expressed preference."
- "To check on whether a person's choice of an occupation is consistent with the type of thing he (or she) ordinarily prefers to do."

The choice of the Kuder Preference Record has been approved by Dr. Elizabeth Moller and Dr. Anina Brandt, in Psychology, and the student group is now prepared to present information to students, see how many are interested in taking these "tests" and to make arrangements for giving them on campus, presumably some time early in March.

It should be clearly understood that continued investigation in the field of specific aptitude tests and general inventories and test batteries will be carried on this year, and it is possible that other recommendations and arrangements may be forthcoming, either this year or next. It should also be understood that any testing service or program which we may sponsor will be done with a view to helping students choose their major or their more specific vocational field, not with a view to testing or rating actual abilities in a given field, or telling a student what she should do. Furthermore, the committee will be able to make only a small beginning this year and tests which can be administered and scored easily, which are of the general preference or interest type, and fairly well standardized with adequate validity scores, seem at present to give us our best "beginnings."

There has been a great deal of excitement and interest in three extracurricular courses, sponsored and arranged for by the committee, with the approval of the Administration. A course in introductory typing and one in beginning shorthand are at present underway, and a radio work-shop course is scheduled for the second semester. All students seriously interested and now enrolled have had to "run the gamut" of approval by the College Physician, Dean's Office and Personnel Office—and pay a small fee, which just covers the expenses of the instruction. Two members of the Sweet Briar staff are serving as instructors, namely, Miss Phyllis Simpson in typing, and Miss Alice Stevens in shorthand. The courses in typing and shorthand run for ten weeks, meeting three hours per week, in the late afternoon or early evening. Twenty-three students are enrolled in the two courses. If there is sufficient interest and enrollment, a second tenweek course of continued work in both will be given, and a beginning course for those not able to get in the first typing section.

The work-shop course in radio is being offered under the direction of Mr. Mark B. Lewis, director of News-Special Events of Station WWOD in Lynchburg, and will run for twelve weeks, with one regularly scheduled meeting per week and the opportunity for visits to the radio station. The course will be limited to fifteen students, and the subject matter outline includes fundamentals of broadcasting, programming, radio script writing and producing, organization of radio station networks and job opportunities in radio. We feel that we are very fortunate in having the coöperation of Mr. Lewis and Station WWOD in this course.

Probably by the time you are reading this, our Graduate Study Week will be underway. Under the joint sponsorship of the Sweet Briar Branch of A.A.U.W. and the committee, there are plans a-foot for stimulating interest in graduate study. The program is under the chairmanship of Mary Frances Brown, a senior and a government major. The week's program involves a 'newssheet" to be distributed to all students, with articles on what we know about Sweet Briar students who have gone on with further study, their field of work, whether at home or abroad; news about Assistantships, Scholarships, and Fellowships; the program of the week, etc. We have asked department heads or major professors to make a special effort during the week to talk with students about plans, pre-requisites in specific fields, and to make available for use all the material and information they can. Then we have arranged for major addresses by two well-known Deans of Graduate Schools (Coeducational Institutions, by student request). Short convocation addresses by Miss Martha B. Lucas, Dr. Joseph E. Barker, and Dr. Edgar J. Fisher on graduate work abroad, its opportunities, and its values, as they see it (and they speak from experience!) will be followed by informal talks and conference periods, for majors in each department, with Sweet Briar alumnae or other recent graduate students in some twenty specific fields. It is one of our most ambitious programs, and it was started off with bulletin board announcements and a letter to all seniors just before Christmas. Here is a copy of the letter, by Mary Frances

10 Alumnae News

"To Members of the Class of '49:

"In six months, if all goes well, you'll all be on the shelf with a degree. But after June 6—WHAT?

"We ask you to give serious thought to doing Graduate Work. If there is any prospect of your going on in any phase of graduate work, or even if you only think you'd like to, the time to look into the matter is now! Plans should be made as soon as possible if you are considering going to graduate school, whether in the United States or abroad.

"We suggest that you discuss the possibilities for graduate work in your field when you are at home for Christmas vacation. Get your parents' views, and if you decide that graduate work of some type is for you, discuss likely prospects with your major professor when you get back to Sweet Briar. Department heads have all sorts of information on scholarships, fellowships, assistantships and internships which they will be glad to discuss with you. The Personnel Office also has a great deal of information on university courses, requirements, and procedures.

"Early in the second semester, the Personnel Committee together with the Sweet Briar chapter of A.A.U.W. is sponsoring a Graduate Study Week. There will be opportunity then to hear and question outstanding deans of graduate schools, and to attend conferences with recent graduate students to find out the real dope.

"Think it over! This is for YOU."

Under the direction of two faculty staff members of the committee, Dr. W. Grafton Nealley and Miss Harriet Shaw, a questionnaire went out from the Personnel Office to some sixty-five colleges, fifty our size, and fifteen larger women's colleges known to have good vocational guidance and placement services. There were questions under the following headings:

- Vocational Guidance and Placement Office—facilities and personnel.
- II. Files and Records—including questions on whether or not Faculty rating sheets are used, as at Sweet Briar.
- III. Job Finding—how contacts with employers and representatives are made and handled, about summer jobs, about alumnae use of placement services, follow-ups, etc.
- IV. Testing Program—what tests have been found useful and arrangements.
- V. General questions—career programs, conferences, vocational literature and information and how it is made available to students.

This material is being tabulated by Elizabeth Hancock, a senior mathematics major and member of our Committee. Further analysis and correlation of the material is to be done, with a view to presentation of recommendations to the faculty and administration. The committee has been thinking in terms of ideal objectives for the personnel and vocational guidance work at Sweet Briar, the facilities and scrvices which are needed, and the spheres of activities for the Committee and a Placement or Vocational Guidance Officer (if and when!).

A subject dear to our hearts is the new office for our use in the basement of Grammer, with a new desk and chair and bulletin board! It's wonderful, and we can talk out loud now—we were in the library before! A concentrated effort is being made to keep our vocational information and literature in the office up to date, and to increase its coverage, usefulness, and availability. To that end a careful investigation of needs and material available has been made by Miss Eleanor Ringer, a faculty member of our committee (and an alumna). New pamphlets and books are beginning to come in. We have better filing facilities well organized, now.

The chairman of the committee has made a real effort to know each student's interest through conferences with her and through use of student vocational index cards and then a follow-up of these interests, whenever the student indicates a desire for help. All this could never have been accomplished but for the services of a student secretary, Mary Virginia Grigsby, a chemistry major. She works for us six hours a week—the letters she has written! The help of several members of the committee who have taken "office hours" has been invaluable.

Here are some of the things accomplished and coordinated through the office:

- 1. A survey of junior-senior vocational preferences. We find for their first choice that 18 named Teaching; 13, Social Work; 12, Journalism; 11, Government and International Affairs; 10, Use of their Language major; 10, Science; 10, Marriage; and so on.
- 2. Plans for panels or conferences. We have held informal group conferences in the fields of personnel work, jobs in banking, and fashion careers. A program for the Spring is being arranged—that will be reserved for our third installment.

- 3. Arrangements for student interviews with visiting representatives. Sometimes one has to schedule as many as fifteen individual conferences for late afternoon or early evening, as when Miss Julia Coburn of the Tobe-Coburn School of Fashion Careers was here on campus recently.
- 4. Arrangements for bulletin board displays and important news releases. For example, information about Civil Service exams. After our "publicity campaign" on this, some twenty seniors indicated an interest in taking the Junior Professional exams, and were assisted in filling out applications. Our office has written the Civil Service Commission Regional Office requesting that the exams be made available or given here at Sweet Briar.
- 5. Interesting students in vocational material and helping them find what they want. There has been scarcely an office hour this year (and there are 16 such hours) when some student does not come in for information or to look around and see what is available, and often goes out with a vocational monograph, or an address, or information about some particular field. The office has undertaken to write many letters for information, for individual students, and the student then writes follow-up letters if she is interested in a particular job or agency.

Perhaps you would like to know who is on our committee. The faculty-staff members of the committee are Dr. Anina Brandt (Psychology), Miss Dorothy Jester (Assistant, Dean's Office), Dr. W. Grafton Neally (Government), Miss Eleanor Ringer (S. B. '42, Speech and Dramatics), Miss Harriet Shaw (S. B. '37, Alumnae Secretary), and Dr. Carrolle Anderson (Biology). Student members are as follows-Seniors: Mary Frances Brown (Detroit, Michigan); Patricia Davin (Cleveland, Ohio); Mary Elizabeth Hancock (Shaker Heights, Ohio); Ann Henderson (Winnetka, Illinois), and Jean Taylor, Chairman of the Student Group (Dunn Loring, Virginia). Juniors: Edith Brooke (Norfolk, Virginia); Nancy Day (New Haven, Connecticut), replacing Helen Misseres who is studying in France; Margaret Gee (Plainfield, New Jersey), replacing Betsey Sawyer who is studying at St. Andrews in Scotland, and Sydney Overstreet (Norfolk, Virginia). Sophomores: Mary Abbe (Chevy Chase, Maryland); Rosalie Barringer (Washington, D. C.); Margaret Chisholm (Laurel, Mississippi); and Ann Klepinger (Washington, D. C.).

These students do a great deal of the work, stimulate interest among other students, and find out what the rest of the student body is thinking. This leads logically to the question: What has been the student response to the work of the committee and the valuable services of the office? It has been wonderful! The office is constantly in use, and they want more AND MORE.

And now, how do you alumnae feel about our services? Would these new activities have helped you? PLEASE let us know your opinions, suggestions, critieisms. And what would you think of at least a part-time trained personnel worker and placement officer?

A Report on the Junior Year Plan

by Joseph E. Barker

JUNIOR YEAR STUDENTS STUDYING A MAP OF PARIS.

ARLY in December the 1949-50 bulletin of the L Junior Year in France came off the press, and already many inquiries have been received in reply to the 1,500 copies sent to eligible colleges from coast to coast. From these replies it is apparent that a pressing need exists, that of money for scholarships, for at least half a dozen of these students cannot make application unless scholarship aid is available from the Junior Year in France, since their own colleges somewhat shortsightedly do not allow scholarship funds to be used for foreign study. Some excellent applicants last year were financially unable to join the group. One was finally enabled to go because of a $300 scholarship offered by the French government, while the participation of another was assured by a competitive scholarship of $250 awarded by her college. While the Junior Year organization is in a healthy financial state, even in the face of heavy expenditures inevitable in setting up the Sweet Briar and Paris offices, and the growing inflation in France, yet it is in no position to assume financial responsibility for applicants.

Last spring there was hope that the Fulbright Act would make funds available for 1949-50. Agreements under this act have now been signed with eight countries, including France, but the Board of Foreign Scholarship's administering the Fulbright program has ruled that scholarships will be granted only to graduate students, hence not to juniors.

In a letter to me on December 16 the French Ambassador, M. Henri Bonnet, emphasizes the international importance of Sweet Briar's new project in these words: "In giving an opportunity to young American students to study under eminent professors at the University of Paris and to come into daily contact with French students, Sweet Briar College has rendered the best possible service to the cause of Franco-American understanding and friendship."

It is not our wish to deny the opportunity for foreign study to students of limited means whose entry into American colleges has already been made possible by scholarships. On the contrary we hope to receive sufficient donations to offer each year several scholarships of from two to five hundred dollars to properly qualified students who otherwise will never know what it means to live and study in Paris, a center which for many centuries has been the meeting place of scholars from all parts of the world.

The 1948-49 bulletin outlined budget for tuition and supervision, board and room and return travel from New York to Paris between a minimum of $1807 and a maximum of $2267. This was so carefully estimated that to date expenditures are keeping well within those limits and there is no prospect of any deficit. For 1949-50 the sailing date for the group has been set for September 14, some two weeks later than last year, and for this reason the estimated costs have been slightly lowered, from a minimum of $1725 to a maximum of $2225.

One Sweet Briar alumna has sent in a generous gift to be used by the Junior Year, and her example has been emulated by a French exchange student who sent a modest check of $10 in order to express her gratitude for the scholarship received from Sweet Briar in 1930-31. The latter has written many times that she will never forget her memorable year at Sweet Briar.

Some of the alumnæ who attended the luncheon on Sweet Briar Day in New York and Philadelphia suggested that the need for scholarships be brought to the attention of alumnæ all over the country in the hope that many who believe in this significant effort to further international understanding and peace may have an opportunity to send to the Treasurer of Sweet Briar College their check designated for the Junior Year in France Scholarship Fund. Any alumna may obtain the 1949-50 bulletin by writing to the Alumnæ Office or to the Junior Year in France Office.

"CALIFORNIA, HERE WE BUM"

Jean Old, '47 Margaret Redfern, '47 Martha Smith, '47

*VERY Sweet Briar Alum knows that old feeling that Creeps over the recent June graduate when fall comes around. But to us it seemed much worse. No school, no routine—we were on our own in the cold, cold world. However, the pain was eased when Martha and Margy were allowed to sign up for Jean's three-year-old-plan to tour North America. The object was to go as far as possible, stay as long as possible, on as little money as possible; which all added up to, "how many people did we know between Virginia and California?" We drew up a long and impressive list of friends, regardless of their geographical location, and wrote to everyone of them in hopes that they would R. S. V. P. our invitation. So between Christmas, '47 and July 7, '48, we resigned from our jobs, drew up our wills, packed the ear, and left Norfolk at 11:20 a.m., destination -WEST. D Day (Departure Day) had come.

Our Little Gray Home in the West was a Mercury, '47 coupe which we unmercifully stuffed with the following: 7 suitcases, 2 spare tires, blankets and sleeping bags, an ironing board, a five-gallon can for gasoline, a thermos jug and lots of extra junk, including Martha, Jean and Margy.

We sailed through the South with lots of free meals, good roads, and hard eider. Sweet Briar was our first stop where we begged student registers from Martha von Briesen. Liz Abbot, '47, wasn't in Lynchburg, but we spent the night with her parents anyway. Such was the schedule! We had warned Helen Mae, '23, and Dan Boone, '27, that Camp Glenlaurel was on our list so they shouldn't have looked so surprised when we showed up just in time for dinner. After a hearty breakfast, we had an 11 o'clock coke with Tuttie Hall Peckham, '45, in Asheville, N. C., lunch with Anne Brinson Nelson, '47, in Greenville, S. C., and arrived too late for dinner at Ginger Barron Summer's, '47, in Rome, Georgia. However, just to teach her a lesson, we stayed for two days. So successful were our notes of warning that upon our arrival in New Orleans one week and 1500 miles from D Day, we had spent only twenty dollars. New Orleans was an entirely different story! Here we blew ourselves to the finest of cuisines in the French Quarter and gossiped with Neila Wattley and Rosie Guggert, both '48.

After miles and miles of miles and miles (better known as Texas) we arrived at the Mexican border—our first forcign country. Before crossing the Rio Grande, we delivered ourselves into the hands of our foster parents, the AAA, who sold us accident insurance for nine days and pesos at the current exchange rate of approximately five for a dollar. Then we set off across the arid, semi-desert land where the only outstanding landmarks into Monterrey were a few adobe villages and three dead horses lying by the wayside.

FEBRUARY, 1949

We had nine days in Mexico to see everything, and with the aid of friends, friends of friends, the AAA Guide Book and Margy's pidgin Spanish, we accomplished the impossible. Alice Reese Edens, '47, entertained us royally for two weekends in Monterrey where the members of the American Colony seem to live in one continuous party. Further gossip was exchanged with Cax Berthier, '48, at one of the aforementioned parties.

There were no "hotdog stands on the highway to Mexico City," but plenty of banana trees, orchids and dense undergrowth in the tropics. A surprisingly well-banked and smooth-surfaced highway ascended the Sierra Madre where the clouds often settled on the road and driving was practically blind. Mexico City was a mixture of New York sophistication and country burro-drawn carts. The Mexican driving was really breath-taking since Mexicans use only two mechanisms in their cars—the accelerator and the horn. Our guide in Mexico City was a friend of Margy's cousin's mother-in-law (!) who graciously showed us in one day what it would have taken us four to do alone.

We had one glorious day in Taxco joyously spending our pesos in the 65 little silver shops. This village with its narrow 75 degree angle streets was also the scene of great distress. Our Little Gray Home in the West stalled, and we found ourselves suddenly surrounded by spectators and traffic, respectively jabbering and honking. Jean then added her bit to the confusion by removing a big black pot from the motor which we were able to replace only by calling a "mechanico." We were disinfected three times for the hoof and mouth disease before beating a hasty retreat out of Mexico because of the inflation scare and because our insurance expired at 11 a. m., July 26. At 11:01 the Lone Star State looked good to us!

Our schedule was pressing us so we "steamed" through New Mexico and Arizona allowing 10 minutes each to the Painted Desert, Petrified Forest, Meteor Crater, and 20 minutes to the south rim of the Grand Canyon. Here Margy even had time to feed our left-over breakfast toast to the little deer. On the way to the north rim, we stopped at Echo Cliffs. Jean was sceptical of the echos, but Margy yelled and got answers, Martha took pictures, and Doubting Jean just watched the water drop out of the over-heated radiator.

In the southwest our list failed us, but we discovered the glamour of the western motels which in New Mexico came complete with movie stars. However, the two nights we camped out weren't so glamorous. In Bryce Canyon, Utah, (temperature 40 degrees) we spread our blankets and sleeping bags around the fire and froze to death. The next day, fondly labled Desert Day (temperature 120 degrees), we welcomed the sight of beautiful, blue, WET Lake Meade. After our duel with the sun for 14 hours, dehydration had set in. Hence, we spent most of our time at Boulder Dam standing around the water fountain. That night we spread our poncho on the ground and caught a few hot, dry hours of sleep. We had learned our lesson; we arose at three a. m., to complete our desert journey at night, blinking our sand-papered lids at the approaching headlights.

Margie feeds a deer near the Grand Canyon

Our two days in Hollywood were spent looking in vain for movie stars and standing in line for tickets to the free radio shows. In San Francisco, we stayed with friends of the Redferns where we did a month's laundry in between trips to the Top of the Mark, a tour of Chinatown, and rides on the cable cars.

On August 10 we reached Seattle via the redwoods, Columbia River Highway, and Mount Rainier. A house full of Liles greeted us with the fact that we were too late for dinner. Foiled again! Anne, '47, and Dickie, '48, took us sailing one day, and joined us the next day on a trip to Victoria B. C. (Canada to you)—our second foreign country. We forsook our Little Gray Home in the West for the boat, which was so crowded that we froze on deck during most of the trip. We were charmed by a "spot of ould Englande," tea and crumpets, English tweeds and the colorful flowerpots hanging from the lamp posts.

After the Lile Hotel, the Grand Coulee Dam was our next point of interest. From there we sped across the northwest, having breakfast in Washington, lunch in Idaho and dinner in Montana. Our main recollections of Montana were Glacier National Park, and the horrible highways. On one of these roads, Martha deftly backed us into a ditch. As we stood around looking helpless, fifteen men voluntarily stopped their cars, got out and started excavation. Within half an hour we were merrily on the way to Yellowstone. Here we toured a hundred miles of gysers, mineral springs, and bears, but the climax came when Margy and Martha missed the eruption of Old Faithful by a coke. Jean, ever on the prowl, saw it.

Of course, we had to stop at the Great Salt Lake to see if Jean would actually float. Words failed us—she did! On the way to Denver we boiled up the Rocky Mountains until we reached a height of 12,183 feet. To us folks living in Norfolk at seven feet above sea level, this was quite an accomplishment. In Denver we moved in on Janet Amilon Wagner, ex 47, who gave us a glimpse of the Wild and Wooly West. We made a pilgrimage to Buffalo Bill's grave and visited Central City, an old ghost town, where we stared at the original Face on the Barroom Floor. We hated to leave Denver as we knew we were on the last lap home through the heat of the midwest.

The monotony of miles of cornfields was broken by a short visit with Sally Ayres Schroyer, ex 49, and her husband in Ames, Iowa. Miss Hopkins-Ayres, '47, was in Virginia—of all places! Shirley Levis, '47, our original fourth and in on all our mercenary schemes, welcomed us with open arms in Rockford, Illinois. We forced her to listen to everything that had happened to us during the seven weeks we'd been away. Off again to Chicago and of all the wonderful things to see in Chicago, we went to the stockyards (thanks due to Martha who swore she'd never eat another piece of meat as long as she lived).

We stopped in Cleveland on the hottest day of the year to call Maria Tucker, Liz Ripley, Anne Colston, all '47, and Jacie Schreck, ex 47, not one of whom was at home. They all got "F." A few hours later, Filthie, Grimie, and Sootie arrived in Erie. It was only after a thorough scrubdown that Nat Hall Chisholm, '47, recognized us and allowed us to stay for two nights. On August 29, we had an overnight visit with Eleanor Crumrine, '47, in Washington, Pennsylvania. The morning of the 30th found us speeding along the Pennsylvania Turnpike back to Virginia. We made short work of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland and at 1:10 started a rousing chorus of "Carry Me Back" as we looked out over the Valley of Virginia from the Skyline Drive. A sign addressed to "Ye Wild Women of the West" was our official welcome back to Liz Abbot's in Lynchburg.

Home again on the last day of August, we gathered our statistics and found that we were eight weeks older, fifteen pounds heavier (collectively), and twenty-eight states wiser. Our Little Gray Home in the West had two new tires and thirteen thousand extra miles. We had no dough, no jobs, no hopes and all memories.

P. S. Since this is Christmas of '48, we're making a New List for the summer of '49. Lock up the silver—New England, here we bum!

that he has been obliged to refuse the organ work. We expect to have a second voice teacher in the fall of 1949 to take the students whom Mr. Gilpin finds it necessary to turn away—not because they are less able but because there are not enough hours open in his class. Mr. Gilpin is also a member of the American Association of University Professors.

Under Mr. Gilpin's leadership the Glee Club has sung in Washington with the Glee Club of Princeton University, with the Glee Club of the University of Virginia both here and at the University and this year beside singing with the University again the Glee Club will appear with the Haverford Glee Club both here and in Haverford. The Choir has, of course, sung regularly at our Sunday services and in various other places including the University of Virginia Chapel.

Iren Marik is a native Hungarian, a graduate of the Budapest College of Music and has a Piano Professor's diploma from the Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest. She taught piano at the Budapest College of Music before and during the Second World War and has concertized extensively on the Continent and in England. During her three years in this country she has given concerts in various places in addition to her teaching at Sweet Briar. She made her debut in Washington in Constitution Hall three years ago and has played there with the National Symphony Orchestra. This fall she has played in Staunton and Lexington, Virginia, and is booked for a second return engagement at the National Gallery of Art in Washington in the spring. She will play two recitals in Toronto in March and will appear at Sweet Briar in the same month in the Brahms Quintet with the Curtis String Quartet.

Miriam H. Weaver has studied at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, with Isador Philipp in Paris, at Columbia University Summer School, the Juilliard Summer School of Music, the Concord Summer School of Music at Concord, Massachusetts, and attended lectures and observed piano teaching at the Matthay Piano School in London. She has also studied counterpoint and fugue and taken philosophical courses in music at the University of Chicago. At Sweet Briar she is teaching piano and the more advanced courses in music history. She came to Sweet Briar to head the department, and after a period of rotating chairmanships in the department has again been chairman for the past three years. Miss Weaver is a member of the College Music Association, the American Musicological Society and the American Association of University Professors. She holds the rank of Associate Professor of Music at Sweet Briar.

It has indeed been a pleasure to make this introduction to you and we hope that when next you visit the campus you will come to see us in the Music "shack."

The Great Kirghiz Epic Poem "Manas"

by Dr. A. Kreusler

Dr. Kreusler and his family came to this country from Russia in 1947. He teaches Russian and Russian Literature at Sweet Briar, and German at Randolph-Macon.

THE QUESTION of the origin of folk epics as the Iliad and the Nibelungs has been for a long time discussed in world literature, but until now the problem of their authorship has not been convincingly and definitely solved. A certain light may be thrown upon that problem by the great Kirghiz national epic "Manas," which is still in statu nascendi.

The Kirghiz are an old people occupying most of the uplands in Central Asia along the Soviet-Chinese frontier, between 35° and 50° north latitude and between 70° and 85° east longitude. The first reliable information about them appeared 2300 years ago in the Chinese chronicles. It was a period of fierce struggles between the Kirghiz and the Huns, who started then their invasion of Siberia. The Kirghiz or the Chakas, as they were called by the Chinese, lived at that time on the Upper Yenisei, their settlements stretching to the Chinese frontier.

Originally, although Asiatics, the Kirghiz were a people of white complexion and blue eyes. Nowadays they are middle-sized, square-built, with long black hair, scant beard, black slanting eyes, high cheekbones, broad flat nose, small hands and feet and swarthy complexion. Their typically Mongolian exterior is a result of their intermingling with the Kalmucks and with other nomads of Mongol stock.

Though peaceful they were a very valiant people. Their geographic position brought them into constant conflicts with their neighbors, with the Chinese and with the nomadic tribes: the Huns, the Mongols, the Turks, the Uigurs, the Oyrots (the Kalmucks). They always succeeded in beating off their invaders. In the ninth century they defeated the Uigurs and completely destroyed their state. A considerable proportion of the Kirghiz population emigrated after this war to the Tian-Shan mountains. The Kirghiz withstood the Mongols bound for the invasions of Europe. Only for a short period in the thirteenth century did they have to endure living in a protectorate under the Mongols. In the seventeenth century they fought fierce wars with the invading Russians. To retain their independence most of them took refuge with their kinsmen in Central Asia. Of those who stayed behind some merged with the neighboring tribes, others preserved their racial identities. These latter are the Abakanese Tatars, hunters living on the Upper Yenisei.

The present Kirghiz are descendants of the old Chakas who, as stated, emigrated to the Tian-Shan mountains in the ninth and seventeenth centuries. There, between the ranges of Ala-tau and Tian-shan in the Issykkul basin in the valleys of the rivers Tekes, Chu and Tales they built up a new home and retained their independence in spite of the frequent invasions of the Chinese, Kalmucks and Kazakhs, until they were forced to recognize Russian sovereignty in 1864.

The modern Kirghiz are of Moslem faith and speak a Turkic language, closely related to that of the Tatars and Kazakhs. Up to the first world war the Kirghiz were a nomadic people of cattle herders. They have now settled down as farmers and have amazing cultural achievements. They are a good, quiet and hospitable people. Their beautiful country of mountains covered with eternal snow, mountain gorges and fertile valleys presents now a motley view of sharp contrast. Side by side we see modern houses and clay huts, railways, cars and camels, schools and traces of the jungle. Proudly they call their country Sunny Kirghizia. There is not a bit of exaggeration in it. The greatest part of the year there is glorious sunshine. For five or six months there is no single cloud in the sky, and the contrast of blazing light, intensive heat, luxurious vegetation and snow glittering on the summits of the mountains is of rare and majestic beauty. Throughout the long summer there are no rains. Water is brought down from the mountains by channels covering all the country. Thanks to the application of artificial irrigation their land yields wonderful crops of grain, vegetables and all sorts of fruit. In striking contrast to this Eden of plenteousness is the extreme poverty of a considerable part of the popula-

The long history of the Kirghiz is reflected in their national poetry, which is of an epic character as the poetry of the Greeks was in the period in which the events of the Trojan war still lived in national memory. The Kirghiz have inherent rhetorical abilities. They speak their simple and primitive language fluently and express their ideas exactly. They very early developed the art of rhythmic speech and improvisation. Singers were held in the highest esteem among the Kirghiz. Two kinds of singers were known among them: the dshomoktshi and the irtshi. The dshomoktshi were like the Greek aeds or the English gleemen. They themselves created songs on themes particularly popular. The irtshi were like the Greek rhapsods or the English scops. They could but recite songs they knew by heart. Songs were recited at wedding feasts, at burial feasts, and at all solemn occasions. This was the only way this primitive and poetical people could express its thoughts and feelings, before it learned the art of writing. Songs were the only cherished aesthetic experience.

The aesthetic instinct seems to lie at the root of any cultural activity. Observing a crowd of Kirghiz listening to the recitation of a singer, one cannot but admire their concentration, the lively part they take in that kind of activity. Cultural people only in rare moments concentrate in that degree in theatre, when listening to a play or to a piece of music. We may well imagine that the attention of the crowd is a great stimulus to a creative singer. If the singer is particularly gifted or if the theme is popular and loved by the people the intensive listening of the crowd may turn into loud expression of delight. A creative singer will take notice of it; will find suggestions in the reaction of the crowd (which occasionally may express them) how to expand the songs or add new ones. At the dawn of culture the contact between the poet and the people is much livelier and closer than in the period of printed books and papers. We can therefore justly conclude that by their stirring and stimulating reaction the people have some part in the activity of the poet, a part which could be compared to the guiding influence of great critics.

There is practically no Kirghiz who could not recite a few songs of the great epic poem "Manas." As to size world literature knows no equal epic. From the standpoint of artistry with which the habits and customs, ideals and aspirations of the people are rendered, this poetic work suggests comparison with the greatest world epics. Handed down from generation to generation, continually expanded by the best singers, it became the living chronicle of the Kirghiz nation, in which each great historic event, each national experience, found its reflection and poetic interpretation. "Manas" meant for the Kirghiz what books, theatre, newspapers mean for a civilized people, everything that expresses spirit, culture and life of a nation. Generally speaking its history is the history of the fliad, the Beowulf, the Nibelungs, any great national epic. The story it tells is simple, compared with the Iliad. But it deals with love and hate, joy and sadness, great emotions and passions, and that makes the epic no less interesting than the others.

As to size, the epic is tremendous. It comprises half a million lines. Recitation of the whole poem would require six months. So far we know twenty melodies with which the singers of Kirghizia recite the "Manas." As a typical folk production it has no compact structure we expect from a work of art. Having come down from bygone centuries it bears the stamp of different epochs and different styles. The plot is most variegated and often composed of contradictory elements. Maybe, before the epic reaches its final stage, it is too early to speak of one plot. We have before us a mass of songs interconnected only by the person of the chief hero. We may distinguish the following longer songs: (1) The Birth of Manas, (2) The Campaigns of Manas, (3) The Arrival of Almambet, (4) The Marriage of Manas with Kanikey, (5) The Burial Feast of Koketey, (6) Kozkoman, (7) the Conspiracy of Seven Khans Against Manas, (8) Manas' Pilgrimage to Mecca. In all of those songs Manas is the central figure, wherefore the epic has been called by his name. Each one of the songs mentioned above constitutes a unit. The transition from one song to the other is unmotivated, entirely mechanical.

THE BIRTH OF MANAS

The Kirghiz Khan Nogay has been defeated by the Chinese. His sons have been exiled from their native country and the people have been enslaved. One of Nogay's sons was exiled to the Altay Land and there he begot Manas.

Mohamet himself showed interest for the newborn child. Saints watched and guarded him. One of them disguised himself as a dervish and gave him the name of Manas. Occasionally Manas is spoken of as Messiah. Already in his youth he behaved like a hero. He organized a band of valiant youngsters with whom he defended the Kirghiz before the inroads of the Kalmucks and Chinese. In his youth he conceived a plan of unifying the Kirghiz tribes and reconstructing and building up the old and powerful Kirghiz state. This song forms the exposition to the epic.

THE CAMPAIGNS OF MANAS

Having united the Kirghiz tribes under his leadership Manas began a series of victorious campaigns against the Kalmucks and Chinese. He conquered Kashgar (today called Sintsizian), Middle Asia and Afghanistan. He then turned to the North and West. In the North he reached the Baykal and the river Lena, in the West the Caucasus. The authority of Manas has after all these conquests naturally grown. The attempt of Kozkoman, a near relative of Manas, and of several Kirghiz Khans to deprive him of his power has been successfully thwarted.

THE GREAT CAMPAIGN

The Great Campaign of Manas against the Chinese dominates the epic. It starts with a description of the quiet and happy life the Kirghiz had under the rule of Manas in their powerful state. The King of Kings, Manas, lived in the gilded palace of his wife Kanikey. He ruled with the help of his Great Council, consisting of forty tshoro, i. c., advisers, whom he treated as friends and brothers. Entirely different was his relation to the Khans. He kept them at a distance in fearful obedience. Most probably the intention of the singer was to glorify absolute monarchy. At the height of his fame Manas decided to start war with China for the purpose of converting this nation to the Moslem faith. There were, besides, other reasons which served as an immediate cause of war. The Chinese emperor Konurbay did not recognize Manas as an independent sovereign. The Chinese regarded him as their subject and demanded tribute. They constantly harassed the Turkish tribes, particularly the Kirghiz. Manas decided to put an end to this situation.

On an appointed day the armies assembled in an appointed place, each under the leadership of its Khan. Solemn leave was taken from the families and the army moved towards China. The march was beset with difficulties. They had to pass boundless deserts, gigantic mountains and stormy rivers. On they marched until they came in touch with the vanguard of the enemy. The Chinese employed swift-footed animals and birds in their vanguard. They quickly brought the news of the approach of the Kirghiz. Witches and wizards set up obstacles to stop the advance of the Kirghiz army. The Kirghiz always preferred open battle. They could, however, fight witches and wizards too. They had a great hero, Almambet, who had command over sorcery and evil spirits. He could make stormy rivers dry up, he could bring rain after a long heat. The decisive battle was preceded by duels in which Manas himself took part. The battle itself is described realistically with all accompanying horrors. The Chinese were beaten and had to retire to Baydshin, which was a fortress. Nor could the fortress withstand the attack of the Kirghiz. The Kirghiz were victorious, but they were unable to dominate the Chinese people. After a time they were forced to withdraw. Manas returned to Talas, where he soon died of his wounds.

After the death of Manas began the decay of the Kirghiz empire. This period is described in the other two parts of the epic, Semetay and Saytek. Their interest centers chiefly on the wars between the rebellious Khans.

Of the other songs which are not connected with the chief topics the most beautiful is Koretey, which describes the burial feast of that adviser of Manas with its tournaments and sports.

Most probably songs on important events of Kirghiz history formed the nucleus of the epic originally. It was a habit of the Kirghiz aristocracy, the manaps, to organize recitals in their homes during the winter evenings. To such recitals they used to invite relatives and influential noblemen. Great minstrels could sing for months without break and improvise at the suggestion of those who listened. It was at these festivals that old songs were expanded and new ones added. Thus the poem grew to its present dimensions. The names of the poets will forever be a mystery. According to a popular belief, the dshomokchi or creative singers were prophets inspired by God. No one of them ever mentioned his predecessor from whom he learned the epic. On the contrary, he would keep up the belief in his heavenly inspiration. Famous dshomokchi as Saginbay and Tynibek, whose memory still lives among the Kirghiz, used to say that they had seen Manas in their dreams and had been ordered by him to sing of his heroic deeds and his advisers.

The fact that the Great Campaign dominates the epic affirms that the underlying historic events were the chief theme of national songs. No doubt those events must have been of great importance if they continued to live for so long a time in the national memory. Professor Bernstam, who has recently investigated the historic background of the epic, concludes that the historic events described in the Great Campaign go back to 840. In that year, after prolonged warfare, lasting for 25 years, the Kirghiz defeated the Uigurs on the river Orkhon and captured their empress Taykho. The Kirghiz commander in chief in this war, Yagla Kar, could serve as the historic prototype of Manas. The Uigur prince, Giuilu Baga, who joined the Kirghiz and helped them to achieve such a splendid victory is in the epic described as Almambet, a Chinese hero, who joined the Kirghiz. The town of Baydshin lay on the river Orkhon. Both the river Orkhon and the town of Baydshin are spoken of in the Epic. The fact of taking the empress Taykho prisoner suggests another comparison. The defeated Chinese Khan Esenkan gives his daughter Burultsha to Manas, which may be a poetic interpretation of the capture of the empress. All those facts according to Professor Bernstam prove that the Great Campaign is conducted against the Chinese and the Kalmucks. This change might have been introduced by later singers under the influence of later events that took place in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, when the Kirghiz fought fierce battles with the Chinese and the Kalmucks. Withal the chronology of events is greatly changed in the epic. In the nineteenth century the Kirghiz took part in the rebellion of Khodshi Dshangher in Kashgar. In the epic it is described as the first campaign of Manas. Manas' war in the North is an echo of the first struggles of the Yenisei Kirghiz with their northern neighbors. The war in the West most probably refers to the part the Kirghiz took in the Turkish wars in the West. In the epic all the events are concentrated within a fifty year period. These are the conclusions of Professor Bernstam, a great authority on Central Asia.

Quite different is the interpretation of the Kirghiz poet and minstrel, Saginbay, who was still alive after the first war and who knew the whole epic by heart. According to his opinion Manas expressed the national and religious aspirations of the Kirghiz people. He united the Turkic tribes under the Kirghiz leadership and led his people to power and glory. Modern Kirghiz and Russian scholars see in this interpretation a reflection of panturkic tendencies.

In the epic Manas is described as a warrior and statesman. All his life he devoted to one purpose, to unite the Kirghiz tribes and to build up the Kirghiz empire. When nine years old, he organized a band, with the help of which he beat the Chinese and the Kalmucks. His strength was superhuman, equal to that of a thousand heroes. His exterior was so formidable that it struck terror into the hearts of men. Even savage beasts were afraid of him. His victories were due not only to his bravery, but also to his wise tactics. He had great heroes as advisers. They were: the renowned Koshoy, Almambet, Syrgak and Tshubak. Koshoy helped him to unite the Kirghiz tribes. According to Professor Bernstam his prototype is a Kirghiz hero who took part in the rebellion of Khodshi Dshangher in Kashgar. Almambet was the son of a Chinese Khan Asiskan. He was chief of the army during the Great Campaign. A beautiful type of wife and friend is Kanikey, a Kirghiz Portia. She is against war with China, for she knows the inexhaustible power of the Chinese nation. As soon, however, as Manas made up his mind to start war, she helped him greatly in preparing for it. Contrary to her advice Manas stayed in Baydshin after the capture of that town, and this was the cause of his disaster.

Exceedingly rich is the fantastic element of the epic. Particularly in the description of weapons is the fantasy of the Kirghiz much ahead of our modern technical means. We hear of spears piercing seventy layers of steel, of swords that could cut mountains, of instruments by the help of which very distant lands could be seen, of a kind of machine guns and of flying shooters. The epic abounds in fantastic beings as giants and cyclops. Akula, the horse of Manas, is so big that a camel can pass between his legs. The throne of Manas is guatded by drakes and tigers.

A Letter to the Editor

DEAR ALUMNAE,

Last year in an article written in the April issue of the Sweet Briar Alumnae News I made a suggestion that the alumnae set up a fund for a scholarship to be granted to a Sweet Briar graduate to study abroad. At the time I had hoped that some of you would "take up" this suggestion in the alumnae clubs and write back either to me or the News giving your approval or disapproval, presenting your own ideas as to its implications and possibilities.

I had in mind some type of fund as set up by the alumnae groups for the Mary Benedict Scholarship, yet in this instance, on the graduate scale. I believe that we, as alumnae, could give real and valuable assistance to a girl who, having graduated from Sweet Briar, wished to pursue her work in a foreign university but who would be unable to continue study on her own financially.

Last year, Sweet Briar admirably launched the Junior Year Abroad, and I do not mean for the graduate scholarship to draw our support away from this project. Rather it could be another instrument in extending Sweet Briar's fine position in the field of foreign exchange.

I think that in implementing such a plan, the chosen graduate could present her general plan of study to a committee representing the alumnae. She could, with the help of several professors, decide upon her center of study: Geneva, Paris or a smaller university community, and could carry with her this general "plan of attack." However, it could remain a flexible one, subject to alterations as opportunities, uncalculated, in advance, presented themselves. I think that travel could be an important part of her study so as to parallel and offer practical application of her research in the special field or fields of study chosen.

The qualifications for the scholarship winner could be set up after general discussion among alumnae, President Lucas, Dean Lyman and a committee of the faculty. There are many different ways in which it could be administered. Perhaps many of you have some good ideas concerning this. And perhaps at the same time you have several propositions as to the ways of raising the money for the scholarship fund.

I believe that many of you who, in the past, have been foreign-exchange students or who have traveled abroad in the summer or fall months have stored in your mind a treasure of experiences which you would like to know some other Sweet Briar girl might have. What does it mean to possess or experience another culture? I think that the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Sforza, has phrased the answer well. "It means to have two windows on the world instead of one."

I do so hope that many of you will see value in my suggestion and will say so by writing back to the NEWS.

Very sincerely,

MARGARET M. MUNNERLYN, '47.

"Manas"

Magic power is often alluded to in the epic. Almambet had command over nature. When the Kirghiz reached the river Orkhon, Almambet made it freeze and the army could continue its march.

Up to the recent world war there were two versions of Manas: one written down by Professor Radlov, the other written down from the recitations of Saginbay. They differ slightly, but the central topic is the same. At the present a third version is being written down, part of which has been translated into Russian. Today there is a special institute in the capital of Kirghizia, which is collecting material and conducting research work under Professor Yudakhin. This institute is a department of a branch of the Russian Academy of Science.

The time has come for another letter. Frances Richardson Pitcher writes me news of her children. Her daughter Alice Denniss and her husband Tom Dibble sailed in August for Stockholm, Sweden, for a year or two of study and travel. Tom is working on the design, cutting and etching of glass. Frances hopes to join them in Europe next summer with her eldest son Jack who graduates from Columbia University in law next June.

Eugenia Buffington Walcott's daughter Betsy is a freshman at Pine Manor, a Junior College near Boston.

Mayo Thach Tarpley's son Frank is a movie actor. He was married in February to a Russian girl whom he met in Italy when making a picture with Orson Welles. Mayo and her husband visited them in Hollywood last spring. Frank and his wife were booked to go to France in July where Frank had an assignment with Vivian Romance in her first English speaking picture.

Rebecca White Faesch planned to sell their house in Washington and she and her husband were to sail for Europe on July 1 to spend five months in Switzerland. It is too bad she hasn't been well. That sounds like a wonderful way to recuperate. I hope they can find the desired apartment when they return.

Helen Lamfrom Neiman couldn't return for reunion in June. She broke her arm and it was still in a cast.

I spent the last ten days in October with my eldest son Don, Jr., and his family in Cleveland, Ohio. I am now giving all the time and strength I can spare to help with the campaign which has just been launched by the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation—it is nationwide so perhaps some of you will hear of it—do help us all you can.

I am looking forward to the Sweet Briar gathering for lunch on December 28—wish I were to see some of my classmates.

I'd like some more news for next time, please—do I ask in vain? I hope not.

Again my Christmas cards are the source of much of my news and it gives me much pleasure that I have more than a dozen Sweet Briar friends with whom I am regularly in touch after thirty-four years.

The most exciting news is from Harriet Evans Wyckoff, whose unusual Christmas card announces "If the Greeks have a word for it, Christmas Greetings from the Wyckoffs in 1949 will come to you from across the seas. After February, '49, our address: E. C. A. Mission to Greece, 4 Churchill Street, Athens." Harriet's note adds that they will be in Greece for two years and also that she had an operation early in December from which she is recuperating satisfactorily.

Margaret Grant is now a grandmother of seven-months-old Christopher Grant Bigelow, son of her daughter Leslie. Margaret has spent three wonderful, busy and interesting months in Europe. She will be in New York City from January to June at 531 East 20th Street.

Louise Weisiger writes that Miss Mattie Patteson is living with them and passed her ninety-third birthday last May. She takes a keen interest in all that is going on and all who see her think that she is most remarkable.

Anne Schutte Nolt has come across again with some very interesting news. In October she drove to Florida with her sister-in-law and niece (the latter was entering Miami University). Returning, they drove through Leesburg and Anne telephoned Claire Erck Fletcher, who insisted that they come out to her house. They drove through miles of orange groves at dusk and were greeted by Claire and her very nice husband and walked through an enormous living room to a huge screened porch. Anne says: "Much to our surprise that side of the house overlooks a lake 23 miles long. Right outside the porch are big trees dripping with Spanish moss. Claire looks wonderful-a little bit gray-but aren't we all? But her voice is just the same. We saw her darling daughter, Anne Louise. She is very pretty and slender."

Anne stopped at Sweet Briar and stayed at the Inn overnight.

Katharine Kunkle George, Academy, of Greensburg called on Anne with three of her five children of whom John is a freshman at Franklin Marshall and Alice a sophomore at Cedarcrest. Allentown.

This gives a complete report of all the graduates of 1915—quite a record, don't you think?

On November 16 the luncheon which I wrote about in the October letter, actually came off with Dr. Harley, Marjorie Johnson Good, ex 16, Mary Pennypacker Davis, '16, Anne Schutte Nolt and myself present. We had a delightful time hearing about Dr. Harley's adventures in South Africa and the recent dedication of the Infirmary at Sweet Briar on Founders' Day and all the news of our various Sweet Briar friends. We had hoped that Dorys McConnell Faile, ex 16, would be with us but she was then en route to Florida where she spends the winter at Hobe Sound. Polly Bissell Ridler, '17, was also invited but was busy getting ready for the wedding of her daughter Ann, which took place November 29. I was sorry to miss those festivities but I was in Ridgewood, N. J., that week-end visiting relatives.

Miss Benedict wrote that she expected to spend Christmas with her sister near Philadelphia and would try to reach me by phone, But I did not hear from her.

Miss Howland and Miss Hull left New York January 2 to spend three months in Florida and a month in Denver and stopped off at Sweet Briar January 3, 4 and 5 with the Walkers.

Faye Abraham Pethick, ex 17, had a fall in the autumn and broke her hip. She had a pin operation and made a good recovery and will be on crutches for six months.

Margaret Lewis Thompson, Academy, has been ill since last spring with an inner ear disturbance which has made her very dizzy. She is better now. Her son, Robert, is home now and is a great joy to her.

The Philadelphia Sweet Briar Day luncheon was well attended and we had the pleasure of bearing Mme. Barker, the wife of Professor Barker, tell about the Junior Year in France under the auspices of Sweet Briar College.

At present, I am on jury duty in the Philadelphia Federal Petit Court. It is one of those patriotic doties which I don't particularly enjoy, especially when it means sitting around for several days with nothing to do. I am knitting a sweater while waiting for my name to be drawn.

Have you remembered to send in your Alumnae Fund contribution?

Wish you all a very Happy New Year.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Zalinda Brown (Mrs. Galloway C. Harrison), 5201 East 43rd Street, Seattle 5, Washington.

Fund Agent: WANTED.

Fen members of the class of 1916 responded to my appeal for news about themselves and it was troly a thrill to have word from so many. The ten are widely separated geographically and there are interesting contrasts in their current ways of life.

Ellen Howison Christian lives in the country 30 miles from any town or railroad. She and her husband, besides presiding over two big farms of 1,000 acres, find time to train in a season 75 to 80 hunting dogs. She says they have a very peaceful and happy life with music, books and beautiful surroundings.

Margaret Johnson Kemp is the wife of the Mayor of Kansas City, and aside from her role as the First Lady, is engaged with civic activities on her own. She is treasurer of A.A.U.W. with 750 members, active in the work of the council of social agencies and community chest and a member of the Board of County Visitors. Belinda, her daughter, is a freshman at Wellesley. She says she often sees Sue Williams Wilson, Elizabeth Hudson Berry, and Dorothea Cohen Ball.

Louise Bennett Lord reports that her son Bennett, a recent graduate of the Harvard Business School, has a position with the Stanley Works of New Britain, Connecticut.

Grace Minor says, "I have taught kindergarten and worked in the Psychological Clinic in the Kansas City, Missouri, schools for years—and this, I still do."

"My biggest interest is my son, now a junior at Penn State, majoring in Geology and Mineralogy," so writes Marjorie Johnson Good. "Quite soon I am expecting my coosin, Dr. Harley, for a visit. She spent last winter in Sooth Africa studying Anthropology."

We now switch to the deep southwest, where Cornelia Horner Farmer lives on a ranch about 140 miles west of San Antonio, where they raise cattle, sheep and angora goats. There are 3 daughters—Betty, Josephine, and Margaret. Betty finished at Texas U. last year. Josephine is a sophomore at Hollins, and Margaret has just entered Wellesley. "I see Edna Steves Vaughan frequently in San Antonio. Her daughter is now married and her son graduated from Harvard," she writes.

Mary Pennypacker Davis, wife of a mathematics teacher at famed Hill School, writes of the enjoyment of her life at "The Hill." Her three sons, Bill, Dick, and Jim, are all in college. Bill and Jim at Princeton, and Dick at Bowdoin. This past summer she and her husband had the management of a private club in the Catskills. She said they had a fine summer in every way.

Alice Dick Webster of River Forest, Illinois, reports her two sons, Alfred and David, graduates of School of Engineering, University of Illinois, both served in the Navy during the last war. Her daughter Alice graduated last June from University of Rochester, New York, and Eastman School of Music. She is now teaching piano and doing some concert work. Mr. Webster passed away suddenly a year and a half ago.

Dorys McConnell Faile says her son David is in business in Weston, Connecticut. Another son is a junior at the University of Florida, and her daughter Sally is at Casements Junior College, Armond Beach, Florida. Dorys lives part of the year on her farm in Weston, Connecticut, specializing in Dorset sheep. The other half of the year she lives in her home on Jupiter Island, Florida. She goes back and forth on her boat and does lots of fishing while in Florida.

Edna Rigg Brown writes, "My husband has worked for Westinghouse at East Pittsburgh for 34 years. Outside of work he sings in the Westinghouse chorus and I do much church and club work. Our daughter lives near us and has a darling little boy. Our son is completing his education after the long years of war."

As for me—we have been living in Seattle for 17 years. Our children have loved the skiing and sailing here, while Galloway and I have fished all over the state and in many parts of British Columbia. Our son Walter graduated from the University of Washington, served in the Marine Corps and is now engaged in raising South American chinchillas. Our daughter Marianne married a naval officer. We have three grandchildren and I am an expert baby sitter.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: Isabel Luke (Mrs. T. Foster Witt), River Road, Route 13, Richmond 21, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Rosanne Gilmore, 1303 Terminal Tower, Cleveland 13, Ohio.

My appeals for news brought me two letters only. One was from Elizabeth Eggleston, who is ever prompt and faithful, and one from Rosange Gilmore. Neither had any particular news to report but I did appreciate their letters more than I can tell you.

I attended the Richmond Sweet Briar Day luncheon this week and saw Jo Payne Miller and Carrie Taliaferro Scott there. Carrie was very foll of a lovely trip she and her husband had taken to Texas and Mexico, flying both ways.

Louise Hammond Skinner has become a grandmother since I last wrote you and Louise III looks exactly like Louise II and Louise I. Big Louise has a job with Bonwit Teller's in Palm Beach this winter and is thoroughly enjoying her work. I drove down with her when she went, late in November, and we had a most enjoyable week together.

Ellen Bodley Stoart's son Zan was married to Cynthia Bemiss here in Richmond last June and they are in Blacksburg this winter where Zan is a student at V, P, I, Don't forget that next June is our 30th reunion year. Let's all make a big effort to be there.

Class Secretary: Florence Wollfel, 2620 Lakeview Avenue, Chicago, Illinois

Fund Agent: GERTRUDE ANDERSON, 221 East Sandusky Street, Findlay, Ohio.

I wish I could be the coaxial cable to bring you a televised broadcast of the class of '21. Over 50 per cent of the class responded so you can visualize how delighted I am with the results of my efforts—having been in the business world for 15 years, I would be suspicious of a 100 per cent return! Really, as every letter was received, it was like a new vitamin to give me a lift, and when Edith Durrell Marshall asked me (a week before Christmas) to pinch hit for her, I didn't know what approach to use, but you have all been wonderfol, Needless to say, the first letter was as exhilarating as a shot of penicillin-it was from Ellen Wolf Halsey living in Spray, North Carolina, conveying news that she would be in New York but, unfortunately, I thought she meant the Sunday after Christmas. I called the Weylin December 27, only to learn Ellen had checked out. I am a creature to persevere (my boss told me only once-"anything can be accomplished") so I phoned the publishing company where one of her daughters is a career girl, had a little chat with her and she confirmed the report that her mother had returned home. I wasn't the only person disappointed at the Sweet Briar luncheon on the 28th-truly, Ellen, everybody was terribly excited thinking you would be there. Ellen's daughters must have all the charms of their mother-Jacquie is a John Powers Model-Sally, the youngest, is at Finch Junior College, and one (whom I located via telephone) is with Street &-Smith publishers.

The next mail brought a grand letter from Rhoda Allen Worden, full of plans for a gay holiday of winter sports with her family at Lake Placid-for that I will forgive your absence at the Sweet Briar luncheon. To those of you who haven't seen Rhoda since commencement, just one word-she is more attractive than ever and years have only added graciousness. Her son, John, who is sixteen, is a junior at Lawrenceville, and her daughter, Ann, is working in the lab at Grasslands Hospital. I am sure her work is most interesting, and her cruise to Havana, Panama and Central America will be like "Cherries Jubilee." I went to Cuba last year after a brush-up in Spanish, and it was very interesting. Rhoda, Chicago is a "most" on your trip to California with your mother, so please let me know when you will be here-lunch-tea-cocktails-or dinner depending on the hour!

Letters from "The Lettes" brought interesting news of their daughters who are at the University of North Carolina—they are roommates. What fun, and how vividly that brings back your College days. I can imagine the whirl Christmas week is for the Lettes and Suffolk! Lette McLemore Matthew's daughter Cutie made her debut last year, "Teancy" graduates from high school—do hope we can have her on Sweet Briar Campus next fall. Lette also writes that the daughters of Grace Merrick Twohy and Florence Gilbert Smith are "coming out" this holiday season.

We're a little late for flowers, as I just learned from Marian Shafer Wadhams that Lette Shoop Dixon had an operation this summer (hope they didn't cut into your good sense of humor) but Orchids to you that you are O. K. again—I had one of those major jobs a few years ago, too, and feel better than ever—good old stock we were made of, I guess.

The No. 1 news letter came from Marian Shafer Wadhams-bits of which were written above, and she promised to write more if anything comes on Christmas cards-thanks loads, "Shafe"! Most interesting, of course, was the picture of your daughter, Jane-she made a beautiful bride and I know having another son has added happiness for the Wadhams. Her wedding must have been lovely-the bride in candlelight satin wearing an heirloom veil of rosepoint lace fashioned into a most becoming bonnet arrangement. I quote from the Society Column, "Her brother, Charles, Jr., was best man." Now Marian plans to busy herself with Ceramics at the Gallery in Rochester-sounds like interesting fun. I quite agree the "Age of forties" is the proper time for diversion and at our age we should be able to pick our own.

A note from Miriam Thompson Winne very casually mentioned her son, Bob, as a budding architect but you see I have a way of getting the real low-down. Congratulations and cheers. Her daughter, Alice, has a position as a private secretary in Rochester, so Miriam, as a "muddling puddling housewife" I think you are a grand success.

I have had several letters from Maynette Rozelle Stephenson during the year and on one of her Chicago trips to visit her daughter. I almost caused her to miss the last train to Kansas City. Her daughter, Virginia, looks more like Maynette than she does herself-if you know what I mean. Virginia is a very talented girl-graduated from our Chicago Art Institute winning prizes in interior design, and now has a position with Marshall Field Contract division-the Stevens Hotel is now getting the Stephenson touch! Maynette combines business with marriage most happily working with her husband selling hearing aids-better bring along a few samples for our next reunion! The only note of distress in Maynette's letter is the difficult time she had being grandmother for the third time-why don't you let your children have their babies-no reason for both of you to lose weight! Glad to hear your Kansas Ciry Alumnae group has had a blood transfusion and "doing well."

Florence Ives Hathaway—although you mention your only civic job is being P. T. A. president, I can see filling the position as mother to two boys, 14 and 6, with a girl at the "beau age" of 12 (and that wonderful and interesting disease spreads rapidly after that) must keep you busy. I recall your singing in the choir (yes, I went to chapel) but had no idea your reward would be two musicians in your family. Glad to hear about the many civic interests your husband enjoys besides his nursery business and automobile agencies—sounds like the Hathaway family is a corporation in itself.

I heard via the grapevine (Edith Marshall) that Fran Simpson Cartwright has a most attractive and wonderful husband. With that acquisition, as well as a daughter and now a wonderful granddaughter, I don't wonder that she has temporarily given up outside activities. Thank you for your note, Fran, and I hope to get down to Cincinnati sometime this year, and am making a date with all of you! We will call in Beeson from over the river, too!

From England comes word from Dorothy Job Robinson that "last December Helen Finch Halford organized a Sweet Brian Luncheon at the American Women's Club. She, Margaret Krider Ivey, Amy Williams Hunter and I attended. It was the first time we had been together since the war, so it is needless to say that we all enjoyed ourselves." Another luncheon was given for Dr. Mary Harley who visited England. This luncheon was attended by Miss Gascaigne who was Physical Director at Sweet Brian until 1920, Amy Williams Hunter, Helen Finch Halford, Dorothy Job Robinson and her daughter, Alice. Alice is not a Sweet Briar girl but has visited Sweet Briar on a few occasions and was eager to see Dr. Harley again. She also says that if any Sweet Brian people are at any time in London she would be very pleased to see them, so "please jot down my phone number if coming abroad -Imperial 3046."

Gertrude Pauly Crawford writes about her daughter Mary's fascinating European bicycle trip last summer. By comparison, she says her life seems dull-not that, Gert, maybe a little placid. Mary joined 15 girl chums and off to London they hopped, bought bikes and cycled all over England. That was just "warm-up"—then they shipped themselves with "impedimenta" (how Dr. Lucas would score me 100 on that Caesar word) to Holland and then on through Belgium. That was only the second relay and sent their bicycles to Avignon, France. By the perfect timing of the youth of today, it gave them a week in Paris-on to the Riviera cycling along the Coast, sleeping in the sleeping bags on the shores of this historical spot. At Nice they sold their bikes (I'll wager at a profit) but they went on through Italy and did Switzerland. With this travel background, I'm sure she did a bang-up job in Hudson's toy department for the holidays. Isn't it exciting! I want to mention that the next trip of the Crawford family is for several months in Florida to swim, fish and relax.

Betty Cole writes she continues with the Calco Chemical Division of American Cyanide—you all read her interesting article sometime ago and know how interesting her work is. She is now Chairman of the National Council of Library Associations, an organization composed of twenty U. S. Organizations and the Canadian Library Association. They just held a conference on Education for Librarianship at Princeton, which was by invitation to people outstanding in the Library field. Betty, it sounds as if you are getting too brainy.

Florence Douden Wood's letter follows along the same vein of the "intelligentsia" so must try to translate some of her scientific activities. Her husband, after war duties, is again Chairman of Biology at the Newark Colleges of Rutgers. Last summer they went on a paleontological expedition. (I told you I would have to translate it-"bone-digging" to you.) Florence enters into the picture as the photographer. When a group of extinct animals is found, it is dated in relation to units found above or below it. This will tell how many millions of years old these ancient beasts are. Now listen class of '21, how long before Florence will be digging up our old bones! Last summer took them through the Northwest, and now they are searching their maps for the summer expedition of '49. Please, oh please, don't dig up anything in Illinois. I suggest you go to all the spots where some of our classmares failed to write me any news, and dig up a little dirt! 1 appreciate the article from the Connecticut of Arts and Sciences you wrote-it's quite a bit over my head but I'm going to work

I feel I accomplished a great feat to get Halle Moore Crisler away from the Bridge table to write a letter. She is fine, has a grand husband who is a lawyer and District Attorney. Halle spent Thanksgiving in New Orleans (I almost did, too) and Christmas divided between some Mississippi spots. In your travels, you should look up all the old Sweet Briarites—I think the years make us more cordial!

Shelley Rouse Aagesen sent me a picture of her daughter and she is a darling in pigtails and blue jeans. Shelley continues her interest in writing and belongs to a Junior League Scribbler's group. Last year she saw a number of Sweet Briar girls at the wedding of Grace Merrick Twohy's son in Norfolk. Her trip took her down to Chapel Hill to visit Jo Abara MacMillan and later on they had a "spree" in New York together, while Jo was on a shopping tour for her daughter's wedding trousseau. Julie Bruner Andrew's daughter was married last summer.

The last letter came today from Isabel Godwin Bailey-just getting under the wire made me think of Isabel, as my first roommate, picking up her Livy at 9:45 p. m. (lights out at 10:00 p. m.) preparatory for a Latin Exam the next morning, and I had been cramming for hours. Needless to say, Isabel pulled down an "A"-well, I won't mention my grade. She lives in Rock Hill where my German professor, Dr. Elizabeth Johnson, still teaches. Tell her after the war, surrounded by dictionaries and grammers, I wrote a letter to Germany. It evidently was impressive as they all deluged me with German letters full of $10 words. I finally answered them in English, selling them on the idea that it would help their English if I wrote my own language-gosh! I had to do something, it was all getting too complicated. Isabel's son is a freshman at Davidson College -studying voice, along with his B. S. Schedule, as he is very talented. During the war, she busied herself at the hospital and now 'can't tear herself away.

You were all so "newsy" that I won't have to write about myself. Believe me, I am going to be at the next reunion and start early so ne grounding of planes will stop my good intention and real desire to be with you all. In the meantime, if any of you come to Chicago, I am listed in the directory or call me at Dana Perfumes. When I get to your neck-of-the-woods, I want to see you all.

My holidays in New York were very gay —all the good theatres and plays. The New York group will soon charge me dues as I attend Sweet Briar Day there annually. It was fun seeing so many I knew-Ruth Fiske Steegar was my most gracious hostess that day and again at a delightful luncheon and bridge party in her home at Mount Vernon.

Fanny Ellsworth Scannell was at the Sweet Briar luncheon with her beautiful and lovely daughter. We were all so happy to have Fanny there feeling so well-we played our old game of "Last Look" as a refresher of the good old campus days.

Want to convey sympathies from our class to you, Edith-so many of them did not know of the loss of your husband. I am glad you asked me to take over on this issue, as I feel almost like I have had a week-end with all of you.

To those of you who didn't write-holidays are gay days and often too full to write, but I know everybody would love a bit of news from you, so why not follow through for the next issue of the Alumnae News. Emir did a good job in getting news from youand now many thanks to you all.

1922

Class Secretary: RUTH FISKE (Mrs. Charles Steegar) 1 Park Lane, Mount Vernon, New York.

Fund Agent: BEULAH NORRIS, 130 Hazelcroft Avenue, New Castle, Pennsylvania.

Again-your Class Agent is sadly lacking in news-but I do want to take this opportunity to express thanks to Beulah Norris for the grand job she has been doing for 1922. We have never done so well for the Alumnae Fund and it is all due to Beulah and her agents.

We had sad news when we heard of the sudden death of Peg Menk West. Our sincerest sympathy goes to her family.

Adrianne Massie, Gert's daughter, attended Helen McMahon's camp last summer and had a marvelous time.

Burd Dickson Stevenson's daughter Blair won the slipper at the Cinderella Ball in Pittsburg. These daughters are growing up.

Julia Benner Moss's daughter Darby is a stewardess with Colonial Airlines and having a whirl. If you ever fly Colonial, look for Elinor Flournoy Parsons is living on Voorhis Point in Nyack, New York, so maybe we will see her in town sometime.

Come on 1922-if you won't send me news of yourselves, let's hear about your darlings -and don't forget the Fund.

1923

Class Secretary: MARGARET BURWELL (Mrs. K. D. Graves) 2505 Cornwallis Avenue, Roanoke 14, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Jane Guignard (Mrs. Broadus Thompson) P. O. Box 480, Columbia, South Carolina.

There is very little news to report as there were very few answers to my cards. I expect you were all busy with Christmas preparations.

Katherine Weiser Ekelund wrote me of the trip she and her husband and daughter, Mary Sue, took last summer through Wyoming and the Canadian Rockies. Katherine has a married daughter and son who live in Denver and a sixteen year old daughter who is a junior at Shipley School, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.

Dorothy Ellis Worley wrote such a nice letter that came too late for the fall News. She has two sons-Jim, who is a junior at Penn State and Bill, who is in high school. The Worleys live in Pittsburgh.

I sat next to Phyllis Payne Gathright at the Sweet Briar Day luncheon. She is living in Salem now. Her son is married and living in Boston.

Our heartfelt sympathy is extended to Richie McGuire Boyd in the loss of her father, Mr. John Peyton McGuire, this fall. And I am sure that you will be sorry to learn that both Frances McKinney Jones and Lillian Spilman Howard have lost their husbands in the last few months.

Those of you who have not been back on campus recently may not know that Helen McMahon is now in charge of the Bookshop. I was interested to hear such fine reports of Glenlaurel, the girls' camp that Helen Mac and Dan Boone own in North Carolina, Although they were in the midst of one of the worst polio epidemics they did not have a single case in the camp.

Speaking of epidemics, Roanoke is filled with mumps. My seventeen year old daughter, Marge, almost precipitated a crisis when she woke up about three o'clock Christmas Eve morning to announce that she had either mumps or lockjaw. Faced with that choice I'm glad it was mumps-but that just isn't any way to spend a Christmas vacation. Neither Blair nor I have had it, so we are waiting our turn.

1924 REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: KATHRYN KLUMPH (Mrs. Frederick T. McGuire, Jr.), 2597 Derbyshire Road, Cleveland 6. Ohio

Fund Agent: MARY S. RICH (Mrs. Robert E. Robertson) 1406 Bolton Street, Baltimore 17, Maryland.

Dear 24's:

Do you realize what reunion is coming upa very important one! Let's all get out our calendars-mark down the date and plan to be at the Briar next June.

I know you'll all be sorry to hear that he She has two boys Brent and Gary who are Elizabeth Pape Mercur and Elsie Wood von Beleven and seven.

Maur lost their mothers recently and will join me in sending them our love and deepest sympathy, Suppose you know that Shiny Bodine Mountcastle and Eleanor Harned Arp are new members of the Alumnae Council. Congratulations gals-we know you'll do well by the Alumnae.

Some friends of mine saw Jean Grant Taylor at Woods Hole this summer and said she and her family were all fine.

Bernice Hulburd Waln was here in Cleveland a few weeks ago with husband and eldest son to help celebrate her family's 60th wedding anniversary—isn't that wonderful?

Grace Merrick Twohy's son John was married this summer and to a Sweet Briar girlglad to see good taste continues in the Twohy family.

Elizabeth Pape Mercur had a nice vacation at Atlantic City this summer. While Shiny Bodine Mountcastle and her family did their customary vacationing at Madison, Connecti-Florence Westgate Kraffert had a grand trip out to the West Coast.

The McGuires did a little traveling, too. We took our daughter Maene to Nantucket then drove and visited on the cape and up then through New England. In September we went out to the Broadmoor in Colorado Springs for a week. Think we will retire there in our old age. In November Fritz has a meeting in San Antonio so we're going to take a little side trip to Mexico beforehand.

Bernice Hulburd Waln, 3120 Martha Custis Drive, Alexandria, Virginia, is going to take over the next couple of columns for me-so do write some news of yourselves and friends to her.

Class Secretary: HELEN DUNLEAVY (Mrs. Henry D. Mitchell) 880 Clermont Street. Apartment 23, Denver 7, Colorado.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA TAYLOR (Mrs. George F. Tinker) 223 Orange Road, Montclair, New Jersey.

The red ribbons of Christmas, the whistles of cheer of the New Year are all packed away. But let us not pack away the deeper meanings of Christmas and the faith of the New Year.

To catch up the nice letters that came too late for the October Issue. From Oyster Bay, New York, had fine letter from Marion Van Cott Borg. She says she is very busy working in a Gift Shop, and she likes being busy, as both of her boys are away from home. Her son Arthur graduated from West Point last lune and is now stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas. Her other son is going to the Merchant Marine Academy at King's Point which is close enough for him to be able to get home for the week-ends. Last year part of his training was on the water, which took him to the facinating Far East and the very interesting South America.

As I sit here writing this on the shortest day of the year, it is nice to read Napcy Wallover Lewis's note telling of their lazy summer spent on their island in Canada.

Marion Crane Paterson writes that she is still living in Crawfordsville, Indiana. Her husband is a Professor at Wabash College. They have a son aged fourteen. She sends word she would like to hear from Mary Bristol Graham, Elizabeth Cobb Sutherland, Marjorie Shepherd and Jane Hunter Holloway. We will all second that wish.

Margaret Bannen Stone writes she and her husband live at 214 Buena Vista, Paris, Illinois. Please note their change in address from Milwaukee. Her husband Paul is with The Illinois Cereal Mills located in Paris. Margaret says they live a rather quiet, small town life. They have bought a small house which is eighty-five years old, and have been having great fun remodeling it.

From Dorothy Goff Frisch comes the exciting news that she was married on April 29, 1948, to James L. Frisch of Milwaukee, and that they will live in Waukesha, Wisconsin. Dorothy has a daughter, Jane McIntosh, age 19, who went to Hood College last year and is at Carleton College this year. Her son, Charles McIntosh, is a sophomore in high school. He is six feet tall. Dorothy finishes her letter on the enthusiastic note, that everything is fine with her.

Although Anne Claiborne Willingham writes her stay at Sweet Briar was short lived. she was very generous of her time and wrote me a long interesting letter about herself and family. Her daughter, Anne Claiborne, finished at St. Mary's Junior College this year with an excellent record. Anne will enter the University of Georgia as a Junior this month. She is very excited over the prospect of Sororities and University life. Anne writes of herself, that she was married in 1924, had a son in 1925, so now she has a 23 year old young man who served nearly three years in the Army. He has finished college since the war and this fall entered medical school for his first year. She is very proud of him. And it sounds rightly so. Anne also has a son nine years old. The Claibornes have always lived in Marietta, but seventeen years ago changed their home address to 810 Whitlock Avenue, Marietta, Georgia, which is fifteen miles from Atlanta. Anne's husband's office is in Atlanta. Anne says she still thinks Sweet Briar has the most beautiful setting for a school she has ever seen. She has visited there twice since our good old school days. Thank you, Anne, for your grand letter and I hope some time I can accept your kind invitation.

In October Helen Finch Halford and her charming husband Cecil and their daughter Beverly had a most gay visit with Margaret White Knobloch and her husband Ellis. The Halfords then came over to Denver to visit Dorothy Keller Iliff, her husband, Seward, and their darling little girls, Bambie and Susie. The Iliffs had a beautiful dinner party in their lovely new country home for the Halfords. Helen is as fascinating as ever, and it was terrifically interesting, hearing her relate about her life in England, the rigors of the war years, the deprivations since the war. "Our American Life," as Helen expresses it, "is one of complete abundance." Helen did a magnificent piece of work during the war and carried on their farm, while Cecil was away in the services. Helen and Cecil's children are Helen, age 15; and John, age 13; these two are attending an English Boarding School. Beverly, age 8, was with Helen and Cecil. If Beverly had had a shepherd's crook, she might have stepped off the pages of Heidi. with her long golden hair and dear whimsical manner. Part of the Halfords visit here, they spent with Dot and Seward in Colorado's famed skiing resort of Aspen. The day they left Denver, we all had lunch together and Cecil was so intrigued with my husband's western hat, that Hank, Seward, and Cecil made a hasty shopping trip and Cecil was delightfully waving a bit of our western apparel, as the Halfords boarded the plane for continuing their trip on through California. I hope they like our Colorado's hats in jolly old England. I hear that the Halfords were grounded on their way back to see Dorothy Hamilton Davis and Allan. The Halfords were planning to spend a month in New York before sailing home to England to have Christmas with their family. I wish you all could have shared in Helen's visit, for it was completely "tops." They also spent one night on campus at Sweet Briar in November.

Dorothy Hamilton Davis writes she was very busy redecorating her house and hoped to have it finished when her mother and father came to spend Christmas with them. The Davis family had a marvelous award for Civic Undertakings. The presentation was not only broadcasted, but was over television. We all join in congratulations to you, Dot and Allan.

Speaking of Christmas, Margaret Laidley Smith writes she will be spending her first Christmas in the deep south and she is trading snow for the palm trees of Florida, as Margaret is spending the winter there.

The Denver Sweet Briar group had a lovely and happy party on the 28th of December. It was such fun to again be a part of the nationwide Sweet Briar Day. For we in Denver this is our first Sweet Briar luncheon since before the war. We had 17 gals present and as I looked around the table, I felt it was a group of women that we all could be proud of. Dot Keller II:ff had had a fine party the early part of December to get us reorganized and everyone was so pleased with the enthusiasm shown. Our most recent graduates told of the changes in Sweet Briar life and on the campus. One realizes how each year Sweet Briar is striving forward and I think it is a stimulating experience to be a part of it.

Frances Gatchel Sampson writes from her home in Harlan, Kentucky, which she says is about 200 miles from the famous Bluegrass section and the Derby city of Louisville, Frances's old home. She says she has been married since 1930 to the same man. Though they have no children they have sent a niece through college, and she was married from their home in June.

Speaking of marriages, Mildred Gribble Seiler wrote me a grand letter, telling of the marriage of their only child, Gloria Anne, on September 25, 1948. Mildred and her husband, Carl, left shortly after the wedding for a trip to New York City and Richmond, Virginia, where they visited Ruth Will Beckh and her husband Karl, and had a simply wonderful time. The Beckhs had visited the Seilers at their summer home in July, and they enjoyed a lovely yacht trip to Sea Island on their cruiser Sea Miss. (Doesn't that sound perfectly marvelous to us all?) Ruth Beckh made a beautiful movie of the trip which they all previewed in Richmond. (Wish we all could have been in the audience.)

Louise Fuller Freeman starts her letter telling of THAT drawer in her desk that is filled with Sweet Briar correspondence that was going to be answered some day. I wish you all would tuck a New Year's Resolution some where on your date book and you would follow Louise's excellent example and "rid out that drawer" and also write me a line telling about its contents. To get back to news of Louise, she has two boys, Bradford, six, and Russell, nine. She says obviously many of her activities run to P.-T. A. and Cub Scouts, with the usual Red Cross and Community Chest Work in addition. Louise writes also that Fargo has a very active Community Theatre in which she is much involved.

On her lovely Christmas card Ruth Johnston Bowen sent me a note telling me that they have been living in Roanoke for the last six years. They moved here after living in Lynchburg for eighteen years. She says her life is indeed a busy one, but only the routine of home, husband, and daughter Emily, age 13, who is a Junior in High School and plans to be a Sweet Briar daughter some day. Ruth also does church, Garden Club and Community Fund work. She writes that the Bowens always stop at Sweet Briar on their way to visit the family Bowens in Fauquier County, Virginia. "The Sweet Briar Campus grows lovelier every year," says Ruth. When Ruth wrote that they always enjoy the V. M. I. vs. V. P. I. Football Annual Classic, I thought of that song, "When You and I Were Young Maggie," and for a minute in memory I again had a large chrysanthemum and saw those beautiful uniformed figures marching down the field and felt the excitement and glamour of it all. Thank you, Ruth, for bringing back a happy dream.

I want to thank you each for your good wishes for our Happy Holiday and New Year. Also tell you how much I appreciate you each taking time out of your busy lives to answer my notes, for hearing from you gives me great pleasure and also makes this column possible.

May 1949 be a Happy, Healthful, and Holy Year for each and all of us.

1927

Class Secretary: MARGARET CRAMER (Mrs. William B. Crane, Jr.) 50 Verplank Avenue, Stamford, Connecticut.

Fund Agent: Elizabeth Forsyth, 3215 Cliff Road, Birmingham 5, Alabama.

First of all—I want to thank you for two things, for making your contributions to Sweet Briar for 1948-49 and for making my Christmas merrier by all your cards.

Evelyn Anderson Tull sent a very clever one with pictures of her family, Dick and Evie, their three boys plus dog arranged on a background that spelled TULL.

Maude Adams Smith tells about her two older children. Lewis, 15, is a student at Phillis Academy, Andover, Massachusetts, and Carolyn is attending Concord Academy.

Betty Bachman Hardcastle vacationed at The Cloisters, Sea Isle, Georgia, last September. K. Klumph McGnire, '24, and Fritz stopped to see M. Brown Wood on their way home from Mexico in November. Madeline is busy with needle for Beth, and young Mac is enjoying U. of K. Madeline says they have outgrown picture cards—we are sorry about that!

Daphne Bunting Blair spent a week in November in Toronto visiting her sister, Dot, '28. Daphne met Betty Cleaver, '49, recently, and was very pleased to find another Briarite in Worcester. Daphne is planning a trip to New York after seven long years and is looking forward to seeing many of her old friends.

Elizabeth Cates Wall writes from Spartanburg that she is expecting to be in New Canaan, Connecticut, this summer. We, in this part of the country, hope we won't be disappointed again!

Last summer Mary Lib Close Gleason came to Connecticut to visit Betty Close, Martha's sister in Westport.

Caroline Compton, "Compy" to you and me, came home from California just too late for the last news. There she saw Sue Milligan. We are anxious to hear more but haven't.

Virginia Franke Davis reports that Walter is playing Dr. Bigby Denby in the road company of Allegro. Virginia started after Christmas to find a location for a winter theatre in the South or Southwest.

Emilie Halsell Marston's daughter, Nancy Lee, flew home for Christmas from Scripps College, California. Emilie sees Dottie Hamilton Davis and Mary Rich Robertson, '25, often, Also hears from Mary Sturgis, '25, and Margaret Powell Oldham, x '27.

On December 18, Claire Hanner Arnold and Wylie acquired a 3 months old son whom they have named Wylie Hall Arnold, Jr. They are very happy with their large family. Congratulations from us.

Catherine Johnson Brehme writes that her two children take two music lessons a week at 7:15 a. m., and that California is still on Daylight Savings time!

Fmily Jones Hodge has invited the Cranes (your secretary) to visit them in Wilmington. A fine idea!

Margaret Lovett reports that she is still flying some but is putting off settling down to a steady job.

The Hammonds (1bby Luck) have had two fascinating trips, one to New Orleans and one to Houston, both in the new Eastern Constellations—from Houston to D. C. in 4 hours. Ibby adds that Dotty Hamilton Davis was robbed of all her iewelry the other day.

Libbo Matheus Wallace is a real joy with all the news and occasional clippings she sends. Dolly attended the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Student Government at Mobile. Among those chosen to go was Sarah Smith, Jane Callison's, '30, daughter. She looks very Callisonish. Libbo has been busy calling on Sweet Briarite kinfolk, which includes Bebe Gilchrist Barnes sister, Mrs. Chandler, and Gretchen Orr Swift's twin daughter, Mrs. Pastuhov. Harry was active in getting Charleston in a class A Baseball Club. Libbo always mentions our 25th reunion and doesn't feel it is too suon to prepare for the great adventure.

The Cutlers (Rebecca Manning) have bought a home in Greenwich, Connecticut, and expect to move in the Spring.

Tootie Maybank Williams has seen a lot of her old friends lately. Billy Quisenberry Marks visited Tootie for a football week-end. Claire Hunner Arnold and Sally Jamison spent a week-end in September and Sally stayed overnight again on her way to Chicago in December. Tootie and Joe went to Charleston for Christmas.

Louise Notman Patterson's oldest daughter, Anne, graduates this May from Highlands University, Las Vegas, New Mexico. Jean, 15, is considering S. B. in another year. Youngest daughter, 8, has no plan at this moment except to raise dogs and babies. Louise and her family, live in Pittsburgh.

We are looking forward to especially good tidings from Pauline Payne Bachus for the next issue of this News.

The Palmers (Jo Plumb) have just completed their new home, ten miles from Hollywood. They raise cockers and canaries and Jo does occasional free lance writing.

The Thorntons (Jane Riddle) have had some bad luck this fall. Barbour, her husband, broke his knee cap which resulted in quite serious complications, but is now getting better. Jane saw Helen Finch Halford, '26, and her family when they were in this country several weeks ago.

Florence Shortau Poland and her husband on October 6 adopted a little girl 5½ months old. This makes the Polands now the proud parents of two. The baby has been named Jane Warfield Poland. I think we all share a pride in the name Shorty has chosen.

Jo Snowden Durham sent Merry Christmas from southern Iowa with a wonderful picture of the whole family looking as gay as they all are.

You '27ers will be flattered to learn that Jo has volunteered, unsolicited, to do the April issue of this NEWS.

Virginia Stephenson writes that she saw Nar Warren Taylor at a luncheon in Milwaukee recently. Virginia is chairman of a committee for professional organization and is active in a University discussion group and a church guild.

Mary Elizabeth Turner Baker and her family have an exchange student living with them this year. She is Claude Degueldre from Belgium, 17 years old, and a senior at Collegiate, the preparatory school which the two older Baker girls attend.

Alice Warren Fielder went in to Richmond to the S. B. lunchenn, and expected to be in Charlotte in January.

Kitty Wilson Garnett is a daily High School substitute in Norfolk and says her whole family including two cats live for their sumners in Camp Alleghany and Greenbrier. She saw Mart Bachman McCoy, '26, and Dottie Reinburg Fuller, '26, at Alleghany last sumner.

I enjoyed lunch with Mary Nadine Pope Phillips, '25, who was in New York for several days. She and her family spent the holidays in Cleveland.

Fund Agent: Katherine Leadbfater (Mrs. Howard Bloomer, Jr.) Shoreacres, Lorton, Virginia.

The class of '28 is lucky to have any news this time! As usual I got all snarled up. I did send out all the postcards, but thanks to Christmas and stuff the replies were, to say the least, scattered. I hope for some more during the next few weeks so that I will have a back-log for the next issue.

Well, first in importance as far as I am concerned . . . I got married nn October 8. It was a nice wedding, as they gn . . . I wore taupe satin with a velvet hat to match, carried brown orchids, and managed to squeeze sixty people into my one-room-and-garden apartment for a highly successful reception. Best man was A. Purves Palmer of Philadelphia, brother of the groom . . . best ladies were Mrs. Nixon Lane and my sister, Mrs. Walter Avlor of Washington.

While on the subject of weddings you will all be thrilled to hear that Susan Jelley became Mrs. Charles Enoch Dunbar on the first of December and has gone off on a honeymoon to Europe... first England, then France, and she hopes to fly the Air Lift into Berlin with her husband. She had only been back about six weeks from a prolonged European trip so she is really having a wonderful time. Expects to go on with her work at Previews, Inc. on her return. She called me just before sailing and sounded like a thrilled and happy bride, a feeling with which I deeply sympathize, going around in a rosy daze as I am myself.

Lois Ritchie gives me the news on her card that when you see those lovely Mountain Mist quilt patterns in needlework books you are looking at Lois' brain children... this was particularly interesting to me, because I do a lot of hand-work and embroidery and have often seen the patterns, which are really unusual and beautiful. I am the proud possessor of a silk log-cabin quilt which was made by my grandmother in the early 1870's, and constantly marvel at anyone who can work such intricate patterns.

Constance Furman Westbrook was back in Atlanta from a trip to Greenville, South Carolina, to celebrate her mother's eightieth birthday, attended by all of her children and most of her nine grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Kitty Brightbill Biltz has a new address— 225 North Pine Street, Langhorne, Pennsylvania. She has a new job, agent for the Sun Life of Canada. Both the children are their usual adorable selves and Kitty is happy in her new work and new surroundings. I know she'll sell a lot of insurance, nobody could help buying from her!

Betty Failing Bernhard couldn't make the Sweet Briar Day luncheon at the Roosevelt on the 28th of December, as they had too much on hand . . . just moved into a remodeled carriage house, address: 79 Minnisink Road, Short Hills, New Jersey. Son, Bill, in his last year at Kent School; daughter, Barbara, in 9th grade at Beard's School in Orange.

Lib Joy Porter has a new address: 76 Warwick Road, Winnetka, Illinois.

Marion Jayne Berguido and Betty Moore Schilling took their feet in their hands, along with Dongie Lyon Althouse, '30, and took Jayne and Joan Berguido to Sweet Briar. They stayed at the Inn, showed off everything, and Jayne and Joan are entered for, respectively, 1950 and 1951.

Kitty Leadbeater Bloomer has been in the hospital with her ulcers, but now reports that they are "on the up-and-up" even though diet still restricted. Not content with having ulcers she has also been judging at the flower show and preparing for Christmas, so we can feel assured that the old Kitty is still around, still doing twice as much as anyone else and doing it thoroughly.

Rip Van Winkle Morlidge reports that Mary Lee Glazier and her family are moving from Cincinnati to Richmond, Virginia, early in the New Year.

Kay Meyer Manshel is still up to her ears in cocker spaniels . . . going to Florida and Havana and will be back in time for the Madison Square Garden Dog Show in February. Her husband will be doing one of his South American tours. Address: 8 Hickory Hill, Redding, Connecticut.

Betty Prescott Balch reports that Cynthia is enjoying Sweet Briar as much as she had hoped. Betty saw Lib Crane Hall and Louise Conklin Knowles during the summer.

Elizabeth Robins Foster is still working with her husband in a country bank and loving it . . . raising registered Aberdeen cows in her spare time.

The luncheon at the Roosevelt was fun, except that I moved the day before. Just plain moving is enough, but unfortunately our beds were not delivered and I reclined the night before on an improvised rug-andstuff couch, so was not feeling my pristine best. I looked for a dark corner and instead got a place at the Speaker's table, in the full glare of the lights, very hard on the old face! However, the compensation was having Edith Durrell Marshall, '21, our beautiful Alumnae President, beside me. Mrs. Lill and Dr. Barker gave most interesting talks and Shiny Bodine Mountcastle presided with the utmost aplomb and charm. The only member of the class of '28 whom I saw to speak to (and this is with apologies if any others were present) was Eleanor Branch Cornell, looking as young and pretty as she did as a freshman lo! these many years ago. We also had the extreme honor and great pleasure of having Miss Lewis there. I'm sure you all remember her as registrar when we entered, and she hasn't changed a bit. She even remembered 'the one from Mexico!"

You will note my new address . . . after much waiting and hoping, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Maxwell Palmer are now at home at 330 First Avenue, Apartment 7-G . . . drawing-room, dining alcove, bedroom, kitchen with a refrigerator I can chin myself on, FOUR (count them, four) closets and almost enough room to spread out in. Anyone who has apartment-hunted and/or inhabited a one-room job will rejoice with me, I know.

I almost forgot . . . being one of the people I see and talk to instead of having to write to her! . . . Sara McHenry Crouse, fully recovered from her recent serious operation, looked beautiful at our November meeting, and reports that her daughter Joan is very happy at Sweet Briar. I also talked to Diana Koch Lea, whom I try to bully into taking more interest in Sweet Briar and less in bicycle riding, swimming and theatre groups; with indifferent success so far, but she is always so sweet about it that I still have hopes. She, too, is stunningly good-looking.

Belated good wishes to you all for 1949
. . . and PLEASE WRITE.

Class Secretary: Martha McBroom (Mrs. Frank L. Shipman) 210 Ridge Avenue, Troy, Ohio.

Fund Agent: VIRGINIA COOKE (Mrs. Frederick W. Rea) 650 Bexley Avenue, Marion, Ohio.

After a long silence, it was gratifying to have so many replies to my recently mailed post cards.

My first answer came from Nancy Worthington. As most of you know, she is permanently settled in Lynchburg, Virginia. Since she lives only two blocks from "Split" Clark, she sees her often and reports that Split is now busy doing Red Cross Work half-days. She had heard from Ella Williams Fauber, whose third son was born in September. A card to Nancy from Jean Cole Anderson passed on the news that Jean and family are now living in Marietta, Georgia, and although Jean misses Birmingham she is glad to be really settled once more. She also had word that Natalie Roberts Foster had been in Roanoke for a visit, but she did not see her.

Whit Pearsall Smith wrote me that she and her husband had just returned from a trip to Sweet Briar and Lynchburg. They accompanied friends who have a daughter in Sweet Briar this year. Whit was most impressed with the new boathouse, music building and "date house"—all new to her, and to most of us "old grads," no doubt. She enjoyed a nice visit with "Flappy" Pancake who is taking Mart von Briesen's place during her leave of absence.

A nice note from Mart conveyed the news that she is leading an entirely different life at home—really going domest'c—and enjoying her five small nephews and nieces who live close by. She had completed several volunteer jobs and was looking foward to making a visit to Texas with her mother after Christmas.

Martha McCowen Burnet, '29, wrote that she and Aggie Cleveland Sandifer had just returned from a few days shopping in New York. Martha lives in Greensboro, N. C., and sees a lot of Mary Lynn Carlson King and Virginia Hall Lindley, '33. Her most interesting piece of news concerned the fact that Cynthia Vaughn was married recently. She gave no details of the wedding.

Violet Andersen Groll continues her association with the law firm in New York. Penny, her young daughter, had recently had her braids cut and since they measured ten inches, was offered $20.00 for them. It was a coincidence that Violet gave me that bit of news because I am facing the same thing in the spring, but we agree that the braids should be preserved for posterity.

Marjorie Webb Maryanov and her husband have just moved into a new home, so Marg's leisurely days of golf are over for the present and she is busy fixing up her house for Christmas.

My cards finally caught up with Charlotte Kent Pinckney and it was nice to receive a newsy reply from her. She has three children, ages 7, 9 and 13. In spite of having no help, she keeps busy with P. T. A. and Girl Scout work and teaches a Sunday School class and as if that isn't enough, her other project is a Brownie Troup. Being on the Regional Committee affords her an opportunity to have two nice trips a year and with that record I am sure she deserves it.

Speaking of projects, Polly Suift Calhoun's letter contained an amazing number of them. First she was chosen as a Connecticut delegate to the National Farm Bureau Convention held in Atlantic City on December 12. She is chairman of the Book Committee with a group assisting, she had just finished reorganizing, reclassifying and moving all books. They are now planning to put on a Program and Publicity Stunt with the idea of selling the public on reading better and more informative books on Russia, the U. N. World Government and Child Raising.

Polly is not the only progressive member in her family. Her husband goes to the Legislature this year. Along with her diversified interests Polly was finding time to paint and repaper her upstairs and was looking forward to a visit from Jo Gibbs DuBois and family after Thanksgiving.

Another busy young matron is Jane Tucker Ferrell. At present she is serving as President of Kearney High School P. T. A., president of Parish Aid Society in Trinity Episcopal Church and substitutes in the Latin department of their school. In addition she manages to keep a husband and three children happy!

Another surprise note was from Gillette Hilton announcing that she was married in July, 1947, to Major Frank R. Pritchard at Lagune Beach, California. At present they are stationed at 5th Army Headquarters in Chicago, but their plans are subject to change.

A card from Ginny Cooke Rea mentioned that Nat Roberts Foster and her husband had spent a week-end with them in July. According to Nat's card she had returned to Wilnington, Ohio, recently having been in Roanoke for a month while Walter was in England on business for the Air Force.

Nat is serving as Program Chairman of the Officers' Wives Club, of which she is an honorary member. She has acquired a piano and hopes to find time to learn some new pieces. She was in Dayton recently, having brought over a part of a Brownie Troop to visit the Art Museum and toyland at Sears-Roebuck.

According to Jane Bikle Lane's note she has given up "careering," since '45, except for half-days work devoted to getting out her Nursing Magazine Monthly, along with "wind-falls" of indexing. She has served on Community Chest and Cancer Drives and enjoys team bridge one day a week. At the present writing, she was having a vacation in Washington.

Peg Ferguson Bennett continues as Registrar at Olivet College. Her oldest son, Dexter, age 14, won a scholarship and is attending Cranbrook School for Boys in Bloomfield Hills just out of Detroit. Her youngest son, Stephen, age 8, is in the third grade at their local school.

Jo Gibbs DuBois' youngest child is two and a half years old, has lovely blond curls and due to her association with her brothers, 5 and 9 years old, has developed into quite a tomboy. Jo and her husband moved to the small town of Douglassville, Pa., a year or so ago. They bought a home and storehouse and have their life in that community. Jo keeps busy with the Home School Association and helps with the covered dish suppers which their church puts on. She adds that Pennsylvania Dutch food is wonderful and she never minds washing dishes after one of those affairs,

Mary Stewart Kelso Clegg was married last May 28, in Washington, D. C., to Dr. Joseph Littell of Indianapolis, where they are now living. I was very careful to get Stewartie's new address and then I very carefully lust it, so more about her later.

When I was in Chattanooga in November I saw Wescott. She had just returned from New York, having gone there as a delegate for the Hospital Auxiliary Board. Her husband, Earl Hale, was on a campaign tour with Tennessee's recently elected State Senator, Estes Kefanyer.

As for myself, I have several jobs in my church, and have taken up bowling as a hobby. We have a league of eight cooples composed of husbands and wives. We bowl once a week. I wasn't too interested until I learned that bowling is good for the "figger," so since then I have become a fan. I also knit Argyle sox for my "men folks." I have counted stitches until my poor brain is fagged. Never too good in math, these complicated directions are almost too much for me.

Since the children are getting older it is easier for Ship and me to get away occasionally. Last May we did take in the Derby. I was bug-eyed looking for Sweet Briar girls, but no luck, much to my disappointment.

Last summer we took the children east. We went via Canada, stopping at Hanover, New Hampshire, where son Shippy is enrolled at Dartmouth. We spent a week in Maine, returning by way of Boston and New York. It was a wonderful trip for the children and fun for all, since it was the first trip the four of us have been able to make together since Ship got out of the Navy.

Ship and I were in Chicago in September. We went up and got our Labrador Retriever which was being trained for duck hunting. We also attended some of the "Field and Water" trials at Muskegon, Illinois.

As you see, my activities are concerned mostly with those of husband and children and we have a great time together. It was somewhat of a shock to see Shippy rigged out in football gear after having spent six months in casts from his ankles to his hips. It was knee trouble but it has been corrected now and he is able to join the football team. Fortunately he likes school, manages to stay on the honor roll and is Vice-President of the Junior class and is active in the young people's group in the church.

Janie, unlike her Mama, is an "A" student. She is Treasurer of The Light Bearers, Junior Missionary Society, and Secretary of the Junior Cotillion Club.

Here are a couple of late arrivals.

A Christmas card from Phoebe Rowe Peters gives me the news that she is settled back in her old house in Rochester, and as she was writing, her older son was dressed in his tux, all set to attend a dance. He weighs 170 pounds and is 6 ft. tall—and expects to go to M. I. T. when he graduates a year from now. Her younger son is very large for his age too—and Phoebe, like myself—wonders if we are raising a generation of giants!

Dot Ayres Holt, ex 31, sent her usual Christmas card with a snapshot of her very attractive house in Hampton, Connecticut. She and Jack purchased an old Inn several years ago and remodeled it into a very livable home. Her son is now attending Andover.

A happy and prosperous New Year to you

Class Secretary: Anne Marvin, Box 1576, University, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Fund Agent: Sue Graves (Mrs. William K. Stubbs) 2105 Island Drive, Monroe, Louisiana.

Your response to my cards this time was most gratifying, many thanks.

Gail Shepard Bean, her husband Bill, and their three children Bennett, Margaret, and John have moved to 914 Highwood Street, Iowa City, Iowa. Bill is head of the department of medicine at the State University of Iowa.

Ella Jesse Latham spent a busy summer and saw many Sweet Briarettes. She saw Pat Ward, '32, at Rehobeth, Delaware, in July; Rose Beverley Bear Burks, Peggy W. balen Taylor, Jo Rucker Powell, and Alice Dabney Parker, '32, at the Virginia Bar Association, which the Lathams attended at White Sulphur in August. The last week in August Ella and Bob spent with Susalee Belser Peques at her place on Edisto Island below Charleston and had a wonderful time.

Pat Atkinson since April 1 has been working in a clerical position in the Veterans Administration Hospital, Registrar's Office, North Little Rock, Arkansas, and finds it stimulating. She will have some part in the radio program, "Kindergarden of the Air," sponsored by the A. A. U. W. Pat expects to be active in the pioneering of the "Mental Hygiene Association of Arkansas," which was born October 3. She is slimmer than ever and feeling fine.

Margaret Anstin Johnson says that history repeats itself with them, that their fourth daughter was born October 8, and named Anna Kneeland. Plenty of Sweet Briar material in that family. The Johnsons have been struggling to get a house built back on the site of the one that burned down last winter and hoped to move in November. I have not heard whether they were able to move into their new home, but sincerely hope so.

Marjorie Morse Emling and her family had a fine trip to Richmond and Williamsburg last summer. They saw Warwick Rust Brown, her husband, and their three children.

Susalee Belser Peques is a football enthusiast. She visited Ella Jesse Latham in Alexandria for the E. H. S. and Woodbury Forest game on the 20th of November. Susalee saw Sue Grares Stubbs in Baton Rouge for the Tulane—L. S. U. game; Susalee was visiting in New Orleans and Sue was down from Monroe. Susalee is working on Junior League Marionettes in Charleston.

Jane Martin Person wrote me a nice long letter and enclosed cute pictures of her young son Bruce, who is almost 2 years old. The Persons have added to their dairy farming the raising of oats and corn. Helen Martin visited her sister for ten days in September during her vacation from her job with Rohm & Haas. Last April Jane had a talk with Emily Marsh Nichols, '34, who was in Minneapolis attending a convention of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness as a delegate from Boise, Idaho.

Mary Buick is the lab technician for Dr. Mason, a pediatrician in Birmingham. She attends a University of Michigan extension Class one night a week in Detroit on "Books" (non fiction) with an hour and a half discussion period afterwards.

Sarah Ellen Wilson Barbour has three children—Frances, 7; Ellen, 2; and John, 5 months. She saw Gertrude Raymond Dempster not long ago.

Mary Elizabeth Clemons Porzelius sent me a lovely Christmas card of her two girls, Bettie B, 8; and Susan, 4. They are most attractive looking. The Porzelius household must have been in a terrific whirl during the holidays with all the Christmas excitement and the girls' birthdays January 1.

Lois Foster Moore writes that she and Jim had a wonderful ten days in California in October, that they flew both ways. Their sons are now 5 and 2. Lois says that Ruth Davies Young has a son, newly adopted, now 8 months old, Robert Pratt Young, Jr.

Doris Crane Loveland has moved to Moorestown, New Jersey. She writes that Helen Bond and the Imbries motored through New England last sommer.

Nevil Crute Holmes took a trip to Washington, D. C., to visit her mother, taking her older daughter, age 4, with her. While there Nevil saw Ted Clary Treadwell and her two darling children, who are 7 and 3. She also saw Jean Spragoe.

Jeannette Shambaugh Stein has three daughters—Nancy, 10; Susan, 8; and Carol, 5; so she is a busy parent at school, is on numerous committees and on the side works for the League of Women Voters.

Augusta Wallace Handel has moved to Louisville, Kentucky (505 Cornell Place), She has two sons. Augusta is on the editorial staff of the Louisville Times.

Margaret Ellen Bell Hare writes of a lovely tea that was held at Susanne Gay Linville's for Mrs. Lill. Dr. Harley was there. They had an election of officers: Susanne was made chairman of the Westchester Branch and Margaret Ellen the secretary. She has a job on her hands as she had 171 invitations to address for the Sweet Briar luncheon.

Clara West Stark writes that their son, Tom, III, is getting ready to enter college next fall. Their two daughters are 13 and 11 years old. Clara's sister, Bett West Morton, '31, is now living in Seattle, Washington.

Janet Blood Brown has many interests including Junior League, concerts, school, and childrens' parties.

Here is a little about myself, though this column is long enough. In October, I flew to Bermuda for a wonderful two weeks visiting friends; in November, I had a fine week-end in Washington, D. C., with Jean Sprague. I have various and sundry hobbies including Ivy hockey (we had hoped to play the Campus Characters, but they would have none of it); my rock garden, which I worked very hard in this fall; and my house plants, which are lots of fun.

We combined Sweet Briar Day here in Saint Louis with the College Breakfast this year and with great success. I think we have a going concern here at last and the breakfast drummed up a lot of enthusiasm. There were about 200 of us, and if I do say so—it was a success. I can say this because I had nothing to do with it. Janet Appell Phillips, x '42, Elizabeth Lockett Lord, '39, Carolyn Hagen Myers, x '41, Edwine Schmid Mill, x '38 et al did the leg-work and I got stuck as toastmistress. Alice Dahm, the student speaker, did us and herself proud.

There isn't enough news this time to produce a column, so I will pass on to you these few items, and let's try to have more next rime!

Martha Lon Lemmon Stohlman called me on her way to Springfield, Missonri, for Christmas with her husband and baby.

Helen Hanson Bamford had a baby girl, Susan Jane, born December 29. She also wrote me the most distressing news of Jane Bender's death. She died December 31, 1948. I know you all join me in sending our sympathy to her family.

I hope all of you had a wonderful holiday season. Sweet Briar Day, as usual, was a gala affair and such fun to get together again.

THE DWELLE FAMILY

Early in September I had a long letter from Betty Cotter Gilmore. Betty's husband is a biologist and at the present is doing research for the International Division of Whaling of Fish and Wildlife. Betty finds traveling difficult with her two children Jere, Ka.herine, age 4, and Cotter, age 3. She and the children usually spend their summers in New York and if any of her friends would like to drop her a line she may always be contacted at 929 Park Avenue, New York, New York, c/o Mrs. E. R. Cotter.

And after a long silence, a letter arrived from Ellen Scattergood Zook. Scat has been married 10½ years and has two girls and two boys ranging in ages from 9½ to 2½ years. The Zooks lead a busy life on a 180-acre farm near Philadelphia. Scat says they are building an addition to their home and extends an invitation to any old friends to drop in. She sees Betty Campbell Gawthrop, '39, and Evie Morris Blair, x '35, occasionally.

A card from Grace Langeler Irvine reports a busy life with her children—ages 3, 6, and 8. Grace's husband engineers steel tanks and finds it a fascinating work.

Barbara Miller Gibson has a son, Malcolm David Gibson, II, born in October. The Gibsons also have a daughter, Jacqueline, almost 2. Barbara would like news of Kathleen Spiller Merrill. She also wants word of any other alumnae living in Houston.

Mary Willis Kempe is managing a farm near Rapidan, Virginia, and raising a son, now 16 months old—sounds like a large order to me.

Don't forget to send in your alumnae fund contribution—every little bit helps.

P.S. Are you making any plans for returning to Sweet Briar?

Class Secretary: MARY HELEN FRUEAUFF (Mrs. Charles T. Klein) 804 Osage Avenue, Bartlesville, Oklahoma.

Fund Agent: NATALIE LUCAS (Mrs. M. S. Chase, Jr.) Box 1208, Florence, South Carolina.

Happy New Year, everyone! I hope your holidays were as wonderful as ours. We moved into our new home the week before Christmas and had my family out for the gaieties and a tour of inspection. It was truly our best Christmas!

To start, here's some news which was too late for the last letter. Nina Cauthorn Jarvis announces a new addition to her "brood," Robert Cauthorn, born June 18.

Gurley Carter Davis summered in Maine and thanks Heaven that "all is quiet and peaceful" with her.

We finally heard from Syd Gort Herpers who loves the Northwest and her home in Portland. She says, however, that as soon as they find a place to live in Seattle they'll be moving on again. Sounds almost like our Army life! She spent the summer touring Oregon and had a trip to San Francisco.

Another "non-answerer" crashed through with a long letter, for which we are most grateful! Lib Lee McPhail summered in the mountains to get away from the polio in Charlotte. She saw Jackie Strickland Dwelle, '35, and Carrie Marshall Young Gilchrist, '36, at Blowing Rock. Lib and Fred have bought a lot in Charlotte and hope to be able to build very soon. Aside from mooning over house plans, and a fun occupation that is, Lib keeps busy with housework, a baby, and her pet project, the Charlotte Junior League Cookbook. To quote: "It's really very good and I wish I could pass the word on to 37ersplug!" The word is passed, Lib. Lib had had a card from Ellie Snodgrass Park who was waiting to hear from her bar exams. She had been with Jackie Cochran Nicholson at Nags Head in July. Lib also saw Nancy Nalle Lea and her two cute children when she was home for a visit. Since then Nancy has had a new son. Tommy, born October 3 and as her maid departed at the same time, she has had her hands full!

Lollie Redfern Ferguson still works with the Little Theatre and the Junior League Thrift Shop. Having Anne Stuart in nursery school is a great help to her peace of mind!

Frances Johnson Finley has moved to a larger apartment but still has her lot and hopes to build "some day." She also works at the Thrift Shop and the Kings Daughters Clinic

Sue Matthews Powell saw Nancy Old Mercer and Betty Moore Stowers at a tea in Dallas given for Mrs. Lill, who looked "the same, though if anything, younger and better looking." She expected her children to break out with measles any minute.

Polly Lambeth Blackwell and Winfield had a week in New York but otherwise her hands are full what with Brownies, P.-T. A., and the radio committee of the Junior League. She sees Lil Lambert Pennington and Peggy Hite Palmer occasionally, the latter having moved back to Thomasville from Virginia. Dot Thomas Upton is about to move into her new home across the street from Polly. Lil is busy with the Garden Club and the A.A.U.W.

Agnes Crawford Bates has a new son, Bill, Jr., born in September, and as her little girl is only 22 months she has nary a dull moment. They're remodeling an old farmhouse which would be a full-time job in itself!

Dot Pront Gorsuch is rushing to get her new house enclosed so they can continue working on it after the snows come—hope you make it, Dot! She doesn't see anyone except those who come over to lend a helping hand.

May Weston Thompson was busy as head of the New York Sweet Briar Day. She saw Jean Gilbert Moister who is living in Verona, New Jersey, now.

Peggy Merritt Haskell, with 3 children and a dog, still finds time to ride, make doll clothes, and entertain 16 extra fur Christmas. More power to her! She had a trip to the Homestead and is looking forward to another come spring.

Many thanks, Turnie, for your long letter—it was wonderful to hear from you after so many years. She has a daughter 6½ and a son 4, and is a dyed-in-the-wool Floridian. She reports that Mary Louise Agnew Merrill has a new son, another about 10 and a girl, s

Kate Shaffer Hardy's 3 have kept her on the jump and it was nice of her to take time to answer. She uses her "spare" time in lunior League work, the Visiting Nurses Association, and Family Service, Inc.—also art school. She also hopes to take courses in interior decorating and Red Cross Life Saving this winter.

Marie Walker Gregory has a son, John Walker, born December 14. She has just been taken into the D. A. R. Commonwealth Chapter in Richmond.

Maggie MacRea Allen went to see the Stevens Marionnettes give Macbeth and The Taming of the Shreu under the auspices of the Richmond Sweet Briar Alumnae Club. She saw Helen Neve at Thanksgiving. We all send Helen our deepest sympathy on the death of her father.

Dinnie Hardin, as president of the Hostess Association of the National Hockey Tournament, was very disappointed that no Briarites attended. She also played and umpired. She spent Christmas in Florida with her family and plans to travel to the spring dog shows.

Dot Stewart still loves her work with the Sun Oil Company in Philadelphia.

At long last a reply from Betty Williams Allison. She has a daughter 21 months and a son 8 weeks, plus a new house and a busy doctor husband. She works for the Junior League and the Medical Auxiliary. She also does volunteer nursing at the Maternity Shelter.

Helen Rae Wainwright heard Miss Lucas conduct a meeting in Scarsdale and felt very proud she was president of Sweet Briar. Mrs. Lill was there and Helen remarked how voung she looked—how do you do it, Mrs. L.? Besides her 8 year old son and 6 year old daughter, Helen is busy with community charity work and teaches a Sunday School class.

Wes Ward Francis is very happy in her new home. She attended the Junior League Children's Theatre Conference in Denver last summer and had a "real Sweet Briar binge," seeing Cabbie Mitchell Ravenscroft, Maggie Cornwell Schmidt, Nookie Hardesty O'Shea, Polly Brown Sweeney, and staying with Dina Newby Adams. Recently, when she attended a Junior League television demonstration in Washington, she saw Rose Hyde Fales. Would that I could tour thus and get in some good old Sweet Briar chatter! Wes is now taking a television course at the University of Pennsylvania which, while pioneering, is great fun.

When she has time for home and Wardie, I don't see.

Many thanks to all of you for taking time off during such a busy season to answer your cards, and especially thanks to the many "lost" who found themselves!

Fund Agent: Barbara Dlar (Mrs. Arthur I. Chenoweth) 1923 20th Avenue S., Birmingham, Alabama.

With the holidays over, I'll try to settle down and pull strings together so we can see just what everyone is doing. Some of the news has come in between issues so it's not too new, but I'll pass it on. You fellas have been wonderful about answering, thanks, and I would only ask you to please be sure I am included on your birth announcement lists so I can keep track of the young fry. Now, on to the news—

I had a grand card from Pollyanna Shotuell Holloway, who is now living in Baton Rouge near my sister, yet I don't see her. Her husband, Robert Holloway, has changed from personnel work to real estate, and they have a little girl just starting school and a two-year-old Ashton. Pollyanna says she is do'ng "normal housewife's" work—home, church work, book clubbing, and some social activities. Sounds ambitious! Babbie Derr Chenoweth from down that way had gone as far as Highlands, North Carolina, from Alabama, this summer.

A card from Virginia Eady Williams said she had missed the fall Council meeting because of a trip to the hospital with a bum back and arm, but was recovering enough to toss around her two sons, aged three and seven months. She and her husband are living in a garage apartment until they can build on their lot. She sees Jessie Silvers Bennett, Ed, and their adopted son, Jimmy, whom Eady says is a knockout. She had also seen Lloyd Lanier Elliott, who had done a super job of running the Lexington (Kentucky) Junior League Horse Show.

Coming on up the East Coast, Betty Smartt Johnson wrote just as she and Clay were off to a wedding in Omaha. She says one of her little girls is very blonde and the other quite dark—cute together. I had a Christmas card from her, too, so evidently they weathered the trip.

Over in Virginia, Jo Sutton McCandlish reports a new son, Charles Sheild, nicknamed "Bonnie Prince Charlie," and says that Anne Walker Newton is moving right across the street in Fairfax in March. Anne's husband will be with the telephone company in Washington.

Sue Gibson Davenport sent a card from Oak Ridge, Tennessee, but announced that they were leaving so that her husband might become rector of Graee Church, Salem, Massachusetts. She had seen Frances Bailey Brooke during the summer.

Mildred Gill Williamson wrote that they have a new summer home on the James River which has lived up to all their expectations. Their boys, Jimmy, 7; and Roy, 3; had learned everything from crabbing to aquaplaning while mama did the work—so she is probably resting up for the next summer now! Fritz Cordes Hoffman and Frank had been down to see them for a week-end last year.

Out in the west, Rebecca Kunkle Hogue had reported gardening, swimming, and golfing during the summer and was lining up fall activities—Garden Club, Red Cross, and church. A busy mother, with a boy, plus triplets!

I was real pleased to hear from Kate Sulzburger Levi of the birth of a son, John Gerson, and of buying a house so that she is really settled down. Of course she seems a mite proud of that son!

'Way out west, Kitty King Corbett Powell says she doesn't see many of the S. B. C. girls out in Texas, but has heard that Harriet Daniel Herd, pretty as ever, was living in Midland, Texas, with husband and two children. Kitty had run into Caroline Potter Echols at the Rice football game. She and her husband, with an eight-year-old daughter and three-year-old son, are living in Dallas.

I had a long letter from Marge Thaden Davis, who really sees quite a gang of the girls. She and her husband had visited Carolyn Staman Ogilvie two years ago, so Marge still hears from her, in Shreveport now. Marge had talked to Sigur Moore Whitaker on her way through Indianapolis, and had heard that Anne Philbin Ellis was expecting to move back to New York. Judy Bemis Wills and Marge are both living in Chappaqua, New York, and were invited to a tea to meet each other before they recognized married names! They have children just about the same ages-Judy's Sally is three months younger than Marge's Suzanne, and their other two little girls are within three months of each other. Sounds like lots of Sweet Briar material,

I had a short card from Barbara Nauman Lynge since she said she was busy with a 15month-old Carl M., Jr., and a new home bought on the shore of Long Island Sound in Rowayton, Connecticut. They are already looking forward to the sailing.

Mary Ann Housel Carr said she answered promptly because her husband was traveling. She keeps busy with her family-Bruce, 8; Steve, 51/2, Deb, 41/2, and "Trinia," 3. Billy Heizer Hickenlouper and her husband had been to visit last summer, and Mary Ann reports that they have four, also-boy, girl, boy, girl. Fran Samuels Fellows lives close enough to see the Carrs, and Mary Ann reports a new daughter for her. Also, Nancy Old Mercer had her second this summer. The Boston gang seems to get together pretty well -including Macky and Fergie, too. According to the picture on their card, the Mason Lincolns (Barbara Ferguson) have two mighty fine looking boys and a gal,

Around here, I was sorry to miss the fall meeting of the Jersey Club. Janet Macfarlan Bergmann says that she, Adele Letcher Harvey, and Janice Wiley Adams represented our class. Janet says her own family has been involved in redecorating the upstairs. She also said that Janice looked wonderfully, not a bit older

"or flurried" in spite of her two little boys and a girl. I have since talked to Janice on the phone, and we hope to get together. Her husband, George, is back in the States for good, with the General Bureau of Adjusters—still in insurance. They are living with Janice's family until their belongings arrive from Venezuela and they find a place to live.

That's all from the others, and there's nothing much new with us Nickersons. Of course we had a wonderful first Christmas with our little boy, Clark, even though a bit confused. I have taken on the secretaryship of the only community club out our way, the Colonia Associates, but since they have very few meetings I don't expect to be too burdened. Goodbye for now—keep sending me your news, please.

REUNION YEAR

Class Secretary: BETSY DURHAM (Mrs. Albert Goodhue, Jr.) 32 Orne Street, Marblehead, Massachusetts.

Tund Agent: LEILA BOND (Mrs. Joseph Preston) 240 Shenley Drive, Erie, Pennsylvania.

Happy New Year 1949—and for us that is a jolly little number marking a decade since most of us sat on the Refectory steps at step singing. Our reunion will be this June, and I am beseeching everyone (and this is definitely not my job) to be at Sweet Briar for our tenth. I am calling sitters and hoping that our car will live through the winter for the trip down.

Eleanor Classian Williams and I hope to drive down together. She will be busy as a beaver until then, however, as she and Tommy are expert skiers and spend all their winter week-ends on the slopes. Later they are going to Cuba to visit Classie's uncle at his sugar plantation. The Williamses have also been braving the footlights, as both of them were in the chorus of the Dover Follies, benefit performances for the school scholarship fund.

Yvonne Leggett Dyer says she may drive down in June, too. I talked to her on the phone, and since the groceryman had dropped the order on the floor and Susanne and Diana were knee deep in plums, we ignored it all and talked for hours. She is very busy doing infant welfare work, but naturally has found time to see every Sweet Briar girl for miles around. Yvonne and Mary Mackintosh Sherer had driven up to Bristol, Connecticut, for lunch with Tready and Parker (Mrs. Frederick Downs, Jr., and Mrs. Roderick Washburn to be more formal). Tready's little girl, Susan, is perfectly dear, and Jane has two cunning children, Linda and Steve. The Downs are in the process of renovating an old house, which is charming, and the Washburns have already moved into their attractive house. The Shearers are now living outside of Philadelphia, and Dr. Joe is well on his way to becoming a practicing urologist.

Philadelphia has become a hot-bed of Sweet Briar girls, and keeping them all in line is Anne Benedict Swain. From Eugenia Burnett Affel, '42, I hear that Anne is an excellent President of the Sweet Briar Club. The Swains have seen a lot of Ellie George Frampton and her husband, Bill. Effic and Annie are also planning to come to our June reunion.

Susan Allen Preston may be old enough by then to have her mother, Leila Bond Preston, free to join us. Miss Preston was born September 14, and perhaps Joe can stay behind and take care of the new house and baby?perhaps-All husbands take note! The Prestons may spend part of next summer in Duxbury, Massachusetts, next to Kay Ortel Osborne, Kay said that she and Bob stopped in Scarsdale and saw the Prestons before Christmas. Little Phyllis Osborne is 3 1/2 years old and is delighted with her new house in Duxbury. Kay said building their house set a record, since it was completed in 21/2 months. She and Bob are doing the painting and papering themselves and loving it. They are on Powder Point, high land only two blocks from the ocean.

The Osbornes spent Christmas in Beachwood, New Jersey, and Fay Mueller Garver, David, and their two children were also there. The Garvers visited Mardi Hodill Smith and her husband in Pittsburgh on their way home.

Marguerite Meyers Glenn and her husband, Frank, visited the Osbornes the day they moved in. Everyone sat on crates and moved furniture. The Glenns live on a 500 acre experimental farm in the State of Washington. They are up to their necks in the latest methods and models for farm use, and were east studying the cranberry growing methods in the bogs of New Jersey and Massachusetts. The Glenns had their two little boys with them—no doubt sampling cranberry sauce just to help out.

Christmas was a gay one for Gracey Luckett Stoddard and Brooke and all their children in their new house in Cleveland, and they finally feel really settled.

Happy James and Dick Wathen's Christmas card was a photograph of their three children—Vivi, John and Dick—all too cunning, and dressed in Scotch plaid skirts and shorts. Remember Happy's green and navy plaid suit? Same idea.

Jean McKenney Stoddard wrote me of her "sun suit set" of children and how they all love being in Balboa. Johnny is with Panagra, and McKen has very nicely asked Albie and me to take a Caribbean cruise to their part of the world.

Ruth Harman Keiser is another whose children graced her Christmas card. Judy and Mac looked very happy with their Christmas smiles for everyone. She wrote that she run into Dusty Rhodes Salmon and her three children last summer at Bay Head, New Jersey, and that they all had a grand time together. She also told me of Judy Judd's marriage to Dr. Matthew M. Patton, Jr., in Rochester, Minnesota, last July. Congratulations and many of them to the Pattons. They will find Nancy Gatch Sviem, and Alice Gass Dornberger, '40, there, too.

The Goodhues spent Christmas in Richmond, Virginia, where I attended the Sweet Briar luncheon there. Julia Saunders Michaux, as president, presided. The highlight of the party were slides of Sweet Briar in all seasons, and all perfectly lovely. You should see the new boathouse! Patty Moncure and I were the only other ones from our class there, but we heard a great deal of what is going on at Sweet Briar and intend to see some of it ourselves in June—so Happy New Year to us all—particularly next summer.

1940

Class Secretary: Nida Tomlin (Mrs. Robert C. Watts, Jr.), 2837 Sheringham Place, Lynchburg. Virginia

Fund Agent: Eleanor Snow (Mrs. J. Tatnall Lea, Jr.), 765 Valley Street, Orange, N. J.

The best Christmas cards of all are those with snapshots enclosed of offspring or a personal note-or better still, buth. The only trouble this year was that I counted on the notes for this write-up and there were many wonderful pictures, but very few notes. At any rate, every picture that I've seen of '40 children indicates that they are unusually attractive. Blair Bunting Both, Jr., is a knockout and looks exactly like her papa. We are hoping that Dick will hit these parts again soon. He always knows more good Sweet Briar news and is very patient about answering a thousand questions. Master Richie Both looks chubby and extremely agreeable. Blair and Dick enjoyed meeting Bettie Ivins Haskins, Ellie Snow Lea, Connie Currie Fleming and their respective husbands at the Princeton-Harvard game this fall.

Just for fun and my own amazement, I compared last year's picture of Helen Schmid Hardy's boys with their '48 pictures. Those three gents are plenty cute stairsteps. Herg hoped to get her family well and ready to take off for St. Louis for Christmas. The picture of Reba Smith Gromel's children, Patsy and Terry, impressed me a lot too. They looked so very healthy and grown up.

Olivia Davis Brown reports that Miss Barrett Brown is "racous but fun." Her snapshot was precious.

Maria Burroughs Livingston has a handsome brood. Her daughter, Isabel, has black hair and a large vocabulary. The youngest boy, Richard, is blessed with yellow curls and a marvelous disposition, judging from his benign expression. The Livingstons have a new house and love it.

Phoopy saw Helen Cornwell Jones recently and planned to see Bettie Itins Haskins soon after Christmas.

Beth Thomas Mason and Tate had one of the most attractive and original cards I have ever seen. There was a drawing of a miniature train with Tate as the engineer, the two girls and Tate, Jr., each in a car and Beth in the caboose.

Cynthia Noland Young's husband, Karl, and their three children spent the holidays in Richmond with her family.

Mary Petty Johnston Bedell hoped to be in her new Richmond house on River Road by Christmas.

Jane Goolrick Murrell's son, Thomas, was born in Richmond on November 28. Also a new addition in the baby department is Susan Lyman Gillis, daughter of Mickie Mitchell Gillis, born September 8.

Everything is fine with Janet Runkle Wells, Bob and son Robin, who is a year and a half old. Janet says that she hears from Becky Pannill Gwin often and that Becky has a new daughter. Janet has had no word from Benadine Newby for ages.

Peggy Caperton Ranken seems to like living in Seaford, Delaware, and is enthusiastic about cooking, housekeeping, etc. We went to Peggy's wedding in June and it was really a lovely affair.

Frances Moses Turner attended the Sugar Bowl game and then went on to Little Rock for a visit. We are enjoying seeing Betty Frantz Roberts who has been living here since her marriage.

A card from Ehzabeth Conover last August gave me the news that she was in Portland, Oregon, teaching kindergarten. She had a grand trip from St. Louis through San Francisco and up the coast to Portland. In San Francisco she had a nice visit with Coralie Kahn Ferro and Marion Phinizy Jones.

Please accept my most humble apologies for the '40 blanks in the last ALUMNAE NEWS, It was a very hectic time-what with a very sick child, no help and Mr. Stork flapping his wings over a new house without furniture. Sad story, isn't it? W'ell, it was at the time, but now we have little Helen Dickey Watts, a few chairs and an occasional guest in the k tchen. My New Year's resolution is not to wait until the last minote every time to write this. You, in turn, please resolve to send me more information. I'm getting somewhat old and stale on this job, but I can carry on it you can stand it. However, a new volunteer secretary would certainly be a good deal for everybody. Eight years is a long time! Somebody else could really put some pep into the aging class of '40.

Class Secretary: Joan DeVore (M.s. John E. Roth, Jr.), 3542 Larkspur Avenue, Cincinnati 8, Ohio.

Fund Agent: BETTY DOUCETT (Mrs. John F. Neill) 1177 California Road, Building No. 1, Apartment No. 3, Tuckahoe, New York.

The best way to start this, I know, is to wish you all a Happy and Prosperous New Year. When I read the October issue, I was most envious of the great report Ann Hanslem Potterfield was able to assemble for 1942—it was wonderful. Annie, I wish you'd send me your formola.

Anyway, Do Albray wrote that she had announced her engagement in September to William E. Bardusch, Jr., frnm Miplewood, where he is a lawyer. He graduated from Princeton and Columbia Law School and was in Counter-Intelligence during the wir. They're to be married this month.

Two more young men made their appearance late this fall. Charles R. Bennett, III, was born to Betsy Tower Bennett on November 26; and Paul C. Graves, Jr., to Peg Tomlin Graves on December 8 in Lynchburg.

Helen Walson Hill and her husband adopted a little girl, Eleanor Watson, who was to arrive at their house just before Christmas on the

I had a nice letter from Barbie Netens Young from Dallas in connection with the Alumnae Fund. She and Ralph were packing Wendy and Sue Ann in the car to drive to Detroit for Christmas. She said she'd call on their way through Cincinnati, but we didn't make the connection, and I'm 50 sorry.

Emory Hill Rex and her family have gone to Sweden, though I don't know my of the details of their moving. Anta Lorma Lewis and husband Bill, are at Maxwell Field, Alabama, where he is going to attend Army School.

What a grand surprise came in the form of a note on a Christmas card from Pick. I don't mean to be trite but "it's been literally years." As you know, she's out in Long Beach, California. She was to pick up Allen Bagby Macneill in Pasadena for the S. B. C. luncheon, in Los Angeles, the first one they've had out there, Pick had evidently been home this fall, for she reported spending the night with Mag Anderton Dortch, ex 41, in Nash-ville on her way home. She saw Elizabeth Colley Shelton who's living atop Lookeat Mountain in Chattanooga now.

"Dowsit" sent me a grand newsy letter, some of which is above. She and John were anticipating young Johnny's first Christmas. She hoped there wouldn't be another blizzard like last year for the Sweet Briar loncheon.

John and I were well rewarded by Barby's reactions to Christmas, though the toys didn't prove half as much fun at first as the paper, ribbon and needles from the tree. The explanation—simply, these were so much easier to eat than a big wooly teddy bear.

Pat Sorenson Ackard and hosband Bill, with Stephen and Peggy Ann, came home here from Denver for Christmas. Her parents had a delightful party for them and her sister, Jane, during the holidays. The only drawback was, there were too many who wanted to have a good talk with them too.

I received the news too late for the last publication of the death in August of Louise Kirk Headley's mother. I know you will all join me in extending belated sympathy to her. Kirk, Boll and the three children were in Lexington for Christmas. I talked to her on the phone, when she called to decline my invitation to speak at our Cincinnati Sweet Briar luncheon—Lloyd Lanter Elliott had spoken for her services in Lexington and wouldn't let her go.

That's all for now—if you feel inspired to write, do it when that inspiration hits you.

1942

Class Secretary: ANN HAUSLEIN (Mrs. Thomas G. Potterfield) 2058 Cropsey Avenue, Apt. 5-A. Brooklyn, New York.

Fund Agent: Elizabeth Hanger, 32 Aberdeen Place, St. Louis, Mo.

Time-January, 1949.

Place-United States of America and Brook-lyn.

Setting — Panorama — Kitchens, Nurseries, Offices and Jr. League Rooms,

Characters—Anyone from Abbott to Woods. Wish I could be a G. B. Shaw, going into detail about each one.

Plot—The antics, whereabouts and whatfors of the high flying class of '42.

Scene I-Brides-to-be,

Phyllis Sherman will marry Wilson Barnes, Jr., in March; they hope to settle in Bronxville, Daphne Withington is by now Mrs. Willard Adams, for they planned to be married Christmas week. Daph met Willard on Biak Island of New Guinea. Before her marriage, Daph worked as an Electroencepholographer, it means working with brain waves. She will live in Charleston, Illinois, where her husband is teaching in Business Education Department of the Eastern Illinois State College, Since Alice King Harrison is just a bride, I will include her here. Arkie wrote me that she is in the clouds as a new housewife. Virginia Beasley not only wrote that she will be married to Richard Holzer in February, but that he has promised to love, honor and feed her new colt.

Scene II-New Mothers.

Edna Syska Peltier announces the arrival uf blonde, blue-eyed Peter Jeffrey on December 11. Betty Hussey Chapman added Judith Ann on November 30 to her two sons, Timmy, 6; and Bobby, 3. Grace Lanier Brewer had a second daughter on April 29, name, Elizabeth Lapier, Grace also wrote lamenting her troubles in trying to build a house. Debbie Wood Davis also had a second daughter, Sarah Whitney, on November 4. Mary Brown Griggs, living in St. Paul, had a new son. Mary Alice, now 5 months, is the latest addition of Florence Bagley Witt, who has another daughter, Florence Elder, 31/2. Flossic and Raymond have their nwn home, and Flossie spends time doing lunior League work, "California is the only place to live," says Virginia Thayer Boothby. She is raising John Thayer, born last March, and Josselyn, 41/2, out there.

Scene III—Big Doings.

Eugenia Burnett Affel, who is settled in her own home in Roxborough, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, with her son, Charlie, age 16 months, is serving as Regional Chairman for Region IX, helping to organize new Alumnae Clubs. Guess you all know by this time that Eleanor Ringer is the new Rauschenbusch of Sweet Briar campos. Ringer is the P and P director, and is teaching Speech, History of the Theatre, and Theatre Presentation. She is also playing fullback for the Campus Characters. I saw her at Sweet Briar Day in New York and wish all of vou could talk to her. It is mighty interesting to hear the point of view of the student who has returned to join the faculty.

Scene IV-Just Plain Living.

As if three children were not time consuming enough, Sudie Clark Hanger is teaching in the Junior League School for deaf children, and says it is amazing what can be accomplished. Janet Lee Appel Phillips and her husband, George, are building (with their own hands) a summer lodge on a lake about 30 miles outside of St. Louis. Apple has certainly showed a lot of interest and helped tremendously in the St. Louis Alumnae Club. Anne Morrison Reams sent a picture of Barney, 13 months, and he is really cute in his Dr. Dentons. Barney is walking all over, but so far, little chatter. Give him time, Anne. Grace Bugg Muller-Thym told me of seeing Biddie Crumpler Nolting, proud mama of 4 daughters. Biddie's husband, Fritz, is in the diplomatic service in Washington, D. C. Grace also reported on Betty Blackmer Childs who has just returned from spending 6 years in Brazil. Betty has 2 children. Her husband is now attending Law School. Of all places to work, Laura Graves Howell is at Randolph-Macon, and to top it off, she loves it. She and Gordon are living in a converted stable which gives Laura her taste of country life while living in the city. When last heard from, Barbara Ripley was in California. From up McDonald, Pennsylvania, way, Si Walke Rogers claims that she leads the "usual mother-of-two life" plus numerous outside activities. If you ever see an autobiography entitled "Ladies in Retirement-M. D.," you will know it is by Pat Potter Roach whose husband finishes at Northwestern Medical School in March, and then goes on to an internship at Passavant in Chicago. The Roaches boast a young son, David, 2. Nan Taylor Smith divides her time between a cocker spaniel puppy (they plan to raise them) and the Stamford, Connecticut, Museum where she works for the Junior League. Another Junior League and Woman's Club worker is Mary Jane Geyer Sawyer. Jerry has two sons, John, Jr., 51/2; and Chris Geyer, 21/2. After much moving around, Frannie Boynton Drake is settled in Evanston, Illinois. Frannie wrote reminiscing about hockey, and how she'd love to play again. Can you imagine Frannie Caldwell Harris living a life that is rugged? Well, she is living in a small house in the country, but makes tracks to civilization to do Community Chest and Junior League work. Among those fortunate enough to have a house is Dot Malone Yates who has recently moved into a new home in Atlanta.

Scene V-No Time for Comedy.

Lucy Call Dabney's house was robbed on Halloween night. Poose's jewelry was taken.

Scene VI-In Sympathy.

I know that all the class join me in extending sympathy to Marian Robbins Parish whose husband passed away in October. Marian has 2 daughters-Robbin, 4; and Betsy, 2. To Anne Morrison Reams whose sister, Winnie, passed away while in Florida; to Virginia Mc-Guire Brent who lost her father; and to Caro Quinn Foster who lost her little girl.

Scene VII-Personal.

September 1, deadline for last issue. September 2, arrival of Katharine Blair Potterfield. Kathy is now 4 months old and almost as fat as her mommie used to be. We still live among the Durocher fans, but in June we return to Philadelphia, where Tom has a Pediatric Residency at Philadelphia General Hospital. I got cut to Sweet Briar Day here in New York at the Hotel Roosevelt. Cynthia Abbott Botsford, Caro Quinn Foster, Eleanor Ringer, and I upheld the class of '42. Caro is another Durocher dweller and has a darling son, Michael, 5.

Scene VIII-Finale.

Again my warmest thanks for your sensational replies to my cards. If you like it, keep the letters and cards pouring in to me. If you don't, then write to complain. This is the "laughing girl" ringing down the curtain on another issue. May 1949 find many of us getting together, if not in person, then in the ALUMNAE NEWS.

Class Secretary: CLARE EAGER, Charlesmead Road, Govans P. O., Baltimore 12, Maryland. Fund Agent: ANNE McJunkin (Mrs. Frank E. Briber, Jr.) 8103 W. Bluemound Road, Milwaukee 13, Wisconsin.

After the usual exhausting holiday season here I am, caught with another New Year deadline. Thank heaven for Christmas cards! Their accompanying news items may seem brief, but they will make up the bulk of this report. Also, thanks to "Junk" for forwarding news she picked up Fund Agenting. She says that Marguerite Hume is working in New York for Brand Names Foundation; that Brooks Barnes wrote that brother "Pahka" was getting married December 3, and that Angela Marston is now Mrs. Robert Beste. Junk herself has been busy helping Martha von Briesen organize a Sweet Briar Day in Milwaukee and trying to keep Anne Schilling from knocking down the Christmas tree.

We all send our deepest sympathy to Anne Noyes who lost her father this fall.

"Ouija" Adams Bush writes that Mary Belle Lee is back in the lingerie department of Garfinkels (I didn't know she had left but I assume she was doing something with hosiery since she is quoted as saying "No more crummy stockings"). She plans a two-week vacation in Florida in March. "Ouija" sees B. J. Leighton Lane, whose husband, by the way, works-not plays-for the New York Yankees Football Club when the baseball season is over. And, speaking of New York (to make one of my really far-fetched links) I'll jump you to Nancy Bickelhaupt Harris who wrote of her life in Rochester with two children and a dog. She said her news was "very dull stuff," but she did mention that her husband had recently been made President of his company, which didn't sound dull to me!

Our birth rate is falling off a bit, but Judy Snow Benoit and Camille Guyton Guething keep plugging along, each having produced her third this fall. Judy got the boy she was going to have or else; name: Arthur, Jr., called Hank. She now has a blonde, a brunette and a redhead. She has also been working on a Junior League fashion show.

Camille's Stephanie Huff arrived November 13-her "smallest baby"-poor frail thingonly 8 lbs., 12 oz. Camille wrote that Betty Lawrie Kimbrough has moved to Chicago where Dick was promoted, and also said that Louise Moore Nelson is in lowa City while Bruce works on his Ph.D. When the baby is old enough to be on its own a little more, Cammy and Ted expect to go to Aspen, Colorado, for a bit of spring skiing.

Fay Martin Chandler also increased her family as of September 20 with the addition of Mary Morris whose outstanding feature is her long, thick, black hair. Quite a contrast to her sister. Fay spent the holidays in Norfolk and Wilmington. I had hoped to see her in Baltimore but things were too complicated trying to connect her up with her baby who was scheduled to come in on a plane but couldn't because of the weather. Fay was leaping from Washington to here and back all day, but I did manage to see Al briefly and he told me he had just seen Carol Tanner in Washington. She is still living in Charlottesville and is doing research work on the Stettinius papers.

Among others who have tripped homeward recently are Snookie Campbell Shearer and Frances Gregg Petersmeyer. Gregg and her daughter Susan stayed in Memphis about two weeks after going on a wonderful businesspleasure trip to California this fall, Snookie has been visiting back in Kentucky after taking in Anne Bowen's wedding.

Everyone's big news this season is that they 'are finally settled in our newly bought house." Camille has just done it in Birmingham, Michigan; Weezie Woodruff Angst has been through it in Kenilworth, Illinois; Ping's done it in Falmouth, Maine, with the additional problem of having to get her husband equipped and established in an office there; and even in Hawaii the cry is the same with Tookie Kniskern White. Tookie, by the way, is begging for Sweet Briar visitors-but don't all rush at once, unless you carry a bed on your back. She could get together with Barbara Perkins Maxwell. I understand she is out there with her husband, Jack, who is in the Army Medical Corps.

Weezie is delighted with their aquisition which sounds wonderful, and is complete with a garden which was the former owner's hobby. She has seen Franny Boynton Drake, '42, and Barbara Duncombe Lang, '44, and is having a lot of fun. Their latest interest has been the Junior League Follies where Johnny is using his old Triangle talent.

Meanwhile, Debbie Adams (i. e., Deborah Adams Douglas Adams) hasn't quite reached the moving-in stage, but she and her husband. who is "a lawyer, judge, politician, and exmarine" are building a house in Jessup, Georgia. Besides this she is captain of a team to raise money for a library there. Also, Fayette Mc-Dowell Willett has just made a big move-not to a new house—to the apartment upstairs.

I have seen very few Briarites lately, except Baltimoreans. Mary Law Taylor was back for Thanksgiving and said she had seen Beth Dichman Smith in Philadelphia, Beth has been there several months and I think she wrote me she was living in an apartment over someone's garage. I was sorry to hear the other night that Mary's husband is ill.

I have seen Page Ruth Foster some, now that she is back in Baltimore. Jimmy is assistant director of the Baltimore Museum of Art and they have a little house on a very unusual street downtown. The street is only about a block long and has been taken over by artists who have each house painted a different color. Page was working in the book department of a local department store during the Christmas madhouse. She said she had heard from Jane Gregory Moore.

Also on my way back from a week-end I stopped in New York to lunch with Libby Corddry Jones and Pat Robineau Van de Vere. Pat and Bill were vacationing in New York and it was a wonderful coincidence to hit at the same time. I am receiving a reasonable remuneration for telling you that she has lost weight recently, and this due to a very admirable demonstration of will power on her part. And so with that encouraging note of accomplishment we bid farewell to '43 in '48.

Class Secretary: Connie Sue Bublong, Occupational Therapy Department, Box 181, Kennedy Veterans Hospital, Memphis 15, Tennessee.

Fund Agent: ELLEN Boyo Duval, 3211 Grove Avenue, Richmond 21, Virginia.

Christmas is such a grand time to do a newsletter! The cards come pouring in, and there's more news than room.

Nancy Eagles O'Bannon is up to her ears in Junior League work and loving it all.

Barbara Clark Utley has a son, Frederick, III, who, by my mother's report, is a perfect specimen with a disposition to match.

Many new offspring—and some not so new but previously unmentioned. Martha Lee Hoffman McCoy's little girl is a year old. The McC's are finally settled in Norfolk in a large apartment, and have their welcome mat out for visiting Briarites.

A new house is the pride of the Lucas family. Millie Breuzer Lucas, Ed, and daughter Richie moved in in June.

A Richmond postmarked letter from Muriel Abrach Salzberg announced the birth of Harry Lee, born December 17.

Last time I heard from Katie Mensing, she was a temporary Lady of L., having retired from the banking world. She has a new address, too—7319 N. Bridge Lane.

Virginia Noyes, who was teaching high school in Madison, has announced her engagement to Hugh B. Pillsbury, of Milwaukee. Had a long and delightful letter from her, describing that event, and the full schedule she follows.

First news from Sally Skinner Behnke (and I duck a brickbat from Washington on that line) who is mama to two strapping sons if pictures are valid. The eldest, you've met before. The new is Ned, a darling. Sally is pining for a reunion—and we do have one coming up! You all realize we're practically middle aged—"five years out!"

Our old globe trotter Mary Jane Brock is back with the rest of us, but itching to hit the road again. She's ("after all these years") taking typing and shorthand. M. J. saw the long unheard from Jean Ryan Kehl in Wellesley last August. She and Bill have a lovely new home.

The cosmopolite, Eleanor Goodspeed Abbott admits being a 100 per cent Bostonian. That I'd enjoy seeing!

We have two recent "weddings of note." One, on December 4, was that of Anne Bowen to Joseph Carlisle Broadus, of New York. The other, also on December 4, was that of Elizabeth Chauncy Williams to Vincent Meyer, Jr. The Meyers are by now "at home" in Anthony, New Mexico.

From Ruth O'Keefe Kobzina comes the news that June Essenberg Gurrick has a new baby. June, give us more details.

From Omaha comes news that Mary Braden Young has a little girl. Ruth herself is busy with Church and Scout work and being a gentlewoman farmer. Did you all see her in Holiday?

Ginny Griffith Morton says that all's quiet on the Morton front, and that little Ginger is no longer a baby, but a young lady.

Our faithful foreign correspondent Dykie Watts came through once more with one of her ten page Oriental Idylls. I wish it might be printed verbatim. Seems that the Watts family will be in the Far Fast until 1950. Dykie junkers around like mad from her Yokahama base—Korea, Peiping and Shanghai in September—and has plans for Manila, Hongkong and Bangkok in the spring. She said she felt quite at home in Seoul because the favorite clothing colors, a la S. B. C., were bright pink and green. Peiping she loved, even describing the "nice sort of dirt." There, I'm putting in an early bid for a seat at Dykie's first travelogue.

Juanita Gans, too, is wandering. Don't know where she is at present—but it was Germany this summer.

Another wedding invitation—Marguerite M. Brendlinger was married December 18 to Walter Rossiter Robinson, Jr.

Had a nice, long communique from Franny Pettit O'Halloran who has just moved to Idaho, where Frank has set up his new office. Franny did a round-the-country this summer—saw "Goody" in Massachusetts, Pat Patton Mac-Mannis and Helen Cantey Woodbridge in New York, Bea Boericke in Wilmington, Betty Manry Valentine and E. B. Duval in Richmond—and wound up at S. B. C for Commencement with Marian Shanley Jacobs.

Dotty Beuttell Smith writes that they (Cal, Bunny and David) are having a grand life in Potsdam.

Whew—hope this makes the deadline! And who wrote the last one?? I've been deluged with queries about that mentioned husband. Information, please.

Don't forget—for '49—a good check to the Alumnae Fund—and our Reunion!

Jean Ridler is still at Calco in Plainfield and still likes her work. She said that Huldah Edens Jackson and Haller are in New Orleans where he is attending Tulane. Lib Hicks is enjoying her job at the State Department Library.

Virginia Decker was married in Roanoke on November 20 to Dr. James N. Dudley who has been the Commissioner of Health there for the past two years. When Ginny's note arrived in November, she said that they had a new Magnavox, all the drapes up, and shelf paper in the kitchen.—Everything for easy living? She did social work after leaving school until last June, and now thinks she will retire permanently.

Betty Gray was married to Richard (Dick) Springer Gray on November 27, at Annapolis. Yours truly made a quick trip to and from. Dick is a physicist, graduated from Case School of Applied Science in Cleveland, and working in Crile V. A. Hospital in the Radioisotope Department. Betty will continue her work in The Cleveland Rehabilitation Center and also spends part of her time setting up an Occupational Therapy department at the Cleveland Clinic.

Ann Richey Oliver sent a note just two days too late for the last letter. She's living on a ranch and says it's wonderful. She relates that Mary Kritser was married a year ago to George C. Miller of Columbus, Ohio. They lived in Oklahoma City for a while but recently moved to Detroit. Rosemary Harwell married Wayne Van Vleet of Denver in January, 1948, and they are living there now.

Edie Mattison Henderson, besides having a new baby on November 23, also got a new house. The baby was named Gerald C. Henderson, III, and the house is modern with huge windows.

Petie Cross is now an ardent baby-sitter, having recently become an aunt. Her half day position with a Birmingham broker leaves her plenty of time to master this art. She spends one day a week at the Community Chest Day Nursery for her Junior League work. (She says the Birmingham Barons won the Dixie Series, thanks to the managers efforts and hers!)

Harriet Willcox has a nice position in the Actuarial Division of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. She lives in a club close to work. June McJunkin passed through the big city on her way home from Europe and Harriet says the trip sounded out of this world.

Audrey Betts has forsaken New York and is now in Greensboro, North Carolina.

Ellen Marcus was married in December, 1946, and now has a year old son, William Marcus Kates. She did social work for the school in Richmond after she finished the Richmond Professional Institute of the College of William and Mary.

On December 26, the announcement of my engagement to Donald Glesser was made at an Open House. That's my excuse for the brief letter in this issue.

The new arrivals deserve top billing in the first letter of the new year. Robert Paschal Bendall was born on October 1. His mother, Cholly Jones Bendall, writes that he is all boy and mostly Bendall. Cornelia English Monthan's daughter, Margaret, arrived late in September. George was made a lieutenant in the regular Navy the same week as he became a proud papa.

Helen Murchison led off the procession of tall brides with her marriage to Ed Lane on October 16. Her sister, Margaret, was maid of honor and Ellen Robbins Red, Crutcher Field Harrison, Palmour Holmes McIntyre, and Dorothy Corcoran Hartzer were bridesmaids. Also in town for the festivities were Dottie Sue Caldwell and Catherine Tift Porter. Dorothy Coronran and Joseph Francis Hartzer were married the Saturday after Thanksgiving. Sweet Briar bridesmaids were Jessie Strickland Elcock, Dottie Sue Caldwell and Helen Murchison Lane. Tody and Joe are living in Chicago and hope to see loads of the Sweet Briar girls from around the Windy City, Mary Moss Madison became Mrs. Joseph Audrey Henderson on November 20. The Hendersons call Quantico, Florida, home, but expect to be in various places where Chic's company is building paper mills, maybe even in Mexico. Bea Dingwell is busy with plans for a candlelight wedding in the Navy Chapel in Washington on February 19. Her fiance, Dickson Randal Loos, will graduate from George Washington Law School the end of January. Betsy Gurley Hewson will be one of Bea's bridesmaids, Bertha Lee will sing at the wedding, Helen Graeff will play the organ, and Mr. Gurley will be the minister in charge.

After reading Catherine Smart's and Dottie Sue Caldwell's wonderful letters I almost feel that I have had a trip to Europe. Catherine and Louise and Jeanne Crawford saw all the sights this summer, including a communist riot in Venice. Switzerland, where they had a snowball fight in July, was Catherine's favorite. They had lunch with Beth Jansma in Amsterdam and spent a day with Larry Laurence Houis in Paris. Dottie Sue and Helen Murchison Lane had an equally marvelous trip and found Sweet Briar girls all over the continent. They saw Peggy Robertson and Dede Enright in Switzerland and Luly Sadowsky and Annabelle Forsch in Paris.

Margo Sibley took a Carribean cruise this summer and visited such romantic places as Havana, Puerto Rico and St. Thomas, Margo is now back in Austin working as a research assistant at the Biochemical Institute of the University of Texas-and has her M.A.! Libba Fruit Metzenthin sent loads of Texas news. She and John moved to Dallas a few months after their marriage last February. John is an electrical engineer, Libba saw several Sweet Briar girls when she accompanied her husband on trips through northwestern Texas and Louisiana. She reports that Harriette Inge married Benjamin Fillmore and is living in Honolulu. Alice Eubank attended Evaline Rife's wedding. Evaline married Leland Thompson, Jr., and lives in Midland, Texas. Al is busy this winter with a part in the Junior League Follies Hallie Nixon Powell's son, Stanton, is 16 months old now. He is blonde and brown-eyed like his mother. She writes that she had a nice visit from Ruth Houston this fall.

Leila McLaughlin Thompson is living in Evanston. She and Wayne are building an attractive, one-story, rambling house. Jane Pickens Church is back living in Ashburn. Virginia. Pick enjoys being home as Herby has to travel a great deal. Lillian West Parrott visited Joan Darby West in Philadelphia this fall. She saw Ellie Clement Littleton who has recently moved into a garage apartment at Freddie's family's home and Polly Kent Page, who just moved to a new house in Wynnewood. Lil and Marion will be in Raleigh for several months this winter while Marion is in the State Legislature. Eden Taylor Persons loves being back in Macon where Pink is in the real estate business. She reports that 21month-old Eden looks exactly like her father and has a head full of curls. Eden sometimes sees Elizabeth Adams Stringfellow who also lives in Macon. Elizabeth has a darling 18month-old daughter.

Bobby Warner started work on the South Bend Tribune this fall. She is also working two nights a week at the orphans' home organizing their library and taking a Great Books Course. Jane Richardson and Jean Luve moved into a new apartment in Washington in November. Jean is taking her second year at the Coccoran Art School and Jane has a fascinating job at the National Gallery as a research and secretarial assistant. Athens, Tennessee, has claimed Tib Force from the capital. She is working for her father, taking courses, and handling a very gay social life, but has promised to return to Washington stoon.

Polly Vandeventer is in Richmond this winter working at the library of the Medical College in the morning and in the "Question and Answer" department of the Times Dispatch in the afternoon. P. V., Mary Mac Holland and Jalia Jerman Neal attended Douglas Parker's wedding to John Moneure. Doug and her husband are living in Richmond. P. Georgie is working at the Allergy Clinic of the University of Maryland, Betsy Bowman has an interesting job with Eastern Airlines in New York. She handles reservations for all their largest accounts. Another New Yorker this winter is Helen Graeff who is going to Union and playing an organ in a Bayonne, New Jersey, church on Sundays. A few weeks ago I saw Jessie Strickland Elcock who was in New York for a pre-Christmas shopping and theater spree. I'm working at the Educational Testing Service (probably better known as the College Entrance Examination Board) in Princeton, New Jersey, 1 was lucky enough to see several Sweet Brian girls at football games this fall, but I do wish more of you would drop by town. If you can't, please do write.

One resolution I want you all to make for 1949 is to write yours truly at least once every six months. I received so few replies to my cards that this issue's news had to be composed largely from postscripts on Christmas cards, which I want to thank you for.

Eleanor Bosworth tells me she received a most precious Christmas present; Cornell presented her with an M.A. degree in December. She is planning to teach college courses beginning in February.

Ann Webb's engagement has been announced. She will marry George Moses of Concord next summer. In the meantime, she will continue teaching high school English and Latin in Rochester.

Connie Clevenger writes that she has already made the New Year's resolution that I ask of all of you—to answer my cards. She has been having a wonderful time ever since graduation. She passed the word on to me that Eleanor Crumrine has an apartment in Baltimore, where she is studying teaching at Johns Hopkins. I learned from Jean Old that Crummy's subjects for teaching in Pennsylvania high schools next year will be Spanish and French. Jean Old, bless her vagabond heart, is planning another grand tour. She will again be accompanied by Margie Redfern and Martha Smith. New England, Gaspe Peninsula, and Canada are on the itinerary. They are welcoming invitations all along the way. Jean also wrote news of Shirley Levis; she is working for a utility company in Chicago.

Saravette Royster was home in Raleigh for Christmas. We went to the Debutante Ball together and had a wonderful time, and I gathered some interesting news from her. She in sharing an apartment in New York with Betty Weil. Betty is working for Gulf Oil Company where she is being trained for an executive position. Saravette is working with NBC, and she is still very happy with her job. Cindy Converse also works with NBC. Saravette has lunch almost every day with Henry Aldrich's mother.

Cecil Butler is going to Washington in January to be a secretary to a Congressman or Senator. I know she'll fall in love with life on Capitol hill.

"Birdhead," Margaret Ellen White, told me that Laura Lee Grogan was married in September but true to her usual vague way, forgot to mention the groom's name. She did not mention a word about herself or Europe.

Blair Burwell sent me an artistic masterpiece of a Christmas card—very Blair to say the least. There was a note on it saying that she was "still counting blood cells in the lab." I assume she is a laboratory technician.

Mary Wood has a secretarial position at the Passaic National Bank in Passaic, New Jersey.

Ann Marshall is working in an art museum. Recently, she helped open a gallery. She has exhibited in several shows.

Maria Gregory will marry Cabell Mayo Tabb in February. I hope to have a full report of her wedding for the next issue.

Gene Ray Minor wrote me a long time ago, and I have misplaced her fine letter, but I remember she said that her baby was a darling and that John, her husband, had graduated 1 om the University of North Carolina in June, 1 believe. They are living in Danville, Virginia.

Ann Briggs sent a lovely card that I knew was from her before I looked inside. It was a picture of a big, fuzzy kitty cat wishing me a Merry Christmas—very, very typical and unmistakably Briggs, nest-ce pas?

I quit trying to assist the Bridal Consultant in a local Bridal Shop and for the past month have been working for Eastern Air Lines as private secretary to the Station Manager at Raleigh-Durham Airport . . . and here's a free tip just to show you that I have your best interests at heart: EAL is the most wonderful company to work for, so if you ever get the opportunity, "Give your all for EAL," and you won't regret it.

Don't forget to write! Thanks again for all the wonderful Christmas cards. I welcomed the news they brought and appreciated the good holiday wishes so much.
